Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. In just a moment. This particular bill, Members of the House, has received most serious and careful consideration before the subcommittee and the entire committee at various times when the representatives of the Osage Indian Council were present, furnishing their judgment and advice, and the bill has been generally agreed upon.

Mr. CRAMTON. I think if the gentleman will yield it will save some time.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CRAMTON. I have no desire to press the amendment if anyone feels it ought to be taken up in another way. In view of what the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SPROUL] has said, I ask consent to withdraw the amendment. It is simply to put the bill in more orderly shape, but I will not press the amendment in view of the gentleman's position.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has the right to withdraw the amendment.

The amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oklahoma offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MCKEOWN to the committee amendment: On page 3, line 15, after the word "year," insert the following: "Provided further, That the lessees of said lands shall not be considered instrumentalities of the United States."

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this amendment is to make the oil companies that lease this land subject to taxation. They have escaped taxation under these Indian leases on the ground that they are instrumentalities of the United States. It is a far-fetched conclusion, but it has been supported in the United States Supreme Court, and the oil companies under these leases escape their part of the taxes.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. The gentleman understands that in the Osage Nation the oil companies have been paying the 3 per cent gross production tax ever since March, 1921.

Mr. McKEOWN. I know that; but they have plead in tax cases that they are not taxable because they are instruments of the Federal Government in taking this oil out, and they have been escaping some taxation on that principle throughout Oklahoma on all the Indian lands in the five tribes, and I want to know whether Congress wants that proposition to continue on the theory that because they get a lease from the United States Government they are instrumentalities of the Government and therefore not subject to taxation.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. CRAMTON. Let me understand the gentleman's amendment. The amendment provides "the lessees of said land."

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes; that is, the lessees of this land you are to lease.

Mr. CRAMTON. Does that apply to the oil lease?

Mr. McKEOWN. That is what the bill says. It says that you are to lease this land for oil and gas purposes and states how many acres you must lease in one year, and I am simply adding this language to make these companies subject to taxes.

Mr. STEVENSON. Will the gentleman yield for a suggestion?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. STEVENSON. Might it not be well to add the words "for purposes of taxation"? There might be some view in which they might be instrumentalities of the United States, but they certainly ought not to be allowed to escape taxation on that ground.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Is it not a fact that under the laws of Oklahoma all the operating oil companies pay a gross production tax on their products, both gas and oil, to the State and part of it is allocated back to the respective counties, and that the laws of Oklahoma exempt them from paying any other or any additional taxes other than the 3 per cent gross production tax?

Mr. McKEOWN. It does not exempt them from paying all other taxes. It exempts them from paying taxes upon their oil.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Will the gentleman yield for a correction?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. The laws of Oklahoma providing for the collection of the 3 per cent gross production tax allow that for the machinery used in and around the operation of the oil wells, and as to the tax in the Osage country, they have paid it since the act of 1921. The courts have held that oil, after it is separated from the ground and is in the hands of the lessee, is personal property and is taxable, and they have been paying that.

Mr. McKEOWN. Will the gentleman tell me whether or not, when the gentleman was auditor of the State, the oil companies went to the Supreme Court of the United States and escaped taxation on this ground?

Mr. HASTINGS. That was prior to March 3, 1921.

Mr. McKEOWN. I am talking about other places in the State of Oklahoma.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. This has no bearing on any Indians except the Osage Indians, and under the act of 1921 the Osages and their lessees are paying all taxes.

Mr. McKEOWN. Then what harm will this do?

Mr. CRAMTON. The harm it may do is that the more burden of taxation Oklahoma is permitted to put on these lessees, the less they will be able to pay the Indians for the leases and the smaller the bonuses.

Mr. McKEOWN. I understand; but that is no reason, because they do not take that into consideration.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

This is a matter that was not brought before either the subcommittee handling this bill or the full committee.

The bill was introduced in May, 1928, and there has been no effort to crowd it along.

These matters ought not to be brought up now by gentlemen who have not come before the committee in the light of trying to protect their districts or anyone else. This matter should not be adopted by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out line 13, beginning at the word "provided," down to the end of line 15.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. FREAR: Strike out, on page 3, beginning in line 13, with the word "provided," down to and including the word "year" at the end of line 15.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. Speaker, I admit that I have not been before the committee, nor do I know anyone who has been before the Indian Affairs Committee to argue this question on its merits; but I do believe that every Member of the House has the responsibility upon his shoulders, when a bill is presented and he is asked to vote upon it, to know its contents and the reasons for it.

Now, here is a proviso that I ask the attention of the House to consider, because it seems to me entirely indefensible. Reading back, beginning at line 8, page 3, it says:

The Secretary of the Interior and the Osage Tribal Council are hereby authorized and directed to offer for lease for oil, gas, and other mining purposes any unleased portion of said land in such quantities and at such times as may be deemed for the best interest of the Osage Tribe of Indians.

No one could object to that provision. Then it says:

Provided, That not less than 25,000 acres shall be offered for lease for oil and gas mining purposes during any one year.

In other words, the Secretary of the Interior is directed to lease not less than 25,000 acres of land for oil purposes in any one year, irrespective of the rights or needs of the Indians. Their capital investment is to be rapidly destroyed; we are expected to preserve it. We are here seeking to take from them at the rate of 25,000 acres a year—it may be 100,000 acres; no limit is provided as a maximum for this wastage in Indian oil lands.

Mr. HUDSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FREAR. I yield.

Mr. HUDSON. The gentleman says the Secretary of the Interior could do this?

Mr. FREAR. He is required to do it.

Mr. HUDSON. The gentleman read "the Secretary of the Interior and the tribal council."

Mr. FREAR. It says the Secretary of the Interior and the tribal council, but you can persuade the tribal council to do many things, as the gentleman well knows. The Secretary of the Interior is their guardian under the law. He is selected for such purpose. We say to him, "We commit into your hands, Mr. Secretary, the interests of these Indians, but we require you to lease 25,000 acres or more to oil speculators." In other words, 760,000 acres of land is the minimum amount of oil lands we are going to make you lease to these oil speculators within the next 30 years under the provisions of this law. That seems to me most inconsistent for the committee to take from these Indians their own lands and force their guardian to dispose of them to oil speculators.

Mr. HASTINGS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FREAR. I yield.

Mr. HASTINGS. I think I can explain it to the gentleman.

Mr. FREAR. Very well.

Mr. HASTINGS. There are 1,500,000 acres of these lands.

Mr. FREAR. All oil lands?

Mr. HASTINGS. More or less. Under existing law the Secretary of the Interior is required to lease not less than 100,000 acres.

Mr. FREAR. And you are repealing that law to-day by changing it to not less than 25,000 acres every year.

Mr. HASTINGS. We are revising and correcting that so that he is not compelled to lease more than 25,000 acres. Why? We understand the trust has been continued from 1931 to 1946, from 1946 to 1958, and if you were to divide 1,500,000 acres by 25,000 it would take 60 years to lease it.

Mr. FREAR. Very well; I do not yield any further.

Now, gentlemen, it is certain that the 1,500,000 acres is not all oil land, and yet you are going to insist that 25,000 acres or more, possibly 100,000 acres, must be leased every year. You have stricken out the 100,000 acres in the old law, you say, yet not less than 25,000 acres must be leased every year to hungry, grasping oil speculators. No discretion rests with the Secretary of the Interior. He can not protect the Indian's oil lands, for we say to him he must lease 25,000 acres. If they have ten times that acreage in oil lands not yet leased, it is all certain to be frittered away in 10 years, and we are responsible for that result. It is a startling provision.

Why should we do that? On what theory can we justly force the Secretary of the Interior to lease 25,000 acres annually to the oil men? Can we not trust his judgment? We are trusting the Secretary with all other Indian property to sell, lease, and in every other way. It seems to me that we are taking the capital investment of the Indians, who have no voice in this matter, even though their tribal council may agree to it, and we will soon have them with exhausted oil wells, poor and helpless as all the other Indians we have despoiled of their property. I believe it is a vicious provision that should be stricken from the bill.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment. My colleague [Mr. HASTINGS] has partially explained this provision. The history of the provision is this: A year or two ago an oil conservation board was created. The first recommendation they made was that we shut down operations on the Indian lands, so to speak, by repealing this hundred thousand acre requirement and leaving it in the hands of the Secretary of the Interior. That bill was sent to the Congress. As the representative of these Osage Indians I held up the bill, because when these lands are leased if development does not progress these Osage Indians are paid a rental of a dollar an acre a year, and I took the position that I would not permit of there being no minimum amount to be leased in this bill, and permit them at the same time to bring 250,000 or 300,000 barrels of oil up the coast into this country free of duty. I, as the representative of the Osage Indians, wrote that provision in the bill in order that the interest of the Osage Indians could be cared for and that development in their country should continue at least in an orderly way.

Mr. HASTINGS. And that it may all be developed before the trust period expires.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Yes. I took that position, believing it was in the interest of the Indian.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Yes.

Mr. FREAR. The gentleman represents the Osage Indians?

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Yes.

Mr. FREAR. They have a limited amount of oil?

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Nobody knows whether it is limited or not.

Mr. FREAR. But common sense teaches us that is so in every case.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Oh, the geologists have said for the last 10 years that oil is limited, but we keep on finding more.

Mr. FREAR. Their capital property is in that oil, and the gentleman is insisting as the representative of the Osage Indians that 25,000 acres of their land shall be usesd every year, leased to oil men where lessees can be found, depreciating to that extent their capital investment in oil. If you trust the Secretary of the Interior, as you will in all other cases I assume, what fear have you that he will not take care of the interest of these Indians just as well as the gentleman will without forcing him to lease 25,000 acres of oil lands every year?

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. First, in answer to the gentleman's question, if his amendment should prevail, then the Secretary of the Interior will have to lease 100,000 acres.

Mr. FREAR. Why?

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Because the present law requires it.

Mr. FREAR. Oh, but you are destroying and repealing the present law.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Oh, no; we are only amending it. Let me say further that if the Secretary of the Interior had not leased these lands of the Osage Indians, and if the white men had not gone in there and paid the Indian $229,000,000 for his oil, he would not have had anything to-day, and I do not propose that you shall shut down development of the Indians' oil or that you shall shut down the development of American oil for the benefit of South American and Mexican oil, and that is why I objected to the provision offered by the Secretary of the Interior and the oil conservation board.

Mr. HASTINGS. And we are only amending existing law, which requires a hundred thousand acres to be offered. This amendment will permit a reduction of that offer to 25,000 acres.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. That is true.

Mr. HASTINGS. So that if this amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin be adopted it would cut out all acreage altogether.

Mr. FREAR. I would have this act go further than that and say that all other acts that provide for any limitation of the amount that must be turned over for exploitation by oil men every year should be stricken out, so as to leave it entirely discretionary with the Secretary of the Interior to lease or not lease every year. That protects the rights of the Indians.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Would the gentleman like to leave the Osage Indians at the mercy of some board that would say that they would not lease any of these lands to-day.

Mr. FREAR. In everything concerning the Indians to-day we turn over the management of all of their property and every interest to the Secretary of the Interior, and I presume that he would protect them in Oklahoma, just as he does in every other State.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. That section 2 of the act of March 3, 1921 (41 Stat. L. 1249), entitled "An act to amend section 3 of the act of Congress of June 28, 1906, entitled 'An act for the division of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and for other purposes,'" be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"The bona fide owner, lessee, or occupant of the surface of lands in the Osage Nation in Oklahoma shall be compensated, as his interest may appear, and under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, for damages to crops and improvements occasioned by the oil and gas lessees, their servants, or agents in going upon such premises and in carrying on oil or gas mining operations. Such surface owner, lessee, or occupant shall also be compensated, as his interest may appear, and under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, for such other damages, including those arising out of pollution of ponds or streams and out of injuries to the surface of lands as are caused by the negligence of the oil or gas lessees, their servants, or agents in developing or operating oil or gas properties in said Osage Nation. The word 'negligence' as used in this act shall mean 'negligence' as defined and construed by the courts of the State of Oklahoma. All claims for damages arising under this section shall be settled by arbitration; but either party shall have the right to appeal to the courts, without consent of the Secretary of the Interior, in the event he is dissatisfied with the award to or against him. The award shall be in writing and shall be filed in the office of the superintendent of the Osage Indian Agency within 10 days after it is made, and thereupon the said superintendent shall give the parties written notice thereof by personal service or registered mail. Unless appealed from within 60 days after service or mailing of said notice, the award shall become final. The appeal herein authorized shall consist of filing an original action in any court of competent jurisdiction sitting at the county seat of Osage County, to enlarge, modify, or set aside the award; and in any such action, upon demand of either party, the issues both of law and of fact shall be tried de novo. Arbitration or a bona fide offer in writing to arbitrate shall constitute conditions precedent to the right to sue for such damages."

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LEAVITT: Page 4, line 12, after the word "follows," strike out all down to and including the word "damages" in line 24 on page 5, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"The bona fide owner or lessee of the surface of the land shall be compensated, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior in connection with oil and gas mining operations, for any damage that shall accrue after the passage of this act as a result of the use of such land for oil and gas mining purposes, or out of damages to the land or crops thereon occasioned thereby, but nothing herein contained shall be construed to deny to the surface owner or lessee the right to appeal to the courts without the consent of the Secretary of the Interior, in the event he is dissatisfied with the amount of damages awarded him. All claims for damages arising under this section shall be settled by arbitration under the rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior; but either party shall have the right to appeal to the courts without the consent of the Secretary of the Interior in the event he is dissatisfied with the award to or against him. The appeal herein authorized shall consist of filing an original action in any court of competent jurisdiction sitting at the county seat of Osage County to enlarge, modify, or set aside the award, and in any such action, upon demand of either party, the issues both of law and of fact shall be tried de novo. Arbitration, or a bona fide offer in writing to arbitrate, shall constitute conditions precedent to the right to sue for such damage: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall preclude the institution of any such suit in a Federal court having jurisdiction thereof, or the removal to such court of any such suit brought in the State court, which under Federal law may be removed to the Federal court."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word and would ask unanimous consent to speak out of order for six minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent to speak out of order for six minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. BANKHEAD. What is it the gentleman is going to discuss?

Mr. SCHAFER. The prohibition question.

Mr. HUDSON. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, I believe since the House has so much business to transact we had better have a quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman make the point of order?

Mr. SCHAFER. I will withdraw it, as the chairman of the committee informs me he has a lot of business to transact.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. That section 1 of the act of Congress of February 27, 1925 (43 Stat. L. 1008), is hereby amended by adding thereto the following:

"The Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, upon application of any member of the Osage Tribe of Indians not having a certificate of competency, to pay all or any part of the funds held in trust for such Indian: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior shall, within one year after this act is approved, pay to each enrolled Indian of less than half Osage blood, one-fifth part of his or her proportionate trust-fund credit. And such Secretary shall on or before the expiration of 10 years from the date of the approval of this act advance and pay over to such Osage Indian of less than one-half Osage Indian blood, all of the balance appearing to his credit in the Osage tribal trust fund, and shall issue to such Indian a certificate of competency: Provided further, That when and where any Osage Indian of less than half Osage Indian blood shall owe debts and obligations for necessaries of life, then and in that event the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to retain from and not pay out to such Osage Indian debtor 25 per cent of his quarterly dues, to be by the Secretary of the Interior paid in installments upon the now existing claims against such Indian for necessaries of life, such as medicines, doctor bills, food, clothing, dry goods, and for implements and other materials required in the operation of the Indian's farm lands, against which claims the statute of limitations of Oklahoma has not run. But no money shall be retained out of the quarterly allowances due such Osage Indians by the Secretary of the Interior for any other purpose without the consent and approval of such Indians. The Secretary of the Interior shall determine such rules and regulations for the payment of said retained moneys of said Osage Indians, upon such meritorious claims for necessaries of life against which claims the statute of limitations of Oklahoma has not run. But the provisions herein made for payment of debts shall only apply to present existing meritorious claims against which the staute of limitations of Oklahoma has not run: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior shall by or before the end of five years from the date of the approval of this act pay to each restricted Osage Indian of less than half Osage blood, who is not incompetent under the laws of the State of Oklahoma, and who is at the date of approval of this act more than 25 years of age, the whole of his or her pro rata share of the tribal trust fund then being to the credit of such Indian: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior shall, in his discretion, pay any present existing meritorious debts and obligations of any restricted Osage Indian, against which debts and claims the statute of limitations of Oklahoma has not run, out of any moneys appearing to the credit of such Osage Indian in the tribal trust fund: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to interfere in any way with the removal by the Secretary of the Interior of restrictions from and against any Osage Indian at any time.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, in reference to section 3 I desire to make a point of order, on page 6 of the bill, to the proviso beginning in line 18 and continuing through the balance of that page and down to the end of the proviso in line 15 on page 7. The language to which I take exception is as follows:

Provided further, That when and where any Osage Indian of less than half Osage Indian blood shall owe debts and obligations for necessaries of life, then and in that event the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to retain from and not pay out to such Osage Indian debtor 25 per cent of his quarterly dues, to be by the Secretary of the Interior paid in installments upon the now existing claims against such Indian for necessaries of life, such as medicines, doctor bills, food, clothing, dry goods, and for implements and other materials required in the operation of the Indian's farm lands, against which claims the statute of limitations of Oklahoma has not run. But no money shall be retained out of the quarterly allowances due such Osage Indians by the Secretary of the Interior for any other purpose without the consent and approval of such Indians. The Secretary of the Interior shall determine such rules and regulations for the payment of said retained moneys of said Osage Indians upon such meritorious claims for necessaries of life against which claims the statute of limitations of Oklahoma has not run. But the provisions herein made for payment of debts shall only apply to present existing meritorious claims against which the statute of limitations of Oklahoma has not run.

Mr. Speaker, the bill before us is a Senate bill which, as referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, carried only the language carried on pages 1 and 2 of the bill. All that bill referred to the committee covered is set forth in lines 1 to 8 on page 2, where it is provided that the Secretary of the Interior may reduce the area of land to be offered annually for lease. That is the only subject covered by the bill referred to the committee. The proviso in the committee amendment to which I have made the point of order has to do with an entirely different matter, a matter of making in fact a collection agency of the Government to force the Indians to pay their accounts for certain necessities of life under certain conditions. I make the point of order that this is not germane to the bill referred to the committee. I could have made, of course, the point of order against the entire committee amendment, and because of this defect it would seem the entire committee amendment would have been subject to the point of order. But I have not desired to do that. I am just making the point of order at this time with reference to the language I have indicated.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, the committee, of course, has on the calendar a House bill identical with this Senate bill. We placed the wording of the House bill following the title of the Senate bill only to expedite consideration. I will ask a parliamentary question at this point. The sections which have been already read would not be subject to this point of order even though it would lie against this matter now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Thus far the House has acted upon amendments only to the committee amendment. The committee amendment as amended has not yet been adopted. By a unanimous-consent agreement entered into the committee amendment to the Senate bill is being read by sections, but it is in fact one entire amendment and has not yet been acted upon except that certain amendments have been made to it. It would seem to the Chair that the amendment to the Senate bill having been read and consideration having been begun, the time for making a point of order on the amendment is past.

Mr. CRAMTON. No, Mr. Speaker; because in my request for unanimous consent I specifically asked that it be in order to make points of order as each section was reached.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair, not being in the chair at the time, did not know that the gentleman had reserved points of order. His statement, of course, changes matters very materially.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I wish to be heard on the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I do not think the point of order made by the gentleman from Michigan is well founded in law. It is predicated on the theory, I take it, that the money of the Indians which is due under the law and payable to them quarterly is privately owned money, beyond the power of the Government to have anything to do with, further than to pay it out to the Indians.

I think this is an error. I now desire to call the attention of the Speaker to the fact that the Congress in this same bill extended the exemption from taxation and from execution and from other court proceedings to the homesteads of the very Indians to whom this money is due and payable. If the Government has such jurisdiction and control over the property of an Indian, whether he be restricted or emancipated, then it would seem that it could exercise sufficient control over the money that it has had and even yet does have under its control to the extent that it could subject it to an obligation to pay for the necessaries of life of the owner. In other words, Mr. Speaker, if the Congress has such jurisdiction over the property of the Indians that it can say to the State and to the county with reference to taxes and to all the public, "This property shall be exempt from taxation and shall be exempt from application upon the payment of the debt of the emancipated Indian"; if it can say that one part of the Indian's property is exempt from taxation, it can also say that another part of the property belonging to the Indians shall not be exempt from the payment of debt for the necessaries of life. You can not play fast to the Indians with reference to one class of property and certain obligations and loose with reference to other property and obligations. I wish to say further that as a matter of policy it is the duty of the Government in qualifying the Indians for citizenship to say that they pay their debts for the necessaries of life.

Mr. SCHAFER. A point of order, Mr. Speaker. The gentleman is not arguing on the point of order. He is making a speech.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. I will admit that the last statement was of the nature of a speech. But the other part of my statement was 100 per cent pertinent.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, we have been talking almost all day without a quorum. Does the gentleman desire a quorum to be present?

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. My remarks were directed to the chairman. I presented what I consider the reasons why Congress has such jurisdiction and such control over the property of the Indians as to enable it to say the Indians' money shall be applied to the payments of Indian-made debts for necessaries of life.

As to these quarterly payments of $1,000, the courts of this Government have held that this $1,000 quarterly and the interest in the tribal funds are not assets of the Indians which can be applied by the courts to the payment of his debts. If that is true, it is under the control of the Government to such an extent that it may say it shall be subject to application upon his debts for the necessaries of life. That is all I care to say on that point.

Mr. CRAMTON. I will say to the gentleman from Kansas, Mr. Speaker, that my point of order does not involve at all the authority that the Government may have over the disposition of these funds. That question is not involved, or the merits of the language. The point of order simply is that this language is not in order on this bill, not being germane to the bill that was referred to this committee. The committee, as a matter of fact, had before it a bill to amend section 1 of an act of 1921. This is proposed as an amendment to section 1 of an act of 1925, a separate act entirely.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is ready to rule. The Chair understands that the entire subject matter contained in this bill is clearly under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Indian Affairs. If the committee had chosen to bring in a bill covering the subject matter of this section 3, it would have been within the jurisdiction of the committee, and the bill would not have been subject to a point of order. Instead of doing this, however, the committee chose, in order to expedite the passage of the bill, as indicated by the chairman of the committee, to take a Senate bill, quite limited in its scope, and amend it by striking out all after the enacting clause and adding other subject matter which, as it seems to the Chair, is entirely outside of and beyond anything contained in the Senate bill. It is clear to the Chair that if the Committee on Indian Affairs had reported out the Senate bill just as it came from the Senate and section 3 of the committee amendment had been offered from the floor as an amendment, it would be subject to a point of order as not germane. If this be true, then it is subject to a point here because the Committee on Indian Affairs in this instance has no greater right than an individual Member has on the floor of the House. Therefore the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the further point of order that the proviso, beginning on line 23 of page 7, and continuing down to part of line 3 on page 8, relating to similar subjects, is likewise not germane to the original bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair makes the same ruling as before in regard to the other matter objected to by the gentleman from Michigan, and this language goes out of the bill.

Mr. HASTINGS. I did not catch the citation, where the language begins.

Mr. CRAMTON. Line 23.

Mr. HASTINGS. The first point of order?

Mr. CRAMTON. Line 18.

Mr. WILLIAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend on page 6, line 11, by inserting the word "one" and a hyphen before the word "half," so as to make it read "one-half Osage blood" and thus conform to the language throughout the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from South Dakota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WILLIAMSON: Page 6, line 11, after the word "than," insert the word "one" and a hyphen.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WILLIAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I offer another amendment. On page 7, line 18, after the word "than," insert the word "one" and a hyphen.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from South Dakota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WILLIAMSON: Page 7, line 18, after the word "than," insert the word "one" and a hyphen.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Montana offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LEAVITT: Page 6, line 12, after the word "proportionate," strike out the words "trust-fund credit" and insert in lieu thereof the words "share of accumulated funds."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer another amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Montana offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LEAVITT: Page 6, line 16, after the word "credit," strike out the words "in the Osage tribal trust fund" and insert in lieu thereof the words "of accumulated funds."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer another perfecting amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Montana offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LEAVITT: Page 7, line 16, after the word "shall," strike out the word "by" and insert in lieu thereof the word "on."

Mr. ARENTZ. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ARENTZ. If the Senate bill is limited in its scope and the Indian Affairs Committee of the House has proceeded upon the theory that the Senate bill did not cover the subject matter as far as the House committee thought it should, did the Chair render a decision as to the germaneness of the entire subject matter of the House amendment, or just as to a particular portion of it?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair ruled only as to such matter as was specifically objected to or against which a point of order was specifically made, and that is all. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Montana.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I move to amend the section by striking out all of the section beginning with the proviso in line 9, on page 6, and continuing through to page 7.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CRAMTON: Page 6, line 9, after the word "Indian" and beginning with the word "Provided," strike out the remainder of the page and all of page 7 down to and including the word "Indian" in line 23.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, this section as drafted was the section to which I called attention on last Calendar Wednesday as having conflicting provisions. On page 6 is a provision requiring the secretary, on or before 10 years, to turn over to certain Indians all of their funds, and on page 7 is a very similar provision but with a 5-year limitation. Personally, I do not believe that as to these Indians who do not have a certificate of competency the secretary should be required to turn all of their money over to them at any stated time, either in 5 years or 10 years. It seems to me the secretary should have a discretion; that he should be permitted to turn a part of it over to them and let them use it in trying out their business ventures, and, if they make good, perhaps turn over some more to them, but to require the secretary to turn over all of their money in either 5 years or 10 years has seemed to me highly undesirable. So the section will read this way if this amendment prevails. I want to be sure the Members fully understand the amendment. Certain parts of section 3 have gone out on a point of order; this motion takes out other portions and would leave the section reading this way:

SEC. 3. That section 1 of the act of Congress of February 27, 1925 (43 Stat. L. 1008), is hereby amended by adding thereto the following: "The Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, upon application of any member of the Osage Tribe of Indians not having a certificate of competency, to pay all or any part of the funds held in trust for such Indian."

Then there remains on page 8:

And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to interfere in any way with the removal by the Secretary of the Interior of restrictions from and against any Osage Indian at any time.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I will ask the gentleman if the words contained in the first three lines on page 8 have been stricken out?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes; they went out on a point of order.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. May I ask the gentleman if he will accept an amendment to the amendment?

Mr. CRAMTON. I will be glad to consider it.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. In the present bill, in line 23, after the word "Indian," as I understood the gentleman's motion, it was to strike out all down to the word "Indian."

Mr. CRAMTON. The last three lines of page 7 and the first three lines of page 8 went out on a point of order.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. The amendment I wanted to offer provided for the payment of the debts of the restricted Indians and I suppose the gentleman would raise a point of order against that.

Mr. CRAMTON. That is not in the bill.

I understand, while there has been some difference of opinion about the other matters, the amendment I now offer is generally agreeable.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. I do not understand so.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Just what is the amendment that the gentleman wants to make—to strike out the five years?

Mr. CRAMTON. Yes; it would leave lines 4 to 9, on page 6. That is what would remain, and that contains no requirement that the Secretary make any advance to them but makes it possible for him to turn over to them as much as he thinks wise.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. I have no objection to that but I understood the gentleman to say that no limitation should be made in the bill with reference to the time at which less than half-blood Indians should be emancipated.

Mr. CRAMTON. This does not apply to the amount of blood, but does apply to those who do not have certificates of competency. It did not seem to me wise that for those who do not have certificates of competency there should be a requirement here for the Secretary to turn their money over to them in 5 years or 10 years. I believe it should be left to the discretion of the Secretary.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. I would say to the gentleman and to the Members of the House that within the past six years the Secretary of the Interior has been removing the restrictions on the less than half bloods at a more rapid rate than he would remove them during the next 5 or 10 years, so that this provision of the bill would not require him to remove their restrictions at a more rapid rate than he has in the past.

Mr. CRAMTON. The bill as reported to the committee, as I understand it, was not addressed at all to the idea of changing the rate of removing restrictions, but did provide, as reported, that without the restrictions removed and without any certificate of competency being granted, that still within the stated period the money should be turned over to them.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The amendments agreed to before the Committee on Indian Affairs were to the effect that all Indians of less than half blood should be given their emancipation by the time they arrive at 30 years of age, and those who are now 25 years of age should receive one-fifth of their money per year during the remaining five years within which they might be kept under restrictions. So that during this time they might have the supervision of the Osage agent with reference to the investment and care——

Mr. CRAMTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. CRAMTON. I am advised by the superintendent of the Osage agency that there only six Osages who are over 30 who have less than half blood that have any money to worry about. I do not remember the details, but of the six only three of them are pronouncedly incompetent, as I recall. There are only six Indians involved of the age of over 30 of less than half blood who have large amounts of money.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Another purpose in fixing the limitation of 30 years within which all of the less than half bloods are to be given their freedom is that there are three less than half bloods who have large amounts of money to their credit who positively refuse to accept emancipation papers, and the Government is required to continue to care for their money and handle it for them, when everyone who knows them knows they are well qualified to look after their own money themselves, individually. It is their idea that the Government is better qualified than they are, although everybody else, even the agent and the Secretary of the Interior, knows that they are qualified for independent citizenship.

So this bill is intended to free the Government of further guardianship over the 30-year-old white Indians, those that have a majority of white blood and a very small percentage of Indian blood. The purpose of the bill is surely commendable, because it is not only the duty of the Government, in our judgment, to give these Indians their independence at the earliest possible date they are qualified to receive it but the Government ought to rid itself of the guardianship burden as soon as it may justly and equitably do so with respect to the Indian.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 4. That section 2 of the act of Congress approved February 27, 1925 (43 Stat. L. 1011), being an act to amend the act of Congress of March 3, 1921 (41 Stat. L. 1249), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Upon the death of an Osage Indian of one-half or more Indian blood who does not have a certificate of competency, his or her moneys and funds and other property accrued and accruing to his or her credit and which have heretofore been subject to supervision as provided by law shall be paid to the administrator or executor of the estate of such deceased Indian or direct to his heirs or devisees, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, under regulations to be promulgated by him: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior shall pay to administrators and executors of the estates of such deceased Osage Indians a sufficient amount of money out of such estates to pay all lawful indebtedness and costs and expenses of administration when approved by him; and, out of the shares belonging to heirs or devisees, above referred to, he shall pay the costs and expenses of such heirs or devisees, including attorney fees, when approved by him, in the determination of heirs or contest of wills. Upon the death of any Osage Indian of less than one-half degree of Osage Indian blood, or upon the death of an Osage Indian who has a certificate of competency, his moneys and funds and other property accrued and accruing to his credit shall be paid and delivered to the administrator or executor of his estate to be administered upon according to the laws of the State of Oklahoma: Provided, That upon the settlement of such estate any funds or property subject to the control or supervision of the Secretary of the Interior on the date of the approval of this act, which have been inherited by or devised to any adult or minor heir or devisee of one-half or more Osage Indian blood who does not have a certificate of competency, and which have been paid or delivered by the Secretary of the Interior to the administrator or executor shall be paid or delivered by such administrator or executor to the Secretary of the Interior for the benefit of such Indian and shall be subject to the supervision of the Secretary as provided by law.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following perfecting amendment:

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 8, line 18, strike out the word "shall" and insert the word "may."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVITT. I offer the following further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 8, line 19, after the "comma," insert the words "or may be retained by the Secretary of the Interior."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 5. The restrictions concerning lands and funds of allotted Osage Indians, as provided in this act and all prior acts now in force, shall apply only to unallotted Osage Indians of one-half or more Osage Indian blood born since July 1, 1907, or after the passage of this act, and to their heirs of one-half or more Osage Indian blood, except that the provisions of section 6 of the act of Congress approved February 27, 1925, with reference to the validity of contracts for debt, shall not apply to any allotted or unallotted Osage Indian of less than one-half degree Indian blood: Provided, That the Osage lands and funds and any other property which has heretofore or which may hereafter be held in trust or under supervision of the United States for such Osage Indians of less than one-half degree Indian blood not having a certificate of competency shall not be subject to forced sale to satisfy any debt or obligation contracted or incurred prior to the issuance of a certificate of competency: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized in his discretion to grant a certificate of competency to any unallotted Osage Indian when in the judgment of the said Secretary such member is fully competent and capable of transacting his or her own affairs.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the language on page 10, line 3, beginning with the word "except" and continuing down through to the end of that proviso in the middle of line 14. The language to which I make the point of order reads as follows:

except that the provisions of section 6 of the act of Congress approved February 27, 1925, with reference to the validity of contracts for debt, shall not apply to any allotted or unallotted Osage Indian of less than one-half degree Indian blood: Provided, That the Osage lands and funds and any other property which has heretofore or which may hereafter be held in trust or under supervision of the United States for such Osage Indians of less than one-half degree Indian blood not having a certificate of competency shall not be subject to forced sale to satisfy any debt or obligation contracted or incurred prior to the issuance of a certificate of competency.

I make the point of order for the same reasons involved in the point of order I made to the part of section 3, that it is not germane to the bill referred to the committee.

The SPEAKER. It seems to the Chair that this language is not mentioned in the Senate bill and therefore clearly is not germane, and the Chair sustains the point of order, and the language will be stricken from the committee amendment.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 9, line 35, after the word "apply," strike out the word "only."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 10, line 1, after the word "Indians" strike out the words "of one-half or more Osage Indian blood."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer the further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 10, line 3, after the word "heirs," strike out the words "one-half or more."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of section 6 be dispensed with. I intend to offer an amendment to strike that section from the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 10, line 20, strike out all of section 6.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 7. That section 9 of the act of Congress approved June 28, 1906 (34 Stat. L. 539), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"That there shall be a quadrennial election of officers of the Osage Tribe as follows: A principal chief, an assistant principal chief, and eight members of the Osage tribal council, to succeed the officers elected in the year 1926, said officers to be elected at a general election to be held in the town of Pawhuska, Okla., on the first Monday in June, 1928, and on the first Monday in June each four years thereafter, in the manner to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and said officers shall be elected for a period of four years commencing on the 1st day of July following said elections, and in case of vacancy in the office of principal chief by death, resignation, or otherwise, the vacancies of the Osage tribal council shall be filled in a manner to be prescribed by the Osage tribal council, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to remove from the council any member or members thereof for good cause, to be by him determined, after the party involved has had due notice and opportunity to appear and defend himself, and said tribal government so constituted shall continue in full force and effect to January 1, 1959."

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LEAVITT: Page 12, line 22, after the abbreviated word "sec.," strike out the figure "7" and insert in lieu thereof the figure "6."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVITT. Also the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LEAVITT: Page 13, line 4, after the word "year," strike cut "1926" and insert "1928."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVITT. Also the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LEAVITT: Page 13, line 6, after the word "June," strike out "1928" and insert in lieu thereof "1930."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CRAMTON: Page 13, line 12, after the word "chief," insert "or other such officer."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. LEAVITT: Amend the title so as to read: "A bill relating to the tribal and individual affairs of the Osage Indians of Oklahoma."

The SPEAKER. The Chair suggests that this, being an amendment to the title, should come after the bill is passed.

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out section 7. I would like to obtain some information from the chairman of the committee. This section amends an act of Congress and I want to find out what changes are made in existing law.

Mr. LEAVITT. The only changes made are in the dates, that is, of any moment. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] inserts the words "or other such officer" after the word "chief."

Mr. SCHAFER. Under existing law can the Secretary of the Interior arbitrarily bring charges against one of these officers elected by the rank and file of the Indians, try the case, and remove him from office?

Mr. LEAVITT. Yes. This does not change that at all.

Mr. SCHAFER. Has that officer an appeal to the tribe or to any court, or is a decision of the Secretary of the Interior final?

Mr. LEAVITT. Of course final action in matters of this kind are left by the Congress with the Secretary of the Interior. This does not change that situation in any way. This is one of the principal sections of the bill brought by the Osage Council, in which they especially urged that these changes be made in these dates, so that they can carry on their business with sanction of law through the election of these new officers.

Mr. SCHAFER. If this amendment as embodied in section 7 be stricken from the bill, then they can not elect these officers?

Mr. LEAVITT. They want the sanction of the law. Of course, they can elect them, but they want the sanction of the law so that no question can be raised as to their powers.

Mr. SCHAFER. This section appears on its face to carry the impression that the Indians have something to say about who shall be their officers, while in fact in the final analysis they do not.

Mr. LEAVITT. The only effect of the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin, if this section should be stricken from the bill, would be to leave the law as it is now with that provision in it, without these changes in the dates or to bring this authority for the election of tribal officers up to date, and it would not affect that other matter in any way.

Mr. SCHAFER. Do the Indians desire that the Secretary of the Interior continue, in the future as in the past, to be able to bring charges, try the case, and remove an officer duly elected by the rank and file of the Indians?

Mr. LEAVITT. They evidently consider that a matter of their own protection and of their own business, and they bring this section as it is to the committee and to the Congress with the request particularly that it be enacted.

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment, since the Indians want this to go on.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the amendment will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

The committee amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. LEAVITT, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The title was amended to read as follows: "A bill relating to the tribal and individual affairs of the Osage Indians of Oklahoma."

SURVEY OF CERTAIN LANDS IN NEW MEXICO

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill H. R. 16555, which is on the Union Calendar, and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole; and pending the putting of that request I wish to state because of the lateness of the hour the controversial trust fund bill, which we intended to bring up this afternoon, will not be called up. I am satisfied that with this in the RECORD, when it is considered fully by the Members of the House until they fully understand it, there will be no general objection to it. It is intended solely for the benefit and protection of the Indians.

Mr. SCHAFER. Will the gentleman yield for a short question?

Mr. LEAVITT. I will.

Mr. SCHAFER. Does the gentleman think if Mr. John Collier, who appears to speak for the Indians on any matter submitted to Congress, reads the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD he will reach the decision that the bill ought to be passed?

Mr. LEAVITT. I would hardly be able to guess what may come to that gentleman's mind on any subject.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 16655) to authorize the survey of certain land claimed by the Zuni Pueblo Indians, New Mexico, and the issuance of patent therefor.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana asks unanimous consent that this bill be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union. Is there objection. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 16655) to authorize the survey of certain land claimed by the Zuni Pueblo Indians, New Mexico, and the issuance of patent therefor

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause a survey to be made of the land claimed and held by the Zuni Pueblo Indians in New Mexico as their grant under section 8 of the act of July 22, 1854 (10 Stat. 308–309), and the boundaries thereof identified: Provided, That upon completion of the required survey, and acceptance thereof, he shall cause to be issued to the Zuni Indians a patent covering the land surveyed, of the same form heretofore issued for other Pueblo Indian grants in New Mexico.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

PURCHASE OF CERTAIN LANDS IN TEXAS

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill H. R. 16527 and ask unanimous consent that this bill may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 16527) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to purchase land for the Alabama and Coushatta Indians of Texas, subject to certain mineral and timber interests

Be it enacted, etc., That in purchasing land for the Alabama and Coushatta Indians of Texas, as authorized by the act of May 29, 1928 (45 Stat. 883–900), the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to accept title thereto subject to the reservation of timber and mineral interests: Provided, That a good and sufficient title is otherwise found to be in the grantors.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I yield for the purpose of the gentleman offering an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 7 strike out the words "reservations of timber and mineral interests" and insert in lieu thereof the words "to mineral interests and to existing contracts for sale of timber."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

AGENCY SALARIES, INDIAN SERVICE

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill H. R. 16568 and ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 16568) to repeal that portion of the act of August 24, 1912, imposing a limit on agency salaries of the Indian Service

Be it enacted, etc., That the provision in the act of August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. L. 521; U. S. C. title 25, p. 692, sec. 58), imposing a limitation of $15,000 on the amount which may be paid for salaries at any one Indian agency and $20,000 at a consolidated agency, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

PAYMENT OF INTEREST ON CERTAIN INDIAN FUNDS

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill S. 5180, on the Union Calendar, and ask that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman calls up the bill S. 5180, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5180) to authorize the payment of interest on certain funds held in trust by the United States for Indian tribes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all money in excess of $500 held by the United States in a trust fund account, and carried on the books of the Treasury Department to the credit of an Indian tribe, if the payment of interest thereon is not otherwise authorized by law, shall bear simple interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum from the date of the passage of this act. The amount held in any such trust fund account, which in the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior may not be required for payment in accordance with law, shall be covered into the surplus fund of the Treasury; but so much thereof as may be necessary for making any such payment may, at any time thereafter, be restored to such account without reappropriation by Congress.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

INDIANS OF THE SAN ILDEFONSO PUEBLO

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill S. 5146, on the Union Calendar, and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5146) to reserve certain lands on the public domain in Santa Fe County, N. Mex., for the use and benefit of the Indians of the San Ildefonso Pueblo.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all the vacant, unappropriated, and undisposed of lands within the unsurveyed area in township 19 north, range 7 east, New Mexico principal meridian, New Mexico, identified as a narrow strip, a little more than 1½ miles wide and 4 miles long, running north and south, lying between the western boundary of the San Ildefonso Pueblo grant on the east and the eastern boundary of a portion of the Santa Fe National Forest on the west, be, and they are hereby, reserved for the sole use and benefit of the Indians of the San Ildefonso Pueblo: Provided, That the rights and claims of any bona fide settler initiated under the public land laws prior to July 27, 1928, the date of withdrawal of the lands from all forms of entry, shall not be affected by this act.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

KANOSH BAND OF INDIANS

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill S. 5147, on the Union Calendar, and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman calls up the bill S. 5147, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5147) to reserve 920 acres on the public domain for the use and benefit of the Kanosh Band of Indians residing in the vicinity of Kanosh, Utah.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That 920 acres of land described as the east half west half, west half southwest quarter section 1; east half southwest quarter section 10; northeast quarter section 11; southeast quarter northwest quarter section 12; southwest quarter section 23; each half east half, west half southwest quarter section 27; all in township 23 south, range 5 west, Salt Lake meridian, Utah, be, and the same is hereby, reserved for the sole use and occupancy of the Kanosh Band of Indians in Utah: Provided, That the rights and claims of any bona fide settler initiated under the public land laws prior to October 27, 1928, the date of withdrawal of lands, from all form of entry, shall not be affected by this act.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF INDIANS IN UTAH, COLORADO, AND NEW MEXICO

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill S. 2482 and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. It is on the Union Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana calls up the bill S. 2482, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. I hope the gentleman will not call up this bill. There is an adverse report against this bill both from the Budget Bureau and from the Secretary of the Interior. I think we ought to have a quorum before we consider this bill.

Mr. CRAMTON. Will it make any difference to the gentleman if I offer an amendment such as is placed on other bills of this character, providing that the judgment shall not be subject to per capita payments and only be subject to appropriations for education and the purchase of land and for the building and improvement of homes, and so forth?

I am satisfied from the examination that I have made of it that the bill is on a parity with other bills that have been passed heretofore and possibly is in a better position. They once had the authority which is now sought, but that has expired. The new bill does not involve the Government in the same dangerous responsibility as there would be otherwise, if my amendment is accepted.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. I have given some thought and some consideration to these bills, to send the Indians to the Court of Claims. It seems they are never finished. I think the reason for that is the fact that lawyers are deliberately working up these claims for no other purpose.

I see from a rather hurried reading of the report that these Indians have already been before the Court of Claims, and the judgment rendered was supposed to adjudicate every right that they had, and they secured, if I remember correctly, something over $3,000,000.

Mr. WILLIAMSON. That court adjudicated all the rights of the Confederated Ute Tribe up until the year 1911. Since that time the court has taken away from the White River Ute Indians in Utah 1,010,000 acres of land. Included in that area is about 2,000 acres of coal land.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Was that done by the court?

Mr. WILLIAMSON. No; by order of the President. All of this has occurred since 1911.

Mr. COLTON. If the gentleman will yield for a word further——

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Certainly——

Mr. COLTON. With reference to the claims of the Uintah and White River and Uncompahgre Indians, that claim has never been adjudicated. A little over a million acres were taken from the reservation and included in a forest reserve.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. I have not had time to examine this bill in minute detail. Does it contain a provision that in no case shall the attorney's fee exceed 10 per cent?

Mr. COLTON. It does.

Mr. LEAVITT. I will say to the gentleman from Texas that that is very fully protected.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. If it is agreed that the amendment suggested by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] shall be embodied in the bill, I shall not object.

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will there be a limitation on the amount of the attorney's fee in this bill?

Mr. COLTON. There is one.

Mr. SCHAFER. How much is it?

Mr. LEAVITT. That it shall not be to exceed 10 per cent.

Mr. SCHAFER. Is it drawn good and tight so it will be effective?

Mr. LEAVITT. It surely is.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That to carry into effect the provisions of the act of Congress of May 27, 1902, relating to the lands in the former Uintah Indian Reservation in the State of Utah, occupied by the Uintah and White River Tribes or Bands of Ute Indians, and ceded by them to the United States, and to secure also a final adjudication of all claims of whatsoever nature which the said White River and Uintah Bands or Tribes and the Uncompahgre and Southern Ute Bands or Tribes of Ute Indians residing in Utah, New Mexico, and Colorado, may have or claim to have against the United States, jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the Court of Claims, notwithstanding lapse of time or statutes of limitation, to hear and determine and render final judgment, with right of appeal as in other cases, on the claims and rights, whether legal or equitable, of each and all of said tribes or bands of Ute Indians, including any claim or claims arising under any act of Congress, or any treaty or Executive order, with jurisdiction on the part of said court to determine the value of all lands which have been set apart and reserved from the ceded Ute Indian lands as forest reservations or for other public uses under existing laws and proclamations of the President, as if disposed of under the public land laws of the United States, as provided by said agreement or other agreement or treaty, and by acts of Congress, including claims arising out of water rights, irrigation, and rights in mineral and in other lands, and to find and adjudge the amount of money due therefor; and the court shall set off against any sum found due said Ute Indians, or any of the above-named tribes or bands thereof, any sum or sums that shall be properly chargeable against said Ute Indians, or any tribe or band thereof, except such sums as have been paid for a specific purpose and an adequate consideration: Provided, That such set-offs shall also include all gratuities to said Indians from the United States.

Any suit or suits filed hereunder shall be commenced by petition, subject to amendment, to be filed in the Court of Claims within five years after the approval of this act by the attorney or attorneys employed by the said Indians under contract as required by section 2103 of the United States Revised Statutes. Such petition shall be verified by the attorney or attorneys and shall set forth all the facts on which the claim or claims for recovery are based and shall be signed by the attorney or attorneys employed and no other verification shall be necessary: Provided, That in case two or more tribes or bands are joined as plaintiffs in any suit authorized by this act, the court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the several as well as the joint rights of the parties plaintiff and render judgment accordingly.

A copy of the petition in such suit shall be served upon the Attorney General of the United States, and he, or some attorney from the Department of Justice to be designated by him, is hereby directed to appear and defend the interests of the United States.

The compensation to be paid the attorney or attorneys of record shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior on a quantum meruit for the services rendered, not to be in excess of the amounts stipulated in the contract or contracts of employment or in excess of a sum equal to 10 per cent of the amounts recovered against the United States, together with all necessary and proper expenses incurred in the preparation and prosecution of the suit or suits, to be paid to the attorney or attorneys employed by said tribes or bands of Indians by the Secretary of the Treasury out of any moneys in the Treasury arising from the sale of said ceded lands or from the proceeds of said judgment or judgments: Provided, That if the Secretary of the Interior shall find that any attorney or attorneys rendered any services to the Uintah and White River Bands of Ute Indians under a contract executed September 24, 1921, by said Indians, which contract was not approved as provided by section 2103 of the Revised Statutes prior to December 20, 1927, he shall fix such compensation on the quantum meruit basis, to be paid to said attorney or attorneys as in his opinion is reasonable, and the same shall also be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury as herein provided.

All amounts which may be found due and recovered for under the provisions of this act, less attorneys' fees and expenses, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the proper tribe or band and shall draw interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum from the date of the judgment or decree.

Official letters, papers, documents, and records, or certified copies thereof, may be used in evidence, and the departments of the Government shall give access to the attorney or attorneys of said Ute Bands of Indians to such treaties, papers, correspondence, or records as may be required in the prosecution of any suit or suits instituted under this act.

The Court of Claims shall have full authority by proper process and orders to bring in and make parties to any such suit or suits any other bands or tribes of Indians deemed by it necessary or proper to the final determination of the controversy.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That jurisdiction be, and is hereby, conferred upon the Court of Claims, with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States by either party as in other cases, to hear, examine, and adjudicate and render judgment in any and all legal and equitable claims arising under or growing out of the acts of Congress of May 27, 1902 (32 Stat. 263), and March 3, 1905 (33 Stat. 1069), or arising under or growing out of any subsequent act of Congress or Executive order or arising under any treaty or agreement which said Uintah, Uncompahgre, and White River Bands of Ute Indians in Utah and Colorado may have against the United States, or arising under or growing out of the act of February 20, 1895 (28 Stat. 677), and subsequent acts of Congress and proclamations of the President relating thereto, setting apart as a separate reservation for the Southern Ute and the Ute Mountain Bands of Ute Indians in Utah, Colorado, and New Mexico a tract of approximately 1,056,000 acres of land, which claims have not heretofore been determined and adjudicated on their merits by the Court of Claims or the Supreme Court of the United States. Said court shall determine the value of all lands which have been set apart and reserved from the ceded Ute Indian lands as forest reservations or for other public uses under existing laws and proclamations of the President as if disposed of under the public land laws of the United States: Provided, That the value of coal-bearing lands shall not be fixed at a sum in excess of $15 per acre. The court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine the several as well as the joint rights of the parties plaintiff and render judgment accordingly.

"SEC. 2. Any and all claims against the United States within the purview of this act shall be forever barred unless suit be instituted or petition filed as herein provided in the Court of Claims within two years from the approval of this act; and such suit or suits shall make the Uintah, Uncompahgre, and White River Bands of the Ute Indians parties plaintiff and the United States party defendant. A separate petition shall be filed on behalf of the Southern Ute and the Ute Mountain Bands of Ute Indians in Utah, Colorado, and New Mexico, which petition shall make said Indians parties plaintiff and the United States party defendant: Provided, That the Uintah, Uncompahgre, and White Rover Bands of the Ute Indians may be joined should this be necessary to adjudicate any rights which they may have in the matter sought to be litigated. The petition or petitions shall be verified by the attorney or attorneys employed to prosecute such claim or claims under contract with said Indians approved in accordance with existing law and shall set forth all the facts on which the claims for recovery are based. A copy of the petition or petitions in such suit or suits shall be served upon the Attorney General of the United States, and he, or some attorney from the Department of Justice to be designated by him as heretofore directed, shall appear and defend the interests of the United States.

"SEC. 3. In said suit or suits the court shall hear, examine, and adjudicate any claims which the United States may have against said Uintah, Uncompahgre, and White River Bands of the Ute Indians and the Southern Ute and the Ute Mountain Bands of Ute Indians, but any payment, including gratuities which the United States may have made to said Indians, shall not operate as an estoppel but may be pleaded as an offset in such suit.

"SEC. 4. If it be determined by the court that the United States, in violation of the terms and provisions of any law, treaty, Executive order, or agreement as provided in section 1 hereof, has unlawfully appropriated or disposed of any property belonging to said Indians, the damage therefor shall be confined to the value of such property at the time of such appropriation or the disposal thereof except as otherwise provided in section 1 of this act; and with reference to all claims which may be the subject matter of the suit or suits herein authorized, the decree of the court shall be in full settlement of all damages, if any, committed by the Government of the United States and shall annul and cancel all claim, right, and title of said Indians in and to such property.

"SEC. 5. The Court of Claims shall have full authority by proper order and process to bring in and make party to such suit or suits any other tribe or band of Indians deemed by it necessary or proper to the final determination of the matters in controversy. Said court shall determine and render separate judgment for any amount found due to the Confederated Bands of Ute Indians under the terms of the jurisdictional act approved March 3, 1909 (35 Stat. 788).

"SEC. 6. Upon final determination of such suit or suits the Court of Claims shall have jurisdiction to fix and determine a reasonable fee, not to exceed 10 per cent of the recovery, based upon actual services rendered, together with all necessary and proper expenses incurred in preparation and prosecution of the suit or suits, to be paid to the attorney or attorneys employed by said tribes or bands of Indians, and the same shall be included in the decree and shall be paid out of any sum or sums found to be due said tribes or bands: Provided, That said court shall enter a separate judgment under the provisions and limitations above set out for the attorney or attorneys representing the Southern Ute and the Ute Mountain Bands of Ute Indians in Utah, Colorado, and New Mexico, based upon the amount of recovery for said Indians, which recovery shall also be entered as a separate judgment: Provided further, That if the Court of Claims shall find that any attorney or attorneys rendered any services to the Uintah, Uncompahgre, and White River Bands of Ute Indians under a contract executed September 24, 1921, by said Indians, which contract was not approved as provided by section 2103 of the Revised Statutes prior to December 20, 1927, the court shall fix such compensation on the quantum meruit basis as to it shall seem reasonable, to be paid out of any sum found to be due such tribes. The total sum of attorneys' fees in no event shall exceed the limitation herein provided.

"SEC. 7. The proceeds of all amounts, if any, recovered for said Indians, less attorneys' fees and expenses, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Indians decreed by said court to be entitled thereto and shall draw interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum from the date of the judgment or degree.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CRAMTON: On page 10, line 4, strike out the period and insert: "and shall be thereafter subject to appropriation by Congress for educational, health, and industrial, and other purposes for the benefit of the said Indians, including the purchase of lands and building of homes, and no part of said judgment shall be paid out in per capita payments to said Indians."

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the amendment. My point of order is that the amendment is not germane to the general subject of the bill and that it anticipates appropriate consideration and action upon it by the Committee on Indian Affairs. The amendment is not germane to the purpose of the bill, the purpose of the bill being to authorize the presentation of claims to the Court of Claims and securing a judgment. This amendment has to do with the character of the uses to which any judgment that may be obtained in favor of the Indians might be applied.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, the bill is one that has to do with the sending to the Court of Claims of certain unadjudicated controversies. Section 7 provides what shall become of the proceeds of any judgments which may be rendered. Section 7 of the committee amendment reads:

The proceeds of all amounts, if any, recovered for said Indians, less attorneys' fees and expenses, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Indians decreed by said court to be entitled thereto and shall draw interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum from the date of the judgment or decree.

The section deals with the disposition of the proceeds of any judgment recovered and the amendment continues that sentence by saying that they shall be subject to appropriation for certain limited purposes. It is germane to the section of the bill and germane to the bill.

Furthermore, as the gentleman from Kansas knows, the bill secured consideration this afternoon because the gentleman from Texas was assured that such an amendment as I have presented would be accepted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule, although he has not had much opportunity to examine this question.

The gentleman from Kansas makes the point of order that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan is not germane to this section.

So far as the Chair can see all this section does is to provide that the proceeds of all amounts recovered for said Indians shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Indians and shall draw interest at the rate of 4 per cent.

The amendment of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON], it seems to the Chair, goes a good deal further than this and changes entirely the situation as to this fund. The amendment provides that it shall thereafter be subject to appropriation for various purposes, educational, health, industrial, and other purposes, including the purchase of land, and so forth.

It seems to the Chair this is going much further and bringing in entirely different subjects for which the fund may be used and the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CRAMTON: At the end of the bill insert a new section to be known as section 7, and to read as follows:

"Such proceeds shall be thereafter subject to appropriation by Congress for educational, health, and industrial and other purposes for the benefit of the said Indians, including the purchase of lands and building of homes, and no part of said judgment shall be paid out in per capita payments to said Indians."

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane to the subject matter of the bill, and it anticipates the work of the Committee on Indian Affairs, which was created to consider questions of this character. For the two reasons it is our contention that the point of order should be sustained.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, the amendment now offered is offered at the proper place in the bill if it is in order upon the bill at all.

We are passing a bill to authorize these Indians to go to the Court of Claims. The Congress has jurisdiction entirely as to the disposition of judgments that may be rendered in favor of these Indians and the disposition of the money. It is, of course, tied right up with the question of whether we will grant jurisdiction as to the use that will be made of the money, and this was apparent from the fact that both the gentleman from Texas and myself were prepared to object to the consideration of the bill except upon the assurance that this amendment would be accepted by the committee.

Mr. LEAVITT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CRAMTON. I yield.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, the committee is in a rather embarrassing situation. I did agree to the amendment as chairman of the committee, or agree that it would not be opposed by myself, at least; and my recollection is that in the Indian Affairs Committee I raised this same question myself in connection with the bill and that it was then the action of the committee that the Cramton amendment should be written into the bill. There is a misunderstanding about this, however, with Judge WILLIAMSON, the chairman of the subcommittee, who was handling it. He does not recall any such action. The parliamentary situation here is that the bill was allowed to be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole only on this agreement, and if anyone intended to make any objection, I think it should have been made at that time.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I hardly think that statements of this character are pertinent to the matter before the Chair. The question here is the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask, if he may be so indulged, whether the words "such proceeds" refer to proceeds collected under the provisions of this bill?

Mr. CRAMTON. Certainly. It follows the section that discusses these proceeds and then provides this further provision.

Mr. WILLIAMSON. If the gentleman will yield before the ruling of the Speaker, I want to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that this fund referred to here is, of course, a fund which will be realized from the judgment entered in this case, if any, and will be placed in the general funds of the Treasury to the credit of these Indians. Under existing law the Congress has the right to appropriate these funds without further legislation for the purpose of the education and the civilization and the general uses and necessities of the tribe, and it does not seem to me the amendment which the gentleman from Michigan has offered is barred for lack of germaneness. It certainly is germane to the bill and the existing law now in force. It is in the nature of a limitation.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard further just a moment.

The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. WILLIAMSON] has suggested that any judgment which might be obtained in the proceedings to be authorized by this bill would be subject to be appropriated without further action on the part of the House. This I deny, under existing law. Authorization must be made for its use for special purposes by the Committee on Appropriations. I understand we have been acting on the theory that the Snyder Act constitutes such an authorization, but a close examination of that act discloses that it is not an authorization of one penny of appropriation under the law of the land and in view of the strict, or even a liberal, construction of the provisions of the act discloses that it is not an authorization act.

Mr. WILLIAMSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WILLIAMSON. The gentleman knows, of course, that it has been the practice of the Committee on Appropriations to appropriate, under the Snyder Act, for all the purposes which I mentioned a moment ago.

Mr. SPROUL of Kansas. I know that has been done, but it has been done erroneously.

Mr. WILLIAMSON. I do not think there is any question but what the language of that act is broad enough to enable the Congress to appropriate funds without any further legislation whatever, for the purpose of the civilization, the education, and the general necessities of the tribe.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, may I be heard a moment?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will be pleased to hear the gentleman.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I have no interest, of course, in this legislation, but I do have an interest in preserving the integrity of the rulings of the Chair as applied to parliamentary law. It seems to me in all candor that there is no substantial difference between the last amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan and the prior one which the Chair held out of order, and the Chair very properly predicated his ruling on the fact that the original bill was simply to effectuate one purpose, and that was to give these people the right to file their claims. That is the substance and essence of the bill. The gentleman now introduces a proposed amendment which has for its purpose, as I see it, exactly the same things that were covered or contemplated by the original amendment; there may have been some slight change in the phraseology, but the substance of it is the same as the original amendment.

Mr. COLTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. COLTON. I understand the first point of order was raised against the amendment because it was an amendment to a section, and this as it stands now introduces a new section providing for the disposition of the funds that may be realized after this is referred to the Court of Claims?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think that is a distinction that would not have much weight with the Chair, because the Chair is looking at the substance, rather than the legislative position. In view of the circumstances, I think the bill should be recommitted to the committee to fight the question out. I do not want to assume the burden of making the motion.

Mr. LEAVITT. I was about to suggest that course when the gentleman from Alabama took me off my feet. I had agreed with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLACK] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] that this amendment was not objectionable and we came before the House with that kind of an agreement. Of course, the chairman of the committee can not break faith with the House.

Mr. BANKHEAD. If the gentleman from Michigan will withdraw his amendment to save a ruling upon it, I will make the motion to have the bill recommitted to the committee.

Mr. CRAMTON. I am perfectly willing to accept such ruling as the Chair may make.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, may I say this, not upon the point of order? I take it that where agreements are made and objection is withheld with an understanding that an amendment is to be presented, that, of course, means that the amendment is to be presented under the rules of the House; and if a Member chooses to exercise his right, believing that the proposed amendment is not in order, he ought not to be precluded from so doing.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I think the gentleman has stated the case correctly. I recall not long ago on unanimous-consent day the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA] had in mind to offer an amendment, and it was agreed that he could do so; the bill came up and when the amendment was offered it was subject to a point of order, and I made the point of order. I did not think I was precluded from so doing, and I recognize the right of the gentleman from Kansas to make his point of order.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. May I further say that the gentleman from Texas reserved the right to object to the consideration of the bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole?

Mr. LEAVITT. I understand that no other Member of the House loses any right by this—I simply agreed that the amendment will not be opposed by me.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. There is a desire and an opportunity, of course, to keep faith.

Mr. LEAVITT. We have to proceed in the House on the idea that there will be no breaking of faith. I am not criticising the gentleman from Kansas, but I am stating that the chairman of the committee, of which the gentleman from Texas is a member, must not break faith, and that I must therefore ask that the bill be recommitted to the committee.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is a little disturbed in this matter. He is clear that the ruling was correct in regard to the amendment first offered to the only section providing for the disposition of the funds. The Chair is not sufficiently familiar with the other provisions in the committee amendment to determine whether there is reference to any other disposition to be made of these funds.

Mr. WILLIAMSON. There is not, Mr. Speaker; that is the only reference.

The SPEAKER. Then the Chair is inclined to think that any amendment which changed the manner in which it is provided that this fund shall be disposed of, namely, that it shall be kept in a fund and draw 4 per cent interest, is not in order to provide that it may be used for educational, health, or for the purposes of building houses. The Chair does not see how he can escape the philosophy of that reasoning.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, if the Chair will permit, under the present law an appropriation would be in order for any of the purposes mentioned in this proposed section. The effect of the proposed new section is to limit what might be done without that section. Appropriations can be made for health purposes, and so forth, anyway, but the effect of the amendment is to legislate against what also could be done without it, an appropriation for per capita payment.

The SPEAKER. The trouble the Chair finds himself in as he reads the bill is that the bill merely creates a method of bringing a suit in the Court of Claims, and the only thing that the bill provides as to how those claims when collected shall be disposed of is that they shall be deposited and draw 4 per cent interest, and nothing in the bill refers to their use for the building of houses.

Mr. CRAMTON. It is the general, rounded-out bill. It not only permits them to go to the Court of Claims but prescribes the rules and then determines what shall be done with the money after the judgment is rendered. It provides that a portion of that judgment shall be paid out in a certain way; that is, it is paid to the attorneys for the expenses of the litigation and for the fees of the attorneys, and it specifically gives to the Court of Claims the discretion to determine what those fees shall be. Then it provides in section 7 that the other part of it that is not paid to the attorneys and for the attorneys' fees, shall remain in the Treasury at 4 per cent interest. Under existing law, remaining in the Treasury at 4 per cent, it is subject to appropriation at any time for certain purposes, including per capita payments. The purpose of the amendment that I have offered is to limit that; and, of course, there is no specific provision in the bill now with reference to that particular feature, but it is germane to the general purposes of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Of course, with regard to attorneys' fees, it would naturally follow in any suit in the Court of Claims that the attorneys' fees should be paid. The only thing that strikes the Chair is that where this bill provides one and only one method of disposition of the net amount received by the claimant, namely, that it shall be deposited and draw 4 per cent interest, it is a new proposition to use it for the building of houses or for any other purpose, and the Chair can not escape that logic; and, therefore, sustains the point of order.

The question is on the amendment as amended.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, the bill in its present form is disapproved by the Budget and is disapproved by Members here who were assured that if it came up a certain amendment would be made to it.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I was engaged just for a moment. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana asks unanimous consent that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Indian Affairs. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CROW TRIBAL FUNDS

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 15723) authorizing an appropriation of Crow Tribal funds for payment of council and delegate expenses, and for other purposes, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, from funds to the credit of the Crow Tribe of Indians, the sum of $5,000, to be available for the payment of the expenses of the tribal council in holding meetings on the Crow Reservation, and for the expenses of delegates which such council may send to the city of Washington on tribal business.

With the following committee amendment:

Line 8, after the word "business" insert: "when authorized by the Secretary of the Interior or the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior."

The committee amendment was agreed to and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF KLAMATH INDIANS

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 10432) for the relief of the Indians of the Klamath Reservation in Oregon. This bill is on the Union Calendar. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana calls up the bill (H. R. 10432), on the Union Calendar, and asks unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this bill is to relieve the Klamath Indians from certain fees now charged by the Government for supervision of the sale leasing, and so forth, of certain timberlands. These timberlands are very valuable and the Indians are deriving a very large income from them. I can see no reason why in equity we should relieve them of this charge. I would have to object to the request of the gentleman, because I desire an opportunity to discuss the bill at great length in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. LEAVITT. Will the gentleman withhold that objection for the moment?

Mr. CRAMTON. Certainly.

Mr. LEAVITT. The purpose of the bill is not to relieve these Indians of payments which they should make, but to make unnecessary the return of this fund into the Treasury, with reappropriation necessary, and to hold down the handling of the timber affairs of these Indians to the actual cost. The committee has felt after its being referred to the subcommittee that it should pass. The gentleman from Nevada [Mr. ARENTZ], chairman of that subcommittee, has been called away temporarily and is not here, so the bill could not be gone into in greater detail.

Mr. CRAMTON. I will say very likely a bill along the lines of what the gentleman suggests might not be so objectionable, but this bill simply exempts the Klamath Indian Reservation from the general provisions in reference to such charges.

Mr. LEAVITT. There is an effort being made to see that no charge is made against them greater than the cost of the actual service rendered. The suggestion of the gentleman from Michigan, as I understand, is that another bill be introduced which will aim at that specific thing and not be an amendment to existing law.

Mr. CRAMTON. I am not suggesting the method, but I feel that the bill does not accomplish what the gentleman understands the bill to do. I would like to have more opportunity to study and see if the gentleman is right, and if the gentleman from Montana finds after more consideration I am right he may desire to change the form of the bill.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. The bill as printed refers, I think, to the law which permits the Secretary of the Interior to make a charge for the sale of timber. Now the bill would exempt the Klamath Indian Reservation in Oregon from that provision of law entirely, and it seems to me that would go farther than the gentleman has in mind to do. I do not think the Secretary of the Interior would have the right to make any charge at all under this bill as printed.

Mr. LEAVITT. Of course I will have to state that I am at a great disadvantage in handling this bill on the floor. It was introduced by Mr. Sinnott, who is now out of Congress, and was referred to a subcommittee headed by Mr. ARENTZ, who is necessarily absent, and I have not been able to give it close study so that I can give all details.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. It has been reported upon adversely by the Director of the Budget and the Secretary of the Interior, and I shall have to object to its consideration; in fact, I will raise the question of consideration if the gentleman insists upon it.

Mr. LEAVITT. I have called it up on the Calendar Wednesday calendar, but, of course, I can not get consideration in the House as in Committee of the Whole without unanimous consent. Since there is a possibility of having this rewritten in such a way that we might get it through on unanimous-consent day, I will ask permission to withdraw the bill from further consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, which I do not intend to do, I would be very glad to ask the gentleman from Montana about the bill (S. 3770) authorizing the Federal Power Commission to issue permits and licenses on Fort Apache and White Mountain Indian Reservations, Ariz.

As I understand, every year's delay in the passage of legislation granting such authority is losing to those Indians $15,000 or $20,000 a year.

Mr. LEAVITT. There is no question about that. But the practical situation is that I have been told by one of the California delegation [Mr. SWING] that he intends to enforce a roll call and delay the consideration of the bill; and the gentleman who introduced the bill, the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. DOUGLAS], has agreed that we do not call it up to-night. The merits of the bill are so compelling that we may be able to get a rule to pass the bill. At least, I hope we can.

Mr. DOUGLAS of Arizona. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEAVITT. I do.

Mr. DOUGLAS of Arizona. I had some conversation with the gentleman from California [Mr. SWING] with respect to this bill, and we decided that if it had come up this afternoon either he or I would have made the point of order of no quorum, which would have carried the day beyond 5.15 or 5.30 o'clock, and that would have compelled a motion to adjourn.

In reference to the other bill which the Committee on Indian Affairs is anxious to be considered by the House, in order that it be not killed to-day I requested the gentleman from California that it be not called up to-day. My advocacy of the bill is no less vehement, however, I will say to the gentleman from Michigan, and I hope that the bill may be brought up by the House in either one of two ways at some later day.

Mr. CRAMTON. Of course, if there are any ramifications of this reaching down to the Boulder Dam, I am not familiar with them, but the loss to these Indians by reason of the delay I do know of. I hope some plan will be worked out by which the Indians may get their rights.

Mr. DOUGLAS of Arizona. This has nothing to do with Boulder Dam.

Mr. SWING. Mr. Speaker, of course, there are Indians on all of the tributaries of the Colorado River and they would all like to have improvements made on their reservations. And so would the white people who will benefit by the improvements; but, while negotiations are going on between the seven Colorado River Basin States, it is proper that no State shall go forward with the development. The States of Arizona, Utah, New Mexico, Nevada, Colorado, Wyoming, and California have agreed to hold it up. In 1924 they all petitioned the Federal Water Power Commission to suspend action in the basin pending a settlement. All seven have agreed that they would leave the development of all the river and its tributaries in statu quo until they had worked out an agreement. They are negotiating at this time. They may reach an agreement within the next 60 days or 90 days. It seems to me it would be unfortunate to proceed to confer a preferred status as to development in one of the States, particularly the one State that has done more than any other to prevent an agreement being reached.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I have not called up the bill. I have been stating that I would not call it up through an agreement which had been reached at the request of the gentleman from Michigan.

If I may proceed under unanimous consent a few minutes, I would like to speak on the position of the committee.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, let us get back to the regular order of business. This is a matter not pending before the Chair. It is not the regular order. I hope the gentleman will withdraw his bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana asks unanimous consent to proceed for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, the committee feels in regard to this bill that it was the duty of the committee to report it out, and that it is the duty of the Congress to enact it.

Instead of the situation being as has been stated by the gentleman from California, that on every tributary of the Colorado there is an Indian reservation and a tribe of Indians, this is the only situation that I know of that has come to the attention of the committee in which a loss is occurring to these Indians year after year through the failure to develop one of their resources. On this particular tributary there are two tribes of Indians. The water rights there are entirely absorbed by prior use, but there is a possibility of developing power which would bring, according to the statement of the Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs, at least $15,000 or $20,000 a year in revenue to these Indians.

Mr. SCHAFER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEAVITT. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER. Who has been pushing this bill before the committee—the Power Trust or the representatives of the Indians?

Mr. LEAVITT. The gentleman from Arizona [Mr. DOUGLAS] particularly has pushed this bill. We are informed by the Indian Office and by one man in the power business that there is a possibility of this development if this legislation is enacted.

Mr. SCHAFER. I will say that the power interests are trying to develop power on the Wolf River in Wisconsin, which will despoil the natural scenic beauty of that river. They have paid propagandists on that reservation who are claiming that the Indians will receive great sums per capita, whereas they would not receive 10 cents per capita.

Mr. LEAVITT. But under the water power act these Indians would receive about $1 per horsepower developed here, and that would mean, according to the statement of the Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs, from $15,000 to $20,000 a year. We have felt that because of the failure of some States to agree on something else these Indians ought not to be deprived of that revenue, and I hope the bill can come up later in another form.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Montana has expired.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. DRANE, for two days, on account of important official business.

MINORITY VIEWS

Mr. BACHMANN. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Committee on the Civil Service, I ask unanimous consent that I may have three legislative days in which to file minority views on H. R. 16643.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from West Virginia asks unanimous consent that he may have three legislative days in which to file minority views on House bill 16643. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

HYDRAULIC LABORATORY IN THE BUREAU OF STANDARDS

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on Senate bill 1710 by incorporating therein a letter addressed to me by the Western Society of Engineers.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Rivers and Harbors has resumed hearings on the Senate bill to create a hydraulic laboratory in the Bureau of Standards. The Senate committee hearings and the House committee hearings should be made a single public document and sent to every library, high school, college, and university in the United States. Those hearings contain a wealth of information in regard to hydraulics that ought to be made available to the engineering profession and to students in our higher educational institutions. Most of that information has never appeared before in print.

The House committee in its endeavor to investigate the proposition from every imaginable slant and angle have been carried into hitherto unknown seas. Explorations have been made that will be of the greatest value to students of hydraulics and add immeasurably to the knowledge of a subject which ranges over such a vast field. No bill in recent years has aroused such intense interest among the members of any profession as the proposed hydraulic laboratory in the Bureau of Standards has created in the membership of the engineering councils, associations, and societies of this country. The American Engineering Council, the membership which is made up of 24 engineering and allied technical professions of the United States, numbering 43,000 engineers, have unqualifiedly indorsed Senate bill 1710. Representatives from that council in conjunction with eminent engineers from many parts of the United States have appeared before the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and have submitted testimony showing the desirability and need for establishing a national hydraulic laboratory under the Bureau of Standards. The council respectfully protest that section 7, of H. R. 14066, authorizing the establishment of a hydraulic laboratory under the direction of the War Department does not satisfy the need for such a laboratory nor the wishes of those interested and concerned. They hold that a national hydraulic research laboratory is needed not only for the purpose of conducting experiments for river and harbor projects but also for the purpose of conducting scientific hydraulic experiments for any citizen who submits a plausible problem and is willing to pay for the work involved in conducting the experiments. They further hold that such a laboratory is needed for the purpose of aiding in the solution of hydraulic problems of such Federal agencies as the Geological Survey, Federal Power Commission, Reclamation Service, and others.

The council maintain that the hydraulic laboratory should be under the direction and control of the Bureau of Standards, because through the years it has developed a scientific attitude and technique for the handling of such problems that may be undertaken in such laboratories; and has on its staff men trained in the several sciences, knowledge of which would be required of the staff of such a laboratory if it is to function with efficiency and effectiveness. They do not desire to take from the Corps of Engineers any authority to conduct whatever researches it may deem necessary in prosecuting its work of flood control. Nor do I wish in any way to dim the glory or blur the prestige of the Army Engineers, whose great services to the Nation reflect magnificently the discipline, courage, loyalty, patriotism, intellectuality, and training imparted and developed by the Military Academy at West Point, which sent them out into the world to overcome obstacles and to conquer the forces of nature in order that civilization might blaze along the way that destiny evidently marked for it. No one has a greater esteem, affection, and loyalty to Annapolis and West Point than myself. Our country could not separate itself from the history of those two great institutions without dimming its own glory. May they last and go out only when the Republic itself expires, which we all hope is in the never to be. If they are jealous of their accomplishments, their privileges, and the trust confined to them, we should be proud of them for that attitude. A man who is careless of his rights can not be expected to protect the rights of others. While those who jealously guard what they deem to be a sacred trust can be depended upon to fight upon land and sea for the maintenance of the Republic from which flow our rights and privileges and to which we all owe the solemn duty of so living our lives that the Nation will be stronger and farther along the road of a mighty civilization on the day we go westward forever than on the day through the miracle of birth we became a part of our country's life.

But I can not blind my eyes to the fact that a national hydraulic laboratory such as is planned by Senate bill 1710 will prove a great auxiliary to the force of Army engineers in solving the as yet unconquered difficulties and problems involved in flood control and related hydraulic subjects. The hydraulic laboratory would not be an antagonistic or hostile body but a friendly agency whose findings would be persuasive and not arbitrarily binding upon the Army engineers. The reports of the Army engineers show that that great body of men have written into the history of our country some of its most brilliant chapters; not flambuoyantly but with the steady courage of men whose education at our great Military Academy has fitted them to fight and do noble things in every field to which they may be assigned. But with all the deference that we may show to men whose careers we admire and whose exploits we proudly acknowledge, we can not but see that there are many new things that may come into the life of the world through the aid and assistance of the civil engineers that will "broaden the vision and make golden the hearthstone where we with loved ones dwell." We can not ignore the fact that the engineering profession as a whole is largely responsible for the civilization which we enjoy, though many of its victims, for it has its victims in accordance with the law of compensation, assert that it will not be an unmixed blessing until its benefits are more wisely distributed so that those who are doomed to play the part of hewers of wood and drawers of water may become in some measure its beneficiaries and enjoy its opulence in a small way with those who by birth and fortune are in control of the great movement.

Mr. Speaker, I repeat, a wealth of information has been brought to light and may be discovered by reading these hearings. We have acquired more information than we originally sought and are perhaps building more wisely than we know. Those who went in search of the Golden Fleece brought back something more valuable than the mythical raiment. They brought back knowledge as a result of their romantic journey. Even the obvious becomes tinted with an appealing color when brought to light into such a trip as the committee has made in search of truth.

Transportation, the foundation of the world order, takes on a new interest when we trace our highways, over which move millions of automobiles, and our railways, that carry such a stupendous commerce, to the path through the wilderness made by animals in quest of water with which to slake their thirst. The Brooklyn Bridge is seen in a new perspective when we see its genesis in the tree trunk thrown across the stream as a dam. The wonder grows as we see the dug and hollowed tree developing by the magical touch of the engineering wand into the leviathan that races through the storm and the night across the broad expanse of the Atlantic or the Pacific. From Franklin's kite and key have evolved the electrical titanic that light and rule the world to-day. The fabulous stories of the Arabian Nights pale into insignificance when contrasted with the actual accomplishments and intellectual triumphs of the great engineers of the world. Let us have the hydraulic laboratory. It will be the scientific university of the United States and will radiate that knowledge and wisdom which will enlighten the world. And God said: "Let there be light, and there was light," should be our inspiration. The future beckons to us to establish this beacon. Build the laboratory; unshackle knowledge; untie the hands of inquiry. Give wisdom winged feet so that the glories of the coming day may be hastened.

The virtue, the wisdom, the necessity of proposed legislation may be seen frequently from the high character of its indorsement. Read the letter which I make a part of this modest, I hope, and feeble, I am sure, effort to impress upon the Congress and our countrymen the importance of this proposed measure, whose far-reaching consequences no man can fathom, as its ramifications may lead to the knowledge as yet locked securely in the undiscovered caverns and bowels of the earth, and carry us to those heights which will give us a clearer view of that celestial splendor which the lighthouses of astronomy of to-day but obscurely and darkly disclose:

WESTERN SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS,
Chicago, February 2, 1929.

Hon. JAMES O'CONNOR,
Rivers and Harbors Committee,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The board of direction of the Western Society of Engineers and for the society indorse Senate bill 1710, known as the Ransdell bill, providing for a national hydraulic laboratory under the Bureau of Standards. We recommend the passage of this bill by the House of Representatives to the end that it become a law. We are advised that your committee has not reported this bill, though it has been under consideration for some time after passing the Senate.

We have given consideration to the terms of the bill and it is our opinion, representing over 3,000 members who are engineers and active in the practice, that such a laboratory is necessary.

We further believe it is essential to place this under the Bureau of Standards. The purpose of this laboratory is to scientifically make a study of hydraulics, and experience has shown that the bureau is so equipped with an experienced and trained staff as to undertake such a study. It is the only arm of the Government wherein selection of such qualified investigators is possible and where the scope is not related to activities which are conflicting both as to purpose and in the appointment of staff members.

We concur in every respect with the recommendations of the American Engineering Council and the many engineers from all over the country who have appeared before your committee or who have indorsed this bill by written communication. Their arguments are sound and represent the enlightened opinion of the engineering profession.

We do not indorse the provision of section 7, H. R. 14066, which we consider unwise and limiting in its results.

By order of the board of direction, Western Society of Engineers.

EDGAR S. NETHERCUT, Secretary.

TARIFF ON AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

Mr. KETCHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the subject of the tariff on agricultural products.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. KETCHAM. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, in connection with the current discussion with reference to the necessity of increased tariff rates upon agricultural products I desire to present a brief statement prepared by Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange, contrasting the present tariff rates on six basic manufacturing schedules in comparison with six well-known agricultural commodities.

In a general way the average tariff rate in the six manufacturing schedules mentioned is slightly above 40 per cent ad valorem, while the average duty on the six agricultural products is 22.54 per cent. The two tables giving rates under the present tariff act are herewith set out for contrast and comparison.

Especially do I call your attention to the tariff rates that would be placed on the agricultural commodities in order to bring them to the 40 per cent ad valorem basis now provided for manufactured articles, and the attention of the Members of the House of Representatives is called to the necessity of even increasing these rates in the spirit of fair play should substantial increases be granted to the manufacturing schedules now bearing 40 per cent ad valorem rates.

This statement is not to be understood as supporting the proposition that every agricultural rate should be upon a strictly 40 per cent ad valorem basis, but in the interest of fair play the average of tariff rates should be approximately the same.

Per cent ad valorem (or average ad valorem rate of duty to value of dutiable merchandise)

Schedule, 1927:
Chemicals, oils, and paints	28.48
Earths, earthenware, and glassware	48.43
Metals, and manufactures of	34.84
Silks and silk goods	56.18
Sundries	39.19
Cotton manufactures	35.99
Average duty on above six schedules	40.52
Average duty on imported agricultural products, excluding free list	22.54

Commodity	Present tariff	What 40 per cent ad valorem would mean
Butter	12 cents per pound	14 cents per pound.
Corn	15 cents per bushel	35 cents per bushel.
Potatoes	½ cent per pound	1 cent per pound.
Sheep	$2 per head	$2.96 per head.
Poultry, dead	6 cents per pound	12½ cents per pound.
Oranges	1 cent per pound	2 cents per pound.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that to-morrow, after the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOLADAY] has addressed the House for 30 minutes, I be permitted to follow him for 5 minutes on the same subject.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that to-morrow he be permitted to address the House for five minutes immediately following the address of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOLADAY]. Is there objection?

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—on what subject?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. On the same subject upon which the gentleman from Illinois will address the House.

Mr. SCHAFER. What is that subject?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Corn paper.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I would like the attention of the gentleman from Connecticut for a moment. I believe the bulletin states that the order of business on Friday will be special rules and the Private Calendar.

Mr. TILSON. "And/or," I believe, was the language I used in the bulletin.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Does that mean that one of the other of those matters and possibly both will be the order of business without reference to the status of the naval appropriation bill?

Mr. TILSON. Oh, no. It should be understood that the naval appropriation bill must go on until it is finished.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The naval appropriation bill will not be set aside on Friday?

Mr. TILSON. No; that is not the intention. It was understood, when the tentative program was made up, that the naval bill would be finished before that time. If it is not, of course, it should go on to the exclusion of both the other matters mentioned.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Present indications, I should think, are that the bill will not be finished to-morrow, but, of course, I do not know about that. I have been asked the question several times during the day and in order that there may be an official statement about it in the RECORD now, I have made this inquiry of the gentleman.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILSON. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. In the event special bills are called up under special rules, would it be possible to be advised some time to-morrow what rules may be called up so that the Members may be informed?

Mr. SNELL. I will say for the benefit of the Members that we expected to call up first, if we got the floor, the migratory bird bill.

Mr. TILSON. But that bill will not be taken up until after the completion of the Navy Department appropriation bill.

Mr. SNELL. That is as I understand it. The other two small matters are not controversial.

BEAL NURSERY AT EAST TAWAS, MICH.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 10374) for the acquisition of lands for an addition to the Beal Nursery at East Tawas, Mich., with a Senate amendment, disagree to the Senate amendment, and ask a conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 10374) with a Senate amendment, disagree to the Senate amendment, and ask for a conference. The Clerk will report the bill and the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill and the Senate amendment.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Iowa if his request is made after a conference with the ranking minority member or any member of the minority on the committee?

Mr. HAUGEN. No; I did not have an opportunity to confer with the gentleman about it. It was brought to my attention this afternoon. I doubt that there is any objection to it.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Of course, I do not know a thing in the world about it. The gentleman understands, of course, that we like to have this assurance about such matters going to conference. Will not the gentleman withdraw his request and let it go over until to-morrow?

Mr. HAUGEN. I will be very glad to do that.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa withdraws the request.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 14151. An act to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station at or near the mouth of the Quillayute River in the State of Washington;

H. R. 14800. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers, sailors, and marines of said war; and

H. R. 16035. An act to extend the time for completing the construction of the bridge across Port Washington Narrows, within the city of Bremerton, State of Washington.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 4036. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to transfer the control of certain land in Oregon to the Secretary of the Interior;

S. 4739. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell certain Government-owned land at Manchester, N. H.;

S. 4787. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near the city of Savanna, Ill., and the city of Sabula, Iowa;

S. 4957. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Danville & Western Railway Co. to reconstruct, maintain, and operate the existing railroad bridge across the Dan River in Pittsylvania County, Va.; and

S. 5110. An act validating certain applications for and entries of public lands, and for other purposes.

BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 10774. An act for the relief of the Carlisle Commission Co.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. LEAVITT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, February 7, 1929, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Mr. TILSON submitted the following tentative list of committee hearings scheduled for Thursday, February 7, 1929, as reported to the floor leader by clerks of the several committees:

COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS

(10.30 a. m.)

To authorize and direct the Secretary of War to execute a lease with Air Nitrates Corporation and American Cyanamid Co. (H. R. 8305).

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

(10 a. m. and 2 p. m.)

Tariff hearings as follows:

SCHEDULES

Wool and manufactures of, February 7, 8.
Silk and silk goods, February 11, 12.
Papers and books, February 13, 14.
Sundries, February 15, 18, 19.
Free list, February 20, 21, 22.
Administrative and miscellaneous, February 25.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

(10 a. m.)

Legislative appropriation bill.
Second deficiency appropriation bill.

COMMITTEE ON EXPENDITURES IN EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS

(10.30 a. m.)

To authorize the President to consolidate and coordinate governmental activities affecting war veterans (H. R. 16722).

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

(10 a. m.)

Granting the consent of Congress to the Delaware & New Jersey Bridge Corporation, a corporation of the State of Delaware, domiciled at Wilmington, Del., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Delaware River (H. R. 7725).

Granting the consent of Congress to Stranahan, Harris & Oatis, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Ohio, and Edward Ball, of the county of Duval, State of Florida, their successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Delaware River (H. R. 8287).

Authorizing the Delaware & New Jersey Bridge Corporation, a corporation of the State of Delaware, domiciled at Wilmington, Del., its successors and assigns, George A. Casey, of Wilmington, Del., Clifford R. Powell, of Mount Holly, N. J., and Anthony J. Siracusa, of Atlantic City, N. J., their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Delaware River at or near Wilmington, Del. (S. 1857).

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

807. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting supplemental estimate of appropriation amounting to $350,000 for the Department of Agriculture, fiscal year 1930 (H. Doc. No. 560); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

808. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting deficiency estimates of appropriations for the Department of Justice for the fiscal year 1928 and prior years amounting to $4,705.85, and supplemental estimates of appropriations for the fiscal year 1929 amounting to $1,648,102; in all, $1,652,807.85; also drafts of proposed legislation affecting existing appropriations (H. Doc. No. 561); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. ZIHLMAN: Committee on the District of Columbia. H. R. 10171. A bill to exempt from taxation certain property of the National Society Sons of the American Revolution in Washington, D. C.; without amendment (Rept. No. 2389). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. W. T. FITZGERALD: Committee on Invalid Pensions. H. R. 16027. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Civil and Mexican Wars, and to certain widows of said soldiers, sailors, and marines, and to widows of the War of 1812, and Army nurses, and for other purposes," approved July 3, 1926; without amendment (Rept. No. 2390). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LEHLBACH: Committee on the Civil Service. H. R. 16643. A bill to amend and supplement an act entitled "An act to amend the salary rates contained in the compensation schedules of the act of March 4, 1923, entitled 'An act to provide for the classification of civilian positions within the District of Columbia and in the field services,' approved May 28, 1928, and for other purposes"; with amendment (Rept. No. 2391). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota: Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation. H. R. 16819. A bill to amend the World War Veterans' act, 1924; without amendment (Rept. No. 2392). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WHITE of Maine: Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries. S. 1781. An act to establish load lines for American vessels, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2395). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. WHITE of Maine: Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 15430. A bill continuing the powers and authority of the Federal Radio Commission under the radio act of 1927, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2396). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 16850. A bill to provide for the deportation of certain aliens, and for the punishment of the unlawful entry of certain aliens; without amendment (Rept. No. 2397). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. RANSLEY: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 2424. A bill for the relief of James Moffitt; with amendment (Rept. No. 2386). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. McSWAIN: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 11149. A bill for the relief of Albert D. Castleberry; without amendment (Rept. No. 2387). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GARRETT of Texas: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 14579. A bill for the relief of Walter Malone; with amendment (Rept. No. 2388). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. REECE: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 5090. An act for the relief of Lewis H. Easterly; without amendment (Rept. No. 2394). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. McSWAIN: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 15641. A bill to correct the military record of Vernon S. Ross; with amendment (Rept. No. 2398). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

ADVERSE REPORTS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. BUSHONG: Committee on Claims. S. 2720. An act for the relief of David McD. Shearer; adverse (Rept. No. 2393). Laid on the table.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. WELSH of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 16918) relative to establishment for the practice of cosmetology and its regulations and to create a board of cosmetologists in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 16919) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing certain tribes of Indians to submit claims to the Court of Claims, and for other purposes"; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. KINCHELOE: A bill (H. R. 16920) granting the consent of Congress to E. T. Franks, his successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River approximately midway between the cities of Owensboro, Ky., and Rockport, Ind.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. SWING: A bill (H. R. 16921) granting additional relief for desert land entrymen in Riverside County, Calif.; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16922) amending act of March 4, 1915, providing relief for desert land entrymen; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. WATSON: A bill (H. R. 16923) to provide for the erection of a public building for customs and other governmental purposes in the city of Philadelphia, Pa.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. ZIHLMAN: A bill (H. R. 16924) providing for an appropriation toward completion of the construction of the new Eastern Dispensary and Casualty Hospital; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 16925) to add certain lands to the Fremont National Forest, in the State of Oregon; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. FREE: A bill (H. R. 16926) granting preference within the quota to certain aliens trained and skilled in a particular art, craft, technique, business, or science; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BOX: A bill (H. R. 16927) to clarify the law relating to the temporary admission of aliens to the United States; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. SEARS of Nebraska: A bill (H. R. 16928) authorizing the cities of Omaha, Nebr., and Council Bluffs, Iowa, either independently or both jointly, to purchase, to condemn, or to construct, and to reconstruct, extend, enlarge, maintain, and operate one or more toll or free bridges, not exceeding three, across the Missouri River at or near said cities, or to assign such rights to others, and providing the conditions to the exercise of such powers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. FISH: A bill (H. R. 16929) to amend the World War veterans' act; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. McFADDEN: A bill (H. R. 16930) to amend the national bank act; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16931) to amend the War Finance Corporation act approved April 5, 1918, as amended, to provide for the liquidation of the assets and the winding up of the affairs of the War Finance Corporation after April 4, 1929, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. ELLIOTT: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 405) to provide for extending the time in which the United States Supreme Court Building Commission shall report to Congress; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. ZIHLMAN: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 406) to authorize the merger of street-railroad corporations operating in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. McCLINTIC: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 407) authorizing and requesting the President of the United States to take steps in an effort to protect citizens of the United States in their equitable titles to land embraced in territory to be transferred from the State of Oklahoma to the State of Texas and from the State of Texas to the State of Oklahoma as per decree of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Oklahoma v. Texas (1926, 272 U. S. 21, p. 38), and to give the consent of Congress to said States to enter into a compact with each other and with the United States relating to such subject matter; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By Mr. ARENTZ: Memorial of the State of Nevada, relative to holding sessions of the Federal court at Reno, Nev., and urging the defeat of any measure designed to remove the Federal court from the capital, Carson City; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Also, memorial of the State of Nevada memorializing President-elect Hoover to give his best consideration to the proposal of the appointment of Louis S. Cates, of Utah, as Secretary of the Interior; to the Committee on Election of President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress.

By Mr. ROWBOTTOM: Concurrent resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, indorsing and urging the passage of the cruiser bill now pending in Congress; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Also, concurrent resolution of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, requesting the Congress of the United States to appropriate funds for the establishment of a United States Veterans' Bureau general hospital within the State of Indiana for honorably discharged ex-service men of this area; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ADKINS: A bill (H. R. 16932) granting a pension to Ann Million; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ANDREW: A bill (H. R. 16933) granting a pension to William G. Harriman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BEERS: A bill (H. R. 16934) granting an increase of pension to Amanda Eppley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BRAND of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 16935) granting a pension to Sarah J. Cline; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CLANCY: A bill (H. R. 16936) for the relief of Joseph A. McEvoy; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DICKINSON of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 16937) granting a pension to John E. W. Todd; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16938) granting a pension to Alex Rice; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. EATON: A bill (H. R. 16939) granting an increase of pension to Lizzie McAuliffe; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FENN: A bill (H. R. 16940) granting a pension to Carrie K. Wollerton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FLETCHER: A bill (H. R. 16941) granting an increase of pension to Catherine Zachman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GIBSON: A bill (H. R. 16942) granting an increase of pension to Carrie F. T. Hovey; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WILLIAM E. HULL: A bill (H. R. 16943) for the relief of Joseph A. O'Donnell; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McSWEENEY: A bill (H. R. 16944) granting a pension to Mary D. Biery; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. O'BRIEN: A bill (H. R. 16945) granting a pension to Mary Jane Woofter; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SCHAFER: A bill (H. R. 16946) granting a pension to Fred E. Craine; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SIROVICH: A bill (H. R. 16947) for the relief of Joseph N. McCaughey; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SUMNERS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 16948) granting an increase of pension to May F. Wright; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WHITE of Maine: A bill (H. R. 16949) granting a pension to William F. Campbell; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16950) granting a pension to Mary J. Turner; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WURZBACH: A bill (H. R. 16951) granting a pension to Mark Davis; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WYANT: A bill (H. R. 16952) granting an increase of pension to Aileen Oakley Griffith; to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

8651. By Mr. ADKINS: Petition of veterans of the Spanish-American War, Philippine insurrection, and Chinese relief expedition, respectfully soliciting support of the Knutson pension bill (H. R. 14676) now pending before Congress; to the Committee on Pensions.

8652. By Mr. ARENTZ: Resolution of Humboldt (Nev.) County Farm Bureau, opposing any downward revision of the tariff on fresh meats and other livestock products, inasmuch as such a change would cause the livestock industry to drop back into conditions such as existed in the period following the World War; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8653. By Mr. BARBOUR: Petition of the Presbyterian Synod of the State of California, in session, with a membership of 87,280, approved the passage of the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8654. By Mr. BLAND: Petition of the members of the Christian Church, Phoebus, Va., in support of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) for Sunday observance, or similar measure; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8655. By Mr. DOUGHTON: Petition of the Bethany and Fifth Creek Presbyterian Churches, with 1,000 present, Statesville, N. C., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8656. Also, petition of the Synod of Catawba of the Presbyterian Church, United States of America, and representing 25,062 members, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8657. Also, petition of the Young Men's Christian Association of Concord, N. C., with a membership of 500, and signed by the president, F. C. Niblock, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8658. By Mr. ENGLEBRIGHT: Petition of California Development Association, through its general manager, N. H. Sloan, for research work on poultry problems; to the Committee on Agriculture.

8659. Also, petition of California Development Association, through its general manager, N. H. Sloan, for research work on lima pod borer and wireworm and other insects which affect the bean plant; to the Committee on Agriculture.

8660. By Mr. FITZPATRICK: Petition of the National Association of Letter Carriers, Branch No. 387, Yonkers, N. Y., for the passage of the Dale-Lehlbach retirement bill during this session of Congress; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

8661. By Mr. KETCHAM: Petition of 55 members of the Plainwell Methodist Episcopal Church, of Plainwell, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8662. Also, petition of 15 members of the First Baptist Church, of Colon, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8663. Also, petition of 49 members of the West Mendon and Central Park Evangelical Churches, representing citizens of Mendon and Park Townships, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8664. Also, petition of 49 members of the Evangelical Church of Leighton Township, Allegan County, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8665. Also, petition of 32 members of the Presbyterian Church of Decatur, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8666. Also, petition of 22 members of the Evangelical Church located at North Maple Grove, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8667. Also, petition of 38 members of the Methodist Church of Colon, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8668. By Mr. LANKFORD: Petition of 113 members of the First Presbyterian Church, Cornell, Wis., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8669. Also, petition of 20 members of the Presbyterian Church of Huron, Wis., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people in the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8670. Also, petition of 45 members of the First Methodist Church, Cornell, Wis., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8671. By Mr. LEECH: Petition of 850 citizens of Johnstown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8672. Also, petition of the Cambria County Woman's Christian Temperance Union, representing a membership of 1,000, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8673. Also, petition of 65 citizens of Beaverdale, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8674. Also, petition of 955 signers, members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Cambria County, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8675. By Mr. McCORMACK: Petition of Mary D. Knowles, 569 Dudley Street, Dorchester, Mass., protesting against Newton child welfare bill; also equal rights amendment; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8676. By Mr. McDUFFIE: Petition of sundry retail shoe dealers of Mobile, Ala., protesting against any change in the present tariff on hides and leather used in the manufacture of shoes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8677. By Mr. McSWEENEY: Papers to accompany House bill 16804, granting a pension to Mary L. Sumney; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

8678. By Mr. MOREHEAD: Petition signed by 117 citizens of the first district of Nebraska, urging the defeat of House bills 15324, 15325, and 15427, providing for an appropriation of $7,500 for the expenses of a Confederate reunion and sending the United States Marine Band to this reunion; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

8679. By Mr. MORIN: Petition of post-office motor-vehicle employees of Pittsburgh, Pa., urging immediate action on Senate bill 1727, giving optional retirement after 30 years' service when the age of 63 is attained, with annuities increased to $1,200 per year; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

8680. By Mr. MORROW: Petition of Chaves County (N. Mex.) Farm and Livestock Bureau, in annual meeting, opposing passage of Box immigration bill; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

8681. By Mr. O'CONNELL: Petition of the Washburn-Crosby Co., New York City, favoring the passage of the Norbeck game refuge bill (S. 1271); to the Committee on Agriculture.

8682. Also, petition of the Neptune Line, New York City, opposing the passage of Senate bill 1781; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

8683. Also, petition of the Anchor Cap & Closure Corporation, Long Island City, N. Y., favoring the passage of House bill 12693; to the Committee on Agriculture.

8684. Also, petition of the Dana Natural History Society, of Albany, N. Y., favoring the passage of the Norbeck game refuge bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

8685. By Mr. SMITH: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Gooding, Idaho, with a membership of 40, in behalf of the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the District of Columbia, or similar measures; also 109 citizens of the second district, in behalf of the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8686. By Mr. WOODRUFF: Petition of 25 members of the Methodist Church of Harrisville Avenue, Lincoln, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8687. By Mr. WYANT: Petition of Percy Taylor, Jeannette, Pa., protesting against any change in present tariff on hides and leather used in manufacture of shoes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8688. Also, petition of Stein's Shoe Store, New Kensington, Pa., protesting against any change in present tariff on hides and leather used in manufacture of shoes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8689. Also, petition of citizens of Sutersville, Pa., protesting against any change in present tariff on hides and leather used in manufacture of shoes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8690. Also, petition of citizens of Sutersville, Pa., protesting against any change in present tariff on hides and leather used in manufacture of shoes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8691. Also, petition of Phil A. Taylor, Jeannette, Pa., protesting against any change in present tariff on hides and leather used in manufacture of shoes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE

THURSDAY, February 7, 1929

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Lord our God, who keepest covenant and showest mercy unto Thy servants who walk before Thee with all their hearts, how often have we heard Thy voice in youth and in age, in sickness and in health, in joy and in sorrow, at morning and at eventide, and hearing, failed to answer. Do Thou, therefore, come to us in the life which now entangles, meet us in the daily paths our busy feet must tread, and make a highway through the avenues of sense, clothing our mortal flesh with radiance and power.

Help us to yield ourselves so utterly to Thee before the world with its enthralling cares that we may abhor all lesser standards of the right which threaten to enslave and drive us from the high demands of public service to seek some quiet cloister of the soul. Redeem our failures, pardon our transgressions, make every circumstance a throne, and crown us with Thy never-ending peace. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of the legislative day of Monday last, when, on request of Mr. CURTIS and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed the following bills of the Senate:

S. 5146. An act to reserve certain lands on the public domain in Santa Fe County, N. Mex., for the use and benefit of the Indians of the San Ildefonso Pueblo;

S. 5147. An act to reserve 920 acres on the public domain for the use and benefit of the Kanosh Band of Indians residing in the vicinity of Kanosh, Utah; and

S. 5180. An act to authorize the payment of interest on certain funds held in trust by the United States for Indian tribes.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 2360) to amend section 1 of the act of Congress of March 3, 1921 (41 Stat. L. 1249), entitled "An act to amend section 3 of the act of Congress of June 28, 1906, entitled 'An act for the division of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and for other purposes,'" with amendments, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 16527. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to purchase land for the Alabama and Coushatta Indians of Texas, subject to certain mineral and timber interests;

H. R. 16568. An act to repeal that portion of the act of August 24, 1912, imposing a limit on agency salaries of the Indian Service;

H. R. 15723. An act authorizing an appropriation of Crow tribal funds for payment of council and delegate expenses, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 16655. An act to authorize the survey of certain land claimed by the Zuni Pueblo Indians, New Mexico, and the issuance of patent therefor.

COUNT OF THE ELECTORAL VOTE

The VICE PRESIDENT. Pursuant to Senate Concurrent Resolution 28, the Chair appoints the Senator from California, Mr. SHORTRIDGE, and the Senator from Utah, Mr. KING, as tellers on the part of the Senate to ascertain and count the electoral votes for President and Vice President at the joint session of the two Houses to be held on the 13th instant.

LANDS AND FUNDS OF THE OSAGE INDIANS

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, there has just come from the House the bill (S. 2360) to amend section 1 of the act of Congress of March 3, 1921 (41 Stat. L. 1249), entitled "An act to amend section 3 of the act of Congress of June 28, 1906," entitled "An act for the division of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma and for other purposes." About a year ago the Senate sent to the House the bill which at that time contained one section. The bill as returned to us now contains 10 pages. Because the matter is entirely new and somewhat intricate I ask unanimous consent that the bill with the House amendments be referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs for consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs:

H. R. 16527. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to purchase land for the Alabama and Coushatta Indians of Texas, subject to certain mineral and timber interests;

H. R. 16568. An act to repeal that portion of the act of August 24, 1912, imposing a limit on agency salaries of the Indian Service;

H. R. 15723. An act authorizing an appropriation of Crow tribal funds for payment of council and delegate expenses, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 16655. An act to authorize the survey of certain land claimed by the Zuni Pueblo Indians, New Mexico, and the issuance of patent therefor.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

Mr. BLAINE. Mr. President, I send to the clerk's desk a petition of 114 American merchant marine officers. I ask that the body of the petition, without the names, may be read and that the petition be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

There being no objection, the petition was read and referred to the Committee on Commerce, as follows:

Petition and memorial to the United States Senate by citizens of the United States for the protection of life and property at sea, the upbuilding of an American merchant marine without discrimination against age, and employment and restraint of trade and hindrance of commerce.

To the United States Senate, Seventieth Congress, second session, Washington, D. C.:

Whereas it is necessary for the welfare of our country and of our American people that the American people must have adequate merchant marine; and

Whereas it is necessary and certain that our merchant marine be protected, first, from foreign competition; second, from abuse by American citizens; third, from restraint of trade and monopoly of commerce; and, fourth, from discrimination of employment against certain merchant marine deck officers; and

Whereas it is necessary for the protection of life and property at sea that American merchant vessels be properly, adequately, and efficiently operated and especially navigated by competent, efficient, and high-class merchant marine officers; and

Whereas certain shipowners are receiving from the United States Government very profitable mail contracts and/or other subsidies for the purpose of upbuilding and maintaining an adequate merchant marine with competent and efficient personnel on board of each vessel; and

Whereas recently there has been a disaster of the steamship Vestris, although not an American vessel but a vessel sailing between ports of the United States and ports of South America, carrying passengers and freight between the aforesaid ports, and carrying especially American citizens as passengers and cargo; and

Whereas investigation has shown that the steamship Vestris was not properly navigated and was not seaworthy at the time of her departure from the United States, and the navigation laws on the said vessel were to a certain extent compulsory but not enforced and many lives were lost through the aforesaid cause and/or default; and

Whereas it has come to the attention of petitioners that to a certain extent the United States navigaion laws are not enforced, lived up to, and/or carried out on American merchant vessels, thereby endangering lives and property at sea; and

Whereas certain powers are using insidious influence of which we have documentary evidence to nullify the laws made and promulgated for the protection of life and property at sea; and

Whereas certain merchant marine officers are forced by this insidious propaganda to go contrary to the law and contrary to good judgment, and that by such insidious propaganda, force, and intimidation the American merchant vessel is about to become a menace to navigation; and

Whereas the American merchant marine officers believe in enforcing the navigation laws, rules, and regulations as laid down by the United States Steamboat Inspection Service, but that such laws are to a certain extent not carried out and/or otherwise are inadequate; and

Whereas the American people are demanding safety of life and property at sea, which according to information we have received from citizens of standing in the community does not exist; and also demanding an adequate merchant marine free from the influence, intimidation, coercion, or fear of any private power or control:

Resolved, That the United States Senate cause a fair and impartial investigation of the affairs of the merchant marine as heretofore alleged, and for that the United States Senate will cause an investigation especially designating the Pacific coast in general, and the port of San Francisco in particular, into the matters as heretofore alleged in this resolution.

Respectfully submitted.

Your petitioners,

C. R. S. BRYANT,
Licensed Mariner
(And 113 other merchant marine officers).

Done this 16th day of January, 1929.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD presented the following resolutions of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

A concurrent resolution memorializing the President of the United States, the President elect, and the Congress of the United States that it is the sense of the members of the Minnesota Legislature that national legislation should not be enacted curtailing State rights with respect to transportation and with respect to the grain-growing industry

Whereas the tendency toward Government encroachment upon the sovereign rights of the States has been steadily increasing during the past few years to such an alarming extent that State lines and boundaries are rapidly disappearing; and

Whereas the fundamental principle advanced by the framers of our Federal Constitution designed to preserve State rights appears to have been totally submerged in the scheme of bureaucratic despotism now in control of national affairs; and

Whereas the State of Minnesota has been and is being seriously injured by these encroachments, and its citizens damaged and their business enterprises seriously impaired; and

Whereas there is now pending before the Congress several bills which have for their aim a curtailment of State rights with respect of transportation and with respect to the grain-growing industry: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Minnesota (the House concurring), That the State of Minnesota does strenuously object to any legislation which has for its purpose the curtailment or destruction of State rights; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of Minnesota be instructed to send a copy of this resolution to the President of the United States, the President elect, to each Member of Congress from Minnesota, and to those Members elected whose term of office begins after the close of the present short session.

JOHN A. JOHNSON,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
W. I. NOLAN,
President of the Senate.

Passed the house of representatives the 15th day of January, 1929.

JOHN I. LEVIN,
Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Passed the senate the 16th day of January, 1929.

G. H. SPAETH,
Secretary of the Senate.

Approved, January 22, 1929.

THEODORE CHRISTIANSON,
Governor of the State of Minnesota.

Filed January 22, 1929.

MIKE HOLM, Secretary of State.

Mr. BURTON presented a petition of sundry citizens of Jamestown, Ohio, praying that action be deferred on the enactment of the cruiser construction bill, which was ordered to lie on the table.

CLAIMS ARISING FROM BURNING OF COLUMBIA, S. C.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, I present a statement relative to the burning of Columbia, S. C., which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Claims, in connection with the bill (S. 3305) for the relief of the Washington Street Methodist Episcopal Church South, of Columbia, S. C., and S. 3863, for the relief of the Ladies Ursuline Community of Columbia, at Columbia, S. C.

There being no objection, the statement was referred to the Committee on Claims and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE BURNING OF COLUMBIA

Howard's Report, Official Records, series 1, volume 47, page 199.

Logan's Report, page 227.

Cox's (March to the Sea), page 174.

Slocum's (Sherman's March from Savannah to Bentonville).

The Battles and Leaders of the Civil War, 4, page 686.

Rhodes's Who Burned Columbia, in American History Review, 7, page 485.

"In June, 1863, when General Lee advanced on a war of invasion, he issued an order, a portion of which is as follows:

"'No greater disgrace can befall the army, and through it our whole people, than the perpetration of barbarous outrages upon the innocent and defenseless. Such proceedings not only disgrace the perpetrators and all connected with them, but are subversive of the discipline and efficiency of the army and destructive of the ends of our movement. It must be remembered that we make war only on armed men.'

"How different does this read from the order issued by General Halleck, Chief of Staff and military adviser to President Lincoln, which said to Sherman:

"'Should you capture Charleston, I hope that by some accident the place may be destroyed; and if a little salt should be sown upon its site, it may prevent the growth of future crops of nullification and secession.'

"And Sherman's reply, in his dispatch of December 24, 1864:

"'I will bear in mind your hint as to Charleston, and don't think salt will be necessary. When I move, the Fifteenth Corps will be on the right of the right wing, and their position will bring them, naturally, into Charleston first; and if you have watched the history of that corps, you will have remarked that they generally do their work up pretty well. The truth is, the whole Army is burning with an insatiable desire to wreak vengeance upon South Carolina.'"

In Ohio in the War, by the Hon. Whitelaw Reid, he says:

"It was the most monstrous barbarity of this barbarous march. Before his movement began General Sherman begged permission to turn his army loose in South Carolina and devastate it. He used this permission to the full. He protested that he did not wage war upon women and children. But under the operation of his orders the last morsel of food was taken from hundreds of destitute families that his soldiers might feast in needless and riotous abundance. Before his eyes rose, day after day, the mournful clouds of smoke on every side that told of old people and their grandchildren driven in midwinter from the only roofs there were to shelter them by the flames which the wantonness of his soldiers had kindled. Yet if a single soldier was punished for a single outrage or theft during that entire movement we have found no mention of it in all the voluminous records on the march."

President Roosevelt in his Life of Thomas H. Benton says:

"The world has never seen better soldiers than those who followed Lee, and their leader will undoubtedly rank as, without any exception, the very greatest of all the great captains that the English-speaking people have brought forth; and this although the last and chief of his antagonists may himself claim to stand as the full equal of Marlborough and Wellington."

The South in the Building of the Nation, volume 2, History of States, page 85, says:

"General Sherman immediately entered the defenseless capital. That General Sherman burned Columbia, though long denied by that officer and by northern historians, is now fully established. Federal courts have judicially admitted that the city was destroyed by Union troops, and there were many trustworthy eyewitnesses to that wanton act. It may be sufficient to quote but one. The Rev. A. Toomer Porter, in a sermon in 1891, said that he was in Columbia at the time, and adds: 'General Sherman's troops burnt the town; I saw that done by them.' The fact is frequently overlooked that Sherman finally confessed that he burned the city. In his memoirs he says: 'The army, having totally ruined Columbia, moved on toward Winnsboro.'"

Chapman's Annals of Newberry quotes a letter from Hugh O'Neall, of Bellevue, Nebr., dated December 7, 1890, in which he says:

"One thing that I witnessed I always condemned, and always shall—that was the burning of Columbia. That town was surrendered to the brigade I belonged to. We marched into town about 11 o'clock, February 17, 1865, and my regiment stacked arms in the market house, and by 4 or 5 o'clock, it seems to me, there were not 20 sober men in the brigade. The drug stores were broken open and whisky carried out by the bucketful, * * * and I consider the burning the work of a drunken mob. * * * I know I was sober, for I never drank of intoxicating liquor in my life, and think that I saw things as they were as near as any man that was there. Although history is silent on a great many points, they are as fresh in my mind as when I witnessed them. As I stood there that night and witnessed these things I could but think if God was a just God these things would surely come home to the parties that upheld these things. It may not come in my lifetime, but I surely think it will come. I think it will come in the shape of labor against capital, and will not be confined to any particular section, but the East will suffer the worst."

See article by William Gilmore Simms, Esq., in Julian A. Selby's Memorabilia.

See pages 1346 to 1348, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, January 8, 1929.

See message from the Governor of South Carolina, house journal, South Carolina, page 1070, in the year 1912.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS

Mr. BORAH. As in executive session, I submit some reports for the Executive Calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The reports will be received and placed on the Executive Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. BORAH, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which were referred the following bill and joint resolution, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 5361) for the relief of Bertha Hanson (Rept. No. 1657); and Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 153) for the contribution of the United States in the plans of the organization of the International Society for the Exploration of the Arctic Regions by Means of Airship (Rept. No. 1658).

Mr. COUZENS, from the Committee on Education and Labor, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 13251) to provide for the vocational rehabilitation of disabled residents of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1663) thereon.

Mr. McNARY, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the bill (S. 4800) to amend section 8 of the act entitled "An act for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded or poisonous or deleterious foods, drugs, medicines, and liquors, and for regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes," approved June 30, 1906, as amended, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1661) thereon.

CONTROL OF PRINT-PAPER SUPPLY

Mr. McNARY. From the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, I report back favorably with amendments the resolution (S. Res. 292) to investigate the activities of groups of foreign citizens controlling the supply of white paper in the United States, and I submit a report (No. 1660) thereon. The resolution was submitted by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SCHALL], and, inasmuch as it involves an expenditure out of the contingent fund of the Senate, I ask that it be printed as proposed to be amended and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the resolution will be so printed and referred.

INVESTIGATION OF SALT CREEK OIL LEASES

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys I submit a minority report (No. 1662) and ask that the introductory part, explanatory of the report, be read from the desk.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, would the Senator mind delaying action on that until the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] can be here? He sent me a note this morning stating that he is sick and will not be able to be here to-day.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I do not contemplate taking action on the matter. I am merely submitting the report and it can go over under the rule.

Mr. CURTIS. Very well.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I ask that the introductory part be read from the desk, so the nature of the report may be understood.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Seventieth Congress, second session

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

SINCLAIR ROYALTY OIL CONTRACT, SALT CREEK OIL FIELD, WYOMING

The following minority members of the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to wit, KEY PITTMAN, JOHN B. KENDRICK, THOMAS J.

WALSH, C. C. DILL, HENRY F. ASHURST, ROBERT F. WAGNER, and SAM G. BRATTON, submit the following report of the investigation conducted by that committee, pursuant to S. Res. 202, into the renewal of the contract executed in the year 1922 by Albert B. Fall, Secretary of the Interior, to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Co., for the sale of the royalty oil accruing to the United States from the leases of lands within the Salt Creek district in the State of Wyoming, and into the cancellation of such renewal.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, out of order I submit a resolution (S. Res. 320) on the same subject, which I ask may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the resolution.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate approves and adopts the minority report herewith, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, of the investigation into the renewal of the contract executed in the year 1922 by Albert B. Fall, Secretary of the Interior, and the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Co., for the sale of the royalty oil accruing to the United States from the leases of lands within the Salt Creek district in the State of Wyoming, and into the cancellation of such renewal.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator if the majority report has yet been made?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I do not know. Under the rule the matter will go over until to-morrow, when I shall ask under the rule that it be taken up. If the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] should not be present, of course I shall ask that it go over without prejudice.

Mr. CURTIS. The Senator from North Dakota requested that that might be done.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under the rule.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mr. GREENE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that to-day that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 4036. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to transfer the control of certain land in Oregon to the Secretary of the Interior;

S. 4739. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell certain Government-owned land at Manchester, N. H.;

S. 4787. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near the city of Savanna, Ill., and the city of Sabula, Iowa;

S. 4957. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Danville & Western Railway Co. to reconstruct, maintain, and operate the existing railroad bridge across the Dan River in Pittsylvania County, Va.; and

S. 5110. An act validating certain applications for and entries of public lands, and for other purposes.

DIVERSION OF COMMERCE FROM AMERICAN PORTS

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, there was recently submitted to the Senate by the President of the United States a report prepared by several departments of the Government in response to Senate Resolution 220, presented by me and adopted by the Senate May 7, 1928. A separate report of a more exhaustive and informative character was presented by the United States Shipping Board. These reports were ordered to be printed as a Senate document.

Within a few days an independent report has been furnished dealing with the same questions by the Association of Railway Executives upon Transportation Charges in the United States and Canada. This report was prepared by this association for the purpose of collecting first-hand information with reference to the entire questions presented in Senate Resolution 220 (Senator WALSH of Massachusetts), Senate Resolution 250 (Senator WHEELER), Senate Resolution 67 (Senator CAPPER), and Senate Resolution 208 (Senator WALSH of Montana).

The report, in my opinion, discusses more in detail and presents more directly the questions raised by my resolution 220 and the other resolutions than the reports submitted by the heads of departments who made reply to Senate Resolution 220.

It is a very excellent résumé of all the transportation questions which have arisen as a result of the allegations that American commerce is being increasingly diverted from American ports.

I ask that this report be printed, with the illustrations, as a supplemental report to Senate Document No. 212.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SALE OF COTTON AND GRAIN IN FUTURE MARKETS

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial appearing in the Washington Post of this morning dealing with the unfinished business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The editorial is as follows:

[From the Washington Post, February 7, 1929]

GAMBLING IN FUTURES

Senator CARAWAY'S bill to prevent the fictitious sale of cotton and grain in future markets has been given approval by the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. The bill makes it unlawful for a person to send any message offering "to enter into a contract for the purchase or sale, for future delivery, of cotton or grain without intending that such cotton or grain shall be actually delivered or received." Transmission of such messages would be considered interference with interstate commerce and would be punishable by fines ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 or imprisonment. A person sending a message dealing with such contracts for future delivery would be required to file an affidavit with the telegraph or telephone company, stating that he is the owner of the grain or cotton in question and that he intends to make actual deliveries. Both the person sending prohibited messages and companies transmitting them would be liable to prosecution, and printed matter tending to promote dealing in futures would be nonmailable.

Senator CARAWAY'S measure does not attempt to prohibit a farmer from selling crops which he expects to mature later on in the season, and thus would not prevent grain or cotton mills from providing for future supplies of raw materials. Any farmer could sell his crop for delivery at maturity, and this contract could be resold. But it would be unlawful for a person to sell grain or cotton which he did not possess and had no prospects of possessing, and which he did not intend to deliver. In short, it is aimed at the speculators who grow rich by gambling in more or less mythical contracts affecting farm products.

The Government has undertaken regulation of dealings in cotton and grain futures and it has failed. Both the markets can be manipulated under the present regulatory acts, with the result that consumers pay high prices and the farmers receive inadequate returns for their products. The country will welcome any practical scheme which will allow restoration of an honest, free, and open market on these agricultural products, subject to the laws of supply and demand. The measure is of foremost importance to producer and consumer alike and should be passed by Congress along with the other measures contemplated for agricultural relief.

OKLAHOMA AND TEXAS BOUNDARY LINE

Mr. STEPHENS. From the Committee on the Judiciary I report back favorably without amendment the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 196) authorizing and requesting the President of the United States to take steps in an effort to protect citizens of the United States in their equitable titles to land embraced in territory to be transferred from the State of Oklahoma to the State of Texas and from the State of Texas to the State of Oklahoma as per decree of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Oklahoma against Texas (1926, 272 U. S. 21, p. 38) and to give the consent of Congress to said States to enter into a compact with each other and with the United States relating to such subject matter.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, the joint resolution just reported by the Senator from Mississippi is one of very great emergency. If I can have permission to make a statement of a minute or so, I will ask for the consideration of the joint resolution after I shall have made the statement. It will not lead to discussion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, what is the order of business under which the Senate is now proceeding?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Reports of committees are in order, and the Senator from Mississippi has submitted a report from a committee.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I only desire a minute or so, Mr. President.

Mr. COUZENS. I ask for the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This is the regular order. It is the report of a committee.

Mr. COUZENS. As I understand, the Senator desires unanimous consent to have the joint resolution considered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. COUZENS. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana:

A bill (S. 5725) granting a pension to Saphronia Reed; and

A bill (S. 5726) granting an increase of pension to Amelia Veronica Briscoe; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GOFF:
A bill (S. 5727) to provide for the acquisition of a site and erection thereon of a public building at St. Marys, W. Va.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.
By Mr. SHIPSTEAD:
A bill (S. 5728) granting a pension to Katherine May Smith (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.
By Mr. JOHNSON:
A bill (S. 5730) amending act of March 4, 1915, providing relief for desert-land entrymen; and
A bill (S. 5731) granting additional relief for desert-land entrymen in Riverside County, Calif.; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.
By Mr. HALE:
A bill (S. 5732) granting an increase of pension to Rose B. Emery (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.
By Mr. DALE:
A bill (S. 5733) granting an increase of pension to Alma Arthur; to the Committee on Pensions.
By Mr. SWANSON:
A bill (S. 5734) providing for retired pay for certain members of the former Life Saving Service, equivalent to retired pay granted to members of the Coast Guard; to the Committee on Commerce.
By Mr. GOFF:
A bill (S. 5735) granting the consent of Congress to the city of Wheeling, W. Va., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the east channel of the Ohio River; to the Committee on Commerce.
By Mr. OVERMAN:
A bill (S. 5736) granting a pension to Wallace Cayton; to the Committee on Pensions.
By Mr. ODDIE:
A bill (S. 5737) for the relief of Capt. Walter R. Gherardi, United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.
By Mr. FESS:
A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 212) to send delegates and an exhibit to the Fourth World's Poultry Congress to be held in England in 1930; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.
By Mr. KEYES:
A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 213) to provide for extending the time in which the United States Supreme Court Building Commission shall report to Congress; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.
By Mr. McMASTER:
A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 214) authorizing the establishment of an agricultural products experiment station in the State of South Dakota; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

THE AMERICAN FLAG

Mr. HEFLIN. I introduce a bill which I ask may be read at length.
The bill (S. 5729) to prohibit the flying of any flag or pennant on the same staff or hoist above the flag of the United States of America, was read the first time by its title, the second time at length, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter it shall be unlawful to fly any flag or pennant on the same staff or hoist above the flag of the United States of America, or colors representing the same, on any battleship, cruiser, or other vessel in the naval service of the United States. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Navy to see that this provision is observed, and he is hereby directed to notify the commanding officers of all vessels under his jurisdiction of the provisions of this act.

CONSTRUCTION AT MILITARY POSTS

Mr. HASTINGS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 13825) to authorize appropriations for construction at military posts, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

VOTES IN EXECUTIVE SESSION—AMENDMENT OF THE RULES

Mr. HASTINGS submitted an amendment in the nature of a substitute intended to be proposed by him to the resolution (S. Res. 309) to amend Rule XXXVIII, so as to provide for the consideration in open executive session of certain nominations, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

EXERCISES COMMEMORATIVE OF CARL SCHURZ

Mr. WAGNER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 321), which was referred to the Committee on the Library:

Whereas March 2, 1929, is the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Carl Schurz; and
Whereas after serving his native land by attempting to secure for his fellow citizens the blessings of democracy, he came to the United States and contributed mightily to the greatness of this Republic, as editor, lawyer, reformer, soldier, diplomat, and statesman; and
Whereas he was a distinguished Member of this body: Therefore be it
Resolved, That on Saturday, March 2, 1929, the first hour immediately following the reading of the Journal be set aside for commemorative exercises and addresses on the life, character, and public services of Carl Schurz.

SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS AGAINST THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. CAPPER submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 3581) entitled "An act authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to settle claims and suits against the District of Columbia," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:
Amendment numbered 1: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language inserted by the House insert the following:
"SEC. 2. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and empowered to grant relief in claims for refund of taxes paid, or for cancellation of assessments heretofore made and subsequent to September 1, 1916, in such cases where like assessments, or assessments against property of similar character, have been held to be void or erroneous by decision of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, or the Supreme Court of the United States: Provided, That any claims for refunds of taxes heretofore paid or for cancellations of assessments heretofore made shall be filed within one year from the approval of this act.
"Nothing contained in this act shall be construed as reducing the period of the statute of limitations."
And the House agree to the same.
Amendment numbered 2: That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 2, and agree to the same.

ARTHUR CAPPER,
JOHN J. BLAINE,
WILLIAM H. KING,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
FREDK. N. ZIHLMAN,
CHARLES L. UNDERHILL,
RALPH GILBERT,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts and joint resolution:
On February 5, 1929:
S. 1731. An act to provide for the further development of vocational education in the several States and Territories; and
S. J. Res. 171. Joint resolution granting the consent of Congress to the city of New York to enter upon certain United States property for the purpose of constructing a rapid-transit railway.
On February 6, 1929:
S. 5578. An act recognizing the heroic conduct, devotion to duty, and skill on the part of the officers and crew of the U. S. S. America, and for other purposes.

THE DECENNIAL CENSUS

Mr. BRUCE. Mr. President, if there is no objection, I would like to have inserted in the RECORD an editorial from the New York Times and another editorial from the Baltimore Sun urging the adoption of the amendment which I have offered from the Census Bureau providing for the selection of supervisors and special agents, interpreters, and enumerators, in connection with the coming work of the Census, by agencies created by the United States Civil Service Commission rather than by politicians, of whom I happen to be one.
There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, February 6, 1929]

THE COMING CENSUS

Legislation providing for the next decennial census is now before the Senate. As the census itself is to be taken either next November or in the following May, there is no time to lose in getting the necessary machinery set up. Of course, the Federal Government has the advantage of a permanent Census Bureau in the Department of Commerce, which will supervise the work. It has established standards of accuracy and thoroughness in refreshing contrast with some of the State undertakings, notably the recent Knapp fiasco in New York. Naturally, the field force of the bureau has to be vastly expanded to take the country-wide enumeration of the population. Under the bill now before the Senate, all these temporary appointees, including supervisors, may be appointed by the Director of the Census without reference to the requirements of the civil service laws.

To this exemption the National Civil Service Reform League vigorously objects. It argues that the result will be to open the lists to patronage and to have the census to that extent exposed to the wastes and inaccuracies of politics. The league cites a number of instances, notably in Maryland in 1900, where local scandals resulted from political manipulation of the returns. It favors an amendment, introduced by Senator BRUCE, which would make these appointments subject to the civil service law. Senator REED of Pennsylvania has taken the ground that it would be impractical to recruit census enumerators through competitive examinations, because of the temporary character of the positions. The Federal Civil Service Commission, however, feels that its rules are sufficiently flexible to admit of being applied, even to the field force.

During the last census the bureau worked in close cooperation with the Civil Service Commission, and would undoubtedly do so this time. The Knapp case has so discredited census taking under political auspices that it would be well to throw every possible safeguard around the next Federal enumeration in order not only to insure an accurate count but public confidence in the result. A specific exemption from the rules of competitive examination in the bill itself is, as the league points out, unnecessary. The civil service act specifically provides for such emergencies. Not only is the commission given wide discretion but the President is authorized to provide, by Executive order, for such exemptions as he deems appropriate.

[From the Baltimore Sun February 6, 1929]

PASS THE AMENDMENT

If Senator BRUCE forces acceptance of his amendment to the census bill—compelling selection of the 100,000 additional employees required for the work by the merit system—he will have performed one of the most useful services of his career in the Senate. There was never a time when there was greater need of an accurate and honestly conducted census and it would be foolish to count on that kind of result from a census taken by political appointees.

The decennial census for which preparation is now being made will serve as a basis for reapportionment of Congress, which has been delayed since 1910 because of jealousy among the States over losses and gains in representation. It is manifestly important, then, that the coming enumeration be so carried out that there will be no basis for suspicion of unfairness or of intentional irregularities. A census taken by the party in power with its own agents, chosen by State and local bosses, will be suspected before it begins. We have but to hark back to occasions when such a course was pursued to understand the certainty of evil consequences. Maryland itself can testify to them.

In 1890 the enumeration was made by employees selected chiefly by Republican Members of Congress. In New York City there was plain evidence of fraud in order to keep down Democratic representation. Closer home in 1900 a scandal developed in this State over a politically biased census. In one county, St. Marys, there was padding to increase representation in the house of delegates. The work has been referred to "as unbelievably crude," and the Federal grand jury said, "So long as such appointments are treated as part of the spoils of politics the recurrence of such frauds and scandals as have been revealed by our investigation may be expected."

The National Civil Service Commission declares that there is no reason why the personnel of the Census Bureau can not be selected under civil-service rules. The practicability of the plan was demonstrated in 1910 and the same plan should be now adopted so as to assure a reliable enumeration.

MULTILATERAL PEACE TREATY

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD a very brief article printed in the London Times and signed by a member of the English bar, relating to the Kellogg peace pact.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The article is as follows:

[From the London Times, January 17, 1929]

THE KELLOGG PACT—PLACE IN INTERNATIONAL LAW

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR: Now that the Kellogg pact has been ratified by the Senate of the United States, it seems opportune to sum up a few points of fundamental importance. In the first place, the treaty, by making recourse to war as an instrument of national policy unlawful, constitutes a landmark in international law. Hitherto war has always been, as a matter of law, a perfectly legitimate means of furthering national interests, seeking redress for injuries, or obtaining satisfaction for insults. By putting war outside the pale for these purposes the pact marks an advance of vital significance. Secondly, the treaty contains a provision on which insufficient emphasis appears to have been laid, namely, article 2, which states that the "high contracting parties agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts, of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them shall never be sought except by pacific means."

This amounts to an absolutely unqualified undertaking, the practical effect of which is in itself to preclude the parties from ever engaging in war with one another, inasmuch as wars have always been occasioned or preceded by a dispute or conflict of one kind or another. Every international engagement, of course, depends for its effectiveness upon the good faith of the parties in observing it. If this is lacking, there are no means, whether by sanctions or otherwise, that can guarantee its execution, since they also depend upon the willingness of the parties to honor their bond. But, given good faith, articles 1 and 2 of the pact together render war between the parties impossible in all circumstances.

Finally, it should be understood that there have so far been no reservations by the signatories. The diplomatic correspondence does not contain reservations properly so called, but merely statements of the meaning which the governments concerned attach to the language of the treaty, and it is fair to say that the interpretations contained in the correspondence do not go beyond the natural sense implicit in the text itself. With regard to the most important of the questions raised, it is obvious that the right of self-defense must necessarily be preserved; but here again, if all the parties carry out their obligations under the treaty in good faith, the occasion for the exercise of this right can never arise.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

ALEXANDER P. FACHIRI,
1, King's Bench-walk Temple, E. C., January 16.

RELIEF FOR THE COTTON-GROWING INDUSTRY

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an article issued on Federal farm relief for the cotton-growing industry by the American Cotton Association.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The article is as follows:

FEDERAL FARM RELIEF FOR THE COTTON-GROWING INDUSTRY

By American Cotton Association, Harvie Jordan, managing director

GREENVILLE, S. C., February 7, 1929.

Economic reforms in more efficient methods of production, handling, and marketing spot cotton in the cotton-growing States are vitally essential for the future rehabilitation of the industry. Since 1920 great financial depression has prevailed among the 2,700,000 adult cotton growers, whose average gross income per family has not exceeded $600 per annum. Thousands of cotton farms and plantations have been totally abandoned, and hundreds of thousands of farmers, farm laborers, and tenants have migrated into other lines of industry to secure a living wage and comfortable livelihood. Productive farm lands in many sections of the cotton States have become a liability to their owners, while thousands of mortgaged farms have been, and are being, absorbed by large land-loan companies and the Federal farm land banks.

Relief from this unbearable situation is imperative if the industry is to be sustained and rural life made attractive and prosperous. The production and exports of American cotton for the past 40 years has been the leading factor in maintaining the annual balances of trade in favor of the United States in its international commerce. The capital and labor employed in the production of raw cotton, the manufacture and distribution of cotton fabrics, exceeds that of any other industry of the Nation. The product is not only a national but a world-wide necessity to human civilization, and its monopolistic control by this country should procure for the producers a highly prosperous and profitable industry. Proper relief from the existing intolerable conditions of the cotton growers should be of the deepest concern to the Federal Government and the entire business interests of the Nation. No other country in the world possesses a similar monopolistic control of a staple world necessity.

ECONOMIZING PRODUCTION

Modern agriculture in the cotton-growing industry must take its place in modern efficiency. The planting of an excessive acreage per plow, minimum fertilization, inefficient culture, and low yields per acre at high level of cost for production have ceased to be profitable. The intensive culture of cotton, raising abundant food and feed crops with systematic crop rotation to rebuild the soils, and the use of labor-saving farm machinery are reforms in crop operations which are vital to success. This is a type of reform largely individualistic and can only be solved successfully by ocular field demonstration work along lines of sound practice which will appeal to the growers and receive their cooperation and support. This association has successfully trained and secured splendid profitable results with thousands of cotton growers who have adopted the plan for intensive culture in the past six years.

FEDERAL FARM RELIEF

No government can legislate prosperity into any people or industry unless the beneficiaries of such legislation take full advantage of the opportunities presented. Sound and practical measures for farm relief have been pledged to American agriculture by President Hoover and the Republican Party which will be in control of the Seventy-first Congress, and those pledges we believe will be faithfully enacted into satisfactory Federal legislation. The legislation proposed is largely intended to stabilize the prices of staple farm products, control the temporary surpluses of such crops before they leave the hands of the producers; encourage the organization and effective operation of cooperative marketing associations and stabilization corporations; provide ample financial loans on surpluses held to prevent glutted markets and by adequate protective duties levied against imports of competitive agricultural products place agriculture on a basis of equality with business industry in the United States. Agriculture as the fundamental basic industry of the Nation should be protected and fostered by the Federal Government to the fullest extent of its powers under the American Constitution. To the proposed farm-relief measures we subscribe our unqualified indorsement.

RELIEF FOR THE COTTON-GROWING INDUSTRY

As a representative association of the American cotton-growing industry for the past nine years, we present herewith the following relief planks as essential and imperative for congressional consideration and approval:

Plank No. 1: The creation of a Federal farm board, whose members shall be representative farmers with powers of supervision granted, and drawn from the various agricultural sections of the Nation, to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

Plank No. 2: That support and encouragement to the fullest extent be provided for the rapid organization and expansion of cooperative marketing and stabilization corporations throughout the Cotton Belt States for county, district, or state-wide organizations, to be chartered and vested with powers to fully represent their membership in all business dealings and operations granted by the Federal farm board.

Plank No. 3: That a revolving fund of not less than $100,000,000 be created and made available from the Treasury of the United States as needed for loans to cotton growers for retiring the estimated temporary surplus of cotton from the market each year of such surplus, the cotton year in which such surplus is harvested. The loans on such cotton retired to be made through cooperative marketing associations and stabilizing corporations under the supervision of the Federal farm board. Cotton bales purchased from growers to be retired as a part of such temporary surplus shall be held in the names of the grower members of the cooperative marketing associations and stabilization corporations until such cotton is sold to spinners when needed, and the profits after original purchase price, interest, and other legal charges are paid, the balance to be paid to the original producing members.

If the temporary cotton surplus is removed from the market each year until needed by the mills it is felt that the 75 or 85 per cent of the market value of such cotton in loans will be equal to the full market value of the entire bale if dumped into the markets and sold under the depressing price influence of a surplus. Every bale of such surplus cotton retired and deposited into local or concentrating warehouses, where the same is bonded and insured, should be done under a trust agreement signed by the owner or owners that such cotton will not be released for sale under 12 to 15 months, or such time as the staple is actually required in the channels of commerce for spinners' consumption. This would automatically fix the market price of spot cotton by the legitimate laws of supply and consumption which the cotton-growing industry has never enjoyed under existing systems of dumping the surplus in connection with such portion of the crop as is required for consumption during the cotton year in which the crop is harvested. For preventing an expansion of cotton acreage and producing an additional unwieldy surplus the following year, each member retiring a part of his crop into the surplus stored should be required to sign as a part of the trust agreement to his association or corporation that the acreage upon which his pro rata part of the surplus was harvested that year will be planted in crops other than cotton the following year.

The right of cotton exchanges operating under Federal and State laws to control and fix the price of spot cotton regardless of the welfare of the growers violates every trade law in commerce and should not be permitted. With the ability to retire and control the cotton surplus until needed by the mills, the price of spot cotton will be forced to operate under the legitimate laws of regulating the supply to meet the actual needs of consumption, regardless of manipulation and speculation intended to artificially control spot markets.

Plank No. 4: That the Federal farm board be authorized and empowered to apply the Federal warehouse act as rapidly as possible to every local or concentrating cotton warehouse in the counties and States of the Cotton Belt. That provision be made for the employment of expert cotton graders and staplers, to be placed in charge of such warehouses. That such Federal warehouse employees be required to receive, weigh, grade, and staple each bale of cotton brought to such warehouses, so that the growers can demand from the local buyers the full market price based upon the grade and staple of his cotton, including premium values of staples in excess of seven-eighths inch length.

Plank No. 5: That the Senate bill, introduced by Senator RANSDELL, of Louisiana, fixing higher duties on imports of raw jute and manufactured jute cloth and bagging, be promptly enacted into law. In 1928 statistics show total shipments of jute burlap cloth into the United States were in excess of 1,000,000,000 yards. The total output in 1928 from our domestic mills of single filling cotton duck, 46,000,000 yards; all Osnaburgs, 70,000,000 yards; all drills, 40 inches and less, 113,000,000 yards; and all sheetings, 40 inches and narrower, 747,000,000 yards; a total of 976,000,000 yards, or less than the imported yardage of jute burlap. It would require the annual consumption of 1,500,000 bales of raw cotton to supply the total imports of jute, and the domestic cotton mills and cotton growers are vitally interested in checking these enormous imports of a foreign-grown fiber which so seriously competes with American cotton in production and manufacture. It would require the production from 6,000,000 acres of cotton to supply fiber equal to jute imports on a relative basis of pound for pound, or approximately one-eighth of the entire present cotton acreage of the United States. That the bill pending in Congress requiring the general adoption for a uniform covering for cotton bales, of cotton cloth or jute, and all cotton bales be bought and sold under the net-weight contract instead of the present unjust regulations for deducting tare on a percentage basis of the gross weight of the bales be enacted into law.

Plank No. 6: That the Federal farm board be empowered to investigate the present expensive and wasteful system of baling American cotton, which has been denounced by spinners throughout the world, and to encourage as fast as practicable the introduction of high-density gin compression into the public gins of the cotton States. High-density gin compression will force the railroads to grant carload rates on cotton bales; it will check the extra expense of recompression, waste in handling and sampling; enable the growers to use cotton bagging; enforce the net-weight contract; and otherwise place into the channels of commerce a neat, economic package which will reflect credit upon the great staple crop of this Nation and save millions of dollars annually to the growers.

Plank No. 7: The time has come in the international commerce of this Nation with other countries when a protective tariff levied on the imports of competitive agricultural products into the United States is imperative as a safeguard to American agriculture. The tariff necessity has ceased to be a partisan political question and is indorsed as a sound business policy of protection by both of the leading political parties. If agriculture is to be placed on a parity of equality with business industry, the protection of a tariff must be utilized to the fullest extent in behalf of agriculture. An import duty on all classes of agricultural products entering into the United States should be fixed and maintained high enough to cover the cost of production of similar products in this country and to prepare them for the market. For the Southern States especially, necessary import duties should be applied against all forms of vegetable oils, peanuts, vegetables, and fruits. A duty of not less than 10 cents per pound should be levied against imports of Egyptian long-staple cotton as a protection to the long-staple cotton growers of the United States. A duty of 5 cents per pound to be levied against imports of short-staple cotton from whatever country imported.

AMERICAN COTTON ASSOCIATION,
J. S. WANNAMAKER,
President, St. Matthews, S. C.
J. O. THOMPSON,
Vice President, Roba, Ala.
HARVIE JORDAN,
Managing Director, Greenville, S. C.

FIRST DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I had hoped before this hour and date to be able to submit a conference report on the first deficiency appropriation bill. I have to state, however, that we are making little or no progress, and the signs are not very favorable that the conferees will reach the point which we desire. I wish to report that condition to the Senate.

Further, I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that there have been finally passed but two appropriation bills, as a matter of fact, during the entire session. There is still one bill, which was the second one reported to the Senate, and which passed before Christmas, which is hanging in the air. Of course, it has been in conference, and still is in conference, but no agreement has been reached and it may, therefore, fail.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WARREN. Certainly.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Is the Senator in a position to state to the Senate the principal points of difference respecting the first deficiency appropriation bill?

Mr. WARREN. There were, of course, several amendments in disagreement, most of which we have been able to compose.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I refer to the points of difference still outstanding.

Mr. WARREN. I understand, and I will attempt to give the Senator the exact facts. Barring some small items upon which there is hope of agreement, the principal amendments still in disagreement are No. 15, No. 16, and No. 17.

Amendment No. 15 has to do with changing the mode of paying refunds of taxes in the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department. That is the amendment proposed by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR].

Mr. McKELLAR. It has to do with tax refunds.

Mr. WARREN. Yes. Amendment No. 16, the second one, is the prohibition amendment, so-called, which was offered on the floor of the Senate by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARRIS]. The third one, being amendment No. 17, and which is not so vigorously opposed, perhaps, as the other two, is the amendment providing an appropriation of $250,000 for further investigation in regard to the enforcement of prohibition.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. What would be the effect if the deficiency bill should fail of passage and go over to the extraordinary session?

Mr. WARREN. If we fail to agree, of course, that settles the fate of the bill for this session, and it will have to go over to the next Congress.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Is there any particular reason why it is necessary to pass the bill during the present session, in view of the fact that an early extraordinary session seems to be anticipated by everyone?

Mr. WARREN. I hardly wish to make an answer to the Senator's question because there are some very important items in the bill and I should not like to answer for other Senators.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Has the Senator any information which he feels at liberty to divulge to the Senate as to when the extraordinary session will be convened?

Mr. WARREN. I have not the slightest information as to that. I think I might be informed in some respects on that subject by the honorable Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. The Senator from Arkansas regrets that he is not in a position to give the Senator from Wyoming any information on that subject.

Mr. WARREN. Perhaps the leader on this side of the Chamber could inform us.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Wyoming yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. WARREN. I yield.

Mr. HARRIS. I understand the chairman of the committee is merely reporting to the Senate as to the condition of the bill in conference and is not asking that the Senate give instructions.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. No; the Senator from Wyoming is not asking for any action.

Mr. HARRIS. That is what I understand.

Mr. WARREN. I have not asked that the Senate shall take any action. I have not entered into any argument whatever, but I wish before any further debate shall take place to present and have read at the desk two letters from the Secretary of the Treasury. I ask that the shorter letter be first read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

JANUARY 24, 1929.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Senate on Tuesday of this week adopted the following amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill:

"For increasing the enforcement force, $24,000,000, or such part thereof as the President may deem useful, to be allocated by the President, as he may see fit, to the departments or bureaus charged with the enforcement of the national prohibition act, and to remain available until June 30, 1930."

It is my understanding that in order to make prohibition enforcement more effective the Senate intended to provide additional funds for certain purposes, such as the relief of the congestion in the courts; increasing the fleet, equipment, and personnel of the Coast Guard; increasing the effectiveness of the Customs Service, including the border patrol. and increasing the personnel of the Bureau of Prohibition and the Department of Justice; and that, inasmuch as it was impossible definitely to allocate the sums to be spent for certain specified purposes at this time, the additional funds provided were to be allocated as the President in his discretion might decide.

I feel that it is my duty to point out to you that an examination of the amendment reveals that it will not accomplish the purposes intended. The appropriation will not be available for any of the purposes above enumerated, except increasing personnel of the Bureau of Prohibition and the Department of Justice, nor will it be available for the conduct of an educational program which may have been contemplated.

The amendment as adopted provides funds "for increasing the enforcement force." Granting that the language should be construed most liberally and in the light of the desired ends which the Senate was seeking to accomplish, I fear that the appropriation would not be available for more than an increased personnel. Even such essential incidental expenses necessarily accompanying an increased personnel, such as rent, office equipment and supplies, and traveling expenses, could not be paid from it.

Again, the President may allocate the appropriation for the above purpose only "to the departments or bureaus charged with the enforcement of the national prohibition act." Only the Department of Justice and the Bureau of Prohibition of the Treasury Department qualify under this language. Neither the judiciary, the Coast Guard, the Customs Service, nor the Civil Service Commission is included.

I bring this matter to your attention in order that the true intent of Congress may be accurately expressed before the bill is enacted into law, if it is determined that additional funds should be appropriated.

Very truly yours,

A. W. MELLON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. D. R. ANTHONY,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations,
House of Representatives.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I do not wish to say anything to delay this matter——

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is a further letter to be read.

Mr. HARRIS. Very well; I will wait until it is read.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, let me say that the other letter is somewhat long, and unless some Senator wishes to have it read, it may be printed in the RECORD without reading.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I do not care to have it read. I myself have already read the letter, and I have redrafted the amendment to which it has reference.

Mr. WARREN. I understand the Senator from Georgia has the floor.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent, if I may, with the permission of the Senator from Georgia, to insert in the RECORD a proposed amendment complying substantially with all of the suggestions of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Let it be read to the Senate.

Mr. McKELLAR. I should be very glad to have it read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

That no part of the funds herein appropriated for tax refunds where the claim is in excess of $10,000 shall be paid out until after an open public hearing before a reviewing board of not less than three persons constituted for the purpose of conducting such hearings by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. The present mode of handling such claims until they reach this reviewing board may be followed; but, when the claim for refund reaches this final reviewing board, herein provided for, it and all the papers and evidence in the case shall be heard and considered in an open public hearing, at which representatives of the taxpayer and of the Government may likewise be heard, at which any member of the public may be present, and such reviewing board shall keep a regular docket and hear such cases as nearly as possible in order and such docket shall be open to the public at all times. The decision of this board when handed down shall be in writing and a public document, and shall contain a statement of the facts, and the reasons, both in law and on the facts, for the decision of such reviewing board.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. McKELLAR. Certainly.

Mr. CARAWAY. Does the Senator's amendment provide that any member of the public, though not interested in the controversy, may participate in the proceedings?

Mr. McKELLAR. No.

Mr. CARAWAY. That is the impression I got from the reading of the amendment.

Mr. McKELLAR. Any person could be present at the hearing.

Mr. CARAWAY. If there was a public hearing, of course, anybody could attend the hearing; but what was the purpose of the Senator in providing in his amendment that "any member of the public may be present"?

Mr. McKELLAR. The intention was that the proceedings should not be secretly held; that is all.

Mr. President, in the letter which has been ordered printed in the RECORD, the Secretary makes complaint of the amendment which was adopted on the ground that it would mean that all the successive steps taken by the department in considering claims for refunds would have to be taken in public, and that that would entail a great deal of work and a great deal of annoyance and confusion. So, in order to meet the argument of the Secretary—which I do not think is well grounded—this amendment simply provides for a public hearing on a claim before it shall finally be refunded.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I am anxious to aid the chairman of the committee.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, if the Senator will wait a moment, I think I shall ask that the second letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, referring to the subject of which the Senator from Tennessee has just spoken, may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the clerk will read the second letter.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY,
Washington, January 29, 1929.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I submit the following for your consideration in connection with the Senate amendment to the first deficiency appropriation bill providing as follows:

"That no part of the funds herein appropriated for tax refunds where the claim is in excess of $10,000 shall be paid out except upon hearings before any committee or officer in the department conducting the same, which hearings shall be open to the public, and the decision shall be a public document."

The portion of the amendment which provides for public hearings is open to serious objection. In the judgment of the responsible officials of this department, this proposal is not consistent with sound administrative practice.

In order that the effect of the proposal may be clearly seen and the necessity for it correctly estimated, let me review briefly the usual procedure on a claim for refund.

After a claim for refund is filed by a taxpayer it regularly goes to the office of the revenue agent in charge in the taxpayer's district and is assigned to an agent for examination. Conferences are held with the taxpayer or his representative, the necessary examinations of the taxpayer's books and papers made, and a report prepared. This report is then reviewed in the office of the revenue agent in charge and is finally submitted to the revenue agent in charge. Further conferences in his office may be held. If he approves, the papers are forwarded to the Income Tax Unit in Washington and assigned to an auditor for complete review and consideration. The auditor's conclusion must then be reviewed and approved by his superiors before a final decision is reached. Frequently further conferences with the taxpayer or his representative are necessary. If the claim is in excess of $50,000, the entire file is sent to the general counsel's office and there assigned to a special group for another complete review and again conferences may be held with the taxpayer at this stage. The work of the attorney or attorneys who make this review is then submitted to the head of the division, and, if approved, then to the general counsel or one of his assistants for final approval. In every important case the file and recommendations go to the commissioner's office where the commissioner or one of his assistants reviews the case. In addition, if the amount allowed is in excess of $75,000, the general counsel, before transmitting the file of the commissioner prepares a complete statement of the case, which is submitted to the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation and the matter held in abeyance for the 30-day period provided by law. During that time the staff of the joint congressional committee examines the claim, and, if they have any doubt as to the propriety of its allowance, present their views, either by letter or conference, to the general counsel's office for reconsideration.

It will thus be seen that no claim is allowed as a result of the action of one or two individuals but that on the contrary every claim has to run the gantlet of thorough and complete audits, examinations, and legal review by a staff of competent men, certain of them especially chosen and trained for this work. It is my opinion that this system completely and adequately protects the Government's interests.

With this picture of the procedure in mind it is difficult to see the exact point at which a public hearing could properly be injected. Surely the Congress would not contemplate a requirement that all these proceedings be open to the public, including the initial conference of the revenue agent in the taxpayer's office in his examination of the books. Each of the subsequent proceedings are steps in the department's efforts to reach a correct conclusion by ordinary administrative practices. There is no point in the procedure for formal arguments and the presentation of evidence as in a court of law or before the Board of Tax Appeals. The record consists of evidence submitted from time to time by the taxpayer, frequently in affidavit form with his claim and sometimes furnished at a later point in the form of further affidavits and documentary proof; of facts obtained by the revenue agent from examinations of the taxpayer's books and papers; at times of reports of agents of the intelligence unit; and frequently of reports of engineers sent to make examinations of the condition or value of tangible property. The conferences consist of informal discussions of the facts thus established and the application of the law thereto. The record in each case is necessarily an accumulation of work extending frequently over a long period of time.

It is misleading to speak of the present procedure as a secret one. Conferences between the only persons who have any real interest in the matter should not be called secret simply because the idly curious are not privileged to be present, or because the procedure does not permit the divulgence of facts of interest only to the taxpayer and the Government, or because it does not authorize the presence of tax experts seeking information of interest to possible prospective clients, or to competitors of the taxpayer. There is a real purpose accomplished by the provisions of the act forbidding such disclosures. While certain large corporations may publish from time to time their balance sheets, there are many smaller taxpayers, particularly new and struggling corporations, whose business could be ruined, for the disclosure of their financial position would frequently encourage unfair business practices designed to eliminate them from the field and possibly permit competitors to take advantage of perhaps a temporarily weak condition. In addition it would reveal secret formulæ, secret trade processes, and vital statistics, such as costs of production. Furthermore, it must be borne in mind that taxable net income is an arbitrary figure often having but slight relation to the true business income of the concern, and seldom any relation to the financial condition or standing of the taxpayer. Taxable net income may be greatly in excess of, or much less than, true income. The publication, therefore, of taxable net income would necessarily be misleading. It might destroy public confidence in a well-managed business, or might unfortunately establish an unjustified confidence in the minds of creditors or investors. Particularly would this be probable since the publication of the figures would necessarily be incomplete and fragmentary. Taxpayers should be permitted to contribute to the revenues of the Government and adjust their tax liabilities without being forced to disclose their business affairs and policies, of interest only to competitors and the curious, and without being subjected to the risk of improper and unwarranted deductions. Furthermore, in cases involving the so-called special assessment provisions, the decision rests upon the data secured from competitors' returns, and these companies could rightly object to publication of their figures when they have no pending claim.

For the above reasons I respectfully urge that the provision for a public hearing on these matters be eliminated.

Whether the final decision of the department should be made a public document or record, presents a somewhat different problem, though it would seem such action is open to most of the objections above enumerated. At the present time all the larger cases are formally presented to the joint congressional committee and all the records of the department relating to refunds are at all times open to the scrutiny of the members of that committee and their agents. What more effective safeguard can be provided?

I am sending similar letters to Senator SMOOT, chairman of the Committee on Finance, Congressmen ANTHONY and WOOD, of the House Committee on Appropriations, and Congressman HAWLEY, chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means and the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Very truly yours,

A. W. MELLON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. FRANCIS E. WARREN,
Chairman of the Senate Committee on Appropriations,
United States Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I am anxious to help the able chairman of the Appropriations Committee to get through these appropriation bills. We are more behind than we have been in several years, and I think he is right in insisting upon getting action on all appropriation bills.

I desire to ask the chairman of the committee whether it is not a fact that the Senate conferees are asking only that the House vote on the amendments that the Senate placed in the bill? Does the Senator object to answering that question?

Mr. WARREN. The conferees of the House have been asked by the Senate conferees to take the matter back to the House; but their answer is that it has already been voted on in the House, and that with a majority of 99 votes they have performed their duty in that line.

Mr. HARRIS. And the Senate, which passed this amendment by a vote of 55 to 28, is simply asking that the House have a record vote on the Senate amendments instead of allowing two of the three conferees to decide the matter for the House?

Mr. WARREN. There have been various questions put to them varying from that, because that is a matter as to which we perhaps can not change their opinion and they can not change ours.

Mr. HARRIS. I am not criticizing them; I am merely making the point that as a matter of fact all the Senate conferees are asking of the House conferees is that they allow the House to vote on the amendment, and not simply on sending the bill to conference as they voted before.

I ask to have read at the desk a brief article regarding a resolution and a bill passed by the Massachusetts Legislature and the Wisconsin Legislature yesterday, and in addition to that all I care to say is:

I hope the House will not see fit to defeat this first deficiency bill, but will allow the House to have a vote on the prohibition amendment and the McKellar amendment. If they do not allow that, and the House kills the bill, of course the Senators who are in favor of prohibition enforcement will be forced to try to get the amendment on the next deficiency bill at this session; and if the House decides to kill that bill also, rather than go on record against the prohibition amendment, the only thing left that the Senate prohibitionists can do at the beginning of the extra session of Congress will be to try to get this amendment on the first appropriation bill that is before the Senate. This is not a partisan but a great moral question, and is favored by more than 80 per cent of the people of our country who believe in enforcing this law, which can only be done by a larger appropriation, so as to get more men to enforce the law. The lack of this enforcement is making the law more unpopular. The friends of prohibition, regardless of party, should aid in securing additional appropriations.

The Legislature of Massachusetts is now trying to repeal the eighteenth amendment; and it is getting encouragement in other sections of the country because the prohibition amendment is not enforced and is becoming more unpopular. The reason why it is not enforced is because the officials of the Government have not money to get sufficient men to enforce it. Unless the friends of prohibition appropriate more money to provide more men legislatures all over the country will ask that the eighteenth amendment be rescinded.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Secretary will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

[From the Washington Post of Thursday, February 7, 1929]

MASSACHUSETTS SENATE ASKS DRY REPEAL ACTION

BOSTON, February 6.—Congress is requested to take action for the repeal of the prohibition amendment to the Constitution of the United States by a resolution adopted to-day by the State senate. The senate's action represents the wishes of the electorate of 36 of the 40 senatorial districts as registered in the November elections, when the question was submitted to a referendum.

[From the Washington Post of Thursday, February 7, 1929]

MADISON, WIS., February 6.—A bill for a referendum on whether the Severson Act, State prohibition enforcement act, should be repealed and whether 2.75 beer should be legalized was passed by the State senate to-day. The vote was 17 to 15.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee permit me to say a few words before he makes his speech?

Mr. McKELLAR. I have not anything to say except to modify an amendment that I have already offered.

Mr. SIMMONS. I wonder if the Senator will allow me to make a brief statement first? It may affect his action.

Mr. McKELLAR. Very well.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, it seems to me that what is sought in the amendment complained of by the Secretary of the Treasury can be accomplished through the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation of the two Houses probably just as effectively and without friction or interfering with the operations of the machinery of the Treasury Department.

The Senate will remember that the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation is composed of five Members of the Senate, taken from the Finance Committee, and five Members of the House, taken from the Ways and Means Committee. That committee is given very broad powers. Its object is a general supervision of the action of the Treasury Department, especially with reference to income-tax assessments and refunds and abatement proceedings. The committee has quite a personnel organized for the purpose of doing the work assigned to the committee. The personnel has done a great deal of work in that direction, and it has made voluminous reports to the committee which have not been made as public as they ought to have been.

It has occurred to me that what the Senator desires might be accomplished by simply requiring that the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, through its agents, who are experts and skilled men, shall make an investigation for itself of all of these cases of refunds and abatement, report to the committee, and require that the committee make reports to the Senate periodically, as often as may be necessary to advise the Senate of what the department has done with reference to these applications for refunds.

I am simply making this statement as a suggestion to the Senator from Tennessee, whose purpose is a laudable one; but I am sure the Senator does not wish to have work duplicated, and I am sure the Senator does not wish in any way unduly to embarrass the Treasury Department.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the Senator is right in both those assumptions. I might say this, however, that at present the official of the joint committee, Mr. Parker, says that the committee have no authority to make any recommendations at all about tax refunds; that all the power they have is to look them over when they are over $75,000. I can understand that the law might be changed, and it might be changed by this amendment. The conferees no doubt would have a right to change it in this amendment, and if they would provide for a public hearing and have that particular committee, through its representative, provide for the same kind of a hearing as that suggested in this amendment, I would see no reason why that might not be done. I think probably that would be just as effective. If the conferees desire to give the joint committee more power and authority, the same power and authority that is given to this board here, that would be entirely satisfactory to me.

While I am on my feet, Mr. President, I desire, at the request and suggestion of the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY], with whom I have conferred, to make a slight change in the amendment I have suggested, by striking out the words "at which any member of the public may be present." The Senator from Arkansas thinks that probably should not be in the amendment, and I have yielded to his better judgment in the matter, and I desire that the amendment be modified in that regard.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I do not know that the powers of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation are quite as broad as they ought to be. They extend to a thorough inquiry by its agents into all of these several transactions, and the agents report to the committee. The committee is required to report to the Congress of the United States, which it does, I think, annually or at every session of the Congress.

It may be necessary to enlarge the powers of that committee. I have not investigated that matter, but I believe the object of the Senator can be accomplished through that joint committee better than it can be accomplished through the processes he is seeking.

I am suggesting this to the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations for the consideration of his colleagues on the conference committee.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FESS in the chair). Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator will recall the so-called United States Steel Co. case, which is one of the cases it seems not only the employees of the joint committee looked into, but the joint committee itself, or some of the members, looked into it also. Mr. HAWLEY, the chairman of the joint committee, virtually stated that they had no power to go into that case. They were not required to pass on it, and did not pass on it, and did not undertake to do so. Mr. Parker, the official of the joint committee, testified that he did not have the power to do it.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator who is speaking yield to me a moment?

Mr. McKELLAR. I have not the floor.

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. WARREN. I just desire to say that I have duties which call me out of the Chamber. I did not bring this subject up with the expectation that it would lead to a general discussion of affairs. I will ask to be excused at this time, and will ask that the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS], who is a member of the conference committee, take charge of the matter further.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President——

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I am not going to be taken off the floor until I am through.

Mr. CURTIS. I have no desire to take the Senator from the floor.

Mr. McKELLAR. I thank the Senator from North Carolina for yielding to me.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I think probably the chairman of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, Mr. HAWLEY, was correct. What I am suggesting is that the authority of that committee be enlarged so as to allow it to act, instead of merely being a body for the collection of information with reference to these Treasury transactions.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, as nothing further can be done in this matter, until the conference report is made, I hope it may go over and that the Senate may proceed with the regular order.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS' REUNION, CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, in behalf of the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] I report favorably, with an amendment, from the Committee on Military Affairs the bill (H. R. 15427) authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to lend to the Governor of North Carolina 300 pyramidal tents and various other equipment for the annual national encampment of the United Confederate Veterans to be held at Charlotte, N. C., in June, 1929. I submit a report thereon (Rept. No. 1659).

Mr. President, I intend to ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill, but first I want to say to the Senate that this action is entirely consistent with the settled policy of the Military Affairs Committee to authorize the lending of such equipment only to national encampments and national conventions of these veteran legions. We have consistently declined to authorize the loan of such equipment for State conventions.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I yield.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Why is there not a general law covering this subject, instead of having a special measure passed each time request is made for a loan of this equipment?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. There might very well be a general law, but it has never been suggested until now, so far as I know.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, it would be quite difficult to include in general language all the instances in which it might be desirable to make the loan. This follows the precedent in the Little Rock and other cases.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is the same treatment we give to the American Legion, to the Grand Army of the Republic, and that we have given regularly to the United Confederate Veterans.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I have no objection; but I suggest that a general law might be better than to have separate bills.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I think the suggestion is a good one.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I was just going to suggest what the Senator stated, that this has been done before. The Senate has passed a joint resolution practically in this form before, at least twice since I have been here.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes, Mr. President; that is true. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 15427) authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to lend to the Governor of North Carolina 300 pyramidal tents, complete; 9,000 blankets, olive drab, No. 4; 5,000 pillowcases; 5,000 canvas cots; 5,000 cotton pillows; 5,000 bed sacks; and 9,000 bed sheets, to be used at the encampment of the United Confederate Veterans to be held at Charlotte, N. C., in June, 1929, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, after the word "whose," to insert the word "national," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to lend, at his discretion, to the entertainment committee of the United Confederate Veterans, whose national encampment is to be held at Charlotte, N. C., June 4, 5, 6, and 7, 1929, 300 pyramidal tents, complete with all poles, pegs, and other equipment necessary for their erection; 9,000 blankets, olive drab, No. 4; 5,000 pillowcases; 5,000 canvas cots; 5,000 cotton pillows; 5,000 bed sacks; and 9,000 bed sheets: Provided, That no expense shall be caused the United States Government by the delivery and return of said property, the same to be delivered from the nearest quartermaster depot at such time prior to the holding of said encampment as may be agreed upon by the Secretary of War and the business manager of the said encampment committee: Provided further, That the Secretary of War, before delivering such property, shall take from said business manager of the Thirty-ninth Annual Confederate Reunion a good and sufficient bond for the safe return of said property in good order and condition, and the whole without expense to the United States.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I want to make a request of the Senator from Pennsylvania. When I state here, and go upon record as stating, that this is a national encampment, the last one being held in Houston, Tex., that every other State in the South has entertained these encampments except North Carolina, and we want the privilege of entertaining this one, probably the last reunion these veterans will ever have, will that not be sufficient without having the amendment go on the bill? I do not want the measure to go back to the House for action there at this period of the session.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That certainly would be sufficient for me. The Senator has made his statement, and I know that the other members of the committee will feel the same as I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I would like to say that the report of this bill would have been made by the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] if he had not been detained from the Senate by reason of illness.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT OF RULE XXXVIII

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, pursuant to the notice which I gave a day or two ago, I desire to submit a resolution providing for the amendment of Rule XXXVIII of the Senate rules. Several Senators are interested who are absent; one Senator in particular is absent because of illness who is especially interested in the matter. I do not want to call it up in their absence. However, I want to submit the resolution and will ask unanimous consent that it may lie over without prejudice.

Mr. CURTIS. There is no objection to that procedure.

Mr. JONES. I have introduced a new resolution differing from the one we had up the other day just in this respect. The resolution proposes an amendment of paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII instead of introducing an entire new paragraph. That was done at the suggestion of the able Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH].

As proposed before, the plan was to require a two-thirds vote to keep a nomination in executive session, as it were. I have modified it to require only a majority vote. Then I have incorporated in the proposed amendment the suggestion of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] with reference to the publication of the yea-and-nay votes. I will ask, as I said a moment ago, that the resolution may be considered as entered without asking that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JONES's resolution (S. Res. 322), as follows, was ordered to lie over under the rule:

Resolved, That paragraph 2 of Rule XXXVIII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, relating to proceedings on nominations in executive session, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"2. Nominations shall be considered in open executive session unless the Senate, in closed executive session, shall by a majority vote determine that any particular nomination shall be considered in closed executive session. When nominations are so considered in executive session all information communicated or remarks made by a Senator when acting upon nominations concerning the character or qualifications of the person nominated shall be kept secret. If, however, charges shall be made against a person nominated, the committee may, in its discretion, notify such nominee thereof, but the name of the person making such charges shall not be disclosed. The fact that a nomination has been made, or that it has been confirmed or rejected, shall not be regarded as a secret; and all roll calls in closed executive session, together with a statement of the question upon which such roll calls are had, shall be published in the RECORD."

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, I give notice that if the opportunity is presented when the resolution is under consideration by the Senate, I shall offer a substitute for the resolution of the Senator from Washington so as to provide that hereafter all executive business of the Senate shall be transacted in open executive session, whether in relation to nominations or treaties, unless the Senate in open session by a majority vote shall otherwise order.

In this connection I take occasion to say that there has been so much agitation on the subject that I think the Senate ought to meet the real issue involved. We always consider treaties, and we sometimes consider nominations, in open session. Every time an effort is made to have an executive session and to conform to the rule of the Senate the issue arises. Sound policy, I believe, would apply the rule of the open session to treaties just as much as to nominations, and the same rule should apply to both. My proposal would give the Senate the power by a majority vote to determine whether the hearing and discussion shall be had in open or in closed executive session, either with respect to nominations or with respect to treaties. I believe this is sound policy.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Washington will accept the amendment.

OKLAHOMA AND TEXAS BOUNDARY LINE

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I desire to call attention to a situation in the southwestern part of the country which affects a thousand American citizens and their savings of a lifetime.

The Supreme Court has recently held that the boundary line between Oklahoma and Texas has been heretofore erroneously located. Under the terms of that decision citizens residing on a strip of land more than 100 miles in length and varying from one-half mile to a mile in width will be taken from Oklahoma and set over into Texas. The United States Government never owned any land in Texas. Therefore, when the decision becomes final—and it will become final when the commissioners make their award as to the true location of the one hundredth meridian—those people will find themselves in Texas without title to their property. The States of Oklahoma and Texas can not agree on the matter because they have not the consent of Congress. Under section 10, Article I, of the Constitution, States are prevented from entering into or negotiating an agreement on any such matter until the consent of Congress is granted.

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS] has just reported a joint resolution, it being a unanimous report from the Committee on the Judiciary, giving the consent of Congress to those two States to negotiate and make a contract in order that the problems occasioned by the decision may be adjusted. The resolution carries no appropriation. It merely authorizes the President to confer with the Governors of Oklahoma and Texas to see if an agreement can not be reached whereby the property owners involved in this section of territory may be protected.

I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. CURTIS. Let it be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chief Clerk will read the joint resolution.

The legislative clerk read the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 196).

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, is this the joint resolution which has been pending before the Judiciary Committee?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It is. It was reported this morning by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. STEPHENS].

Mr. NORRIS. The Judiciary Committee directed that it be reported out?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It did; and the Senator from Mississippi has reported it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 196) was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Joint resolution (S. J. Res. 196) authorizing and requesting the President of the United States to take steps in an effort to protect citizens of the United States in their equitable titles to land embraced in territory to be transferred from the State of Oklahoma to the State of Texas and from the State of Texas to the State of Oklahoma as per decree of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Oklahoma against Texas (1926, 272 U. S. 21, p. 38), and to give the consent of Congress to said States to enter into a compact with each other and with the United States relating to such subject matter

Whereas on the 8th of December, 1919, the State of Oklahoma filed an original action in the Supreme Court of the United States against the State of Texas to have determined and located the true and correct eastern boundary of the Panhandle of Texas and the main western boundary of the State of Oklahoma; and

Whereas as the final adjudication of the issue raised in said mentioned case, the Supreme Court of the United States has decreed the following:

"The boundary between the State of Texas and the State of Oklahoma constituting the eastern boundary of the Panhandle of Texas and the main western boundary of Oklahoma is the line of the true one-hundredth meridian of longitude west from Greenwich, extending north from its intersection with the south bank of the South Fork of Red River to its intersection with the northern boundary line of the State of Texas as surveyed and marked upon the ground of John H. Clark, United States commissioner, under the act of June 5, 1858, chapter 92, or with a line running due east from the eastern terminus of the Clark survey if it is west of the meridian"; and

Whereas the said Supreme Court of the United States has appointed a commissioner to run, locate, and mark the true and correct boundary line between the said State of Texas and the said State of Oklahoma, and to establish permanent monuments along such boundary at appropriate distances, and to submit a report thereon to the court; and

Whereas the line declared by said Supreme Court to be the true and correct boundary between Texas and Oklahoma is located to the east of the line heretofore presumed to be the eastern Texas and western Oklahoma boundary; and

Whereas such new location of such boundary line has, or will, upon the approval of the report of the said locating commissioner, remove a tract of land heretofore presumed to be a part of the said State of Oklahoma and place same in the said State of Texas, and may, in addition, remove a tract of land heretofore presumed to be a part of the said State of Texas and place same in the said State of Oklahoma; and

Whereas the United States never owned or assumed to possess the title to any of the public land of the said State of Texas; and

Whereas the United States has heretofore presumed to own and did assume possession and has made disposition of most, if not all, the said land heretofore presumed to be in the said State of Oklahoma and affected by the said decision of the Supreme Court; and

Whereas in the exercise of the presumed ownership and undisputed possession of said land, the said Supreme Court of the United States, in its opinion, Oklahoma against Texas (1926, 272 U. S. 21, p. 38), said that it appeared that "prior to May 3, 1920, the United States had disposed of 20,657 acres in the strip in dispute by patents issued on homestead entries and public sales, for which it had collected $8,026; that 3,118 acres had been included in the school and university grants to Oklahoma; and that there were then 318 acres in pending entries, leaving, it was estimated, 118 acres of vacant land"; and

Whereas, according to the record made and pursuant to the approval by the Supreme Court of the final report of the locating commissioner, it is now evident that a number of persons, with titles to such land possessions based upon patents issued by the United States or by the said State of Oklahoma, will find that their residences and land possessions will have been transferred from said State of Oklahoma to said State of Texas, and that the said State of Texas may not recognize the validity of such patents; and

Whereas other persons affected by such final report may find that their residences and land possessions will have been transferred from Texas to Oklahoma with their titles to such land possessions, based upon patents issued by said State of Texas, and which the United States or said State of Oklahoma may not recognize; and

Whereas other persons affected by the final action of said Supreme Court may find that other complications surround their land titles; and

Whereas to the end that persons now residing on, in possession of, or owning the land affected and to be affected by the final action of the Supreme Court may be properly and equitably protected in their vested interests in such land, and to the further end that the United States, the State of Texas, and the State of Oklahoma may be permitted to assume proper obligations and to receive proper remunerations: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be authorized, and he is hereby requested, to confer with the Governor of the State of Oklahoma and with the Governor of the State of Texas to ascertain if negotiations will be entertained to the end that an agreement may be reached between the United States, the State of Texas, and the State of Oklahoma as to the terms upon which said parties mentioned and in interest will accept the land, if any, transferred or to be transferred to each said party by the authority of the final decree of the Supreme Court of the United States in the action styled Oklahoma against Texas (1926, 272 U. S. 21, p. 38).

SEC. 2. In the event the Governor of the State of Texas and the Governor of the State of Oklahoma, acting for their respective States, agree to confer with the United States relative to the subject matter mentioned and described in section 1 hereof, the consent of Congress is hereby given to the said State of Texas and to the said State of Oklahoma to negotiate and enter into a compact or agreement respecting the matter in this act mentioned, and the President is herein authorized and requested to proceed with such conference and to formulate and suggest a compact or agreement to be presented to the Congress and to the Legislatures of the State of Texas and the State of Oklahoma for ratification, and, if and when ratified by each said contracting party, then each said party herein mentioned is hereby authorized to proceed to comply with the obligations in said compact or agreement assumed.

SEC. 3. No such compact or agreement shall be binding or obligatory upon either of the parties herein mentioned unless and until it has been ratified by the Congress and by the legislatures of each of the States herein mentioned.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I send to the desk a letter from the Land Department giving some references to the land involved from a historical standpoint and ask that it may be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter is as follows:

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, January 7, 1929.

In re Texas-Oklahoma boundary along the 100° west of longitude.

Hon. ELMER THOMAS,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Replying to your letter of December 22, 1928, asking information as to the several laws for the disposal of the lands along the Texas-Oklahoma boundary that would be affected by the relocation of the 100° of longitude, as directed by the Supreme Court in Oklahoma v. Texas (272 U. S. 21, and 273 U. S. 93), this boundary falls within three tracts; that is (1) "Greer County, Texas-Oklahoma," between the South Fork of Red River in T. 1 N., R. 27 W., and the North Fork of Red River in sec. 36, T. 10 N., R. 27 W., I. M.; (2) the Cheyenne and Arapahoe cession, between the North Fork of Red River and the south boundary of the Cherokee outlet in sec. 31, T. 20 N., R. 26 W., I. M.; and (3) the Cherokee outlet, Ts. 20 to 23 N., R. 26 W., I. M.

CHEYENNE AND ARAPAHOE CESSION

That portion of the boundary north of the North Fork of Red River and south of the south boundary of the Cherokee outlet was ceded to the United States by the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Tribes of Indians in an agreement ratified by act of Congress approved March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. 989, 1022–1025).

By proclamation of April 12, 1892 (27 Stat. 1018), the unreserved and unallotted lands were opened to settlement and disposed of to actual settlers only under the provisions of the homestead and town-site laws. In addition to submitting satisfactory final proof, as on other homesteads, the entryman was required to pay the sum of $1.50 per acre, as therein provided. Instructions of April 13, 1892 (20 L. D. 7).

CHEROKEE OUTLET

By section 10 of the act approved March 3, 1893 (27 Stat. 642), the President of the United States was authorized, at any time within six months after the approval of the act and its acceptance by the Cherokee Nation, by proclamation, to open to settlement any or all of the lands in the Cherokee outlet not allotted or reserved in the manner provided in section 13 of the act of Congress approved March 2, 1889 (25 Stat. 1005).

That part of the boundary between T. 20 to 23 N., R. 26 W., I. M., was opened to settlement by proclamation of August 19, 1893, and instructions of September 1, 1893 (17 L. D. 225). Homestead entrymen for land west of 98½° longitude were required to pay $1 per acre in addition to the usual fees and submit final proof.

GREER COUNTY, TEX.

A portion of the lands affected by the relocation of the 100° of longitude along the western boundary of Oklahoma was formerly claimed by the State of Texas. In 1860 it was organized under the laws of Texas and was known as Greer County, Tex. The area was included between the North Fork and the South Fork of Red River and east of the 100° of longitude.

Under the provisions of section 25 of the act of May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. 81, 92), "to provide a temporary government for the Territory of Oklahoma, and for other purposes," a bill was filed in the United States Supreme Court by the Attorney General on behalf of the United States against the State of Texas to determine the true location of the boundary between Texas and the Territory of Oklahoma along the Red River, and involving the ownership and jurisdiction over said Greer County.

In United States v. Texas (143 U. S. 621), decided in 1892, the Supreme Court held that it had original jurisdiction of a suit in equity brought by the United States against a State to determine the boundary between that State and a Territory. The case was heard on its merits and decided March 16, 1896 (United States v. Texas, 162 U. S. 1), that the South Fork of Red River was the boundary.

By an act approved January 18, 1897 (29 Stat. 490), Congress provided that every person qualified under the homestead laws who was a bona fide occupant of land within Greer County, Okla., on March 16, 1896, shall be allowed six months' preference right from the passage of the act to make homestead entry for 160 acres, and also to purchase at $1 an acre any additional land, not exceeding 160 acres, of which he was in actual possession on March 16, 1896. Instructions were issued February 25, 1897 (24 L. D. 184).

The provisions of section 1 of that act were extended and amended by acts approved June 23, 1897 (30 Stat. 105), and March 1, 1899 (30 Stat. 966), for the benefit of actual occupants and purchasers from the State of Texas prior to March 16, 1896. Instructions of April 13, 1899 (28 L. D. 274).

SCHOOL SECTIONS

Under the above legislation sections 13, 16, 33, and 36 in every township in Greer County were reserved from disposal and subsequently granted to the State of Oklahoma by the act of June 16, 1906 (34 Stat. 267). The same section numbers in the Cherokee Outlet and sections 16 and 36 in the Cheyenne and Arapahoe cession were also reserved and likewise granted to the State. The granting act of 1906, supra, contained provision for granting additional sections 13 and 33, and where sections 13, 16, 33, and 36, or any part thereof, had been disposed of or otherwise reserved indemnity land was to be selected.

TOWN SITES

While the town site laws and the provisions of section 22 of the act of May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. 81), permitting the commutation of homestead entries at $10 per acre for town-site purposes were applicable to these lands, it is not believed from present information that any town sites will be affected by the relocation of the boundary line.

Very respectfully,

WILLIAM SPRY, Commissioner.

THE CALENDAR

Mr. CURTIS. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar, beginning where the Senate left off at the last call of the calendar, to wit, Calendar No. 1516.

Mr. CARAWAY. The Senator does not contemplate that that will displace the unfinished business?

Mr. CURTIS. Oh, no; we are to proceed with the call of the calendar only until 2 o'clock.

Mr. BRUCE. Mr. President, I wish we might begin at the beginning of the calendar.

Mr. CURTIS. I may say to the Senator from Maryland that I shall ask for another adjournment of the Senate very soon and I shall do that in order that we may begin at the beginning of the calendar and consider bills under Rule VIII. There are about 11 pages more of the calendar that contain new bills which ought to be called.

Mr. BRUCE. The trouble is that as soon as we begin calling bills on the calendar, Senators say "Over, over," until I confess I have reached almost a state of despair.

Mr. CURTIS. The bills which will now be called are nearly all new bills which have not been heretofore called, although there are some of the old bills which will be called again.

Mr. BRUCE. The Senator must not forget that some of us are looking forward and some of us are looking backward.

Mr. CURTIS. I understand that.

Mr. BRUCE. Practically none of the bills on the calendar have been taken up for consideration, and they have had nothing done with them.

Mr. CURTIS. As I said, I expect to ask for an adjournment early next week so that the calendar may be called under Rule VIII. That will permit a Senator to move to take up any particular bill by motion if objection shall be made to its consideration.

Mr. HEFLIN. I understand it is the purpose of the Senator from Kansas to continue that plan for several days until the calendar has been called clear through.

Mr. CURTIS. Yes; just as soon as we can.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. BRUCE. I shall not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the first bill on the calendar.

ADDITIONAL JUDGES

The bill (H. R. 12811) to provide for the appointment of one additional district judge for the eastern and western districts of South Carolina was announced as first in order.

Mr. KING. Over.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, I move, notwithstanding the adverse report and the objection, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is out of order because of the unanimous-consent agreement under which the Senate is proceeding.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I want to be heard briefly on the bill.

Mr. CURTIS. Under the rule, I ask that the bill go over. It has been objected to.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I have examined the bill of the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BLEASE], and the State of South Carolina requires an additional judge. As a member of the Judiciary Committee I have examined with care the bill which proposes to grant to New York State an additional judge. Senators ably and properly discuss the prohibition question, but seem to forget that the prohibition law may be enforced only by the aid and with the help of judges, yet for some reason there seems to be objection whenever we propose to give to the country a sufficient judicial arm to transact the business of the country.

I realize that the objection, of course, makes it impossible to consider the bill at this time, but I hope that at an early date the bill providing for an additional judge for South Carolina and the bill making similar provision for New York State may be passed. I have paid some attention to the needs and requirements of those districts and I am convinced that the bills ought to be passed.

Mr. BRUCE. I do not understand that anyone objected to the present consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On objection, the bill will be passed over. The clerk will state the next bill on the calendar.

The bill (H. R. 8295) for the appointment of an additional circuit judge for the ninth judicial circuit was announced as next in order.

Mr. BLEASE. Over.

Mr. BAYARD. Mr. President, did not the Senator from South Carolina move to take up his bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion was out of order under the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I understood we were to begin consideration of the calendar at the point where we left off the last time it was called, which was Calendar No. 1515.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Calendar No. 1516 is the first bill to be called to-day under the unanimous-consent agreement. Calendar No. 1515 was discussed until 2 o'clock the last time the calendar was called.

Mr. WAGNER. But no disposition was made of it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No. The request of the Senator from Kansas was to begin with Calendar No. 1516. The clerk will report the next bill on the calendar.

The bill (H. R. 14659) to provide for the appointment of two additional judges of the district court of the United States for the eastern district of New York was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Over.

Mr. BRUCE. Mr. President, it would seem to me that the only Senators who desire to have proper agencies provided for the enforcement of the prohibition law are those who are opposed to prohibition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On objection, the bill will be passed over.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK BOUNDARY

The bill (S. 3001) to revise the boundary of the Yellowstone National Park in the States of Montana and Wyoming, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The bill had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with amendments, on page 2, line 13, after the word "north," to insert:

thence continuing westerly along said divide, now between the headwaters of Lamar River and Jones Creek; headwaters of Sedge, Bear, Cub, and Clear Creeks, and the headwaters of Jones and Crow Creeks, and between Crow Creek and Middle Creek, to its intersection with the present east boundary line of Yellowstone National Park, approximately at park boundary monument 18 north, passing over Pyramid and Cathedral Peaks, Mount Chittenden, and Avalanche Peak, thence southerly along said boundary line to its intersection with the hydrographic divide immediately south of Middle Creek, approximately at park boundary monument 15 north; thence westerly along said divide, now between a southern tributary of Middle Creek, headwaters of Beaverdam, Trappers, and Mountain Creeks, and the headwaters of Canfield and Eagle Creeks, to its intersection with the present east boundary line of Yellowstone National Park, at a point near park boundary monument 5 north, passing over Reservation and Atkins Peaks, Mount Schurz, Mount Humphreys, and Eagle Peak.

And on page 3, line 21, after the word "park," to strike out the following:

Provided, That, whereas it is the purpose and intent of Congress to retain the area hereby added to the park in its original wilderness character, therefore no new roads shall be constructed and no hotels or permanent camps shall be authorized or permitted to be maintained on such lands.

And to insert in lieu thereof the following:

and all of those lands of the present Yellowstone National Park excluded from the park are hereby included in and made a part of the contiguous national forests subject to all laws and regulations applicable to national forests, and upon acceptance thereof by appropriate action of the State, jurisdiction for all purposes whatsoever shall be, and is hereby, ceded over the land hereby excluded from the park to the State of Wyoming: Provided, That whereas it is the purpose and intent of Congress to retain the area hereby added to the park in its original wilderness character, therefore, no new roads shall be constructed and no hotels or permanent camps shall be authorized or permitted to be maintained on such lands.

And on page 5, after line 5, to insert the following additional sections:

SEC. 3. That the provisions of the act of March 20, 1922 (title 16, sec. 485, U. S. C.), as amended, shall continue to be applicable to the areas included within the Yellowstone National Park by this act, and any lands within such areas acquired by exchange thereunder shall thereupon become a part of the Yellowstone National Park.

SEC. 4. That nothing herein contained shall affect any valid existing claim, location, or entry under the land laws of the United States, whether for homestead, mineral right of way, or any other purposes whatsoever, or shall affect the right of any such claimant, locator, or entryman to the full use and enjoyment of his land.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the boundary of the Yellowstone National Park is hereby changed so as to read as follows:

"Beginning on the present north boundary line of Yellowstone National Park at its intersection with the hydrographic divide immediately north of Pebble Creek, approximately at park boundary monument 29 east; thence following said divide around the head of the drainage of Pebble Creek to its intersection with the present east boundary line of Yellowstone National Park, at a point near park boundary monument 54 north; thence southerly along said boundary line to its intersection with the hydrograpic divide between Soda Butte and Cache Creeks, at a point near park boundary monument 51 north; thence easterly along said hydrographic divide to its intersection with the crest of the Absaroka Range; thence southerly along said crest to its intersection with the main hydrographic divide between Little Lamar River and the North Fork of Shoshone River, passing over Republic and Hoodoo Peaks; thence westerly along said divide passing over Notch Mountain to its intersection with the present east boundary line of Yellowstone National Park, at a point near park boundary monument 26 north; thence continuing westerly along said divide, now between the headwaters of Lamar River and Jones Creek; headwaters of Sedge, Bear, Cub, and Clear Creeks, and the headwaters of Jones and Crow Creeks, and between Crow Creek and Middle Creek, to its intersection with the present east boundary line of Yellowstone National Park, approximately at park boundary monument 18 north, passing over Pyramid and Cathedral Peaks, Mount Chittenden, and Avalanche Peak, thence southerly along said boundary line to its intersection with the hydrographic divide immediately south of Middle Creek, approximately at park boundary monument 15 north; thence westerly along said divide, now between a southern tributary of Middle Creek, headwaters of Beaverdam, Trappers, and Mountain Creeks, and the headwaters of Canfield and Eagle Creeks, to its intersection with the present east boundary line of Yellowstone National Park, at a point near park boundary monument 5 north, passing over Reservation and Atkins Peaks, Mount Schurz, Mount Humphreys, and Eagle Peak; and

"Beginning on the present west boundary line of Yellowstone National Park at its intersection with the left bank of Gallatin River between park monuments 45 and 46 north; thence northwesterly along said bank to a point opposite the hydrographic divide between Daly and Tepee Creeks; thence northeasterly across the Gallatin River and along said divide, around the headwaters of Daly, Black Butte, Specimen, and Fan Creeks, to the intersection of said divide with the present north boundary line of Yellowstone National Park, at a point near park boundary monument 11 west.

"All of those lands lying within the boundary lines above described and the present north, east, and west boundary lines are hereby included in and made a part of the Yellowstone National Park and all of those lands of the present Yellowstone National Park excluded from the park are hereby included in and made a part of the contiguous national forests subject to all laws and regulations applicable to national forests, and upon acceptance thereof by appropriate action of the State, jurisdiction for all purposes whatsoever shall be, and is hereby, ceded over the land hereby excluded from the park to the State of Wyoming: Provided, That whereas it is the purpose and intent of Congress to retain the area hereby added to the park in its original wilderness character, therefore, no new roads shall be constructed and no hotels or permanent camps shall be authorized or permitted to be maintained on such lands."

SEC. 2. That the provisions of the act of March 1, 1872, reserving lands for park purposes, the act of July 10, 1890, admitting the State of Wyoming into the Union, the act of May 7, 1894, entitled "An act to protect the birds and animals in the Yellowstone National Park and to punish crimes in said park, and for other purposes," the act of August 25, 1916, entitled "An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes," and all acts supplementary to and amendatory of said acts are made applicable to and extended over the lands hereby added to the park: Provided, That the provisions of the act of June 10, 1920, entitled "An act to create a Federal Power Commission, to provide for the improvement of navigation, the development of water power, the use of the public lands in relation thereto, and to repeal section 18 of the river and harbor appropriation act, approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes," shall not apply to or extend over such lands.

SEC. 3. That the provisions of the act of March 20, 1922 (title 16, sec. 485, U. S. C.), as amended, shall continue to be applicable to the areas included within the Yellowstone National Park by this act, and any lands within such areas acquired by exchange thereunder shall thereupon become a part of the Yellowstone National Park.

SEC. 4. That nothing herein contained shall affect any valid existing claim, location, or entry under the land laws of the United States, whether for homestead, mineral right of way, or any other purposes whatsoever, or shall affect the right of any such claimant, locator, or entryman to the full use and enjoyment of his land.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, has the bill the unanimous approval of the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was reported by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. NORBECK].

Mr. KENDRICK. Mr. President, I can explain the study that has been made of the bill. It is in line with the report made by the commission appointed by the President of the United States to study the boundaries of Yellowstone National Park. The changes as outlined in the bill are in line with the recommendations of that commission and are agreed upon by the representatives of the different districts.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to revise the north, northeast, and east boundaries of the Yellowstone National Park in the States of Montana and Wyoming, and for other purposes."

BILLS PASSED OVER

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, it is very distasteful for me constantly to interrupt in this way, but I think there has been some misunderstanding on the part of the Chair. The Senator from Kansas asked that we begin where we left off the consideration of the calendar the last time it was under consideration, namely, at Calendar No. 1515, and I should like to have that bill considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent that Order of Business 1515, being the bill (H. R. 9200) to provide for the appointment of three additional judges of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York may be first considered. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. I object.

Mr. JONES. There will be objection to that bill being taken up by unanimous consent.

Mr. WAGNER. Does the Senator from Washington object to the consideration of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection has been made.

The bill (S. 2783) to provide for the forfeiture of patent rights in cases of conviction under laws prohibiting monopoly was announced as next in order.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PROPOSED SUPPLEMENT TO THE NATURALIZATION LAWS

The bill (H. R. 349) to supplement the naturalization laws, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BRUCE. Mr. President, what is the nature of that bill? I should like to have it explained.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the bill.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], who reported the bill, is absent from the Chamber. Under those circumstances, I shall ask that it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. COPELAND subsequently said: Mr. President, I was out of the Chamber when Order of Business 1531, being the bill (H. R. 349) to supplement the naturalization laws, and for other purposes, was called on the calendar, and I should like to return to the bill if there be no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent to revert to the bill named by him.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 349) to supplement the naturalization laws, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Immigration with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause, and to insert:

That (a) the registry of aliens at ports of entry required by section 1 of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. L., pt. 1, p. 596), as amended, may be made as to any alien not ineligible to citizenship in whose case there is no record of admission for permanent residence, if such alien shall make a satisfactory showing to the Commissioner General of Immigration, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner General of Immigration, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, that he—

(1) Entered the United States prior to July 1, 1924;

(2) Has resided in the United States continuously since such entry;

(3) Is a person of good moral character; and

(4) Is not subject to deportation.

(b) For each such record of registry as herein authorized the alien shall pay to the Commissioner General of Immigration a fee of $20. All fees collected under this section shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(c) The provisions of section 76 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States," approved March 4, 1909, shall apply in respect of the record of registry authorized by this section in the same manner and to the same extent, including penalties, as they apply in respect of the oaths, notices, affidavits, certificates, orders, records, signatures, and other instruments, papers, or proceedings specified in such section 76.

SEC. 2. Upon the making of a record of registry as authorized by section 1 of this act, the certificate of arrival required by the fourth paragraph of the second subdivision of section 4 of such act of June 29, 1906, as amended, may be issued upon application to the Commissioner of Naturalization, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Commissioner of Naturalization, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, and upon payment of the fee prescribed by section 5 of this act.

SEC. 3. For the purposes of the immigration laws and the naturalization laws an alien, in respect of whom a record of registry has been made as authorized by section 1 of this act, shall be deemed to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of his entry.

SEC. 4. After the expiration of 60 days after the enactment of this act no declaration of intention shall be made by any alien under such act of June 29, 1906, as amended, or, if made, be valid until the lawful entry for permanent residence of such alien shall have been established, and a certificate showing the date, place, and manner of his arrival shall have been issued.

SEC. 5. For any certificate of arrival issued for naturalization purposes a fee of $5 shall be paid to the Commissioner of Naturalization, which fee shall be paid over to and deposited in the Treasury in the same manner as other naturalization fees.

SEC. 6. (a) The third paragraph of the second subdivision of section 4 of such act of June 29, 1906, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"As to each period of residence at any place in the county where the petitioner resides at the time of filing his petition, there shall be included in the petition the affidavits of at least two credible witnesses, citizens of the United States, stating that each has personally known the petitioner to have been a resident at such place for such period, and that the petitioner is and during all such period has been a person of good moral character."

(b) The fourth subdivision of section 4 of such act of June 29, 1906, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"Fourth. No alien shall be admitted to citizenship unless (1) immediately preceding the date of his petition the alien has resided continuously within the United States for at least five years and within the county where the petitioner resided at the time of filing his petition for at least six months, (2) he has resided continuously within the United States from the date of his petition up to the time of his admission to citizenship, and (3) during all the periods referred to in this subdivision he has behaved as a person of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the United States. At the hearing of the petition, residence in the county where the petitioner resides at the time of filing his petition, and the other qualifications required by this subdivision during such residence, shall be proved by the oral testimony of at least two credible witnesses, citizens of the United States, in addition to the affidavits required by this act to be included in the petition. If the petitioner has resided in two or more places in such county and for this reason two witnesses can not be procured to testify as to all such residences, it may be proved by the oral testimony of two such witnesses for each such place of residence. At the hearing, residence within the United States but outside the county, and the other qualifications required by this subdivision during such residence shall be proved either by depositions made before a naturalization examiner or by the oral testimony of at least two such witnesses for each place of residence.

"If an individual returns to the country of his allegiance and remains therein for a continuous period of more than six months and less than one year during the period immediately preceding the date of filing the petition for citizenship for which continuous residence is required as a condition precedent to admission to citizenship, the continuity of such residence shall be presumed to be broken, but such presumption may be overcome by the presentation of satisfactory evidence that such individual had a reasonable cause for not returning to the United States prior to the expiration of such six months. Absence from the United States for a continuous period of one year or more during the period immediately preceding the date of filing the petition for citizenship for which continuous residence is required as a condition precedent to admission to citizenship shall break the continuity of such residence."

(c) So much of the seventh subdivision of section 4 of such act of June 29, 1906, as amended, as reads "or for three years on board of merchant or fishing vessels of the United States of more than 20 tons burden" is amended to read as follows: "or for three years on board vessels of more than 20 tons burden, whether or not documented under the laws of the United States, and whether public or private, which are not foreign vessels."

(d) So much of such subdivision as reads "without proof of the required five years' residence within the United States if upon examination by the representative of the Bureau of Naturalization, in accordance with the requirements of this subdivision it is shown that such residence can not be established" is amended to read as follows: "and may be naturalized without complying with the requirements of residence within the United States and within the county."

(e) Section 10 of such act of June 29, 1906, as amended, and section 2170 of the Revised Statutes are repealed.

SEC. 7. (a) The second and third paragraphs of section 13 of such act of June 29, 1906, as amended, are amended to read as follows:

"(1) For receiving and filing a declaration of intention and issuing a duplicate thereof, $5;

"(2) For making, filing, and docketing a petition for citizenship, and issuing a certificate of citizenship if the issuance of such certificate is authorized by the court, and for the final hearing on the petition, $10."

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 9 of the act entitled "An act to fix the salaries of the clerks of the United States district courts and to provide for their office expenses, and for other purposes," approved February 26, 1919, as amended, all fees received by the clerks of court to which such section applies for services rendered in naturalization proceedings shall be paid over to the Bureau of Naturalization within 30 days from the close of each quarter in each fiscal year, and the moneys so received shall be disposed of in the same manner as provided in section 13 of such act of June 29, 1906, as amended.

SEC. 8. The first sentence of section 28 of such act of June 29, 1906, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"The Commissioner of Naturalization, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, shall make such rules and regulations and such changes in the forms prescribed by section 27 of this act as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of the naturalization laws."

SEC. 9. Such act of June 29, 1906, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SEC. 32. (a) If any certificate of citizenship issued to any citizen, or any declaration of intention furnished to any declarant, under the naturalization laws, is lost, mutilated, or destroyed, the citizen or declarant may, upon the payment to the commissioner of a fee of $10, make application (accompanied by two photographs of the applicant) to the Commissioner of Naturalization for a new certificate or declaration. If the commissioner finds that the certificate or declaration is lost, mutilated, or destroyed, he shall issue to the applicant a new certificate or declaration with one of such photographs of the applicant affixed thereto.

"(b) Upon payment to the Commissioner of Naturalization of a fee of $10 the commissioner shall issue for any naturalized citizen a special certificate of citizenship, with a photograph (furnished by such citizen) affixed thereto, for use by such citizen only for the purpose of obtaining recognition as a citizen of the United States by the country of former allegiance of such citizen. Such certificate, when issued, shall be furnished to the Secretary of State for transmission by him to the proper authority in such country of former allegiance.

"SEC. 33. (a) Any individual over 21 years of age who claims to have derived United States citizenship through the naturalization of a parent, or a husband, or under section 1993 of the Revised Statutes, may, upon the payment of a fee of $10, make application to the Commissioner of Naturalization, accompanied by two photographs of the applicant, for a certificate of citizenship. Upon obtaining a certificate from the Secretary of Labor showing the date, place, and manner of arrival in the United States, upon proof to the satisfaction of the commissioner that the applicant is a citizen and that the alleged citizenship was derived as claimed, and upon taking and subscribing to, before a designated representative of the Bureau of Naturalization within the United States, the oath of allegiance required by the naturalization laws of a petitioner for citizenship, such individual shall be furnished a certificate of citizenship by the commissioner, but only if such individual is at the time within the United States. In all courts, tribunals, and public offices of the United States, at home and abroad, of the District of Columbia, and of each State, Territory, or insular possession of the United States, the certificate of citizenship issued under this section shall be conclusive evidence of the citizenship of the individual named therein.

"(b) Any person who (1) knowingly issues or is a party to the issuance under this section of a certificate of citizenship not authorized by the provisions of this section; or (2) demands, charges, collects, or receives any other or additional fees or moneys under this section except the fees and moneys herein specified; or (3) knowingly certifies that an applicant, affiant, or witness named in an affidavit, application, or certificate of citizenship or other paper or writing required to be executed under the provisions of this section, personally appeared before him, and was sworn thereto or acknowledged the execution thereof or signed the same when in fact such petitioner, affiant, or witness did not personally appear before him or was not sworn thereto, or did not execute the same, or did not acknowledge the execution thereof; or (4) procures a certificate of citizenship under this section, knowing or having reason to believe that he is not entitled thereto, shall be guilty of a felony and on conviction thereof shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

"(c) The provisions of sections 74 to 81, inclusive, of the act entitled 'An act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States,' approved March 4, 1909, shall apply in respect of proceedings and certificates of citizenship under this section in the same manner and to the same extent, including penalties, as they apply in respect of proceedings and certificates of citizenship under the naturalization laws.

"SEC. 34. Fees collected by the Commissioner of Naturalization under the two preceding sections shall be paid over to and deposited in the Treasury and accounted for by the commissioner to the General Accounting Office in the same manner as other naturalization fees received by the Bureau of Naturalization.

"SEC. 35. When used in this act the term 'county' includes parish in the State of Louisiana; a division of the judicial district in the Territory of Alaska; the entire island in the case of Porto Rico; the entire territory comprised within the Virgin Islands in the case of the Virgin Islands; and the entire district in the case of the District of Columbia.

"SEC. 36. Two photographs of himself shall be furnished by each applicant for a declaration of intention and by each petitioner for citizenship. One of such photographs shall be affixed by the clerk of the court to the declaration of intention issued to the declarant and one to the declaration of intention required to be forwarded to the Bureau of Naturalization; and one of such photographs shall be affixed to the certificate of citizenship issued to the naturalized citizen and one to the duplicate certificate of citizenship required to be forwarded to the Bureau of Naturalization."

SEC. 10. The Commissioner of Naturalization is authorized and directed to prepare from the records in the custody of the Bureau of Naturalization a report upon those heretofore seeking citizenship to show by nationalities their relation to the numbers of annually arriving aliens and to the prevailing census populations of foreign born, their economic, vocational, and other classification, in statistical form, with analytical comment thereon, and to prepare such report annually thereafter.

SEC. 11. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

Mr. BRUCE. I should like to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] whether the bill meets with his approval.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes. The bill was very carefully considered by the committee, and I approve it heartily.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WHEELER. I object.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, I objected to the consideration of the bill when it was reached on the calendar on account of the absesnce of the Senator from New York who reported it. I should like to know briefly what the bill provides.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I hope the bill may be passed. It will give relief to a great many aliens who are anxious to be naturalized and become American citizens but are deprived of this privilege because of a requirement in the present law that they produce with their application a certificate of entry. In many cases these have been lost or no records were kept. This bill provides that the Commissioner General of Immigration shall have discretionary power to register and give a certificate to aliens of good moral character who are not subject to deportation and who have entered the country prior to July 1, 1924. A somewhat similar bill was introduced by me but the pending bill is more comprehensive.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this bill has no relation whatever to the admission of immigrants to the country. No alien who is now here can be deported under the present law if he has been here five years.

Mr. WHEELER. I withdraw my objection.

Mr. COPELAND. This bill will go into effect on the 1st of July, and will permit aliens who are here on that date, under regulations which are prescribed by the bill, to be naturalized. They have to prove their good moral character and that they possess the suitable requirements for our citizenship, just as is required now under our present laws. I find in my city that we have a good many Canadians—and this bill involves more Canadians perhaps than any other persons.

Mr. MCKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. MCKELLAR. The bill does not affect the number of aliens coming in at all in any way, does it?

Mr. COPELAND. It has no relation whatever to that.

Mr. McKELLAR. It has no relation whatever to immigration?

Mr. COPELAND. Not the slightest.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, I not only withdraw the objection which I made to this bill, but I join in the expression of the hope that it may be passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

PUNISHMENT FOR PRISON ESCAPES

The bill (H. R. 9021) providing for the punishment of persons escaping from Federal penal or correctional institutions, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, heretofore I objected to the consideration of this bill, but I have since gone into it very carefully, and I think it ought to pass.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, on page 1, line 7, after the word "shall," to insert the words "with intent to escape from custody," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That if any person convicted of an offense against Federal statutes, committed to any Federal penal or correctional institution, or any State, county, or other institution designated as a place for the incarceration of Federal prisoners or being conveyed to or from such institution, shall with intent to escape from custody break such prison and escape therefrom or shall escape from the custody of any official or employee conveying such person to or from such institution or shall escape from or leave without due authority any building, camp, farm, garden, city, town, road, street, or any place whatsoever in which such person is placed or to which such person is directed or permitted to go or in which such person is allowed to be by the warden or any other officer or employee of the prison, whether inside or outside of the prison walls or grounds, such person shall be deemed guilty of an escape and shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment for a term not to exceed five years, to commence from and after the expiration of the term of previous sentence: Provided, That in order to constitute an escape under the provisions of this act it is not necessary that the prisoner be within any walls or inclosure nor that there shall be any actual breaking nor that such prisoner be in the presence or actual custody of any officer or other person.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BRUCE. I ask that the bill go over, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. SACKETT. Mr. President, was the bill which was just under consideration passed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment reported by the committee to the bill was agreed to, but on objection of the Senator from Maryland the bill went over.

The bill (S. 2213) providing against misuse of official badges for United States marshals and their deputies was announced as next in order.

Mr. BRUCE. That is a bill that I intended to object to. I did not intend to object to the preceding bill.

Mr. SACKETT. I thought there was no objection to the preceding bill, and I ask that we may now revert to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BRUCE. I do not object to the consideration of House bill 9021.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection——

Mr. ASHURST. Let the bill be read.

Mr. KING. Let the bill be read. I wish to offer an amendment to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read.

The bill was read.

Mr. BRUCE. I object to the consideration of that bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

Mr. KING. If this bill should come up in my absence, I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. ASHURST. Does the Senator object?

Mr. KING. I want to offer an amendment to the bill so that it may be pending.

Mr. ASHURST. This bill would, upon the lapse or negligence of a warden or sheriff, permit a man to be imprisoned for another five years. I want to speak upon the bill. Who introduced the bill?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. It is a House bill.

Mr. BRUCE. Mr. President, the introduction of this bill arose from the fact that persons who are in prison for violation of the prohibition law are allowed a good deal of liberty not allowed to other prisoners, because of the general feeling of wardens and everybody else that the prohibition law is a mockery. In the State of Maryland it has been the case that men who have violated the prohibition enforcement act were placed in our jails and allowed all kinds of privileges that ordinary prisoners were not, simply because the jailers had no more faith in the good sense of the law than had anybody else.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I suggest to the Senator from Kentucky that when this bill comes up for consideration I shall offer two amendments; one, to divide and classify the offenses into misdemeanors and felonies, and provide that in misdemeanors the punishment shall not exceed six months, and that in the case of felonies the punishment shall not exceed one year. I think it is infamous that a man who is sent to a correctional institution for a misdemeanor and escapes should be imprisoned for five additional years.

Mr. SACKETT. Mr. President, the bill——

Mr. BRUCE. I make the point of order that I have objected to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. SACKETT. Mr. President, I desire to say just a word. This is a House bill, though I think a similar bill was introduced by the Senator from Nebraska. It was not introduced by me at all. There is at present no penalty for prisoners who escape. The passage of the bill would help the administration of prisons. That is the object of the bill.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2213) providing against misuse of official badges for United States marshals and their deputies was announced as next in order.

Mr. BRUCE. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under objection the bill will be passed over.

HARRY E. GOOD

The bill (S. 3233) authorizing the issuance of duplicates of certain notes to Harry E. Good, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The bill had been reported from the Committee on Finance with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to redeem in favor of Harry E. Good, of Winamac, Ind., administrator de bonis non of the estate of Ephraim N. Good, deceased, United States registered notes numbered G–711353, for $50, G–742262, G–742263, G–722406, for $100 each, G–191976 and G–76576, for $500 each, of the Victory Liberty loan 4¾ per cent convertible gold notes of 1922–23, inscribed "Ephraim N. Good," with interest at the rate of 4¾ per cent from December 15, 1922, to May 20, 1923, said notes having been stolen in the robbery of the First State Bank of Star City, Ind., after having been assigned in blank but not acknowledged before any officer as required by the regulations of the Treasury Department: Provided, That said notes shall not have been presented to the Treasury Department for payment: Provided further, That said Harry E. Good shall first file with the Treasury Department a bond in the penal sum of double the amount of the principal of the said notes and the unpaid interest which had accrued thereon when the principal became due and payable in such form and with such surety or sureties as may be acceptable to the Secretary of the Treasury, with condition to indemnify and save harmless the United States from any loss on account of the notes herein described.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of that bill?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The Senator from Indiana [Mr. WATSON] is not now present, but I will take it on myself to explain the facts. The bill involves certain notes which were stolen in a robbery in Indiana. The notes have never been presented, and the bill merely authorizes the issuance of duplicates under the usual protective conditions of furnishing bond, and so forth. It is the same in principle as dozens of bills which we have heretofore passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Harry E. Good, administrator de bonis non of the estate of Ephraim N. Good, deceased."

GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK, WYO.

The bill (S. 5543) to establish the Grand Teton National Park in the State of Wyoming, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the tract of land in the State of Wyoming particularly described by metes and bounds as follows, to wit:

Beginning at the northwest corner of township 44 north, range 115 west, of the sixth principal meridian; thence southerly along the west line of said township to the northeast corner of section 12, township 44 north, range 116 west; thence westerly to the northwest corner of the northeast quarter northeast quarter section 12; thence southerly and westerly, respectively, on quarter-quarter section lines to the southwest corner of said section 12; thence southerly to the southwest corner of the northwest quarter northwest quarter section 13; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southwest quarter northeast quarter section 13; thence southerly on the east quarter-quarter section lines of sections 13, 24, and 25, to the southwest corner of the northeast quarter northeast quarter section 25; thence westerly and southerly, respectively, on quarter-quarter section lines to the northwest corner of the southwest quarter southwest quarter section 25; thence westerly to the northwest corner of the southwest quarter southeast quarter section 26; thence southerly to the southwest corner of the southeast quarter section 26; thence westerly to the southwest corner of the southeast quarter southwest quarter section 26; thence southerly to the southwest corner of the northeast quarter southwest quarter section 35; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southwest quarter southeast quarter section 35; thence southerly to the southeast corner of the southwest quarter southeast quarter section 35, all in township 44 north, range 116 west; thence westerly to the northeast corner of the northwest quarter section 2, township 43 north, range 116 west; thence southerly on mid-section lines of sections 2, 11, and 14, to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter section 14; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the northwest quarter southeast quarter section 14; thence southerly on east quarter-quarter section lines of sections 14, 23, 26, and 35, all in township 43 north, range 116 west, to the right bank of South Fork Snake River; thence westerly along said bank to its intersection with the north line of township 42 north, range 116 west; thence westerly along said township line to the northwest corner of said township; thence southerly along the west line of said township to its intersection with the main hydrographic divide immediately south of Granite Canyon; thence southwesterly along said divide to its intersection with the main hydrographic divide formed by the crest of the Teton Mountains; thence northerly along said divide, between the headwaters of Moose Creek and Granite Canyon, Fox Creek, and Open Canyon, Dirby Creek and Death Canyon, Teton Creek and Taggart and Glacier Creeks, Leigh Creek and Leigh Canyon, Badger Creek and Moran Canyon, to a point where said divide intersects the main hydrographic divide immediately south and southeast of Webb (Moose) Canyon; thence northeasterly along the last-mentioned divide to its intersection with the projected east quarter-quarter section line of what will probably be when surveyed section 7, township 46 north, range 115 west; thence southerly along said line to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter southeast quarter section 7; thence westerly to the northwest corner of the southwest quarter southeast quarter section 7; thence southerly on projected mid-section lines of probable sections 7, 18, 19, and 30, to the southwest corner of the northeast quarter section 30; thence westerly to the southeast corner of the southwest quarter northwest quarter section 30; thence southerly to the southeast corner of the northwest quarter southwest quarter section 30; thence westerly to the southwest corner of the northwest quarter southwest quarter section 30, all of township 46 north, range 115 west; thence southerly on projected west line of said township and the west line of township 45 north, range 115 west, to the southwest corner of section 6, township 45 north, range 115 west; thence westerly on projected north line of what will probably be when surveyed, section 12, township 45 north, range 116 west, to the northeast corner of the northwest quarter northwest quarter section 12; thence southerly to the southeast corner of the southwest quarter northwest quarter section 12; thence westerly to the southeast corner of the southwest quarter northwest quarter probable section 11; thence southerly to the northeast corner of the southwest quarter southwest quarter section 11; thence westerly to the northwest corner of the southwest quarter southwest quarter section 11; thence southerly on projected west lines of probable sections 11 and 14 to the southwest corner of said section 14; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the northwest quarter northwest quarter probable section 23; thence southerly to the southeast corner of the northwest quarter northwest quarter section 23; thence easterly to the southwest corner of the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter section 23; then southerly to the southwest corner of the southeast quarter northeast quarter section 23; thence easterly to the southeast corner of the northeast quarter section 23; thence southerly on projected east lines of probable sections 23 and 26 to the northeast corner of the southeast quarter southeast quarter section 26; thence eastward to the northeast corner of the southeast quarter southeast quarter section 25, all in township 45 north, range 116 west; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southeast quarter southwest quarter section 30, township 45 north, range 115 west; thence southerly on mid-section lines of sections 30 and 31, to the south line of section 31, said township; thence easterly to place of beginning is hereby reserved and withdrawn from settlement, occupancy, or disposal under the laws of the United States, and dedicated and set apart as a public park or pleasure ground for the benefit and enjoyment of the people of the United States under the name of the Grand Teton National Park of Wyoming: Provided, That whereas it is the purpose and intent of Congress to retain said park in its original wilderness character, therefore, no new roads shall be constructed, and no hotels or permanent camps shall be authorized or permitted to be maintained on such lands without authority from Congress.

SEC. 2. That the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916, entitled "An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes," and all acts supplementary to and amendatory of said act, are made applicable to and extended over the lands hereby included in said Grand Teton National Park: Provided, That under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior all bona fide claimants or entrymen shall have the right to graze, upon the land in said park and reasonably adjacent to the lands claimed or owned by them, such number of livestock as they have been accustomed to so graze in the past, or as may be reasonably necessary to the use and utilization of their lands, and to secure timber for use on and for the improvement of their lands.

SEC. 3. That the provisions of the act of June 10, 1920, entitled "An act to create a Federal Power Commission, to provide for the improvement of navigation, the development of water power, the use of the public lands in relation thereto, and to repeal section 18 of the river and harbor appropriation act, approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes," shall not apply to or extend over the land hereby reserved and dedicated as the Grand Teton National Park.

SEC. 4. That nothing herein contained shall affect any valid existing claim, location, or entry under the land laws of the United States, whether for homestead, mineral, right of way, or any other purposes whatsoever, or shall affect the right of any such claimant, locator, or entryman to the full use and enjoyment of his land.

SEC. 5. That the appropriations heretofore and hereafter made available for the administration, protection, and maintenance of the Yellowstone National Park shall also be available for these purposes for the Grand Teton National Park of Wyoming unless said park is otherwise provided for by act of Congress.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming give an explanation of that bill?

Mr. KENDRICK. Mr. President, if I may have the attention of Senators for a few minutes, I should like to explain the purpose of this bill and what it seeks to accomplish.

The proposal to dedicate this territory as a park is not new. The discussion of such a plan and the influences bearing upon the same began as far back, perhaps, as 20 years ago; and the appeal to have this park created has been increasing with each passing year.

The territory included within the proposed park is located to the south of the Yellowstone National Park, the extreme southern boundary of which is within about 20 miles of the northern boundary of the proposed park.

When this legislation was first proposed it would have extended the boundaries of the Yellowstone Park to include all of the intervening territory, together with the outline as here provided. For many reasons this plan was found objectionable, the principal one of which was that this park should be designated not as the Yellowstone but as the Grand Teton National Park of Wyoming.

The boundary described embraces something more than 100,000 acres, representing in outline largely the Teton peaks with a fringe of surrounding foothills.

Mr. McKELLAR. Are the lands public lands?

Mr. KENDRICK. At present the territory is a part of the Teton National Forest and is almost entirely owned by the Federal Government, excepting a few small ranches located very near the border of the park. It is not intended by this legislation to impose heavy expense on the Government in the improvement of the park. The bill contains a strict stipulation that the park shall be retained in its natural state and that no concessions shall be granted and no highways or trails shall be constructed within the park except by express authority of Congress.

Wyoming has reluctantly given her consent to the plan of dedicating this part of her territory as a national park. There has been in the past and is even now a strong inclination on the part of our people at home to dedicate this as a State park; but, as I believe, the majority of our people have finally concluded to have the Congress set this territory aside as a national park because of the greater purpose it would serve to the people of the Nation.

Already thousands of people have visited and sought rest and recreation in this locality. The list has included many travelers from Europe, who described the sublime beauty of the Tetons as comparable only with the Alps of Switzerland; but one and all proclaim that the peaks of the grand Tetons provide the most profoundly impressive mountain view in the United States if not in any part of the North American continent.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator permit a question?

Mr. KENDRICK. Certainly.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is very difficult from reading the bill to ascertain just what it includes. Does it take in the Jackson Hole country?

Mr. KENDRICK. No; it does not take in the Jackson Hole country; it merely takes in the territory immediately around the foothills of the Teton peaks, including several of the beautiful lakes around the foot of the peaks.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Does it take in any part of the territory within the State of Idaho?

Mr. KENDRICK. None whatever; it does not extend on the west to the Idaho State line.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It does not go so far as the State line?

Mr. KENDRICK. It does not go that far.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Wyoming a question. As I understood him, the Senator said that there was an express provision in the bill that no roads, trails, or anything of that sort should be built until authorized by Congress. Are there any roads or trails in this territory now?

Mr. KENDRICK. Only such as may be used by people on foot and people on horseback; and it is not desired by the people who live in the immediate neighborhood that any further improvement of that kind should be made.

Mr. McKELLAR. What is to be the extent of the park?

Mr. KENDRICK. Something in excess of 100,000 acres of land.

Mr. JONES. Have the forestry people put in any trails?

Mr. KENDRICK. Just the ordinary trails for traveling over the country, through the gaps in the mountains.

Mr. JONES. Will they be expected to improve these trails for the benefit especially of tourists?

Mr. KENDRICK. So far as I know, no one will be expected to do anything along that line except the park authorities; and, as I understand the provisions of the bill, they will not be permitted even to extend the trails that are now there, but only allowed to maintain them so that people can get through the country.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator whether there is any provision in the bill which gives the Secretary of the Interior unlimited authority and discretion to condemn lands within the proposed park?

Mr. KENDRICK. There is no such authority.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I should like to say, however, in answer to the question of the Senator from Utah, that if the Senate amendment to the Interior Department appropriation bill is not adopted, that authority will exist here as well as in every other park.

Mr. KENDRICK. I desire to say to the Senator from Montana that in this particular case there will be no controversy over that matter, because there are a very limited number of people there now, and they are willing under certain conditions to dispose of their holdings if the Government requires them; but if the plan of extending concessions shall be suspended now there will be no particular reason why the Government should buy any land in this territory.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Nevertheless, the law would give them the opportunity to condemn if the Secretary saw fit to do it?

Mr. KENDRICK. I suppose that is true.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I trust, of course, that a law permitting that will never be enacted by this Congress.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, what is the purpose of having the park if there are to be no roads so that people may get in there and enjoy it?

Mr. KENDRICK. That is a very pertinent question; but I will explain that a Federal and State highway runs along right at the foot of the park at this time. There is every opportunity for these concessions on the outside of the park, and the people who live there desire that they shall be continued there, and not within the borders of the park.

Mr. CARAWAY. Yes; but I was trying to ask the Senator—there is so much noise in the Senate Chamber that we can not hear anything—what is the objection to having roads so that tourists may go all through the park and enjoy its beauty? If there are to be no roads, what is the object of having the park? That is what I want to know.

Mr. KENDRICK. I am confident that if the Senator from Arkansas has an opportunity, as I hope he will at some time, to see this great mountain range, he would understand that highways of any kind are impossible. No development of that kind can be had save and excepting trails.

Mr. CARAWAY. I see.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I think I might say, in answer to the Senator from Arkansas, that I think that is one of the most commendable features of this bill——

Mr. KENDRICK. Yes; we consider it so.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Not to construct great automobile roads over which people would pass at the rate of 50 or 60 miles an hour. If they want to go to see this park, they can go on foot or on horseback along the trails; and the park ought to be left in its native state. We feel some doubt as to whether the construction of roads in the Glacier National Park was not a serious error.

Mr. KENDRICK. I am glad to inform the Senator from Montana that was one of the conditions named by our people who live in the vicinity.

During the latter part of last summer a subcommittee of the Public Lands Committee of the Senate visited this section of the country and had an opportunity to visualize and to see for themselves the perfectly wonderful opportunities of this place as a recreation ground, and I believe they were unanimously in favor of it; and it was the privilege of the Senate committee at that time to render real assistance in inducing our people for the first time to agree to having this land dedicated.

If in the wisdom of the Congress this bill shall receive favorable consideration, it will prove to be one more great and generous contribution which Wyoming makes to our national playgrounds.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, if my colleague will permit me, I understand that this matter has been thoroughly examined by the National Parks Association and by all connected with it, and that they stand behind it very strongly. I hope the bill may pass.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE, SIOUX CITY, IOWA

The bill (S. 5325) authorizing the Iowa-Nebraska Amortized Free Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BROOKHART. Mr. President, a bill substantially identical with this one has passed the House and is on the calendar here as Order of Business No. 1677, House bill 14460. I ask that that bill be substituted for Senate bill 5325.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question? The House bill has one or two additional provisions, has it not, in line with the recent conclusion of the House committee as to a little further protection?

Mr. BROOKHART. A little further protection toward free bridges; yes.

Mr. JONES. I think those provisions are good; and I just wanted to be sure that the bill as passed contains them.

Mr. BROOKHART. They are in this bill. I am informed by the House committee that those provisions will be the model for them hereafter.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the chairman of the committee if there is any provision in these bills by which there can be some regulation of the tolls to be charged?

Mr. BROOKHART. If I may answer the question, there are very drastic provisions of that kind in this bill. The expenses of operation are to be supervised by the mayors of the cities on the opposite sides of the river. This is quite a step in advance toward reducing the tolls and amortizing the cost to make the bridge free.

Mr. BLEASE. A man in politics—it does not make any difference to me who he is—has not any business fixing the toll rates on one of these bridges. We have had some experience along that line in South Carolina.

Mr. BROOKHART. The general control of the rates is under the Secretary of War.

Mr. JONES. Yes; the Secretary of War, under all of these bridge bills, has control of the reasonableness of the tolls.

Mr. BLEASE. As I said with regard to a bill here the other day, we have had some experience in my own State along this line. The builders of these bridges charge any toll they please, and after they get their franchise there is not any power that can make them reduce these exorbitant rates. It is all right, possibly, when the bridge is first built for the builders to charge toll until they can get their money back; but after they get their money back we should not allow the public to be continually robbed by charging the outrageous rates that some of these bridge people charge. That is why I asked the Senator from Washington the question.

Mr. BROOKHART. I am in sympathy with the Senator's ideas on that subject, and I have already introduced two bills to make all these bridges free at the earliest possible date, part of them by condemnation. There are new provisions in this bill looking more strongly toward controlling the expenses so that the amortization will occur earlier than heretofore, so this bill is a step in advance in line with the suggestion of the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. ODDIE. Mr. President, if I may make a very short comment, there is before the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate a resolution providing for an investigation of toll bridges generally throughout the country. There is a very insistent demand from road organizations generally that this whole question be thoroughly investigated.

Mr. JONES. I desire to say, with reference to that, that there has been no request whatever for such an investigation coming to the Commerce Committee, and no complaints have come to it with reference to bridges that have been constructed under authority of Congress.

Mr. ODDIE. Mr. President, there is a very strong feeling on the subject throughout the country; and the various road organizations all over the United States have requested that this matter be investigated, and, in my opinion, it should be investigated.

Mr. JONES. I desire to say with reference to that resolution that when it goes to a committee on its merits it should go to the Commerce Committee. It may be that the tolls charged on bridges under State authority are too high; but there is no necessity whatever for an investigation of the construction of bridges under legislation that Congress has enacted.

Mr. BROOKHART. That is another proposition; but I shall present to the committee myself some facts supporting the resolution of the Senator from Nevada for the investigation, and those facts were given me by the Department of Agriculture.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the House bill will be substituted for the Senate bill.

The bill (H. R. 14460) authorizing the Iowa-Nebraska Amortized Free Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 5325 will be indefinitely postponed.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE, RAMSEY AND HENNEPIN COUNTIES, MINN.

The bill (S. 5165) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near St. Paul and Minneapolis, in Ramsey and Hennepin Counties, Minn., was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after "1925," to strike out "and," and in the same line, after "1926," to insert "and March 10, 1928," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of the bridge authorized by act of Congress approved February 16, 1924, and amended by acts approved February 7, 1925, March 1, 1926, and March 10, 1928, to be built by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, its successors and assigns, across the Mississippi River, within or near the city limits of St. Paul, Ramsey County, and Minneapolis, Hennepin County, Minn., are hereby extended one and three years, respectively, from February 16, 1929.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRENCH BROAD RIVER BRIDGE, COCKE COUNTY, TENN.

The bill (S. 5301) granting the consent of Congress to the Highway Department of the State of Tennessee to construct a bridge across the French Broad River on Tennessee Highway No. 9 in Cocke County, Tenn., was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the word "River," to insert "near Bridgeport"; and, on page 2, line 2, after the figures "1906," to strike out "and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Highway Department of the State of Tennessee to construct, maintain, and operate a free bridge and the approaches thereto across the French Broad River, near Bridgeport, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, on Tennessee Highway No. 9 in Cocke County, in the State of Tennessee, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OHIO RIVER BRIDGE, KENTUCKY AND INDIANA

The bill (S. 5337) to extend the time for constructing a bridge across the Ohio River, approximately midway between the city of Owensboro, Ky., and Rockport, Ind., was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the word "Indiana," to insert "by Edward T. Franks"; in line 9, after the word "hereby," to insert "further"; and in line 10, after the word "from," to strike out "the date of approval hereof" and insert "February 25, 1929," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Ohio River, approximately midway between the city of Owensboro, Ky., and Rockport, Ind., by Edward T. Franks, authorized by an act of Congress approved June 12, 1926, and extended by the acts of Congress approved February 25, 1927, and February 25, 1928, are hereby further extended one and three years, respectively, from February 25, 1929.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is expressly reserved.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. SACKETT. Now I ask that that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passesd over.

BRIDGE BILLS

The following bridge bills were reached upon the calendar, were considered as in Committee of the Whole, reported to the Senate without amendment, and passed:

The bill (S. 5066) extending the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the St. Francis River at or near St. Francis, Ark.;

The bill (S. 5194) authorizing Richard H. Klein, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Susquehanna River at or near the borough of Liverpool, Perry County, Pa.;

The bill (S. 5377) granting the consent of Congress to the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Ry. Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Monongahela River;

The bill (S. 5378) authorizing the Fayette City Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Monongahela River at or near Fayette City, Fayette County, Pa.; and

The bill (H. R. 13502) authorizing the State of Minnesota and the State of Wisconsin to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the St. Croix River at or near Stillwater, Minn.

OHIO RIVER BRIDGE, ASHLAND, KY.

The bill (H. R. 13976) authorizing the International Business Co. (Inc.), its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near Ashland, Ky., was announced as next in order.

Mr. DALE. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be transferred from its place under Rule VIII and be placed under Rule IX.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request is granted.

BRIDGE BILLS

The following bridge bills were reached upon the calendar, were considered as in Committee of the Whole, reported to the Senate without amendment, read the third time, and passed:

The bill (H. R. 14146) granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Monongahela River, in the city of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, Pa.;

The bill (H. R. 14164) granting the consent of Congress to the city of Knoxville, Tenn., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Henley Street in Knoxville, Knox County, Tenn.;

The bill (H. R. 14451) to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near McKees Rocks Borough, in the county of Allegheny, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania";

The bill (H. R. 14469) granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct a bridge across the Youghiogheny River between the borough of Versailles and the village of Boston, in the township of Elizabeth, Allegheny County, Pa.;

The bill (H. R. 14481) granting the consent of Congress to the Chicago South Shore & South Bend Railroad to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Grand Calumet River at East Chicago, Ind.;

The bill (H. R. 14919) granting the consent of Congress to the commissioners of Mahoning County, Ohio, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Mahoning River at or near Cedar Street, Youngstown, Mahoning County, Ohio;

The bill (H. R. 15072) to extend the times for commencing and completing the reconstruction of the bridge across the Grand Calumet River at Burnham Avenue, in Cook County, Ill.;

The bill (H. R. 15084) granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near Reedsdale Street, in the city of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, Pa.;

The bill (H. R. 15269) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Red River at or near Coushatta, La.; and

The bill (H. R. 15470) granting the consent of Congress to the Highway Department of the State of Tennessee to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Cumberland River in the vicinity of Harts Ferry, Trousdale County, Tenn.

RETIREMENT OF JUDGES

The bill (S. 2206) to amend section 260 of the Judicial Code, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BRUCE. Let that go over.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I hope no objection will be urged to this bill. I do not think there is any substantial objection to be made to it. I will state briefly the nature of the measure.

The bill carries forward the provision that a judge may resign at the age of 70, having served 10 years, and thereafter shall be paid the salary he was receiving as judge. It then provides likewise that the judge, instead of resigning, may retire, in which case he may be called upon by the chief justice or the senior judge of the circuit to undertake certain duties.

Mr. BRUCE. I withdraw my objection.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, let me inquire of the Senator from Montana how long a judge must serve under existing law in order to be subject to retirement on full pay?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Ten years, and must have arrived at the age of 70.

Mr. BRATTON. The age and the period of service are the same in the law and in the bill now before us?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Exactly.

Mr. BRATTON. I have no objection.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. There are two purposes behind the bill; first, to give a judge arriving at the age of 70, and not able to do all the work of his court, an opportunity to retire, and then thereafter to do such work as he can do, assigned to him by the chief justice or senior judge of the circuit. In addition to that, the bill provides that whenever a judge arrives at the age of 70, has served 10 years, and is mentally or physically incapacitated to do the work of his office, the President may appoint another judge to the district or circuit bench, and upon the death or resignation of the incapacitated judge no successor shall be appointed.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I want to ask whether there is any provision for compulsory retirement at the age of 70?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; only in this sense: That another judge is appointed. There is no attempt to provide for compulsory retirement.

Mr. KING. Suppose a judge at the age of 70 possesses physical and mental powers which enable him to carry on as he formerly had done. Automatically is another judge appointed?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No. The discretion is given to the President to appoint or not to appoint.

Mr. PHIPPS and Mr. SACKETT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield first to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. PHIPPS. Does the 10-year service necessarily have to be continuous service?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I think that has been changed, so that it need not be continuous.

Mr. SACKETT. May I ask the Senator whether this affects the law as to compulsory retirement, allowing a judge to be retired after he is 70 and has served 10 years?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No. The opinion of the committee is that there is no power to compel retirement, but the situation is relieved by giving to the President power to appoint another judge in the case of a disabled judge.

Mr. SACKETT. But it is only in case of actual disablement?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Yes; whenever the President finds that either by reason of physical or mental disability the judge can not discharge the duties of his office. I might say that it has been disclosed to us, for instance, that there have been cases where judges have been bedridden for years.

Mr. SACKETT. I understand that.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. And have still held on to their offices, will not resign, and are totally unable to do any work at all, and their work is suspended.

Mr. SACKETT. There must be some real reason, however, before the President could act?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. He must find that the judge is either mentally or physically incapacitated to do the work.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator if he will not elaborate that a little further. Must the President so find? What I had in mind was this: The Senator will recall that a number of years ago—and I do not wish to be personal—it was thought by an Executive that certain judges did not decide as he thought they should decide, and there were severe animadversions by that Executive against some one or more judges. I was wondering whether the President of the United States would have the discretion and the power to relieve a judge when he was 70 years of age because he might think that he was not qualified, when his disqualification might result only from a difference of opinion with the President.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I will read the language of the bill to the Senator. It is as follows:

> In the event any circuit judge, or district judge, having so held a commission or commissions at least 10 years continuously or otherwise, and having attained the age of 70 years as aforesaid, shall nevertheless remain in office and not resign or retire as aforesaid, the President, if he finds any such judge is unable to discharge efficiently all the duties of his office by reason of mental or physical disability of permanent character, may, when necessity for the efficient dispatch of business, appoint—

And so on.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I confess that I am very reluctant to give the President that power. I think it ought to be with Congress.

Mr. PHIPPS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield.

Mr. PHIPPS. The Senator will note that the appointment by the President is to be by and with the advice of the Senate, that the assent of the Senate is requisite.

Mr. KING. Does the Senator think that after a person is retired he ought to receive as much in the way of compensation as when he was in service?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That is a settled policy of 20 years' standing.

Mr. KING. Yes; I knew that.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I was about to ask the Senator from Montana a question. Suppose a judge is in good condition, physically and mentally, when he is 70 years old, and does not want to retire, but wants to continue to perform the duties of his office. Under the bill, as I understand it, the President, if he wanted to do so, could appoint another man, and there would be two judges in the office instead of one, and if that were multiplied throughout the Federal districts of the United States we would have practically twice as many judges as we now have.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; that would not be the case. Of course, there are relatively few judges over 70 years of age, although there are quite a good many. But we have endeavored to safeguard that by the provisions expressed here that the President must find, first, that the judge is either mentally or physically incapacitated; second, that his disability is permanent in character; third, that the efficient discharge of the business of the office requires that another judge be appointed. Of course, the President of the United States may possibly abuse his power, and may, out of mere willfulness, appoint a judge where there is already a man on the bench over 70 years of age who is entirely competent to discharge the duties of the office.

Mr. HEFLIN. But there is a safeguard even then; the Senate would have to confirm him.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Exactly; and so, in a way, the Senate would pass upon the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 260 of the Judicial Code as amended by section 6 of the act of February 25, 1919, chapter 29, be, and the same hereby is, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 260. When any judge of any court of the United States, appointed to hold his office during good behavior, resigns his office after having held a commission or commissions as judge of any such court or courts at least 10 years, continuously or otherwise, and having attained the age of 70 years, he shall, during the residue of his natural life, receive the salary which is payable at the time of his resignation for the office that he held at the time of his resignation. But, instead of resigning, any judge other than a justice of the Supreme Court, who is qualified to resign under the foregoing provisions, may retire, upon the salary of which he is then in receipt, from regular active service on the bench, and the President shall thereupon be authorized to appoint a successor; but a judge so retiring may nevertheless be called upon by the senior circuit judge of that circuit and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties in such circuit as such retired judge may be willing to undertake, or he may be called upon by the Chief Justice and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties in any other circuit as such retired judge may be willing to undertake, or he may be called upon either by the presiding judge or senior judge of any other such court and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties in such court as such retired judge may be willing to undertake.

"In the event of any circuit judge or district judge, having so held a commission or commissions at least 10 years continuously or otherwise, and having attained the age of 70 years as aforesaid, shall nevertheless remain in office, and not resign or retire as aforesaid, the President, if he finds any such judge is unable to discharge efficiently all the duties of his office by reason of mental or physical disability of permanent character, may, when necessary for the efficient dispatch of business, appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, an additional circuit judge of the circuit or district judge of the district to which such disabled judge belongs. And the judge so retiring voluntarily, or whose mental or physical condition caused the President to appoint an additional judge, shall be held and treated as if junior in commission to the remaining judges of said court, who shall, in the order of the seniority of their respective commissions, exercise such powers and perform such duties as by law may be incident to seniority. In districts where there may be more than one district judge, if the judges or a majority of them can not agree upon the appointment of officials of the court, to be appointed by such judges, then the senior judge shall have the power to make such appointments.

"Upon the death, resignation, or retirement of any circuit or district judge, so entitled to resign, following the appointment of any additional judge as provided in this section, the vacancy caused by such death, resignation, or retirement of the said judge so entitled to resign shall not be filled."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXTENSION OF HATCH ACT AND SMITH-LEVER ACT TO ALASKA

The bill (H. R. 13882) to extend the benefits of the Hatch Act and the Smith-Lever Act to the Territory of Alaska was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry with an amendment, on page 1, line 10, to strike out the word "and" before the word "extension," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following acts, to wit, an act entitled "An act to establish agricultural experiment stations in connection with the colleges established in the several States under the provisions of an act approved July 2, 1862, and of the acts supplementary thereto," approved March 2, 1887, as amended and supplemented, and known as the Hatch Act; and an act entitled "An act to provide for cooperative extension work between the agricultural colleges in the United States receiving the benefits of an act of Congress approved July 2, 1862, and of acts supplementary thereto, and the United States Department of Agriculture," approved May 8, 1914, and known as the Smith-Lever Act, be, and the same are hereby, extended to the Territory of Alaska: Provided, That no appropriations shall be made under this act until annually estimated as to funds and amounts by the Secretary of Agriculture; the estimates to be based upon his determination of the ability of the Territory of Alaska to make effective use of the funds.

With the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture, agricultural experiment substations, to the number of not more than two, may be maintained under the provisions of the Hatch Act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

TO FACILITATE WORK OF THE AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

The bill (S. 3100) to facilitate and simplify the work of the Department of Agriculture in certain cases was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to reimburse employees and other owners of horses, vehicles, and other equipment lost, damaged, or destroyed while in the custody of such employee or the Department of Agriculture, under requirement, authorization, contract, or loan, for necessary fire fighting, trail, or other official business, such reimbursement to be made from any available funds in the appropriation to which the hire of such equipment would be properly chargeable.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of Agriculture may require field employees of the Department of Agriculture to furnish horses, motor, and other vehicles, and miscellaneous equipment necessary for the performance of their official work; and he may provide, at Government expense, forage, care, and housing for animals, and housing or storage for vehicles and other equipment so required to be furnished.

SEC. 3. That hereafter the Secretary of Agriculture may, under such regulations as he may prescribe, authorize the hire, rental, or purchase of property from employees of the department whenever the public interest will be promoted thereby: Provided, That the aggregate amount to be expended under the authority of this section for the purchase of property from employees of the department shall not exceed $3,000 in any one year.

SEC. 4. The expenditures under sections 1 and 2 of this act shall be subject to the limitations of existing law.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Oregon, the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, whether the committee fully considered this bill. It does seem to me that there are not sufficient restrictions imposed for the protection of the Government.

Mr. McNARY. The bill would not initiate any new practice. Ever since the formation of the Department of Agriculture, until a recent ruling by the Comptroller General, reimbursement has been made for all horses and vehicles lost in carrying out the activities of the department. Recently the Comptroller General, in an opinion, held that he did not think the present law justified that practice. This is to remedy a situation which has developed since the Comptroller General made his decision.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE A. HORMEL & CO.

The bill (S. 5058) for the relief of George A. Hormel & Co. was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. OVERMAN. Let that bill be read, Mr. President.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to George A. Hormel & Co., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $44 in full satisfaction of said company's claim for excess amount paid by it to the Department of Agriculture for transcript of testimony in Docket No. 269, Secretary of Agriculture against George A. Hormel & Co. and Rath Packing Co.

Mr. BRUCE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Oregon why that money should be refunded?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, stenographers made a transcript of some testimony and a copy was furnished these claimants. The Department of Agriculture assessed the cost at $88 when in fact it was only $44, and this is to reimburse the purchasers for the overpayment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 5360) to regulate the height, exterior design, and construction of private and semipublic buildings in certain areas of the National Capital, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BLEASE. Let that go over.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will not the Senator withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. BLEASE. I would like to ask the Senator a question. Does not this bill have a provision which dictates to a man how he shall build or have constructed his own private home? If there is, I certainly shall object.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I will not take up the time of the Senate to explain the bill at this moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

The bill (H. R. 8748) for the relief of James W. Bass, collector of internal revenue, Austin, Tex., was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 924) for the relief of Joe D. Donisi was announced as next in order.

Mr. BRUCE. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

C. J. COLVILLE

The bill (S. 4811) for the relief of C. J. Colville was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, may I not take a moment to explain that bill? It is a bill that was recommended by Mr. McCarl. Under a chapter of the law enacted last year by Congress, the comptroller recommended to Congress that this bill be passed. The circumstances were something like these:

The claimant made a purchase of steel from the Government. It was to be of "E" temper. It was ascertained that the steel did not come up to the representations, and this bill is to refund this man the cash payment he made on the steel. He did not take the steel at all, and yet he had already made a cash payment of something over $4,000. Mr. McCarl held that he had no legal right to pay the claim, but he sent the bill to Congress and recommended its passage. The bill was prepared in his office, and the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HOWELL], chairman of the committee, introduced it.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, is it conceded that the representations made by the Government when it sold the steel were untrue?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Oh, yes; that is conceded. There is no question about that.

Mr. KING. I was wondering if the proposed purchaser did not just go and examine the property and agree to buy it, and make payment, and then later conclude that he did not want it, and if he did not seek to excuse himself for failing to carry out his contract.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in the Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to settle in an amount not exceeding $4,867.91, the claim of C. J. Colville arising out of an agreement to purchase in 1920 certain steel, and which sale was not consummated because of a misunderstanding as to the quality of the steel. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum not to exceed $4,867.91 for the full and final payment and discharge of any and all claims arising out of the transaction.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (S. 1093) to prevent the sale of cotton and grain in future markets.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate continue its consideration of the Army appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 15712) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The two remaining committee amendments are on page 26 and page 34.

GREAT LAKES-ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY PROJECT

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I take the liberty allowed in debate—and not a very wide liberty either, because the Army appropriation bill deals with improvements for the purpose of navigation—to address some remarks to the Senate concerning the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway project.

There appeared in the Atlantic Monthly of November, 1928, an article by B. K. Sandwell, entitled "From Chicago to the Sea," dealing with views said to be entertained in Canada touching the project of improving the St. Lawrence River by the joint action of the Dominion and the United States so as to afford the commerce of the great interior of the continent on both sides of the international boundary line an uninterrupted outlet to the sea, in effect to move the Atlantic seaboard a thousand miles inland and make Duluth and Fort William ocean ports.

In the main the article exhibits a spirit of hostility toward the enterprise, or, at least, a disposition to provide the negotiators representing the country of the author in any exchanges looking to the necessary treaty with a line of talk that might enable them to drive a better bargain than they would otherwise be able to make.

The article in question epitomizes the arguments of a series from the pen of Mr. Sandwell appearing in the Montreal Times that provoked some caustic comment from our neighbors, to which he replied in kind.

It is not my purpose to attempt a general reply to the article referred to, but there ought not to pass unnoticed the contention made in it that because of the peculiar structure of our governmental system no nation may safely enter into a treaty with the United States. I refer to that part in which is advanced the view that as under our Constitution the Federal Government is one of limited and delegated powers, all others being reserved to the States, a treaty dealing with questions otherwise within the exclusive jurisdiction of the States is beyond the power of the National Government or is inoperative for want of power in it to coerce observance by any State.

One of the Times articles, after elaborating this view, concludes:

> In a word, the United States is a Government with which one makes treaties at one's own risk.

Making application to the principle he expounds, he asserts that the United States is authorized under the commerce clause of the Constitution to improve or join in improving the St. Lawrence for navigation, but that it is without power to install works for the generating of electrical energy—economically an essential feature of the enterprise—that power belonging to the State of New York.

It is to be gathered that, in the opinion of the writer, a treaty providing for the improvement of the river to facilitate or render possible its navigation and at the same time and in connection therewith the utilization of its power possibilities, though binding upon Canada, would be nugatory, or at least inoperative, so far as it purported to obligate the United States.

The requirement of the Constitution that treaties must be ratified by the Senate is the subject of animadversion, likewise, in the opinion of the writer of the articles, rendering it more or less dangerous to negotiate with our Government, the idea being conveyed that in the case of all other governments a treaty once signed by its plenipotentiaries, they are bound, but that the United States, under the same circumstances, is not, and that consequently some sort of injustice is wrought or an advantage is gained. The world ought to know by this time, and of course does know, that a treaty with the United States has no force until ratified. No deception is practiced, and no explanation is vouchsafed as to how it is possible to overreach a signatory with which the United States deals consequent upon that requirement of its Constitution.

It is a common thing in private business transactions for an agent to enter into an agreement subject to ratification by his principal. It is not at all exceptional in our times for treaties to be entered into subject to ratification by the parliaments of the countries involved, and it is not unknown that confirmation has not followed. In most countries operating under a parliamentary system such a result is not likely because the government negotiating the treaty has a majority in the diet. It may, however, be unable to command its members in behalf of the treaty or, pending consideration, it may fall and ratification then be defeated. That is just what happened in Great Britain with respect to the Geneva protocol of 1924 for the outlawry of war. It was signed by the proper representatives of the Kingdom under directions from the Ramsay McDonald government, but his ministry fell and the treaty was rejected.

Before proceeding to the subject to which these observations are particularly addressed, I am impelled to notice another contention insisted upon and urged with endless reiteration in the Times articles, namely that, though the treaty of Washington grants to the United States the full right to the navigation of the St. Lawrence "ascending and descending," it gives no right to the United States to pass through any canals adjacent to and fed by the river making its navigation economically feasible. This claim has likewise been disputed by counsel of the Dominion, as eminent as any at its bar, who assert, upon the authority of English decisions, that not only does it give the United States the right upon the same terms as those imposed upon Canadian citizens to use the canals constructed by their government, but probably gives the right to enter upon Canadian soil to make whatever improvements may be necessary to render useful and valuable the easement to navigate the river.

To enforce the argument they point to the fact that without protest on the part of Canada, and indeed with her free acquiescence, the United States spent on her side of the waters leading in and out of Lake St. Clair many millions of dollars to improve the channel used indifferentiy by the ships of both nations pursuant to a treaty making those waters thus open to the ships of both.

Some of the Sandwell articles are replete with intimations that Canada has not fared well if, indeed, she has not been overreached in treaties into which she has entered with the United States, particularly because she has not yet succeeded in securing protection against the lowering of the lake levels by the withdrawal of water through canals existent or contemplated in the State of Illinois. No mention is made in this connection of the grant to her of the free navigation of Lake Michigan, perhaps not less important to Canada than the right accorded to us of equal rights of passage through the Welland Canal. It is not without significance in this connection that of the five parallel locks at the Sault Ste. Marie, used indifferently on the same terms by Canadian and American vessels, four were constructed by the United States on our soil and one by Canada on hers.

In view of what he considers her unfortunate experience in dealing with the United States, Canada is strongly admonished to use to the limit, as trading stock, what he considers her undoubted right to exclude United States ships from side canals Canada may construct to improve the navigation of the St. Lawrence. He would be content, however, with an agreement granting her the right of passage through any canal connecting Lake Michigan with the Mississippi River, a right this country would, judging from the policy it has pursued in the past, not think of withholding from its neighbor.

To recur to the contention that Canada proceeds blindly in entering into a treaty with the United States for the joint improvement of the St. Lawrence for navigation and incidentally for power development, and faces the possibility or probability that the Supreme Court may hold or that our Government may take the position to escape the plain obligations which it assumes, that it had no authority to enter into the treaty, the subject matter, at least with respect to power development, being within the exclusive jurisdiction of the State of New York.

It is idle to suggest that a self-respecting government, having entered into the treaty, with the concurrence of the President and the Senate by a two-thirds vote, would then seek to evade its obligations, unless under the compulsory ruling of the Supreme Court, by any such puerile claim. If Canada believes the Government of the United States capable of any such baseness, she is wise in declining to enter into the treaty proposed or any other treaty.

What are the probabilities that such a view as that advanced as tenable would ever be adopted by the Supreme Court? What ground has Mr. Sandwell for suggesting such a contingency? Any decision, any comment, even, by any court of the Union, any opinion by any lawyer of such eminence as to warrant attention to what he says on so important a question of constitutional law? Has the United States ever resorted to any such discreditable means of escaping its treaty obligations or been driven to them by the compulsive authority of a decision of the court of last resort?

The fears he entertains and attempts to excite are founded upon a letter by an assistant attorney general of the State of New York, who, whatever may be his ability or merits, is wholly unknown at the American bar, speaking nationally.

It would not have been difficult for the author of the articles giving rise to these observations to satisfy himself that the Supreme Court of the United States early in its history repudiated the idea that the National Government is powerless to enter into a treaty dealing with a subject which otherwise is within the exclusive jurisdiction of the States, and that it has repeatedly since adjudicated that it may, its latest pronouncement applying the doctrine established by it more than a century ago, having been made within the past month.

Nothing can be clearer than that under the American system whether an alien may acquire or hold real estate is determined by each State for itself and that the Constitution gives the Federal Government no authority to deal with the subject except as it is conveyed by the treaty-making power. That it is so conferred was held by the Supreme Court in the case of Fairfax's Devisee against Hunter's Lessee, decided in 1813. The case involved the ninth article of the treaty with Great Britain of 1794, as follows:

> It is agreed that British subjects who now hold lands in the territories of the United States and American citizens who now hold lands in the dominions of His Majesty shall continue to hold them according to the nature and tenure of their respective estates and titles therein; and may grant, sell, or devise the same to whom they please in like manner as if they were natives, and that neither they nor their heirs or assigns shall, so far as respects the said lands and the legal remedies incident thereto, be considered as aliens.

The decision was to the effect that Englishmen, though they had been enemies, were entitled to hold lands in Virginia and to dispose of them regardless of what its laws might provide, and judgment for possession was awarded accordingly. The same result was arrived at in Chirac v. Chirac, decided in 1817, a case involving the treaty of 1778 with France which having provided that French citizens or subjects—

> May, by testament, donation, or otherwise, dispose of their goods, movable and immovable, in favor of such persons as to them shall seem good; and their heirs, subjects of the said United States, whether residing in France or elsewhere, may succeed them ab intestat, without being obliged to obtain letters of naturalization—

Continued—

> The subjects of the Most Christian King shall enjoy, on their part, in all the dominions of the said States, an entire and perfect reciprocity relative to the stipulations contained in the present article. (2 Wheat. 270–271.)

A statute of Maryland, the effect of which would have been to limit the duration of estates held by Frenchmen to the period of their lives was, by virtue of the treaty, held inoperative and void. A like provision in another treaty with France was similarly made effective in Geofroy v. Riggs, decided in 1890, and one of a similar nature in a treaty with Switzerland in Hauenstein v. Lynham, decided in 1879. A standard work on treaties, after making reference to some of the leading cases, says:

> It is not now an open question that the removal of alien disability to inherit and dispose of real property is a proper subject of treaty regulation and within the treaty-making power, and that treaty stipulations to this effect override any inconsistent State legislation. This principle has been asserted not less clearly by the State than by the Federal courts (Crandall, 250)— a statement it supports by reference to innumerable decisions.

On November 18 last the Supreme Court handed down its opinion of Jordan v. Tashiro, holding that by reason of a treaty between the United States and Japan a corporation organized and controlled by its citizens could not be denied by the laws of California the right to acquire and hold land on which to construct and operate a hospital. The basic principle of the efficacy of the treaty as against a State statute was treated by the court as so thoroughly established by its decisions that little or nothing was said on that feature of the controversy, the discussion turning on whether the particular use was authorized by the treaty and whether the privilege accorded by it could be claimed by a corporation.

That the power of the Federal Government to enter into binding treaties is by no means limited to such subjects as, in the absence of them, fall within the grants of power to the Federal Government is forcibly illustrated and expounded in the legislation concerning migratory birds.

Congress passed an act for the protection of such, authorizing the Secretary of Agriculture to proclaim closed seasons and to prescribe regulations concerning the taking of such game, violations of which were made punishable. This act was held unconstitutional on the ground that the subject matter was without the domain of congressional action, the power to deal with it being reserved to the States respectively. Thereupon a treaty was made with Canada under which the Governments of both countries agreed to cooperate for the protection of birds migrating from one to the other and to enact the necessary legislation to that end. Our northern neighbor was, in that case, apparently not deterred by any apprehension that the treaty would be ineffective, that Federal legislation would be held nugatory, and that the birds which her citizens would be prohibited by her laws from taking would be slaughtered when they crossed the line. Her confidence was not misplaced. The appropriate legislation was enacted by Congress and upheld by the Supreme Court in Missouri v. Holland, decided in 1920. The argument advanced in that case was identical with that offered in the Sandwell articles to sustain the thesis that Canada agrees at her peril with the United States to cooperate in the improvement of the St. Lawrence to facilitate its navigability and incidentally to develop its power possibilities. It was pointed out in the opinion in the case last referred to that, as the States are forbidden to enter into treaties with foreign powers, the situation could not possibly be met except through the action of the Federal Government, in which is reposed exclusively the treaty-making power; that regardless of the limitations to which that power is subject, it must embrace the preservation of a food supply, and that the treaty being valid, Congress has undoubted power to make it effective by virtue of the concluding clause of section 8 of Article I of the Constitution, as follows:

> To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or officer thereof.

The President and the Senate being empowered to make treaties, the Congress is authorized to make all laws "necessary and proper for carrying into execution" any treaties so made.

More reliable evidence is at hand concerning the attitude of the State of New York touching the constitutional question presented in the Sandwell articles than the opinion casually expressed by an assistant attorney general of that Commonwealth. The Congress in 1920 passed what is known as the water power act, by which was created the Federal Power Commission, consisting of the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Secretary of Agriculture, which commission is authorized to grant permits for the construction of dams across navigable rivers for the generation of power. That act was the culmination of a protracted legislative struggle in the course of which, in its earlier stages, much was said to the effect that the Federal Government was not authorized under the Constitution to deal with the subject of power development. The contention, however, faded away as the discussion proceeded, in the face of the argument that as Congress had, in the legitimate exercise of its undoubted authority to preserve the navigability of interstate streams, or those open to foreign commerce, made it a penal offense on the part of anyone to erect any obstruction other than docks and like structures in a navigable stream without the consent of Congress, permit to construct a dam within such must be sought from it, and that Congress in giving its consent may attach just such conditions as it may choose. It therefore holds the key to the situation, and anyone proposing to erect a dam within a navigable stream for the development of power or for any other purpose must comply with the conditions prescribed by Congress.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Montana yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SHIPSTEAD in the chair). Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. Does the Senator from Montana contend that without the consent of Congress the State of New York could not proceed with any water-power development in the St. Lawrence River, a development which would have no relationship whatever to the ultimate use of the river for navigation purposes?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Undoubtedly. The law expressly provides that to put any obstruction in a navigable stream is a crime; so that if anybody by virtue of any authority granted by the State of New York should endeavor to put any obstruction of any character in the St. Lawrence River he would fall under the condemnation of that statute.

Mr. COPELAND. What, in the opinion of the Senator, would be the necessary procedure?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The necessary procedure would be for the Government of the United States and the Government of Canada to agree upon the construction, and then the construction could go forward as Congress might direct.

Mr. COPELAND. It may readily happen, and will happen, that the Government of Canada will not care to join in the development of the St. Lawrence either for navigation or for the development of water power.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Quite so.

Mr. COPELAND. In that case, in the opinion of the Senator, is the State of New York estopped from any action?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. It is not estopped; but the State of New York can not negotiate with Canada; that is forbidden by the Constitution.

Mr. COPELAND. Let us grant that. Is there no power that the Congress of the United States itself has?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I dare say that the Congress of the United States could lawfully authorize the construction of obstructions such as dams on its side of the middle of the river, but I presume probably that Canada would seriously object to any structures of that character without her consent, as we would if she should attempt to put obstructions upon the other side of the river, because each country by treaty is entitled to the free use of the river and the entire width of the river for the purposes of navigation.

Mr. COPELAND. Let me follow the idea out a little further, if it does not interfere with the Senator's thought.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Not at all. I have offered what I think would be the complete solution of whatever difficulty might ensue with respect to the rights of the State of New York.

Mr. COPELAND. Perhaps, then, I had better wait.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; I will be very glad to discuss the question with the Senator.

Mr. COPELAND. Suppose the State of New York desired to go forward with water-power development on the St. Lawrence—and of course, as the Senator knows, that is a very live subject in that State—I should like to ask if we have delegated to the Federal Power Commission the right to deal with a question of that sort?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I do not think that the Federal power act extends to the case of streams forming a boundary line between this country and a foreign country.

Mr. COPELAND. Then, if the Senator is right about that——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. However that may be, even though we have delegated it, I am perfectly satisfied that nothing can be done at all until we treat with Canada with respect to it.

Mr. COPELAND. The matter the Senator is discussing is of very vital importance to the State of New York.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I dare say that no other State is so deeply interested in it, perhaps.

Mr. COPELAND. My State has a frontage on the St. Lawrence River between Lake Ontario, at its confluence with the St. Lawrence to Cornwall, which is the limit of our boundary, a distance of 66 miles. That section of the St. Lawrence represents tremendous power possibilities.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. It has possibilities, I am told, of two and a quarter million horsepower.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; it has tremendous possibilities, greater even than those of Niagara Falls itself. The development of this section is a very serious matter to us as the Senator realizes, but—and I speak now for myself and for nobody else—I am convinced that, so far as Canada is concerned, she has other plans. She can run a canal from Montreal by the Ottawa River across to Lake Nipissing to the Georgian Bay, and then into Lake Huron, which is hundreds of miles shorter.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Let me say to the Senator from New York that that project has been disapproved by the two joint international commissions that have considered the subject. The international joint commission, appointed under the treaty of 1909, and authorized by joint action of the Congress and the Dominion Parliament in 1919, that considered this matter and also the later commission appointed in 1923 have both disapproved of that project.

Mr. COPELAND. I am well aware of that, but even though commissions disagree to things the people still continue to think of them.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Oh, yes.

Mr. COPELAND. And when they look at the map, as I am looking at the map now, they realize what tremendous possibilities are involved for the good of Montreal if there could be this shorter route across Canadian territory to the Great Lakes. But, regardless of whether commissions disagree or whether Canada is not willing to make the investment, the fact remains that the plan has congealed and will prevent development upon the St. Lawrence.

The Senator raises a very important question about the right of the State independent of any favorable action upon the part of Canada or by treaty between the two countries. It is a very important question that we are considering, whether or not the State of New York is estopped from any development on the river, and that, I assume from what the Senator has said he is trying to develop, and, perhaps, to offer a solution for that problem.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; I am perfectly satisfied about that feature of it. The officers of the State of New York would find themselves confronted with a penal statute if they, without any authority from Congress, should attempt to place any obstructions in the St. Lawrence River.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; but the Senator has gone further than that, and made it appear to me that his thought is that even the Congress can not do that without an agreement with Canada.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I am inclined to think that that is correct. Canada having the free right to the use of the river for navigation on both sides, and the United States having exactly the same right, neither, it seems to me, would be entitled, without the consent of the other, to put any obstructions in the river which might interfere with navigation.

Mr. COPELAND. Would that, in the opinion of the Senator, go so far as to preclude the possibility of erecting works there for power purposes, works that would actually have the effect of improving navigation?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That would depend upon the improvement. A private individual might be quite willing to put works in a navigable river within the United States that would, as a matter of fact, improve navigation, but he would nevertheless be guilty of the offense described by the statute.

Mr. COPELAND. I am very much obliged to the Senator, and I shall listen with great interest to what he has to say further.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The State of New York, by a suit brought in the Supreme Court of the United States, challenged the constitutionality of that act, particularly as it applies to the St. Lawrence River, contending that while the Federal Government may treat with Canada for the improvement of the navigation of the river, and that Congress may, in the event a treaty is effected, appropriate money for works to facilitate navigation and provide for the construction of such, the development of power is outside the field of national action, and that to couple the two purposes would render the legislation, if not the treaty, void.

An answer having been filed by the Power Commission, made a defendant in the suit, it was, on motion of the complainant, dismissed. It appears, however, that the State did not actually abandon its position, as might be inferred from its action, the conclusion having been reached that it had been premature, or at least that no present aggression was threatened. What substance is there to the claim thus made? Whether the Federal Government may or may not construct works for the development of power, either within the river or upon land outside of but adjacent to it, it is indisputable that the State of New York can not construct within the stream the dams necessary for the generation of power, first, because her officers would in so doing violate the Federal statute against the erection of obstructions in navigable streams; and, secondly, because she could not do so without the consent of Canada—and the Constitution forbids a State from entering into a treaty with a foreign power. It follows that if the contention of New York be sound, the power possibilities of the St. Lawrence must be lost to the people of the United States and, so far as the international section is concerned, perhaps, to the people of Canada, because of our peculiar governmental system.

But no such misfortune awaits them. It is indisputable—in fact, conceded—that the Government may treat for the improvement of the navigation of the river and construct and operate works to that end; and it must be conceded that, as incidental to such work, it may provide for the utilization of the power possibilities presented, turning the water held back by the necessary dams to the development of power, thus reducing the net cost of the enterprise. There would be nothing novel or unprecedented in such a course. It was necessary to erect the Gatun Dam across the Chagres River to provide water to float ships through the Panama Canal. A moderate amount of power was likewise necessary to tow bottoms through the locks, to mark the channel, and to light the necessary offices and appurtenant structures. A plant was installed adequate not only to meet the Government's necessity for power but, the dam being adequate, a plant was installed by which the whole city of Panama is lighted, a substantial revenue being returned from the sale of the excess power developed.

Even if it be conceded that the Federal Government may not engage in the development and sale of power as an independent enterprise, it does not follow that when, having spent money for a purpose within its constitutional authority, water is thus stored which may be utilized profitably for the development of power, it must allow the water to escape uselessly for the want of the necessary plant to generate energy.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the junior Senator from New York?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I do.

Mr. WAGNER. While I am not prepared to agree with the Senator that where a dam is constructed to improve navigation upon a boundary stream the water-power development as the result of the construction of such a dam belongs exclusively to the Federal Government as an incident to the construction of the dam, if, however, the Senator should be correct in his contention as to that, there is no doubt, is there, that the Federal Government may give to the State the right to develop the water power which results from the construction of the dam?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That is just what I was suggesting.

The authority of the National Government to improve the public lands by the construction of irrigation works has been vindicated by the adjudication of the Supreme Court. Water stored behind a great dam, being a part of the Salt River project in the State of Arizona, for the irrigation of lands within it, is utilized in part for the development of power to such an extent that the city of Phoenix is lighted from that source. Would anyone contend that it is forbidden by any provision of the Constitution that the cost to the water users be reduced by the construction of works that will afford not only water for irrigation but permit the generation of power?

The Congress has just passed, and the President has signed, the Boulder Dam bill, justification for it being found in the necessity of protecting lands in the Imperial Valley from overflow and in the desirability of making those of them that are public productive by irrigation. But that end can be more economically attained, it is argued, by utilizing the water held back by the dam for the generation of power; and Congress, being convinced of the soundness of that contention, authorized the necessary works.

The Government has carried on the development at Muscle Shoals primarily to insure a domestic supply of nitrates essential to the production of explosives for use in the event of war. The power potentialities of the site are greater than is necessary to that end, but there is economy in a full development if the surplus power be sold. Even if it be conceded that the Federal Government may not engage in the business of generating and distributing electrical energy apart from any activity in which it may legitimately engage, it does not follow that it must pursue an uneconomical course in respect to enterprises it undertakes within the scope of its powers because, forsooth, surplus power will otherwise be generated.

In the case of the St. Lawrence development, as at Panama, it is quite likely that some power will be essential to the operation of the works to be constructed to facilitate navigation; but, quite aside from such use, there can be no doubt of the authority of the National Government to do the whole job, to install works for the development of power as an incident of the improvement of the river for navigation, and to dispose of the energy generated.

Notwithstanding the attitude of the State of New York, as outlined in its bill of complaint filed in the Supreme Court and afterwards dismissed, there is little likelihood of any conflict between it and the Federal Government; certainly none that need embarrass negotiations with Canada. If a treaty is entered into by which the United States agrees with its neighbor jointly to carry on the work, there need be no fear about compliance on the part of our Government. The relative rights of the Nation and of the State of New York need give our Canadian friends no concern. They will be adjusted by mutual agreement or by our courts consistently with the obligations incurred by the treaty. Whether the State of New York may or may not claim title in part to the water flowing in the river, except in so far as it may be necessary in navigation, it has undoubtedly the title to the soil forming the bed of the river to the boundary line, subject to the right of the Federal Government to occupy it to promote navigation. That there is no disposition upon the part of those urging the enterprise, recommended unanimously by two international commissions, each aided by a joint board of engineers indorsing it without dissent, to ignore the just claims of New York, is shown by the closing sentence of the report of the conclusions of the American division of the commission last considering it, of which Herbert Hoover was the chairman, as follows:

> First. The construction of the shipway from the Great Lakes to the sea is imperative both for the relief and for the future development of a vast area in the interior of the continent.
>
> Second. The shipway should be constructed on the St. Lawrence route, provided suitable agreement can be made for its joint undertaking with the Dominion of Canada.
>
> Third. That the development of the power resources of the St. Lawrence should be undertaken by appropriate agencies.
>
> Fourth. That negotiations should be entered into with Canada in an endeavor to arrive at agreement upon all these subjects. In such negotiations the United States should recognize the proper relations of New York to the power development in the international section.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. Hoover in his report, in my judgment, did not recognize the rights of New York. He stated that a large part of the cost of the works and of the development on the part of our Government could be returned by the sale of power.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Yes.

Mr. COPELAND. He did not talk about the rights of New York. He confined his thought wholly to the Federal right to reimburse itself, without considering for a moment the rights of New York State.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I think there will be no trouble about that. It is quite likely that if the State of New York desires to assume so much of the total cost of the project as is properly allocable to power development in consideration of its being entitled to the electrical energy that may be developed, the Congress will readily assent to such an agreement. Of course, the Senator from New York would not expect the Congress of the United States to spend $275,000,000 for the development——

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; and probably $500,000,000.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The estimate is practically $400,000,000; $125,000,000 to be allocated to navigation and $275,000,000 to power development. The Senator from New York certainly would not expect the Government of the United States to spend $275,000,000 for the installation of power works and then give it over to the State of New York.

Mr. COPELAND. No.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Of course, if the State of New York wants the power, it must pay the cost of the development of the power.

Mr. COPELAND. That is it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Exactly.

Mr. COPELAND. I have no belief in the world that the Congress of the United States is ever going to vote $500,000,000 for the development of a waterway from the Great Lakes to the sea by the St. Lawrence; at least, I hope that the Congress never will do it. The Senator and I are not in agreement upon that.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. We are not at all in agreement on that.

Mr. COPELAND. I realize that; but, assuming that the Congress never does make that appropriation, and that the canal as such is not built, it will be unfortunate, indeed, if the State of New York is prevented from developing the water power along the St. Lawrence River.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That is just the situation which the State of New York is placed in if the Senator maintains his present attitude.

Mr. COPELAND. That is to say, the attitude of the Senator from Montana is that unless the canal is built, unless the river is improved for navigation purposes, we can never make use of the water power?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; you can, of course, treat with the Government of Canada, and have a treaty simply for the development of the water power, without improving the navigation at all.

Mr. COPELAND. That is, the United States could make such an agreement?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The United States could make that agreement.

Mr. COPELAND. If I understand the Senator, he is very positive in his position that unless there is such a treaty, the State of New York could not proceed to build works in the St. Lawrence for water-power development.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I have no hesitancy in expressing my opinion about that at all.

Mr. COPELAND. Even though such works were primarily for navigation purposes. That would not make any difference?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That would not make a bit of difference. The State of New York has no right, for instance, to put works for the purpose of improving navigation in the Hudson River.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. I understood the Senator to say a moment ago that the United States could enter into a treaty with Canada for the sole purpose of erecting dams for the development of power——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. It did so with respect to Niagara.

Mr. WAGNER. Unrelated to the question of navigation.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Quite so.

Mr. WAGNER. Has not the State of New York some rights in relation to the construction of any works upon property owned by it, and is not the Federal Government's intervention based exclusively upon the regulation of interstate commerce or the development of navigation?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Entirely so. Of course, in view of the fact that this stream is international, the treaty-making power is also important.

Mr. WAGNER. That is the very point I wanted to make, because I had in mind the pending treaty between the United States and Canada which is now up for ratification before the Committee on Foreign Relations. I wanted to ask whether or not a State may be ignored in a convention between our country and another country in relation to works constructed upon the boundary stream, where those works have no relation to the improvement of navigation or the regulation of interstate commerce.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The answer is very simple, as it seems to me, Mr. President. The State of New York can not enter into any agreement with Canada.

Mr. WAGNER. I concede that.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. There is no possibility of any agreement except between Canada and the United States. When the United States enters into an agreement, under which power work may be constructed by the United States, or somebody under its authority, it seems to me to follow necessarily that Congress must prescribe the conditions under which those works may be constructed, and, of course, if the State of New York claims that it ought to have a right in the matter by reason of the fact that it owns the soil, it ought to be given, in justice and equity, it seems to me, a hearing upon the matter, and its wishes in regard to the matter, and even its rights, ought to be respected.

Mr. WAGNER. That is the point I was making——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. But there is no way of dealing with the question that I know anything about, except through treaty between the two powers.

Mr. WAGNER. I understand that. Of course, it must be the result of a treaty or a convention, but after the treaty has been entered into and made effective by ratification, can the Federal Government then do anything under that convention except in accordance with our own laws?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. If the treaty is merely permissive, of course, the United States could give the State of New York or anybody permission to do the work that was contemplated, but if the United States is obligated, under the treaty, to do some work, and do it in a certain way, I think it must follow of necessity that the State of New York can not say, "You must not do that."

Mr. WAGNER. In other words, whether it involves constructing works upon its own property, or the diversion of water which it owns, or holds in trust——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Exactly. Let us suppose that the State of New York does not own the property, but that it is owned by private parties. The Government of the United States would be obliged to go in and condemn the land in order to carry out its obligations under the treaty with Canada. In exactly the same way it would have in some way or other to acquire whatever interests the State of New York had in the property.

Mr. WAGNER. I thank the Senator for his views. I am not in accord with them.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I am very glad to have had the attention of the Senators from the State of New York with respect to this, because it has occurred to me that we have a perfectly common interest in negotiating with Canada for this work; and I submit to the Senators from New York that, as a practical proposition, we can not separate the two matters of navigation and power development. There is no such thing as separating them, because the economical thing to do is to combine the two and utilize them the best way we can.

I have no doubt in the world that if the State of New York should undertake the entire cost of the whole enterprise, to construct the works for the purpose of navigation in accordance with plans prescribed by the Government of the United States, the Congress of the United States would say, "Do it, and God speed you in the work. Take the whole thing over."

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. On the other hand, if what the State of New York wants is an opportunity to develop the power, it could be said, "Very well; you pay so much of the total cost as is allocable to the development of power, and take the power." What is fairer than that? What objection does the senior Senator from New York find to such a proposition?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, if the Senator means that the portion of the St. Lawrence development that coincides with the 66 miles of our frontage on the St. Lawrence River is the part that we should develop in its entirety, I have not anything to say; I would have no objection to that. But, of course, if the State of New York——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I do not want the State to pay a dollar of that. All I suggest that they pay is so much of it as is properly allocable to the development of power.

Mr. COPELAND. I would have no possible objection.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Of course, it is a matter of negotiation between the authorities of the United States and the authorities of the State of New York as to how much of it is properly allocable to the development of power.

Mr. COPELAND. I would like to say this, if I may, that if I had to choose between the plan proposed by the Senator, by which New York would get that power, and a part of the plan was the full development of the St. Lawrence Canal, I should oppose it. I can not believe that one can be quite patriotic—and I say that giving the Senator all consideration for his views, which are in opposition, of course—I could not be patriotic if I advocated the building of the St. Lawrence Canal; because, in the first place, I do not believe the canal could ever be profitable.

It would be a one-way proposition. It would be valuable in the exportation of wheat, but it could not be profitable to the exporter of wheat, because as a one-way proposition the charge for both ways would have to be charged against the freight. But the chief point is that I could not consent to the upbuilding of the port of Montreal as the great transshipment port of North America as against the United States ports on the Atlantic Ocean. That is exactly the way I feel about it.

I know that in a moment the Senator is going to say "It is rather strange, then, that Montreal is opposed to it." Of course, the reason Montreal is opposed to it is the one I suggested a little while ago, that the people of Montreal have in the back of their heads the idea that some time they are going to develop the Ottawa River-Lake Nipissing-Georgian Bay Canal. To look forward to the building of the St. Lawrence canal to me is looking forward to something little short of a national calamity. I think it would have a very pernicious effect upon our shipping and upon the welfare of our Atlantic ports, including the port of New York.

I should be very unhappy, indeed, to find that the Senator is right, and if he is right, that the State of New Lork is prohibited from developing the water powers on the St. Lawrence unless that development coincides with the building of the St. Lawrence canal.

Apparently from what the Senator says, and if he is right, it seems that before there can be any such development of the water powers on the St. Lawrence we will have to have a treaty, a treaty which involves the building of the canal, as well as the development of water power.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. You can make a separate treaty, of course, with Canada, for the development of water power, without the development of the river for navigation.

Mr. COPELAND. I hope we may have the powerful influence of the Senator from Montana in such a development.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Why should the Senator expect the powerful influence of the Senator from Montana? Does not the Senator from New York conceive that the State of Wisconsin, for instance, and the State of Minnesota, and the State of Iowa, and the State of North Dakota, and the State of South Dakota, and the State of Montana, which latter State is 1,100 miles from water carriage—does not the Senator conceive that they have some rights in the premises? Does not the Senator conceive that their interests in the matter are entitled to just as much consideraion as are those of the city of New York?

Mr. COPELAND. I should concede all that, if that statement were founded on a basis of actual economic truth.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. What is the foundation of actual economic truth? Of course, I have very great respect for the Senator when it comes to engineering problems, but the people who have considered this are two boards of engineers of the United States and of Canada, with three members upon each side. In addition to that there was an economic commission, with both sides represented, and both sides are in disagreement with the Senator from New York. All the boards of engineers, and all the commissions, are against the Senator from New York in his statement that the enterprise will never pay. Indeed, one commission has reported that every year the improvement exists it will actually pay for itself.

Mr. COPELAND. By the development of water power?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. From all returns, including the vast benefits accruing to the landlocked States of the United States.

But I do not care to engage in any controversy about that. The record is here. The economic considerations were given the most exhaustive consideration. They were the subject of testimony by men of the very highest standing in the export trade, who gave the figures concerning the incoming and the outgoing trade, and that is here before us for consideration. Their conclusions, founded upon that testimony, will stand in this body as against the statement of the Senator from New York that he is against this because it will never be economically possible.

Mr. COPELAND. If the Senator from Montana will yield——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The Senator from New York may keep that attitude, if he sees fit to do so, but it is a dog-in-the-manger policy. If the State of New York wants to develop this power, there is only one thing for it to do, to get into contact with the people who want to develop the river for the purpose of navigation, and have the whole thing conducted in an economic way, and take the first step, entering into a contract with Canada for the development.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course, when it comes to a matter of law, I will yield at once to the Senator from Montana. When it comes to a matter of engineering, I assume I know as much about it as he does.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I am sure the Senator does.

Mr. COPELAND. When, on behalf of the State of New York, I consider the St. Lawrence Canal, I am not considering it from a dog-in-the-manger attitude. I am considering it from the national standpoint, and we do not have to consider this purely as an academic question. We are now using the St. Lawrence River, through its various canals, and the Welland Canal, for the carriage of wheat from the lake head to Montreal.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. In ships that draw 14 feet, and that can not go to the ocean.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; and last year 2,670 of those ships which went east with wheat came back empty. There was nothing for them to bring back.

The Senator talks about the dog-in-the-manger attitude of the Senator from New York.

To me the logic of the situation is irresistible. Within a very short time the United States will disappear as a wheat exporter. Because blood is thicker than water and because of materially lower prices of production, Great Britain will prefer to import Canadian wheat and eventually the Liverpool market will be lost to us.

Comparisons of the freight rates and facilities of the two countries are interesting. Duluth, in our country, and Fort William, in Canada, are the extreme western lake ports through which wheat is shipped for domestic consumption in the home country or for export to Europe. The rates by water from these two cities to the Atlantic seaboard are approximately the same.

Whether a canal is built or not, then, Americans and Canadians are on the same basis so far as water transportation is concerned. But they are not on the same competitive basis when we consider the rail rates from points of production to the lake head.

There is little difference between the rates from the Dakotas to Duluth, but Montana and other points farther west are at a considerable disadvantage. For instance, the rate from Butte, Mont., is 44½ cents per hundred, while it is only 26 cents from Alberta and Saskatchewan points. This gives the Canadian shipper an advantage of about 18 cents a bushel.

What do these figures prove? They show conclusively that the St. Lawrence waterway will not better the prospects of the American wheat farmer. He will continue to be on the present basis of competition with his neighbors across the line. As they increase their acreage, the cheaper rail rates in Canada, to a considerable extent, and the sentimental tie between England and her colony, to a greater extent, will cause Canadian exports of wheat to increase while ours decline.

So I am not speaking as a New Yorker with a dog-in-the-manger attitude. I am speaking as a citizen of the United States when I say that the building of that canal, so far as I can see, will not help the wheat farmers of the Northwest one iota.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Certainly.

Mr. WAGNER. I wish to ask the Senator a question having reference to the legal aspect of the case only and not to the economic features. I do not think the Senator and I disagree that upon a stream which is not a boundary stream the Federal Government has no power to construct any works or to do any act in relation to the stream except to improve navigation.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That is correct, except that I have no doubt that in the construction of such works, if power is developed incidentally, they have a right to develop the power and dispose of it. Indeed they have done that repeatedly. I refer the Senator to the Fox River in the State of Wisconsin.

Mr. WAGNER. I am speaking of constructing works which have no relation to navigation.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I fully agree that they can not go into the power development as an independent matter.

Mr. WAGNER. Or appropriate or divert the water. Did I correctly understand the Senator to say, in the case of a boundary stream which is the subject of a treaty or convention between the two countries, that under such convention a private company may be given the right to divert the waters of the boundary stream without securing permission of any kind or character from the State itself? I am speaking now of a stream that is not navigable, so there can be no question of navigation involved at all. If I may be specific, I am speaking of the Niagara River.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The Senator is probably better informed about that than I am, but my recollection is that we entered into a treaty with Canada in relation to that subject by which Canada was granted the right to divert 36,000 cubic feet per second and we 20,000 cubic feet per second, and having the right to divert 20,000 cubic feet per second the Congress of the United States granted to a private corporation a permit thus to divert the water. The State of New York did not enter into it at all, did it?

Mr. WAGNER. The State of New York did not enter into the treaty negotiations, but that does not in any way change the legal aspects of the case.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; not at all.

Mr. WAGNER. My view is that the State of New York has a voice in regard to the diversion of the water of that river. There has, however, been no legal pronouncement on the question.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Let us put the thing in a practical way. The Government of the United States and the Government of Canada enter into an arrangement by which they jointly agree to construct the necessary works for the development of navigation, and incidentally for power, to be divided between the two countries.

Mr. WAGNER. Is the Senator speaking of the Niagara situation?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No.

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator is speaking of the ordinary situation?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Of the international question only. I apprehend there will be no doubt in the mind of the Senator from New York, as there is not in mine, that they could make such a treaty as that; and having done so, in what way could the State of New York come in and assert any absolute right in the premises? How would it proceed? The Congress then passes an act authorizing the Secretary of War to go on and construct the works in accordance with the treaty. What could the State of New York do?

Mr. WAGNER. I think that the Senator and I misunderstand one another. I was assuming a case in which a convention was entered into for the diversion of water for water power purposes and also for the construction of remedial works. I was assuming a case in which the question of navigation was not involved at all, because the stream was not navigable and could not be made navigable. Under those circumstances was it the Senator's view that the Federal Government might permit the diversion by a private company of the amount of water limited by treaty for water power purposes, without requiring the assent of the State of New York?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The question is, as it seems to me, quite academic.

Mr. WAGNER. No; it is an actuality, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. If the Senator will state the facts, I shall be glad to try to answer him.

Mr. WAGNER. Let us take the pending treaty, in which a convention has been entered into between the United States and Canada as a result of which two companies, the Ontario commission and the American company, agree to construct specified remedial works, certain submerged weirs, for the purpose of restoring the scenic beauty of Niagara Falls, which, it is alleged, has been impaired. The companies, under the convention, are also given the right for a period of seven years to divert water up to 10,000 cubic feet per second in addition to that which is now allotted to them. That is the actual case. The question of navigation is not involved, because from the place where the water is taken into the power plant to the place where it is again discharged into the stream the river is not navigable and can not be made navigable. The question of navigation, therefore, does not enter.

What I would like to inquire of the Senator, because I recognize his superior legal knowledge and his superiority in every respect, but particularly as to the law, is whether or not the State of New York has any rights in relation to the diversion of that particular water. I think it is true that the State owns the bed of the river, and the riparian owners have certain rights. Can they all be ignored in a matter of that kind?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I will say that we have problems out in the West not unlike the one cited by the Senator. The Government carries on works of irrigation out there, but we have always put in the necessary act in relation to the matter a provision that they must appropriate the water in accordance with the laws of the State. The water power act, which authorizes the granting of permits to construct dams in navigable streams and in streams on the public domain, provides that they must comply with the laws of the State in which the stream is in order to construct the works.

I should think it would be quite proper to say that those people must comply with the requirements of the laws of the State of New York to do this. But as a matter of absolute right I do not think it necessarily follows. I have no doubt at all that the General Government, desiring to construct works of irrigation out in Montana, would have a perfect right to appropriate whatever water is necessary for the purpose of doing that work without any regard to State law, so we always put into the law a provision that it must be done and the water must be appropriated in conformity with the laws of the State in which the works are constructed. I should think likewise that the law ought to provide that the consent of the State of New York to the construction of works and the appropriation of water for the purpose should be secured before it could go on.

If the Senator puts the question to me as a matter of absolute right, I should say that the matter being a matter of treaty negotiation it then falls under the legislation of the Congress, under the decision in the migratory-bird case, and that Congress may make such provision with respect to the matter as it is advised.

ROCKEFELLER-STEWART PROXY CONTEST

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, for several days the country has been entertained with accounts of the contest going on between Mr. John D. Rockefeller, jr., and Col. Robert W. Stewart to obtain control of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana. It has seemed to me, inasmuch as that controversy has arisen on account of an investigation which was made by a Senate committee, that it would be well, lest we forget, to call attention in a brief way to the things that have happened out of which the contest between Rockefeller and Stewart has arisen.

Several years ago the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, the Prairie Oil & Gas Co., and the Sinclair Co. desired to buy a great deal of oil. There was a man in Texas by the name of Humphreys who had a rich oil field and lots of oil to sell, so there resulted some negotiations between Mr. Humphreys and the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, the Prairie Oil & Gas Co., and the Sinclair Co. in regard to the purchase of the oil.

At the Vanderbilt Hotel in New York City Mr. Humphreys met Stewart and Blackmer, of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, and James O'Neil, of the Prairie Oil & Gas Co., and Harry F. Sinclair, of the Sinclair interestss. They negotiated for several days, as I remember the testimony, and the result of it was that Humphreys sold to those people, representing the oil companies which I have mentioned, something over 30,000,000 barrels of oil at $1.50 per barrel. Humphreys supposed he was dealing with the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, the Prairie Oil & Gas Co., and the Sinclair Co. Up to the time that the negotiations were concluded and the contract agreed upon for the delivery of and the payment for the oil he had no idea that he was dealing with anybody else.

But when it came to the writing of the contract and putting the agreement into writing these gentlemen—Mr. Stewart and Mr. O'Neil, Mr. Blackmer, and Mr. Sinclair—said to Mr. Humphreys, "Draw this contract in the name of the Continental Trading Co. of Canada." Mr. Humphreys did not know the Continental Trading Co., he had never heard of it, and, inasmuch as the oil was to be delivered over quite a period of time and payments made accordingly, he did not want to enter into a contract for the sale of oil amounting to many millions of dollars without knowing the financial responsibility of the purchaser. So Mr. Sinclair and the other gentlemen said, "We will guarantee the payment," and with that agreement Humphreys was in accord and the contract was drawn up and signed and the guaranty made.

Stewart, Sinclair, O'Neil, and Blackmer, representing the oil companies which I have mentioned, bought the oil for $1.50 per barrel in the name of the Continental Trading Co. of Canada and resold it to their own companies for 25 cents a barrel advance. In other words, they bought it for $1.50 a barrel and sold it for $1.75 a barrel. The Continental Trading Co. had never had any existence and was organized only the day before these transactions took place. It never had any money put into it by these men; there never was a dollar invested. It was simply a corporation to cover up the tracks of these men who bought oil for $1.50 a barrel and sold it to their own stockholders for $1.75 a barrel, the profit amounting to something between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000. So on its face it would look as though these men were false to their own stockholders and to the corporations which they respectively represented.

The Continental Oil Co. never had any other business but this one transaction; it was dissolved and went out of business as soon as this transaction was completed. They had taken in with them a Canadian lawyer by the name of Osler, who was made an official of the company, and who handled the money. The oil was bought for $1.50 and the contract provided for a certain date of payment, but they were careful in negotiating the contract that the date of payment to Humphreys, the individual who sold the oil, and whose part in the transaction was perfectly honorable and upright, should be subsequent to the date on which the companies which ultimately got the oil at an advance of 25 cents a barrel should make their payment. So, as a matter of fact, they carried out the entire transaction without investing a single penny.

This happened several years ago. These transactions were unknown until after the investigation conducted by the Senate committee and by the special attorneys of the United States pertaining to the various oil transactions and oil deals and oil steals; but in consequence of this particular transaction the Continental Trading Co. made a profit of more than $3,000,000. It made it at the expense of the companies represented by Stewart, Sinclair, and O'Neil. They used their companies' money to buy oil and they sold it to those companies at an advance of 25 cents a barrel.

The profit that this fraudulent company made was invested in Liberty bonds and was divided in equal parts and distributed among Stewart, Sinclair, Blackmer, and O'Neil. O'Neil kept his share of these bonds for three years, and then, in a fit of remorse, secretly returned it to his company. Blackmer kept his share and fled to Europe. He has been there ever since, and, like "the man without a country," he dare not come back. He is resisting a subpœna to testify. He is resisting—and under the French law has been able to do it successfully—a requisition to bring him back here on an indictment returned against him by a grand jury in connection with this transaction.

Sinclair, so far as we know from the evidence, used a part of his bonds—$230,000 of them—to give to Secretary Fall, and he also gave $250,000 or thereabouts to the Republican National Committee.

Stewart put his share of these bonds—$750,000—in a safe in his private office; and he did not tell the board of directors of his company about it or that he had that amount until about six years afterwards, at a time when he was driven into a corner by the investigation of the Senate committee, and after he had been cited for contempt of the Senate in refusing to answer questions in regard to these bonds. Then he called a meeting of the board of directors of his company, surrendered the bonds, explained that he had taken them in their behalf, and had intended to return them all the time, but has never given any explanation, so far as I know, as to his failure to return them earlier, and has never given any explanation as to why he went into this deal and into the organization of the Continental Trading Co. If he intended that the profit should go to the stockholders whom he represented, then there was no necessity of organizing this company; he could have bought, as Humphreys supposed he was doing, the oil at $1.50 a barrel and turned it over to his company; but his company had to pay $1.75 a barrel for it, and he kept the profit all those years, until he was driven into a corner by the investigation of the Senate. Then, in order to escape, he said, "I kept this all the time for the company, and intended all the time to give it to the stockholders." The fact is that these bonds were purchased with profits made at the expense of the stockholders of the company, with the connivance of Colonel Stewart; and the stockholders, in accepting them, are merely receiving what had been wrongfully taken from them at the beginning.

Now, Mr. President, Mr. Stewart, in his contest to secure reelection to the board of directors against the opposition of Mr. Rockefeller, has issued a statement widely published, from which I will quote later. In that statement he has a great deal to say in praise of the American jury system. It will be remembered that he was acquitted before a jury in the District of Columbia on a charge of perjury, and also on a charge of contempt of the Senate. He has not, however, in his glowing eulogy of the jury system, had anything to say about the court system of our country. He has not had anything to say about the Supreme Court of the United States. That court passed on these oil deals; it considered the organization of the Continental Trading Co., and I want to read from the opinion of that court:

> The creation of the Continental Co., the purchase and resale contracts enabling it to make more than $8,000,000 without capital, risk, or effort, the assignment of the contract to the resale purchasers for a small fraction of its probable value, and the purpose to conceal the disposition of its assets make it plain that the company was created for some illegitimate purpose. And the clandestine and unexplained acquisition of these bonds by Fall confirms the belief, generated by other circumstances in the case, that he was a faithless public officer. There is nothing in the record that tends to mitigate the sinisfer significance attaching to that enrichment.

I hope in the next statement Mr. Stewart makes, which I suppose he will issue immediately after he reads what I have said, he will explain what he thinks about the Supreme Court and the judgment rendered by that court in which they criticized the oil company which he helped to organize and which the court has condemned as having been organized for an illegal and unworthy purpose.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. CARAWAY. It would be interesting, although Mr. Stewart will never tell it, to know the inside history of those two trials, would it not?

Mr. NORRIS. It certainly would.

Mr. CARAWAY. It would be thrilling.

Mr. NORRIS. It would also be interesting to have Mr. Stewart, in the next effusion which he gives to the press, explain all about the Continental Trading Co., why it was organized, and to take the people into his confidence and tell them why it was necessary to organize the Continental Trading Co. if he was in fact buying oil for his company, as he now claims he was.

Mr. CARAWAY. If he would just tell the truth once, it would be the most interesting thing he has said in connection with this matter.

Mr. NORRIS. He would be entitled to a chromo.

Mr. CARAWAY. But he never will do that.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I wish to remark that, whatever might be said concerning the jury which tried Colonel Stewart the last time upon the charge of perjury, it will be difficult for anybody to exculpate the jury that acquitted him for refusing to answer the questions that were propounded by the committee, for which he was first indicted. The relevancy of the questions was determined by the court and the court determined that the questions were relevant. The only question then was, Were the questions asked him and did he refuse to answer? There was no possibility of escape from a verdict of guilty, if the jury did its duty, and yet that jury acquitted him.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator from Montana for his interruption.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I speak of it in view of Colonel Stewart extolling the jury system.

Mr. NORRIS. He ought to extol that jury, I think.

Mr. President, it is a crime, made so by statute, to refuse to answer questions propounded by a Senate or a House of Representatives committee. Mr. Stewart was indicted for refusing to answer such questions. Two points were involved: Did he refuse to answer, and were the questions proper ones for the committee to ask? As the Senator from Montana has said, the court decided whether the questions were proper, and it was held, and nobody has ever disputed, that the questions he refused to answer were proper, and nobody disputes that he refused to answer. If he had been an ordinary workman in the streets of Washington, employed on the sewers or making an excavation for a water pipe, or working behind a desk, he would within 20 minutes after the empaneling of that jury have been on his way to jail. But, as I have often said, there was too much involved in this controversy; it is pretty difficult, if not impossible, to convict a million dollars.

I wish to read, Mr. President, an article appearing in the last issue of Labor, commenting upon what Mr. Stewart has said:

> Robert W. Stewart, who recently secured a District of Columbia acquittal of the charge of perjury, is fighting vigorously to retain the headship of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, from which Mr. Rockefeller, jr., seeks to oust him. In the course of his appeal for support, Mr. Stewart says:
>
> "The present organization (including himself) took the Indiana company in 1918, at that time worth $170,000,000, and in 10 years, without asking one cent from the stockholders, has made it into a company worth about $900,000,000, during which time it has paid out over $200,000,000 in cash dividends."

That is the end of the statement by Mr. Stewart. Labor goes on:

Mr. Stewart's statement may not have much to do with the question at issue, but it certainly explains the price of gasoline. A group of allied interests, of which the Standard is chief, have a practical, though not a legal, monopoly of the oil business, and they charge all the traffic will bear.

No firm subject to genuine competition in an old and settled industry multiplies its assets fivefold in 10 years, while paying out cash dividends greater than the original value. It just isn't done. Financial magic of that sort means monopoly, and a rather ruthless monopoly at that.

Mr. Rockefeller, jr., is fighting Stewart because the latter's connection with the Continental Trading Co. fake and his contradictory statements before the Senate committee have given the oil industry a bad name. For this Mr. Rockefeller deserves credit. But it does not appear that Mr. Rockefeller has any objection to the extortionate prosperity of which Mr. Stewart boasts; and that, after all, is the matter of greatest and most lasting interest.

Here we have this man Stewart boasting that he took charge of this company 10 years ago, with property of the value of $170,000,000, and that in 10 years' time, by his operation of the company, he has not only paid $200,000,000 in dividends to the stockholders but has increased the value of its property to $900,000,000. That is what he says; that is his claim; that is his boast before the country and before the stockholders to secure votes to reelect him to the control of that corporation.

Mr. President, I think, as is said in the article here by Labor, that Mr. Rockefeller is entitled to credit for trying to oust Colonel Stewart from that place. It is sufficient reason to know what his connection has been with the fake Continental Trading Co., and his intention to keep from the stockholders of his own company the profits of a transaction which he never divulged until years afterward, when he was compelled to do so as a matter of self-defense. It is a worthy thing for those reasons, and for the additional reason given that he has refused to answer proper questions submitted by a committee of investigation. The opposition to him on those grounds is laudable, but it does not go far enough. Mr. Rockefeller does not go far enough.

Is the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana proud of the record that this man himself boasts that he has made? Does it want to go before this country—the leading oil company of the world, the one that sets the pace and fixes the price that all consumers must pay for gasoline—does it want to go before the country with that kind of a record, even though technically it is legal? Every man who buys gasoline, every owner of a flivver, has contributed to that enormous profit, all out of reason, all out of morality—a profit in 10 years, adding the two together, of something more than $1,000,000,000 on property valued at the beginning at only $170,000,000, and dealing in a practical necessity of human existence in this country.

It seems to me that if they want the respect of honest people, these stockholders ought to be satisfied with a profit that is not so unconscionable, so extortionate; and, in my judgment, Mr. Rockefeller does not go to the whole distance. It seems to me that the man who is one of the shining stars of the financial firmament of the world can not afford to preach the doctrine that he preaches every Sunday to his Sabbath school and still be willing to accept the pennies that shall be extorted from the people by a monopoly of this kind.

Colonel Stewart may have whatever credit and whatever praise he may think he is entitled to; but he has not only made a financial record that is a disgrace to the company, but the investigation and the evidence adduced in the trial of these oil cases and the condemnation of this trading company by the Supreme Court of the United States all mark him as a man unfit to try to operate any corporation or any business that even pretends to be honest.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, does not the Senator think that if Colonel Stewart had been a man of less wealth, if he had been just one of the plain people, he would now be in the penitentiary?

Mr. NORRIS. Oh, he would have been behind the bars long ago. There is not any doubt about it.

I want to read now from an editorial printed in the Washington News of February 1. The title is:

MONEY TALKS—MAYBE

How good of Colonel Stewart to clarify the issue. Here the press of the country for weeks has been saying that Stewart's only claim to reelection as chairman of Standard Oil of Indiana, against the opposition of Rockefeller and others who object to his part in the oil scandals, is his ability to produce profits. Now Stewart and his board prove that point by declaring a 50 per cent stock and cash dividend on the eve of the decisive election.

I ought to have said, Mr. President, that in this campaign that Colonel Stewart is waging before the stockholders of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana he has recently declared, in addition to the cash dividends, a stock dividend of 50 per cent, putting 50 per cent more capital, more water into the capitalization of the company which, by his financial legerdemain, is going to be converted into pure gold. I wonder if the American people will always stand for such conduct as that in a necessity of the business world? As the article from Labor says, it certainly demonstrates one thing—that this is a monopoly controlled by the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana; that they fix the price that every person in the United States must pay for gasoline; and, in addition to those huge profits, Colonel Stewart has now declared a stock dividend of 50 per cent.

I read further from this editorial:

Will the stockholders, immediately after getting a melon of $469,000,000, the largest in the history of that giant corporation, be disposed to kick out their shrewd chairman? Stewart thinks not.

I have not the capitalization before me; but I presume the $469,000,000 referred to in the editorial is the amount of the stock dividend, the amount of water converted into gold.

As Stewart says, within a decade he has increased the value of the organization from $170,000,000 to $900,000,000. What more can stockholders ask of him?

Such little matters as honor and reputation should not be taken into account it seems. What does it amount to that he has been unable to justify his part in the notorious Continental Trading Co. oil deal with Sinclair, or to explain his conflicting testimony before the Senate Teapot Dome investigating committee?

So it comes down to a question of taste. Stewart does not mind if he is smeared with that scandal and defiles his company with it. But it offends Rockefeller:

"We think of this contest as an opportunity for the stockholders of the Standard Co. to clean house and show the public that the owners of one big business will not countenance in their representatives such a course of conduct as that followed by Colonel Stewart."

This difference of taste represents a profound difference in business philosophy. Stewart is acting on the old business maxim, "The public be damned." Rockefeller is acting on the newer business principle, "Public confidence is the most valuable asset."

It will be interesting to see whether the stockholders are thinking more of this week's half billion dollar Stewart melon, or of the future prosperity and public respect sought by Rockefeller.

But whatever his stockholders may think of him, there is one thing that must trouble even the hard-boiled colonel when he tires occasionally of counting his profits: He is condemned by the American people.

And the Standard Oil Co., conceded to be the one that sets the price of its products in the United States, whose prices are followed by all its competitors, so that there is in reality no competition, having a monopoly, having during the last 10 years as its share of the illegal and unconscionable profits that it has made reaped a reward of more than a billion dollars, is now increasing its capital by a stock dividend of nearly half a billion dollars, over $450,000,000!

I wonder if these stockholders now feel, occupying the place they do in the oil world, that they owe no respect to the public, that they owe no consideration to the hundreds of millions of people who contribute their pennies for gasoline in order that this kind of big business may thrive and grow fat and turn water into gold?

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to each of the following bills:

H. R. 11526. An act to authorize the construction of certain naval vessels, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 13484. An act authorizing preliminary examinations of sundry streams with a view to the control of their floods, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10374) for the acquisition of lands for an addition to the Beal Nursery at East Tawas, Mich.; requested a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. HAUGEN, Mr. PURNELL, and Mr. ASWELL were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 15712) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Frazier	McKellar	Shortridge
Barkley	George	McMaster	Simmons
Bayard	Gerry	McNary	Smith
Black	Gillett	Moses	Steck
Blaine	Glass	Neely	Steiwer
Blease	Glenn	Norbeck	Stephens
Borah	Goff	Norris	Swanson
Bratton	Gould	Oddie	Thomas, Idaho
Brookhart	Greene	Overman	Thomas, Okla.
Bruce	Hale	Phipps	Trammell
Burton	Harris	Pine	Tydings
Capper	Harrison	Pittman	Tyson
Caraway	Hastings	Ransdell	Vandenberg
Copeland	Hawes	Reed, Mo.	Wagner
Couzens	Hayden	Reed, Pa.	Walsh, Mass.
Curtis	Heflin	Robinson, Ark.	Walsh, Mont.
Dale	Johnson	Robinson, Ind.	Warren
Deneen	Jones	Sackett	Waterman
Edge	Kendrick	Schall	Watson
Edwards	Keyes	Sheppard	Wheeler
Fess	King	Shipstead

Mr. TRAMMELL. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. FLETCHER] is unavoidably absent.

Mr. RANSDELL. My colleague, the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD], is necessarily absent by reason of illness.

Mr. BLAINE. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is unavoidably absent. I ask that this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. FRAZIER. My colleague [Mr. NYE] is unavoidably absent on account of illness. I ask that this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. HOWELL] is unavoidably detained from the Senate by illness.

Mr. BRATTON. My colleague [Mr. LARRAZOLO] is absent from the Chamber on account of illness. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-three Senators having answered to their names, there is a quorum present.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, there are only two more committee amendments to be considered, so far as I know, and they both relate to the same subject. So I think that a brief explanation will be in order.

In the Air Corps 5-year program, which was adopted in the act of 1926, permission was given to the Air Corps to carry on training work only with lighter-than-air craft. The Army has built a few of these nonrigid dirigibles which Senators have from time to time seen flying around Washington. They are very small. Senators can appreciate how small they are when I say that some of them contain 200,000 cubic feet of helium, and some of them 60,000 cubic feet of helium, while the Los Angeles, the Navy's dirigible, contains 6,000,000 cubic feet, so that it is more than thirty times bigger than the largest of these Army craft.

The same Air Corps act provided that each year 1,200 additional enlisted men should be taken into the Air Corps, so that at the end of the five years it would have the full complement of enlisted men that was contemplated. Yet the Congress has stood very firmly against an increase in the aggregate number of enlisted men in the Army. This bill provides, as the bills in the past years have provided, for 118,750 enlisted men.

To comply with the Air Corps act, and at the same time keep the total number of enlisted men stationary, means that those enlisted men have to be taken from the other branches of the Army and put into the Air Corps. The result has been an increasing number of regiments that are skeletonized, an increasing number of battalions have to be consolidated, so that many of our Infantry regiments, which ought to have three battalions apiece, are now getting along with two very much undermanned battalions, and each year the difficulty of finding these enlisted men for the other branches has increased.

Last year the Committee on Appropriations of the House and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, having this bill in charge, and the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate, were all in agreement, first, that it was a sheer waste of money for the Army to go on tinkering in this feeble way with the development of lighter-than-air craft; that it was much wiser to concentrate our efforts in the Navy, where they are handling it on a larger scale; that the craft that the Army have, and which they contemplate building, were of absolutely no combatant value, nonrigid ships, with a very slow speed, with practically no combatant value at all, and they would be perfectly helpless opposed to airplanes of ordinary efficiency.

The second reason that compelled us to that conclusion was the fact that at Scott Field, in Illinois, where this work has been carried on, there were 23 officers and 506 enlisted men, and we thought they would very much better be put into the heavier-than-air activities, and relieve the Army for this year to that extent of drawing men out of the other branches of the Army to provide this annual increment of 1,200.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, when the Senator says "we," he does not refer to anybody connected with the Army, does he? He refers to the Senate, does he not?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I mean the House Appropriations Committee, the Senate Appropriations Committee, the Senate Military Affairs Committee, and a very considerable number of officers of the Air Corps.

Mr. HAWES. Is it not a matter of fact that this was stricken out in the House and put into this bill by the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate, and that it does not meet with the approval of the Secretary of War, or of any of the witnesses representing the War Department summoned before the Committee on Military Affairs of the Senate?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It met with the approval of both Houses and the President in the appropriation bill last year.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, will not the Senator explain just what the amendment proposes to do?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes. There are two amendments, and we might as well discuss them both. The first one, the one now before the Senate, will be found on page 26, and reads as follows:

> That no part of the sums appropriated or authorized to be contracted for in this paragraph shall be available for construction at Scott Field, Ill.

That is the paragraph relating to military post construction. That is the first amendment. The second one is to be found on page 34, where the Senate will notice that in line 24, in the item dealing with the construction of lighter-than-air craft, experimental and research work, we struck out the words "lighter-than-air craft" and put in the words "observation balloons."

Not to take too much of the time of the Senate about that, it is admitted on all hands that it is necessary to keep up the Army's equipment of observation balloons. They are necessary for spotting field artillery fire, and they are necessary for staff observation as well. In the attack on Cantigny, which Senators will remember was our first big attack in France, about 45 per cent of the messages that came down from our observation balloons were artillery reports, and about 55 per cent were information for the staff of the division that was concerned in that attack.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I can not understand the first amendment. It seems to be confined to a limitation that would prevent anything being done at a certain field. I know nothing about the field; but, as I understand it, that does not seem to agree with what the Senator explained the amendment to mean. Why is it confined to that one place?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is limited to Scott Field because that is the place where this activity is carried on, and it is the only place.

Mr. NORRIS. Would not the officials be able, even if the amendment were agreed to, to carry on the activities in some other place?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes, Mr. President; but the next amendment would prevent it, as the Senator will see.

The second committee amendment is that which changes the words "lighter-than-air craft" to read "observation balloons." The officials are allowed to carry on experimental and research work with observation balloons. They do not need any authorization to buy more observation balloons, because we now have in storage about 18 of them. They are comparatively cheap, they are easy to produce, they can be brought out in a short time, and if war were declared, they could be made about as fast as they could be used. So that there is a sufficient supply in storage.

There was carried over in the bill as it passed the House, and it is not the subject of a committee amendment, language which appears at the top of page 35, to the effect that no part of this construction fund may be expended for the production of lighter-than-air equipment.

As I said, they have enough observation balloons in storage and we do not want them to buy any more of the blimps with engines in them.

It has been suggested by the people in that part of Illinois and the people of St. Louis who are close to Scott Field that it would be a serious injury to their community if Scott Field were to be abandoned. I do not think there is the slightest likelihood that Scott Field will be abandoned. If the Navy chooses to carry out lighter-than-air experiments there, that can be done; but if the Navy does not, nevertheless, Scott Field is a very necessary part of the network of landing fields for heavier-than-air craft and I think I can assure the people of those communities that, except as they will not see any more of the blimps and will see a great many airplanes, they will not be able to discover any difference in the activities of the aviation officials at that field. Probably just as many men will be stationed there in the heavier-than-air work as are stationed there now carrying on balloon experiments.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator just where Scott Field is?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is in southern Illinois rather over toward the river side, not very far from St. Louis. The Senator from Illinois can tell us how far.

Mr. DENEEN. It is 20 miles from St. Louis.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is a common excursion point for people of that region.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I yield.

Mr. HAWES. May I add to the explanation that this is one of the oldest aviation fields in the United States.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I dare say that is so, and it will continue to be an aviation field.

Mr. HAWES. More than $5,000,000 has been expended there and there is a hangar costing $2,000,000. It is the only field in the central portion of our country, and the attempt is now being made, or the first step is being taken, in my opinion, to abandon the field and take from the Army a function which it has had for years and give it to the Navy.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I can answer that by saying that, so far as I know, there is no intention on the part of the committees I speak of and not any intention on the part of the Army authorities to abandon Scott Field. They regard it as of high value for heavier-than-air aviation and the Assistant Secretary for Aviation has told me that he thinks it is indispensable for that purpose.

Mr. HAWES. Did not he also tell the committee and the Senator that in his opinion this change should not be made?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. He did.

Mr. HAWES. And so did the old commander, Colonel Paegelow?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. He did.

Mr. HAWES. And all the other officers appearing before the Senator's committee from the Army?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Colonel Paegelow, who is commander there, is an Air Corps officer who is not accustomed to flights in heavier-than-air machines. His activities have been limited entirely to balloon and blimp work and I should rather have expected him to look with some dismay on the Army's cessation of its activity.

Mr. HAWES. The Senator will admit that there was no more experienced officer on the front than Colonel Paegelow?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I do, and his experience was almost entirely confined to observation balloons, which we provide for continuously.

Mr. HAWES. That was his duty and he had a long distinguished record. He possibly has had more experience in this field than any other officer now in the United States Army, and he is opposed to this change.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. He has not had more experience in the operation of dirigibles. He has had a great deal of experience with observation balloons, and we agree with him that that branch ought to be continued.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, as a matter of information, will the Senator state who was the Assistant Secretary opposed to the amendment?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. Davison.

Mr. JOHNSON. And the number of men left in Scott Field next year will be practically the same as at this time?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is my expectation except that they will be devoted to heavier-than-air work, which is so vitally necessary. Mr. Davison and all the rest of them cheerfully admit that the value of this service is not comparable with that of the heavier-than-air service.

Mr. DENEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Certainly.

Mr. DENEEN. Is there any equipment at Scott Field for heavier-than-air service?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I understand there is. I will give the Senator the details a little later.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, can the Senator advise what saving, if there is a saving in the total appropriation, will be effected by this elimination?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. One saving that is immediate is the saving of something over $600,000 this year in the construction of three insignificant little dirigibles which General Fechet himself admits have no military value and no combatant value whatsoever.

Mr. DENEEN. Did not General Fechet testify that these small airships were used for training and that they are as necessary for training as the larger ones?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is true. They are all useful in training in aerial navigation, but if the Senate will picture to itself the utter uselessness of training officers in that way, when we do not provide them with any efficient dirigible, I think the answer will be very obvious. Suppose war were declared. These men have been trained in operating these tiny blimps. They are trained in something that has no military value. It can be said that the training will stand them in good stead in operating larger, faster ships that are qualified to attack something and to defend themselves. But the war would be over before we would ever be able to manufacture the ships for them to fly.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Certainly.

Mr. HAWES. That is the Senator's opinion, but it is not the opinion of the experts of the War Department who appeared before his committee, and who said that they did have a value in the training of men who would be used in the balloon service. There is nothing in the record to substantiate the position taken by the chairman of the committee. It is his individual opinion, is it not?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Not at all. There is a great deal in the record to substantiate it.

Mr. HAWES. I can not find it.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Then the Senator has not looked through the record.

Mr. HAWES. I have looked in everything that relates to the change at Scott Field, and all the evidence is contradictory of the opinion stated now by the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Those officers did state that this lighter-than-air work would be of value in the operation of observation balloons. That is true. But we do not propose to stop that operation. They can go on operating their observation balloons, and the bill allows it. But what is the good of continuing these ridiculous little things which General Fechet himself admits have no combatant value whatever? There is a training value in any sort of lighter-than-air activity, but why not have the training in the kind of instruments that they are going to use if there is a war, and of which we now have plenty?

Mr. DENEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Certainly.

Mr. DENEEN. Was there any contention before the subcommittee that the flyers could be trained in the larger airships?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I do not remember that the contention was made before the committee, but it has been taken as a matter of course.

Mr. DENEEN. May I ask, then, whether or not the flyers in Great Britain and in France are trained in the larger airships?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. They are; and they are devoted to the one activity instead of the two, as in this country.

The Government of the United States has an investment of between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000, and some time ago a new hangar was constructed which cost $1,500,000. The last Congress appropriated, if I recollect correctly, $49,500 for a helium gas tank, and it is being constructed.

Those who are interested in the field in the Middle West object very much to the amendments of the committee. I wish to call the attention of Senators to the phraseology of the proviso on page 46. I will read it:

Provided further, That no part of the sums appropriated or authorized to be contracted for in this paragraph shall be available for construction at Scott Field, Ill.

If we run back in the paragraph on page 25, we find there are two references to previous acts, one approved May 26, 1928, which provided for no construction, and one approved March 12, 1926, which did not relate to any construction. So the proviso, if I am correctly informed, has no efficacy whatever except the hidden meaning that it is a notice to the Budget officers not to prepare any estimates and to the Army not to make any requests for appropriations for lighter-than-air work. It could not mean anything else.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. As a matter of fact, the Navy is training them in the larger airships, like the Los Angeles, where they are training 500 or 600 men constantly.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is true, and that is excellent training which would be of value in war time. In Great Britain they have one institution like our naval Los Angeles, and that adds much to the value of the training; but they do not run a little side show like these blimps, and we do not think it ought to be done because it is a sheer waste of money.

There are two reasons why this action of the committee ought to be sustained. In the first place, as I said, it is a sheer waste of the money of the Nation to keep up this side show and run these small dirigibles.

Secondly, it is a great injustice to the other branches of the Army to have the Air Corps use 508 enlisted men bitterly needed in the other branches but devoted now to this activity.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania if I should offer my amendment at this time?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The question is on the amendment of the committee, whether it shall be agreed to or not.

Mr. HAWES. Then the motion to strike out is not necessary?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. No; because the question is, Shall the committee amendment be agreed to?

Mr. DENEEN. Mr. President, I intend to state very briefly a few facts about Scott Field, and also to relate as briefly as possible some of the testimony that was heard before the subcommittee.

Scott Field is the oldest flying field in the United States. It is 20 miles from St. Louis.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Will the Senator tell us the year in which it was constructed?

Mr. DENEEN. In 1917, so the Representative from that district informs me.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Then it is not the oldest flying field in the United States.

Mr. DENEEN. It is the oldest in the Middle West.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Oh, no, Mr. President, because I flew at Mineola in 1913, and they had a flying field there then.

Mr. DENEEN. I mean a lighter-than-air flying field.

There are accommodations there for 40 officers and about 1,000 enlisted men. There are now there, so I am informed, 23 officers and 506 enlisted men. It can not mean anything else.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The Senator from Illinois is mistaken—I will show that when he finishes—because the act of May 6, 1928, which is mentioned here, carried $150,000 for noncommissioned officers' quarters.

Mr. DENEEN. But there is no appropriation in this bill of $150,000 for the officers' quarters, as I understand. I have checked the matter up carefully with officers of the Army, and that is the information which I have received.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. There is no reference by name, but it would be within the power of the Army authorities to expend this $150,000 under the language of this appropriation if we did not put in the proviso. The same thing was done last year, and for the same purpose.

Mr. DENEEN. Officials of the Army informed me yesterday and again this morning that there were no plans made and no estimates made for construction work for quarters for officers or otherwise, and that they had submitted to the Budget Bureau estimates for equipment which amounted to $667,900. I will refer to that at the proper time.

I will read the title of the act of July 2, 1926, as it indicates the scope of the act:

> To provide more effectively for the national defense by increasing the efficiency of the Air Corps of the Army of the United States and for other purposes.

That does not relate to the Navy, and, of course, there is nothing in the act relating to the Navy. The purpose, as I understand, in the 5-year program was that the Army was to develop the lighter-than-air craft service; that all of the training should be given by the Army; that the Navy was to be limited to the development of lighter-than-air craft; and that practice has been followed.

It is true that there are various airships at the Scott Field, but the testimony of General Fechet, Colonel Paegelow, the Assistant Secretary of War, Mr. Davison, and General Summerall is all to the effect that the Army should have control of the lighter-than-air service.

While it is not pointed out in the testimony it has been pointed out in the discussions which have been had, that the Army should defend the seacoast for 200 miles beyond the coast line; that the Navy should be used to protect the country from enemy ships beyond that distance; that those trained by the Navy would be trained for service on the sea, but General Fechet and others who testified stated that those trained by the Navy would not have the training or experience to deal with questions relating to the Army, that it was necessary to train men familiar with the Army work.

I understand that the airships are sent up 2,000, 3,000, or 4,000 feet and, by telephonic communication, especially in case of balloons, indicate to the artillery the location of the targets when the targets can not be seen from the ground. That is the testimony.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The Senator does not mean they indicate the targets to the artillery at Scott Field?

Mr. DENEEN. No; they are trained there for service elsewhere in the Artillery. There is no artillery at Scott Field. It is a training school for the lighter-than-air service. The Army is perfecting the work of lighter-than-air craft with a view of operating on the coast within a distance of 200 miles from the shores, and investigating the laying of mines, the activities of submarines, and following the coast to protect it from attack. It is stated that we have about 7,500 miles of coast line in the continental United States. I think we have 3,100 miles of coast line on the Atlantic Ocean, about 2,400 miles on the Gulf of Mexico, and probably 2,000 miles on the Pacific Ocean, all of which must be protected by the Army and by men who are trained by the Army.

Now, I wish to call attention to how skillfully this proposed act is drawn. First I point out that on page 33, in line 15, after the word "of," "and airships" has been eliminated. Then on page 34 the words "lighter-than-air craft" are stricken out and there are inserted the words "observation balloons." There is no appropriation for observation balloons. The information which I have does not agree with the information furnished by the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

Mr. DENEEN. Yes.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The very item to which the Senator calls attention in line 16, page 33, is the authorization for the purchase of balloons. The Senator must have misspoken himself. He says there is no appropriation for the purchase of balloons.

Mr. DENEEN. That is true, but the committee omitted the word "airships," and there is no appropriation for the purchase of balloons. I understand that last year an appropriation of $13,500 was made, but this bill carries no such appropriation. Is not that correct?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. This item is the one under which an appropriation for balloons is carried each year if there is any such purchase made.

Mr. DENEEN. What is the appropriation in this bill for balloons?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. This particular year they say they do not need any balloons.

Mr. DENEEN. I will give the information which I have received relating to the subject. I hope the Senate will indulge me for a moment, as I desire to speak accurately. [A pause.] I find I can not refer to the memorandum now, but my recollection is—and I will stand corrected if I misstate the facts—that at the close of the war we had about 600 balloons and lighter-than-air craft, but that the fabric has rotted, so that we have now, I think, but 4 or 5 balloons which can be operated. Further, I am informed that for the year 1931, the last year of this program, we will have but two. That is the information I acquired at the War Department this morning. The assistants to the committee can look into the figures and see whether or not there is any dispute about them.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The testimony of Major Netherwood at page 429 of the House hearings was that at the beginning of the present fiscal year the Army had on hand 16 spherical balloons and 14 observation balloons.

Mr. DENEEN. He was the officer with whom I talked this morning, and he stated to me that because of the condition of the fabric those balloons were not workable and could not be used. I obtained that information from him this morning.

Now, as to the necessity for maintaining the lighter-than-air craft. A number of witnesses appeared before the committee, and if the Senate will indulge me, I have made an abstract of their statements which I shall read.

General Fechet said at page 233 of the hearings:

> The aircraft is needed by the Army; the Navy could not supply the personnel for this work.
>
> Men are flying aircraft there now; they have five ships at Scott Field, two at Langley (p. 235).

There was a misprint in the hearings as to the number at Langley; 21 are reported, but the number is really 2.

> The Air Corps hopes the present equipment will last until 1931 (p. 236); that the Air Corps is charged with the training of captive balloon observers for infantry and artillery; that there is no other service providing such training, and it is a very necessary part of the equipment of the United States Army; that the men at Scott Field are qualified balloon observers; they are sent from Scott Field to Fort Sill, to Camp Stanley, near San Antonio, to Camp Bragg, and have been sent to Camp Eustis.

General Fechet proceeded, on page 237:

Congress fixes on the War Department the responsibility for such training, and the failure of Congress to make an appropriation therefor does not relieve the Army from its responsibility. Scott Field is a lighter-than-air school; that if Scott Field were abandoned, part of the work could be assigned to the Navy and part of the work could not be assigned to the Navy.

I read an abstract of the testimony of Assistant Secretary Davison on page 237:

It is the Army's job to develop observers for coastal patrol work through lighter-than-air craft. These observers can fly over mined harbors; they are not handicapped in the way that heavier-than-air craft are. They can stay in the air a much longer time because they can throttle their motors. Nobody is doing any work in connection with observation balloons anywhere else than at Scott Field.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

Mr. DENEEN. Yes.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is just what we find fault with. We can not train an artillery observer where there is no artillery. We are willing that this activity should continue, but it ought to be carried on at some place where the observers can observe.

Mr. DENEEN. They are trained to fly, and after they are trained to fly, then, as Army officers they are trained to aid the Artillery. They are trained to fly at Scott Field, and they are trained for artillery work in that department.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. But there are no observation balloons anywhere else where there is artillery. We want to put some sense into this work and to take the observation balloons to the Artillery.

Mr. DENEEN. Let me say that everyone who has testified favors the lighter-than-air-craft work, including General Fechet, General Summerall, Colonel Paegelow, and the Assistant Secretary of War who is in charge of aircraft work, and nobody disagrees with that policy in so far as the testimony before the committee shows.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is all right to say that they favor the lighter-than-air craft; so do we, so does the committee, but we favor an intelligent application of it. We do not favor nonrigid dirigibles.

Mr. DENEEN. The intelligent application must be made by Army officers and not by the Congress. They are the officers through whom we work, and the only ones we have.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DENEEN. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. HAWES. In the Senator's examination of this subject, has he found anybody on record representing the Army who favors this change?

Mr. DENEEN. So far as I know, no one in the Army, according to the record, favors the change, and no one in the Navy favors the change.

Mr. HAWES. I was going to ask the Senator if there are any experts of the Navy who favor this change.

Mr. DENEEN. I am not familiar with their views; but I am aware of the fact that none of them have testified.

Mr. HAWES. The change, then, seems to have been proposed by members of the committee of the United States Senate, the House having defeated this provision?

Mr. DENEEN. I so understand.

Mr. HAWES. So it is not approved by the Army or the Navy or the House?

Mr. DENEEN. The committee in the House inserted this very proviso, and it was stricken out on the floor of the House.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It went out on a point of order on the floor of the House, as I understand; and it might enlighten the Senator from Missouri, if his mind is still open—of which I have some slight doubt—to discover that in the bill as it came from the House is an express prohibition against the purchase of any lighter-than-air equipment.

Mr. HAWES. I thank the Senator for his observations, and I should like to make one to him. As a matter of fact, neither the Navy nor the Army favors this proviso. It is a fad of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BINGHAM], who want to take this from the Army and give it to the Navy. I think the Senator's mind was closed to the evidence of both the Army and the Navy.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The Senator may recall that this policy was adopted by House and Senate in the bill which became law last year; and it did not occur to us, until the Senator's recent remarks, that it was necessary for us to call officers from the Army and the Navy in support of a policy already definitely adopted. If we had to do that, we would never get this bill through in a short session.

Mr. HAWES. The Senator can not cite authorities from the Army or from the Navy sustaining his position; and it was he who closed his mind to the testimony of the Army and the Navy. The Senator's is the closed mind, not mine.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. There is abundant testimony to be had from officials of the Air Corps—abundant testimony. I have had lots of it in private. There is no use in citing it now.

Mr. HAWES. That is the reason why the Senator has an "open mind." It is because of private information he has, not official information.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. This matter was all considered by the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. HAWES. It is not in this record.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Of course, it is not in the record, nor is the testimony to support a hundred other matters of policy which have been settled in the past. We do not stop to take testimony about established things like that or our record would be 10,000 pages long.

Mr. HAWES. So, on the matter of closed minds, it seems to me that if the Army and the Navy took one point of view, and three Senators took another point of view, they are the men that had the closed minds.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It may be; but, at least it can be said that we are trying to look at the matter from a national standpoint.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, it seems to me we are getting nowhere over this matter about "closed minds."

Mr. HAWES. The remarks of the Senator from Pennsylvania about closed minds are offensive to me.

Mr. WARREN. Here is the report of a committee that is not composed of three men, whether the amendment is right or wrong. I should like to have the Senator know that there are 19 men on the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is entitled to the floor.

Mr. DENEEN. I wish to make a statement in view of the statement made by the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania. The Representative from the district where Scott Field is located, who led this fight in the House, Congressman IRWIN, of Illinois, is present; and he informs me that the matter did not go off on a point of order in the House but was decided by a vote.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I am sorry that I made an incorrect statement. I have just been told the same thing.

Mr. DENEEN. Proceeding, General Fechet, on page 237, making an abstract again of his testimony, said:

The training work is peculiar to the Army. The Navy do not train their men for that kind of work. If they did train their men, the men themselves would not be basically equipped for that sort of work—to be good observers for an Artillery commander or an Infantry commander.

General Summerall testified on page 70:

The War Department believes that the Army should maintain lighter-than-air equipment, and it should not be left to the Navy. The enlisted men at Scott Field would be treated as part of the next increment in the Air Corps personnel.

General Hero, the chief of the Coast Artillery staff, testified, on page 288, that lighter-than-air service is necessary for the Coast Artillery branch of the Army.

So there we have the experts in charge of every department of the Army. Every one testified practically to the same point. Every one favored it. They were examined and cross-examined.

The distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania, giving his views about the matter, on page 232 of the hearings, made this statement to the committee:

Senator REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. Secretary, we are somewhat pressed for time; but I think that it ought to be said that the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate and the Appropriations Subcommittees in the House and in the Senate have taken the position that lighter-than-air development ought to be conducted by the Navy alone; that the work that the Army was doing was insignificant compared with the Navy work in that field, and that most of it seemed to us to be a waste of money.

Therefore, last year and the year before these appropriations for development at Scott Field have been cut out; cut out with that intention, and it has been the expectation of these committees that in a short time Scott Field should be taken over by the Navy Department and continued by that department for lighter-than-air work.

Not for heavier-than-air work. Now, I understand it is the view of the committee that Scott Field will be used for heavier-than-air work; but the statement as given before these experts was that it should be taken over by the Navy for lighter-than-air work. I should like to know whether the Senator would expect these larger ships, inflated with a million cubic feet of helium gas, to go out to Scott Field and be operated there by those men?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Why, that is what the hangar was built for.

Mr. DENEEN. It is not large enough to accommodate the largest one.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is large enough to take care of any of the Navy craft except the Los Angeles.

Mr. DENEEN. Except the large Los Angeles. Is it the opinion of the committee that we ought to have not one but many such airships, so that they could afford facilities for training for these officers and enlisted men?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I think the Senator possibly has been confused by the way I made the statement. It is our view that the Navy ought to take over all this work with the dirigibles, and take over the equipment for doing that, including the equipment of Scott Field; but, whether they do or whether they do not, Scott Field ought to be continued for the benefit of the heavier-than-air activities of the Army.

Mr. DENEEN. And would you abandon the lighter-than-air service?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. As far as the Army is concerned; yes.

Mr. DENEEN. But if the Navy takes it over, will you have the Navy abandon the lighter-than-air service?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is up to the Navy. I should expect them to use that equipment, but I have nothing to say about the Navy policy.

Mr. DENEEN. Is it the view of the committee that the Army and the Navy should abandon experimenting in lighter-than-air service and training men in that service?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I wonder if it would not add to the clarity if we should differentiate between balloons and dirigibles. These committees think the lighter-than-air work ought to be continued for the balloons. It is the dirigibles that we want to see them drop. We agree with every word that General Hero said, with every word that General Summerall said, with all that Major Elliott said for the chief of field artillery. That does not run counter at all to the committee's view.

Mr. DENEEN. Is it the view of your committee that you shall deprive these machines of motors, so that they can not go rapidly from place to place?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The Senator must understand that the machines that have motors are not used for observing fire.

Mr. DENEEN. No; but the lighter-than-air ships?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The dirigibles are not used for that kind of observation. It is the captive balloon, the observation balloon, that is used for observation.

Mr. DENEEN. My understanding is that the Army, in defending the coast and reaching out for 200 miles on the sea, would use the lighter-than-air craft, the dirigible, and not the balloon.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. In defensive and offensive operations either the Army or the Navy would use a dirigible armed with machine guns and all that.

Mr. DENEEN. The dirigible is a lighter-than-air ship; is it not?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. DENEEN. And in order to use them, somebody must be trained to use them. Where would you have that training done?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. By the Navy.

Mr. DENEEN. By the Navy; and, you think, at Scott Field?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Either at Scott Field or wherever else they want to.

Mr. DENEEN. Scott Field is about 800 miles from the Atlantic Ocean, and about 600 miles from the Gulf of Mexico. Does the Senator think the Navy should go 800 miles into the interior of the country to train the men?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. They went to the Great Lakes Training Station for training men.

Mr. DENEEN. I know they did; and an effort was made during the war to abolish that station, yet it furnished a very large number of the sailors who were trained for the Navy. During the World War an effort was made to abolish it and to take the station to the seashore.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I am not at all interested in what State these things are in. I do not think it is a matter in which we should consider State lines at all. We are trying as best we can to consider the Nation as one community.

Mr. DENEEN. I think the people of my State feel the same way. They rarely ask for any aid from the Government, but have cheerfully cooperated with the Government in making vast expenditures, running up to $100,000,000 by the State.

Now, may I ask the chairman of the subcommittee whether the training that he thinks should be given in the Navy would fit these flyers to serve the Army?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Absolutely. The navigation of one of these ships is more appropriate to the training of naval officers than it is to the training of an Army officer; and the Navy officer ought to be able to navigate over land as well as over sea.

Mr. DENEEN. Do the Navy officers feel that they should train the flyers for the Army?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I do not know that they have any feeling about it.

Mr. DENEEN. I have not been able to find any expression of opinion.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I have never asked them.

Mr. DENEEN. Is it not true, then, that every Army officer favors having the Army train the flyers for the Army, and having the Navy officers train the flyers for the Navy?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. If the Senator means the pilots of airplanes, yes; that is true.

Mr. DENEEN. And the operators of the dirigibles?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. If the Senator means the operators of these blimps, I do not think that is the feeling in the Army.

Mr. DENEEN. I only know from the testimony. We have had here the officers of the Army, who have the responsibility of conducting this branch of the service, and they are unanimous in their views. As to Colonel Paegelow, I happen to know him. He had command of the largest number of lighter-than-air ships that served in the World War. He lost, I think, 32 of his airships, if I remember the testimony.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Thirty-two of his balloons.

Mr. DENEEN. Thirty-two of his balloons; and he is a man of very wide experience. Now, may I ask, on page 34, referring to line 25, whether the observation balloons are not included under the generic name "lighter-than-air craft"? Are they not part of the family of lighter-than-air craft?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I suppose so, in the sense that a barge is a ship.

Mr. DENEEN. Why, then, is that made specific, and the generic term stricken out?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Because we wanted them to go on with their experimentation with observation balloons and did not want them to go on with dirigibles.

Mr. DENEEN. So you limit it to that part of the lighter-than-air service?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Precisely.

Mr. DENEEN. Mr. President, may I ask the chairman of the committee again as to whether or not an estimate was not submitted to the committee—I am not sure that it was, but I have one, not printed—of lighter-than-air requirements for 1930, of which items 18, 19, and 20 are for the following:

18. Balloons, standard, spherical, 19,000 cubic feet capacity, complete, $6,400.

19. Balloons, observation, 50,000 cubic feet capacity, complete, $34,000.

20. Winches, highly mobile, complete, $40,000.

Making an aggregate of $80,400. In order to operate these observation balloons, according to the views of the Army, it would be necessary to make that appropriation. Yet no appropriation is provided for. In other words, authority is given to operate these observation balloons, and no facilities are provided to execute the will of Congress.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. There is a copy of the statement the Senator is reading at page 35 of the Senate hearings.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, is the statement just made by the Senator from Illinois accurate?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Different Senators were talking to me at the same time the Senator was making his statement, and I heard only a part of what he said.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. I suggest that the Senator from Illinois restate it.

Mr. DENEEN. Referring to items 18, 19, and 20, appropriations are provided for balloons and winches and other matters, for the purpose of utilizing the power which the committee has placed in the hands of the Army on page 35, under the item "observation balloons."

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is right.

Mr. DENEEN. I understand that there is no appropriation adequately to equip Scott Field for observation balloons; that it would require $80,400.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The expression "adequately to equip Scott Field" is difficult to analyze.

Mr. DENEEN. To equip Scott Field so as to utilize the services of the 23 officers and the 506 enlisted men.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. They have 14 observation balloons in storage at this moment which they can take out and use, and I do not see any sense in buying six more, when they have a lot in storage which they can use right away.

Mr. DENEEN. As I stated a while ago, those are balloons that were left over from the World War among the 600, and the fabric has deteriorated.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. They ought to use what they have.

Mr. DENEEN. In view of the condition of those airships, each one prefers the other to use them because of the danger.

Now, referring again to page 35 of the hearings, may I ask if it is not a fact that items 1 to 17, inclusive, could be used in the event the Navy took over the work of lighter-than-air activities at Scott Field?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I believe that they probably would be useful; yes.

Mr. DENEEN. Then to equip Scott Field to perform its functions an appropriation should be carried for every item from 1 to 20, inclusive.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It would better go in the Navy bill, though.

Mr. DENEEN. Does the Navy bill provide appropriations for such equipment?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. In the Navy bill provision is made for lighter-than-air development, many million dollars.

Mr. DENEEN. Could it be utilized at Scott Field?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It could be utilized anywhere they wanted to utilize it.

Mr. DENEEN. They would have to get authority of law to operate at Scott Field, would they not?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. A presidential order would do it.

Mr. DENEEN. Perhaps so. The necessity for this large sum—$667,900—arises out of the fact that there has been no appropriation for two years for that needed equipment, and so the appropriation per annum really would be half of that.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. No; in last year's bill we appropriated $13,000 for observation balloons.

Mr. DENEEN. Thirteen thousand five hundred dollars for two balloons.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. DENEEN. Why did the committee recommend the appropriation for two balloons if they had 14 or 15 useless ones stored away?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Because they wanted two new ones, and we gave them the two new ones, and they have not put them to use yet.

Mr. DENEEN. Have they been constructed?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. One of them is finished, I think, but I am not sure.

Mr. DENEEN. I have occupied more time than I had expected to take on this matter, and I shall give way to others, calling attention again, briefly, to the way this matter has been developed in the bill.

I think the understanding of the Army is that the word "construction" on page 26, does not cover any appropriation whatsoever; that it is placed there as a notice to the Army not to submit any estimates.

On page 33, in line 15, the word "airships" should be inserted before "balloons." The balloons are part of the lighter-than-air service, and a small part.

On page 34 the committee amendment should not be adopted. It is carried in line 24, to strike out "lighter-than-air." The term "observation balloons," in line 25, should be stricken out, because that is specific. "Lighter-than-air" is generic, and covers them.

Again, in line 1, page 35, "no part thereof may be expended for the production of lighter-than-air equipment," would indicate that the Navy, if that activity is transferred to the Navy, would have no such equipment whatever. There would be no improvements made, and nothing could be done.

The Army officers are unanimous in this matter; they feel that they should defend the coast line as a part of the functions of the Army, and in case of war all the fliers trained by the Navy would have to go with the fleet, because the fleet would meet the fliers from enemy countries. So the Navy would gather our Navy fliers together, and there would be left unprotected 7,500 miles of shore line of continental United States.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I desire to speak briefly upon this amendment. I have been impressed, during the last few weeks, with the speeches made upon the cruiser bill and upon the peace pact by various Senators who represented and urged the great and growing importance of the development of the air program of this and other countries.

I heard the Senator from Iowa [Mr. BROOKHART] speak at length as to the great availability and desirability of aircraft in time of war, if war should come. I heard the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER] refer the other day to the same matter. I heard one Senator after another refer to the fact that air forces are growing in importance as a matter of offense, and as a matter of defense. It does not seem to be denied by anybody that the other great nations of the earth are developing air programs, both military and civil, far faster than is the United States. We have recently seen sailing over the Capital of the United States, over this very dome under which we sit, an airship which came across the Atlantic from Germany. Yet we propose by this amendment largely to abandon the activities of the Army of the United States in the development of this branch of the service.

I find a strange confusion between the proponents of this amendment. I heard the statement of the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] early in the debate this afternoon upon this item, when he took the position that Scott Field should be abandoned so far as airships go, and should be utilized by the Army for heavier-than-air craft. He said that about the only difference that would be noted by the people of that region would be that they would see no blimps and no dirigibles there, but would see great airplane activity upon that field.

His associate in this endeavor is the distinguished junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BINGHAM]. I want to read what the Senator said about Scott Field in the hearings. It is found on page 284. The following occurred:

Senator GLENN. As I understand you, Senator BINGHAM, the concise answer to my question would be that really the purpose is to abandon Scott Field absolutely; that is, you are to take East all of the activities pertaining to the Navy, and take somewhere else all of the activities pertaining to the Army? Is that right?

Senator BINGHAM. No. So far as I am concerned, having visited Scott Field and Lakehurst, which is the naval lighter-than-air station, and being a very enthusiastic believer in the future of rigid airships and in the growth and the use of rigid airships, and having done all I could to help secure for the Navy a very large appropriation for the building of the two largest dirigibles which are now under contract, I believe that Lakehurst will be required for their use and that the Navy should be allotted Scott Field for training in the smaller types, such as the blimps and the kind of work that is going on there now.

The Senator from Pennsylvania has just said, as I understood him, that the authorities propose to abandon the use of these little blimps; that they are no good for anything; that they are no good for training; that they are no good for combat. But the Senator from Connecticut, his colaborer in this movement pertaining to Scott Field, says, "No; we propose to keep it for the Navy for the development of blimps." There is no agreement even among those who propose this amendment.

I call attention to the fact that I have had made in the last few days a map of the United States showing every location where air activities are being carried on in a large way at either a military post or a naval post. I see that if Scott Field is abandoned, if it is taken away, and if there are taken to the East these lighter-than-air operations, and the heavier-than-air operations are taken somewhere else, not a single State touching the Mississippi River, from its source in Minnesota to its mouth in Louisiana, will have any sort of a military station or a naval station where air activities are carried on, except Chanute Field, and there is a movement under way now, a very definite movement, to abandon Chanute Field.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. How about the very extensive operations at Shreveport, La.?

Mr. GLENN. I asked the Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Commerce to make this map for me, I not being familiar with the situation, and the map does not show that activity at Shreveport. I do not deny that it is there; but even if it is, it is almost at the very southernmost part of the great Mississippi Valley.

I call the attention of the men from the West to this fact: That if the authorities abandon this field at Belleville, Ill., near St. Louis, there will not be a single field from that point on in the great Northwest, north of Fort Leavenworth and north of Fort Riley, not a field in Iowa, in Nebraska, in South Dakota, in North Dakota, in Colorado, in Wyoming, in Montana, in Idaho, in Oregon, in Nevada, in Utah, in Arizona, or in New Mexico. Not only will a great part of the Mississippi Valley, with the possible exception of Shreveport, be entirely eliminated from training in the air but this whole tremendous section of the Northwest, with the exception of a naval field in the State of Washington, just one, will be without any military or naval field.

Mr. McMASTER. The Senator has overlooked the Selfridge Field, has he not?

Mr. GLENN. Michigan does not touch or border upon the Missippippi River, and I am informed by the junior Senator from Michigan that there is a very positive and determined effort under way now for the abandonment of Selfridge Field, which will add Michigan to this great galaxy of States, if that is accomplished.

I look here upon the eastern coast of America. There I see grouped stars both red and blue, the red signifying a military post, where these operations are being carried on, the blue naval posts, prepared by the Department of Commerce. I find there grouped closely together nine great fields.

Why is it that if Scott Field is to be used either by the Navy for blimps, for observation balloons or dirigibles, or for the Army by heavier-than-air craft, that it is not necessary that there be some provision for construction there?

Why is it that of all the 18 or more military fields devoted to aircraft purposes in the United States this is the only one singled out by the amendment? Why is it that this is the only one as to which they say to the Army and Navy and fiscal officers of the United States that they shall not spend upon it a single dollar, and yet in the next breath we are told, "Why, we intend to use it and we think it should be used," one group saying that it should be used for blimps and dirigibles by the Navy, and the other that it should be used for airplanes and heavier-than-air craft by the Army.

I submit that it is not a proper amendment and that the bill should go out from the Senate leaving the Army and the Navy of the United States and the Commander in Chief of both free to use their discretion, and free to build up Scott Field if the demands of the Army or Navy are such as to require it.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I only wish to say a word in reply to what the junior Senator from Illinois has just said. The Mississippi Valley is not being left undefended. The Texas frontier has the most important air stations of the entire Army. A very large establishment is being built at Shreveport and the bill carries hundreds of thousands of dollars for it.

Mr. GLENN. I distinctly limited my remarks pertaining to the Mississippi Valley, to that great body of States which the Mississippi River touches from its source to its mouth, and Texas is not included among them.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I will only say that there has been no attempt in the allocation of the various air stations to consider the benefits which might be brought to particular States. There has been no effort to allot them uniformly to all the States. They have been put where strategic necessity seemed to call for them.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Mr. President, understanding that it is expected that there will be further discussion of the pending amendment, I ask to make a brief statement and submit a request for unanimous consent.

Having arranged to leave the city to-morrow at 3 o'clock, I would like to have the opportunity of presenting now an important amendment to this bill, and to the end that the Senate may consider my request, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment and other committee amendments undisposed of be temporarily passed over and that I be permitted to present the amendment out of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the request of the Senator from Arkansas is granted.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I now submit the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. After line 22, page 81, add the following——

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question before his amendment is read?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Certainly.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is an appropriation that is desired to be carried by the amendment, as I understand it, and not an authorization?

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; it is an appropriation.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Then I think the Senator would want to change the language in two or three places. There is a reference to "any sums appropriated under this authorization." That occurs in two places at least. The Senator had better substitute the words "hereby appropriated."

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; I would like to do that. I will change the language by striking out all down to the word "the," at the end of line 4, and at the end of line 5 insert the words "is hereby appropriated," so as to make it an appropriation. Where is the language to which the Senator refers?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. If the Senator will look at the first proviso he will find that it reads:

Any sums appropriated under this authorization.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I ask permission to change that so it will read "any sums hereby appropriated."

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Now, if the Senator will look at the last proviso——

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. Yes; in line 21 I will change it so it will read "that any sum hereby appropriated."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator has the right to perfect his amendment. The amendment as perfected will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 81, after line 22, add the following:

The sum of $3,654,000, or so much thereof as may be required, is hereby appropriated for the relief of the States of Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas in the matter of roads and bridges damaged or destroyed by the floods of 1927, said sum of $3,654,000 to be apportioned as follows: To the State of Missouri, $258,418; to the State of Mississippi, $628,000; to the State of Louisiana, $967,582; to the State of Arkansas, $1,804,000: Provided, That any sums hereby appropriated shall be used to reimburse the States of Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas for money (1) actually expended in repairing and replacing damages to roads and bridges on the State highway systems of the respective States in amounts certified to the United States Bureau of Public Roads and verified by the bureau from records of such department, as being so expended, and (2) and to be expended on such road and bridge repairs not yet made, in accordance with the provisions of the Federal highway act, except that the provision limiting Federal payments to not exceed $15,000 per mile shall not apply and the provision restricting the expenditure of Federal funds upon roads on the system of Federal-aid highways shall not apply to the extent that such expenditure is hereby authorized on roads and bridges not on but which are extensions of said system within municipalities having a population of 2,500 or more, as shown by the last available census: Provided further, That any sum hereby appropriated for any State shall become available when the State shall have actually expended or shall have made available for expenditure a like sum from State funds for the purposes contained herein.

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas. I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania for calling my attention to the changes.

The amendment follows the precedent of last year in the case of Vermont, New Hampshire, and Kentucky. A bill in substantially the same language as the amendment which I have proposed has been unanimously favorably reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and is now pending before the Senate. In the case relating to Vermont, New Hampshire, and Kentucky of last year there was an item incorporated in one of the general appropriation bills for the sum of $5,000,000 plus for the relief of those States after a favorable report on the bill had been made by the Senate.

I ask to have printed in the RECORD the report of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry on the bill to which reference has been made by the Senator from Pennsylvania and myself.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The report is as follows:

[S. Rept. No. 1613, 70th Cong., 2d sess.]

FLOOD RELIEF FOR STATES OF MISSOURI, MISSISSIPPI, LOUISIANA, AND ARKANSAS

Mr. MCNARY, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, submitted the following report (to accompany S. 5201):

The Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5201) to authorize an appropriation for the relief of the States of Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas on account of roads and bridges damaged or destroyed by floods of 1927, having considered the same, report thereon with the recommendation that the bill do pass with the following amendments:

Insert the numeral "(1)" at the beginning of line 5, page 2.

On page 2, lines 7 and 8, strike out "as may be determined by the United States Bureau of Public Roads" and insert in lieu thereof "certified to the United States Bureau of Public Roads and verified by the bureau from records of such department, as being so expended, and (2)".

On page 2, line 19, after the word "census," insert: ": Provided further, That any sum appropriated under this authorization for any State shall become available when the State shall have actually expended or shall have made available for expenditure a like sum from State funds for the purposes contained herein."

These amendments conform to the suggestions of the Department of Agriculture, as indicated by the following letter addressed to the chairman of the committee:

JANUARY 29, 1928.

Hon. CHARLES L. MCNARY,
Chairman Committee on Agriculture and Forestry,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR: Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of January 8, with which was inclosed a copy of S. 5201 for consideration and report.

This bill would authorize an appropriation of $3,654,000, or so much thereof as may be required, for the relief of the States of Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas in the matter of roads and bridges damaged or destroyed by the floods of 1927, of which sum $258,418 will be for the State of Missouri, $628,000 for the State of Mississippi, $967,582 for the State of Louisiana, and $1,804,000 for the State of Arkansas. Any sum appropriated under this authorization shall be used to reimburse the States named for money actually expended in repairing and replacing damages to roads and bridges on the State highway systems in such amounts as may be determined by the Bureau of Public Roads, and also on such road and bridge repairs as have not yet been made, such expenditure to be in accordance with the provisions of the Federal highway act except that the $15,000 per mile limitation shall not apply and the provision respecting the expenditure of Federal funds upon roads on the system of Federal-aid highways would be modified to permit such expenditure on roads and bridges not on said system but which are extensions of said system within municipalities having a population of 2,500 or more.

The Bureau of Public Roads of this department made no investigation of the extent of the damages to roads and bridges from the 1927 floods in any of the States named, and it is now believed impossible to determine either the actual or the relative damage which resulted from said floods by an examination of the existing roads and bridges which in the meantime have been repaired and maintained or which may have suffered further damage from other causes. If the appropriations proposed should be made under the bill as now written, the only method by which the Bureau of Public Roads could determine the money actually expended by the States named in repairing and replacing the damages to their roads and bridges would be by checking the records of the State highway departments or accepting certification from those departments as to such expenditures. It therefore is suggested that it would simplify the duty which the bill would impose on the Bureau of Public Roads if it were revised to provide for reimbursement to the States for money actually expended in such amounts as may be certified to this department by the State highway departments and verified by the Bureau of Public Roads from the records of the State highway departments.

Under the language of the bill, which would permit expenditure of the funds on the road and bridge repairs not yet made in accordance with the provisions of the Federal highway act, the attention of the committee is directed to the fact that the State would have to match the Federal funds under the bill as it now reads. This is merely called to the attention of the committee in order that if such was not the intention of the proposed legislation it may be appropriately amended.

A similar bill (S. 4578) was submitted to this department for report after the close of the last session of Congress. Report on this latter bill was made to your committee under date of November 20, 1928. Prior to submitting such report, the same was submitted to the Bureau of the Budget, pursuant to Circular No. 49 of that bureau, and returned to this department under date of November 9, 1928, at which time the Director of the Bureau of the Budget advised that the proposed legislation would be in conflict with the financial program of the President. The bill now under discussion (S. 5201) has been similarly referred, and under date of January 25 the Director of the Bureau of the Budget advised this department that the legislation proposed therein would be in conflict with the financial program of the President.

Sincerely yours,

W. M. JARDINE, Secretary.

At a hearing before the committee testimony from the State highway departments of the four States concerned in the enactment of this legislation clearly revealed the need of the relief sought in the provisions of this bill.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, in view of the fact that this is a great emergency which in the nonmilitary part of the bill we have attempted to provide for, and in view of the fact that this particular suggestion has the unanimous approval of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, while I am not authorized to speak in behalf of the committee on it, I personally do not feel like making any point of order or any protest against it.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I desire to say just a word with reference to the amendment. I have not had an opportunity to examine the report, but as I gather from the statement of the Senator from Arkansas the amendment contemplates the payment by the United States for damages to roads and bridges in various States by flood. If such damages are paid in one place they should be paid elsewhere. I can see that in the future there will be all sorts of requests really based upon the same principle involved. I merely want to say that favorable action on this matter will not be treated by me at least as a precedent. I think it is a proposition which really ought to have much more careful consideration than will be given in this way.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Arkansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, does the Senator from Pennsylvania care to proceed further to-night?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I had hoped we could finish with the committee amendments to-night, but I understand there are other Senators who wish to be heard and that it will be impossible to hold a quorum here long enough to have a roll-call vote to-night. Therefore I am willing to yield to the Senator from Kansas in order that he may ask for a recess until 12 o'clock to-morrow.

READJUSTMENT OF PAY OF COMMISSIONED AND ENLISTED PERSONNEL

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, I am about to submit a request and I want to advise the Senate why I make the request. By direction of the Committee on Naval Affairs I ask unanimous consent to report on behalf of the committee the bill (H. R. 12032) to amend the act entitled "An act to readjust the pay and allowances of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service," approved June 10, 1922, as amended, and I submit a report (No. 1664) thereon.

This bill is similar to Senate bill 3692, which the Senate passed on May 16, 1928. The House had before it a companion bill. They passed their bill, which comes to us, and we have approved it by amending it to the same extent as we did our bill which was sent to the House. I am now asking on behalf of the committee that the House bill be taken up for immediate consideration.

Mr. CURTIS. Is it unanimously reported by the committee?

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. It is.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from California?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill H. R. 12032, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment, on page 4, after line 3, to insert an additional section, as follows:

SEC. 5. That the Director of the Coast and Geodetic Survey shall have the pay and allowances of a rear admiral (lower half) of the Navy.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to readjust the pay and allowances of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service," approved June 10, 1922, as amended, is hereby further amended by striking out in paragraph 12 of section 1 of said act the following clause, lines 12, 13, 14, and 15 of said paragraph, volume 42, Statutes at Large, page 627, "Commissioned warrant officers on the active list with creditable records shall, after 6 years' commissioned service, receive the pay of the second period, and after 12 years' commissioned service, receive the pay of the third period," and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Commissioned warrant officers with creditable records on the active list shall receive pay as follows: During the first 10 years of commissioned service, the pay of the second period; after 10 years of commissioned service, the pay of the third period; after 20 years of commisisoned service, the pay of the fourth period."

SEC. 2. That section 7 of said act is hereby amended by substituting a colon for the period, volume 42, Statutes at Large, page 629, line 4, and adding the following proviso at the end of said paragraph:

"Provided further, That when the total base pay, pay for length of service and allowances for subsistence and rental of quarters authorized in this act for any commissioned warrant officer shall exceed $5,000 a year, the amount of the allowances to which such officer is entitled shall be reduced by the amount above $5,000, and the pay and allowances of a commissioned warrant officer receiving the pay and allowances of the second pay period shall not exceed $3,158 a year for the first 3 years of commissioned service, $3,258 a year for the next 3 years of commissioned service, $3,358 a year for the next 3 years, and $3,458 a year for from 9 to 10 years' commissioned service."

SEC. 3. That section 10 of said act is hereby amended by striking out in paragraph 1, lines 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 of said paragraph, volume 42, Statutes at Large, page 630, the following:

"That on and after July 1, 1922, the monthly base pay of warrant officers of the Navy and Coast Guard shall be as follows: During the first 6 years of service at sea, $153; on shore, $135; during the second 6 years of service at sea, $168; on shore, $147; after 12 years' service at sea, $189; on shore, $168," and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"That hereafter the monthly base pay of warrant officers of the Navy and Coast Guard shall be as follows: During the first 6 years of service, $153; during the second 6 years of service, $168; after 12 years' service, $189."

SEC. 4. That nothing contained herein shall be construed so as to reduce the pay, allowances, emoluments, or other benefits, including the benefits of the act of June 10, 1926, Forty-fourth Statutes at Large, page 725, that any person now in the service is receiving at the date of the passage of this act.

SEC. 5. That the Director of the Coast and Geodetic Survey shall have the pay and allowances of a rear admiral (lower half) of the Navy.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

GRAND VALLEY RECLAMATION PROJECT, COLORADO

Mr. PHIPPS. Mr. President, on a recent call of the calendar for unobjected bills, Calendar No. 1510, Senate bill 4710, was passed over at the request of a Senator to whom I have since furnished the information he desired, and his objection is now withdrawn. The bill merely authorizes an irrigation enterprise in Colorado to enter into a contract for the erection of a hydroelectric power plant. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the measure, so that it may go to the House.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator what river the project affects?

Mr. PHIPPS. The water is to be taken out of the upper Colorado River, but it in no wise affects the appropriations from the stream.

Mr. BRATTON. It does not affect the Rio Grande?

Mr. PHIPPS. No.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4710) authorizing the sale of surplus power developed under the Grand Valley reclamation project, Colorado, which had been reported from the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation with an amendment, on page 1, line 6, after the word "project," to strike out "the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to enter into contracts for a period of not exceeding 25 years, for the sale or development of any surplus power, and the moneys derived from such sale or development shall be credited as provided in Subsection I of section 4 of the act approved December 5, 1924 (43 Stat. L. pp. 672, 703): Provided, That no such contract shall be made without the approval of the Grand Valley Water Users' Association, which has contracted with the United States to repay the cost of said project as adjusted by the act approved May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. L. pp. 636, 637, 638)" and insert in lieu thereof "the Grand Valley Waters Users' Association, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized to enter into a contract or contracts for a period of not exceeding 25 years for the sale or development of any surplus power or power privileges in said Grand Valley reclamation project, Colorado," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever a development of power is necessary for the irrigation of lands under the Grand Valley reclamation project, Colorado, or an opportunity is afforded for the development of power under said project, the Grand Valley Water Users' Association, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized to enter into a contract or contracts for a period of not exceeding 25 years for the sale or development of any surplus power or power privileges in said Grand Valley reclamation project, Colorado.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REFERENCE OF EXECUTIVE MESSAGES

The VICE PRESIDENT. In accordance with an order of the Senate heretofore adopted, the Chair refers to their appropriate committees sundry Executive messages.

RECESS

Mr. CURTIS. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon to-morrow.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) took a recess until to-morrow, Friday, February 8, 1929, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 7, 1929

FOREIGN SERVICE

To be consul general

John E. Kehl, of Ohio, now a Foreign Service officer of class 3 and a consul, to be a consul general of the United States of America.

COMMISSIONER OF IMMIGRATION

John B. McCandless, of Pennsylvania, to be commissioner of immigration at the port of Philadelphia, Pa.

APPOINTMENTS BY TRANSFER IN THE REGULAR ARMY

FINANCE DEPARTMENT

First Lieut. Charles Roderick Mize, Field Artillery (detailed in Finance Department), with rank from July 1, 1920.

SIGNAL CORPS

First Lieut. Harold Oakes Bixby, Coast Artillery Corps (detailed in Signal Corps), with rank from May 13, 1926.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

To be colonel

Lieut. Col. Jay Paul Hopkins, Coast Artillery Corps, from February 2, 1929.

To be lieutenant colonel

Maj. Edmund Clivious Waddill, Infantry, from February 1, 1929.

MEDICAL CORPS

To be captains

First Lieut. Harvey Cecil Maxwell, Medical Corps, from February 1, 1929.

First Lieut. James Ogilvie Gillespie, Medical Corps, from February 1, 1929.

PROMOTION IN THE PHILIPPINE SCOUTS

To be lieutenant colonel

Maj. Allen Samuel Fletcher, Philippine Scouts, from February 2, 1929.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

MARINE CORPS

Maj. Gen. Wendell C. Neville to be Major General Commandant of the Marine Corps for a period of four years from the 5th day of March, 1929.

First Lieut. Albert W. Paul to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 22d day of December, 1928.

Second Lieut. Veryl H. Dartt to be a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps from the 5th day of December, 1928.

Second Lieut. Robert J. Straub to be a first lieutenant in the Marine Corps from the 2d day of January, 1929.

Corp. Lester S. Hamel to be a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps for a probationary period of two years from the 30th day of January, 1929.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, February 7, 1929

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, help us to remember that we are here only a little while and there a long, long while. Breathe upon us Thy precious Holy Spirit and prepare us for the growth of every good intention and the nurture of every good desire. We recall our past deflections from the ways of rectitude. Strengthen us, that we may never even falter wherein we have failed before. Keep us from coarseness of speech, and may the deepest thoughts of our natures meet Thy approval. Bless us, qualify us for the very best that lies before us. Consider our infirmities and grant us the sweetening grace of Thy forbearance. O Father, may we never lose Heaven out of our hearts; keep them in harmony with Thy holy will and in tune with that music shall resound and echo forever. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ANNIVERSARY OF LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY

Mr. COOPER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, again we are approaching the anniversary of the date of the birth of Abraham Lincoln. I ask unanimous consent that next Tuesday, February 12, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, the Gettysburg address may be read by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MOORE].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent that next Tuesday, February 12, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table, the Gettysburg address may be read by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MOORE]. Is there objection?

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Reserving the right to object, is it not customary for the Speaker to appoint a Member to read the address?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. I want to protect the prerogatives of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is amply protected in this particular case. [Laughter.] Is there objection?

There was no objection.

BEAL NURSERY AT EAST TAWAS, MICH.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 10374) an act for the acquisition of lands for an addition to the Beal Nursery at East Tawas, Mich., disagree with the Senate amendment, and ask for a conference.

The Clerk read the title to the bill and the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JONES. Reserving the right to object, I do not note any limitation of amount.

Mr. HAUGEN. The House made it $2,500 and the Senate increased it to $25,000. It is going to conference.

Mr. JONES. No other change that was brought before the committee?

Mr. HAUGEN. No.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Speaker appointed as conferees on part of the House, Messrs. HAUGEN, PURNELL, and ASWELL.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION OF SUNDRY STREAMS

Mr. REID of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 13484), an act authorizing preliminary examinations of sundry streams with a view to the control of their floods, and for other purposes, and agree to the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the bill and the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the bill and the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

CONSTRUCTION OF CERTAIN NAVAL VESSELS

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 11526, "An act to authorize the construction of certain naval vessels, and for other purposes," with Senate amendments, and agree to the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill and the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the bill and the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. HUDDLESTON. I object.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as objection has been preferred, I move that the bill H. R. 11526 be taken from the Speaker's table and the Senate amendments agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois moves that the bill H. R. 11526 be taken from the Speaker's table and the Senate amendments be agreed to. The Clerk will report the first Senate amendment:

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 12, after the word "States," insert "except such material or parts as are not customarily manufactured in such Government plants."

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY of Texas. Why does not the gentleman take up the amendments and act on them in the House?

Mr. BRITTEN. That is what we are doing now.

Mr. Speaker, am I recognized for an hour?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized for one hour.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I do not think it will be necessary to use an hour, because the bill as it comes to the House is an improved piece of legislation, from two viewpoints at least. The controversial item in the bill as it left the House was the so-called Dallinger amendment providing that the construction of eight cruisers should be in the Government navy yards. The Dallinger amendment also provided that various parts of the construction, including main engines, armor, and armament should be constructed in the navy yards, arsenals, and Government ordnance plants.

I take it that the Members of the House who voted for the Dallinger amendment did so because they favored navy-yard construction. In the first place, they probably feel that navy yards can construct these ships as cheaply or more cheaply than they can be constructed in private yards. That was one contention. The other is that having navy yards with full equipment to construct these ships always gives the Government a lever in competition with the private yards for the construction of these seventeen or eighteen million dollar vessels. That is a good thought, but the Dallinger amendment went further than that. It imposed upon the navy yards of the Government the construction of these ships in detail, the making of gun forgings, of gun mounts, of fire control, and so forth. Take the matter of fire control. The fire control on one of these ships costs $500,000. It is very largely a proprietary piece of construction; in other words, it is largely covered by patents. There are at least four big concerns like the General Electric Co. and others who compete with each other for the installation of these enormous fire-control systems aboard ship. Of course, the navy yards could not build that fire control. Two of our yards do build engines and boilers. The rest of them do not.

Optical equipment, gun forgings, and air compressors are not manufactured in Government yards.

The articles purchased by the shipyards vary somewhat, but in general shipyards purchase steel plates and shapes of all kinds, rivet material, steel castings, piping, fittings, various auxiliaries, such as pumps, winches, ventilation fans, and other materials and apparatus which are manufactured in quantities by outside concerns, or which involve special equipment for their manufacture and which, therefore, can be procured by the shipyard more cheaply by purchase than by manufacture. The total cost of materials purchased would probably represent in the neighborhood of 45 per cent of the total cost of the vessel, the remainder being represented by shipyard labor and miscellaneous expenses.

Turbines and reduction gear for each cruiser will cost in the neighborhood of $800,000. There is liberal competition among manufacturers of practically everything that goes into these ships.

Private yards and industries should be encouraged. They are a great national asset.

The bill comes back to us amended so as to benefit the navy yard. The original Dallinger amendment has been improved by the Senate. Therefore, I felt that my unanimous-consent request to immediately concur in all Senate amendments was a proper one. I can see no disagreement on the part of the House.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I do not believe there is any controversy about this amendment. I notice that the time limit is still in the bill. Is the gentleman in the position to state whether the time limit now meets with the approval of the President?

Mr. BRITTEN. The time limit is not in controversy this afternoon.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. How about the President's views on that?

Mr. BRITTEN. The House passed the bill with the time limit in it, and the Senate has not amended that time limit, so that that matter is not in controversy.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. It is before us nevertheless.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois to concur in the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, after line 2, insert:

"SEC. 5. First. That the Congress favors a treaty or treaties with all the principal maritime nations regulating the conduct of belligerents and neutrals in war at sea, including the inviolability of private property thereon.

"Second. That such treaties be negotiated, if practically possible, prior to the meeting of the conference on the limitation of armaments in 1931."

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Is the Senate amendment subject to amendment?

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois has control of the time.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Is the Senate amendment subject to amendment?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois is in control of the time, and if he yields for that purpose, an amendment could be offered, but if he moves the previous question, that would prevent any amendment, if the previous question should be adopted.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I have been directed by the Committee on Naval Affairs not to yield for an amendment of any kind on the bill. The desire of the committee and the apparent wish of the country is to have the bill become a law as quickly as possible. If amendments should be agreed to, it would naturally throw the bill into conference. I move the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, before that is done may I propound a further parliamentary inquiry?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Will a motion to concur with an amendment have priority over the motion of the gentleman from Illinois to concur? May some one, without the consent of the gentleman from Illinois, be recognized to make such a motion?

The SPEAKER. That would not be in order after the previous question is ordered.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Under the procedure now being followed, if the motion of the gentleman from Illinois to order the previous question be adopted, that means that all debate and opportunity of getting any information is absolutely foreclosed?

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of giving information to the House, I shall withdraw my motion for the previous question for the present.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. I have no objection to discussing the merits of the bill.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. I yield for an inquiry.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman explain to the House the meaning and purport of the amendment now before the House?

Mr. BRITTEN. Yes. The amendment speaks for itself. The desire of the Senate in presenting this amendment evidently was to promote a conference between the principal maritime powers of the world for an agreement on the rights of belligerents as well as neutrals in war on the seas. It is merely the expression of a desire upon the part of Congress for that kind of a conference. That sort of thing has been going on for years, not only as far back as 500 years before Christ, but in the past 20 years efforts have been made to reach an agreement between maritime powers upon the rights of neutrals at sea.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Has the gentleman any information or figures as to the relative strength of the various navies 500 years before Christ, to which he has just referred?

Mr. BRITTEN. The problem of neutral rights at sea is a very old one. Pericles, who ruled in Athens some 450 years before Christ, introduced a bill calling for a conference at Athens, according to Plutarch—to deliberate * * * concerning the sea, that all might sail it fearlessly and keep the peace.

There was a codification of the laws of the sea in time of war, published at Barcelona as early as 1494. Two conflicting interests have persisted through the years: First, the interest of neutrals in continuing their trade in time of war, as in time of peace, without interference; and second, the will of belligerents to prevent their enemies from obtaining aid from neutral sources.

Mr. Speaker, the United States has insisted from the beginning that it should enjoy the rights of a neutral in time of war between European powers. This is the so-called doctrine of the freedom of the sea.

Benjamin Franklin favored a clause in the treaty of peace with Great Britain in 1783, providing that—all merchants or traders with their unarmed vessels, employed in commerce, * * * shall be allowed to pass free unmolested.

The failure of this provision, made the War of 1812 possible; indeed, it was a failure to observe this principle that brought on the naval troubles between our country and France in 1798.

Due to the opposition of Great Britain, the attempts of our statesmen to readjust the principles of maritime law in the treaty of Ghent, signed December 24, 1814, ended in failure. Our country reasserted its position on neutral rights at the outbreak of the Crimean War in 1854, but to no purpose. The United States was willing to surrender its rights to employ privateers on the condition that other powers would accept the American claim to full freedom on the seas as a principle of international law. Nothing came of this proposal.

Mr. Speaker, when the powers met in Paris in 1856 to liquidate the Crimean War, they set forth in the preamble to their declaration of Paris the belief that the differences of opinion between neutrals and belligerents should be adjusted in terms of a uniform doctrine. The declaration set forth that: Privateering should be abolished; that a neutral flag protects enemies' goods with the exception of contraband; that neutral goods, with the exception of contraband, are not liable to capture; that blockades can be effective only when maintained by a force competent to prevent access to the coast of the enemy. The United States objected to the first provision on the ground that it is as injurious to a private shipper to have his goods seized by a privateer as by a man-of-war. In other words, the United States would give up privateering if the other powers would grant the immunity to all noncontraband private property, whether on neutral or enemy ships. In 1858 the United States returned to the problem of neutrality by proposing to Great Britain a treaty along the lines of the declaration of Paris. Britain refused.

In 1860 an effort was made in the House of Commons to bring about an agreement upon the complete immunity for all merchant ships, but without avail.

During our Civil War our Government turned from its traditional policy and emphasized its rights as a belligerent. The ports of the seceding States were closed by decree, and our Government devoted its energies to an effective blockade. British traders adopted a scheme of sailing to Bermuda and other West Indian ports, on the theory that they would thus avoid capture for carrying contraband or for "running" a blockade. International law recognized no right of a belligerent to interfere with commerce between two British or other neutral ports. To meet this situation the United States evolved the "doctrine of continuous voyage." Our Supreme Court declared that, notwithstanding a stop in a neutral port, there was one continuous voyage from England to the belligerent. This doctrine proved to be embarrassing to the United States during the World War when American vessels bound for European neutral ports were held by the British to be subject to the rights of belligerents to search and seizure, under our own "doctrine of continuous voyage."

In 1899 John Hay, Secretary of State, instructed our American delegates to the First Hague Conference to push the project for complete immunity of private property at sea; but they met with little success.

In 1904 our Congress passed a resolution calling upon the President to obtain the—incorporation into the permanent law of civilized nations of the principles of exemptions of all private property at sea, not contraband of war, from capture or destruction by belligerent.

In 1907 Secretary Root instructed the American delegates to the Second Hague Conference to urge the adoption of the following articles:

The private property of all citizens of the signatory powers, with the exception of contraband of war, shall be exempt from capture or seizure at sea by the armed vessels or military forces of the said power. However, this provision in no way implies the inviolability of vessels which may attempt to enter a port blockaded by the naval forces of the abovementioned powers, nor the cargoes of the said vessels.

This proposal was opposed by the British delegation, with a counterproposal that Great Britain was ready to abandon the principle of contraband in case of war between the powers which may sign a convention to that effect; with the further proviso that the right of search would be exercised only for the purpose of ascertaining the neutral character of merchant ships. The British proposal was also defeated.

DURING THE WORLD WAR

Mr. Speaker, the declaration of London, signed in 1909, setting forth existing rules of international law at some length, was never accepted by any of the powers. At the outbreak of the World War, however, President Wilson proposed to the belligerents, under date of August 6, 1914, that both sides agree to be bound by the provisions of the declaration of London. To this proposal Germany and Austria agreed, but the British Government practically refused. The United States thereupon withdrew its suggestions and served notice that it would insist "that the rights and duties of the United States and its citizens in the present war be defined by the existing rules of international law and the treaties of the United States, irrespective of the provisions of the declaration of London."

The law of the sea was "interpreted" by the principal belligerents and "adapted to modern conditions" in such ways as to bring a continuous series of protests from the United States against violations of established neutral rights. The contraband lists were extended by leaps and bounds from the earliest days of the war and the age-old distinction between absolute contraband and conditional contraband was soon obliterated. The final British contraband list, as published July 3, 1917, covered thousands of articles beginning with "abrasive materials" and ending with "yeast." Neutral vessels, instead of being searched at sea, were taken to British ports and often held for months while evidence to justify the seizure of their cargoes was accumulated. The burden of proof in prize courts was shifted from the captor to the captured. The doctrine of "continuous voyage" was revived and indefinitely extended to justify interference with American trade with European neutrals.

The British extended their blockade almost to American ports, and in the case of European neutral ports little attention was paid to the principles of international law. Rights of neutrals were wholly ignored. But in the case of Great Britain no American lives were lost, the losses being confined to American property. The violation of international law by Germany, however, involved not only the loss of property but the loss of American lives, a circumstance which led the United States to enter the war on the side of the Allies. When the United States took this step she accepted, in effect, the allied interpretations of the law and immediately proceeded to violate the rights of neutrals.

OUR NEUTRALITY

Mr. Speaker, by the terms of a diplomatic agreement effected by an exchange of notes May 19, 1927, Great Britain and the United States have agreed to press no claims on behalf of any national claiming loss or damages as a result of war, each Government undertaking to satisfy the claims of its own nationals. Under the terms of this diplomatic arrangement both Great Britain and the United States reserve the right in any future war to assume the same position as to neutral or belligerent rights that it maintained during the World War. The meaning of international law at sea in time of war is left in complete uncertainty, and this in spite of President Wilson's insistence among his "14 points" on January 8, 1918, of the "absolute freedom of navigation on the seas outside territorial waters alike in peace and war, except as the seas may be closed in whole or in part by international action for enforcement of international covenants." The British Admiralty successfully blocked all attempts to deal with the freedom of the seas issue in the treaty of Versailles. President Wilson explained, however, that this was of no importance because upon the acceptance of the League of Nations, "if there should be war there will be no neutrals." Since the United States has rejected the treaty of Versailles, America's policy of political isolation and her views of neutrality stand as before the war. The United States is determined upon retaining its neutrality in any future outbreak of war.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. Yes.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. I should like to explain the nature of the amendment that I would like to have the opportunity of offering.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, will I lose my parliamentary status if I yield to the gentleman for the purpose of debate?

The SPEAKER. No.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. I do not think that will be sufficient——

Mr. BRITTEN. If the gentleman desires more time, I am sure he can get it from me.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, the amendment adopted by the Senate looks toward a negotiation of treaties "with the principal maritime nations regulating the conduct of belligerents and neutrals in war at sea, including the inviolability of private property thereon." The debate on the bill in the Senate turned largely upon the fact that our traditional position as to "the freedom of the seas" has not been universally accepted, but to the contrary has been violated by some of the leading maritime powers. It seems to have been generally conceded by those who appear to be best informed upon the subject that if our rights upon the sea, as we have always insisted upon them, were recognized there would remain no reason for the naval expansion proposed by this bill.

Now this bill in the provisions of section 4 provides that:

> In the event of an international agreement which the President is requested to encourage for the further limitation of naval armaments, to which the United States is signatory, the President is hereby authorized and empowered to suspend in whole or in part any of the naval construction authorized under this act.

The Senate amendment carries no similar provision. If our Government should agree with the maritime powers, upon treaties which recognize in full the rights of neutrals upon the sea, the President would have no power under this bill to suspend any part of the construction which it authorizes.

It would be entirely right and proper that we give the President the same power to suspend the work in the event that we agree upon such treaties as in the event that we agree upon arms limitations.

It seems to me to be entirely logical; indeed, that it would be foolish not to do it.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUDDLESTON. I will.

Mr. BRITTEN. Does not the gentleman think there is some difference between an agreement in respect to the rights of neutrals upon the sea in war time and an agreement to limit armament?

Mr. HUDDLESTON. No; for the very reason I have pointed out. The reason we find a great fleet necessary, according even to the advocates of a very large Navy, is because our rights upon the sea as neutrals have not heretofore been respected, and will be violated in the future. It is the purpose of the Navy to protect our ships upon the sea, our commerce as a neutral. But if we could be sure our neutral rights would not in future be violated, there would remain under the logic of the arguments offered in behalf of this bill good reason why we should not go ahead with the construction of the proposed cruisers.

If it is reasonable to empower the President to suspend construction because of an agreement on limitation of armament, there is more profound reason that we should give him the same power to suspend construction in the event the need for the ships was dispensed with by the entering into of such treaties protecting the rights of neutrals. We will not need these cruisers if the nations will agree to limit armaments, we will not need them if the nations agree to respect our rights as neutrals—the two stand upon a parity.

Now, one thing further. The only power that has been able up to the present time to successfully dispute our rights as neutrals, and the one against which we make the most complaint——

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Will the gentleman from Illinois give me more time?

Mr. BRITTEN. I will give the gentleman five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama is recognized for five minutes more.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. The only power that it is said by authority that it is necessary for us to be in a position to protect ourselves against is Great Britain. I myself believe that if the people of Great Britain—if they had some way of expressing their will—would cheerfully accord to America the neutral rights that we desire. I believe that the best thought of Great Britain is that there should be no naval competition between the two countries. I believe that the best thought of Great Britain is that British interests would be better safeguarded by securing the rights of neutrals upon the sea than by allowing those rights to be violated as they have been in the past. I have no doubt that these influences are making themselves felt by British naval authorities. I have no doubt that the time is near at hand when the Government of Great Britain will be willing to recognize to us those rights.

Now, then, Great Britain is, aside from ourselves, the chief naval power, and if she will only recognize our rights as neutrals on the sea what reason will remain for the 15 cruisers? No man can answer with any reason why we would need them. The argument simply is not there.

Why, then, should we not now be willing to consider the possibility of Great Britain agreeing upon neutral rights—why should we not cooperate to enable the people of Great Britain and America to dispose of this troublesome question between us and themselves? Why not give to the House now an opportunity to decide and pass upon this question? [Applause.]

If given the opportunity to do so, the amendment I would offer would be added to line 9 as it now appears on page 3 of the bill, following the Senate amendment. That amendment reads as follows:

First. That the Congress favors a treaty, or treaties, with all the principal maritime nations regulating the conduct of belligerents and neutrals in war at sea, including the inviolability of private property thereon.

Second. That such treaties be negotiated if practically possible prior to the meeting of the conference on the limitation of armaments in 1931.

I would add at the end of the amendment the following:

And should such a treaty be negotiated with Great Britain, the President is hereby authorized and empowered to suspend in whole or in part any part of the naval construction authorized by this act which may not then have been completed.

My amendment would confer upon the President the same powers, in the event a treaty on neutrality is negotiated, as he has in the event a treaty of limitation of armament is agreed upon.

The rules of parliamentary procedure give to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN] the power by moving the previous question to prevent me from offering the amendment. Surely, I submit, considerations of mere parliamentary strategy should not be allowed to override principles of tremendous importance to the cause of peace in the world.

Mr. Speaker, let me say this: Nobody advocating this bill has argued that these cruisers are needed in order to repel a foreign invader. Nobody has dared to say——

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has again expired.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. May I have some additional time?

Mr. BRITTEN. I can not yield to the gentleman more time. I have a number of other requests for time.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry. The Speaker has held that a motion to concur is a privileged motion, and that a motion to concur with an amendment may be prevented by moving the previous question. I wish to draw particular attention to page 76 of Cannon's Procedure in the House of Representatives, in which it is said that—

When a bill with Senate amendments is taken from the Speaker's table for the first time the following motions are in order:

(a) Lay on the table, (b) refer, (c) amend [concur with amendment], (d) agree [concur], (e) disagree, (f) send to conference. These motions have precedence in the order named.

I contend that the gentleman from Alabama would have a preferential right to move to concur with an amendment. I also contend that he can not be cut off from this right by ordering the previous question. On page 75 of Cannon's Procedure this statement is made:

The Member in charge of the bill and having the floor may press the previous question, although another may propose a motion of higher privilege, but the motion of higher privilege must be put first.

Now, in view of the ruling which is cited in volume 5, section 5480, of Hinds' Precedents, would it not be the privilege and right of the gentleman from Alabama to offer his amendment and have it voted upon prior to the motion for the previous question? It seems to me that the motion is so clearly preferential that the gentleman from Alabama could not be prevented from offering it and having it acted upon.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLACK of Texas. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. TILSON. Has the gentleman read authorities to the effect that in the present situation a motion to concur with an amendment is preferential over a motion to concur?

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Yes. That seems to be the uniform ruling upon the ground that it is privileged in order that the text of the bill might be perfected.

To concur with an amendment is preferential to a straight motion to concur, and being a privileged motion it can not be cut off by a motion for the previous question. Of course, the previous question may be moved but the motion to concur with an amendment must be voted upon first.

Mr. TILSON. How will the gentleman get the floor for that purpose if the gentleman from Illinois should move the previous question before he yields the floor?

Mr. BLACK of Texas. The gentleman from Illinois has come in and exercised his right to call up the bill. It is conceded he has that right. Now, the bill is before the House and the rules say that a Member who desires to offer a motion to concur with an amendment has a preferential right to do it. I submit the parliamentary inquiry to the Speaker whether the gentleman from Alabama, [Mr. HUDDLESTON] can be cut off from that preferential right by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN] moving the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is familiar with the precedent cited by the gentleman from Texas. The Chair thinks that had the gentleman from Alabama made his motion at the same time that the gentleman from Illinois made the motion to concur that very possibly that motion should have been voted upon first, but in view of the fact that debate has been had it is now too late, and the gentleman from Illinois has the floor.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Will the gentleman yield me some more time?

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman finish in five minutes?

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Oh, no; I could not hope to finish on this subject in any time that the gentleman would give me.

Mr. BRITTEN. Of course, if the gentleman is going to continue his requests for additional time, I will have to refuse his request.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. The gentleman can pass on that when it is reached.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman five additional minutes.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, why such haste to pass the cruiser bill? People of foreign countries will think it strange and inopportune that immediately following upon ratification of the treaty outlawing war, entered into by all the leading nations, Congress should provide for this vast increase in the Navy. Just at this particular time, with not a cloud upon our sky, they will think it strange that Congress is guilty of such glaring inconsistency. Indeed, our own people will think it strange—all will think it strange except those who are familiar with the strategy of American politicians.

THE STRATEGY OF PARTISAN POLITICIANS

It is the strategy of "facing both ways," so characteristic of those now in power. It appeared in the 1928 Republican national platform, which praised the President for his "wonderful achievement" in negotiating the multilateral treaty, yet in another paragraph demanded a program of naval increase to the full limit of our treaty rights. It was in the President's Armistice Day speech, which rattled the saber with one hand and gesticulated in boasting of the importance of the multilateral treaty with the other. It was in the President's annual message, when he called the treaty the "most positive adherence to peace that it is possible for sovereign nations to make," and with the next breath demanded the cruiser bill "to meet our needs for defense."

It is the accepted American strategy of facing both ways and "carrying something in the bag for everybody." For be it known that there are powerful interests in the United States that do not desire peace. It does not fit in with their plans. They have no disposition to be content with such fruits as may be reaped in peace. Their dreams are of world empire, the exploitation of weak subject peoples, and the drawing of tribute from the remote corners of the world. They visualize competition and struggle with other exploiting systems of imperialism.

Then there are the private shipbuilders. Business is dull with them. They want profits. They are anxious to get their hands into Uncle Sam's pockets.

SLOGAN OF THE PEACE "DEFEATISTS"

Then there are the Navy League, and the Security League, and other "patriotic" organizations. They scoff at hopes for peace and at treaties for security. "There have always been wars, there will always be wars," say these defeatists, "and we must be prepared for the Day."

And also, strong enough to ride over the President himself, there is the Navy ring, demanding always more ships and more men and more guns. For in that way lie opportunity, honors, and emoluments for themselves.

And these militaristic elements and those of kin to them and which are under their influence form a powerful political force, a force which politicians must needs soothe and mollify. True it is that peace conditions throughout the world are more satisfactory than at any time since the war. Our own horizon is unusually clear and undisturbed. So far as one can foresee, there has been no time within 50 years when we had less prospect of international trouble, yet with breathless haste and under the strictest time limits we order the greatest naval expansion in our history!

It is the sop to partisan politics. Let the people be not alarmed. No national danger moves us. We are merely making good to the militaristic elements for having ratified the treaty.

We conceded something to the peace advocates and now we have bowed to the big navy folks—we have pleased both and now our balance is restored.

It is the accepted strategy—do something for all organized interests, particularly the selfish interests, for they are the most implacable. It has made of political platforms "mere bunches of straddles." It has converted political parties into tools of selfish organizations. It has made of ours a government by organized selfishness. It has driven public men into shameless inconsistency and made a farce of the deliberations of Congress. And the people like it; that they showed at the last election.

WORK FOR THE PRIVATE SHIPBUILDERS

Mr. Speaker, why all this breathless haste to pass this bill? Oh, I understand—the shipbuilders want work. Business is dull with them. Some of them are closed down, and they want the work. So let us hurry this bill to them. It is for their benefit that we are passing it.

What a mockery, the section of this bill which provides for stoppage of construction if a limitation of armaments should be agreed upon! The influences behind the bill do not want limitation of armaments, nor do they desire any agreement protecting the rights of neutrals if that would have the effect to stop construction. If they thought there was any provision in this bill whereby so much as a single ship would not be constructed that provision would be eliminated forthwith. What they want is ships.

What the Shipbuilders' Association wants is more work, more business. They want ships. They do not want disarmament. Talk of disarmament and of the rights of neutrals is a mere screen. They want ships. They do not believe in treaties. They rely on force, and particularly do they rely upon the force of profits in their pockets, even if the money does come out of Uncle Sam.

CAUSE AND CURE FOR WAR

War not entered upon strictly in self-defense is a crime. Possession of the instruments of war not for strictly defensive purposes convicts a nation of the intent to commit crime and puts it on the moral plane of the private criminal.

Wars do not happen; they are caused. Wars are not accidental; they are the natural result of events. Wars are not the curse of Providence; they are the product of human folly and wickedness. As I have said upon a previous occasion, war is a matter of national psychology—the fundamental cause of all wars is the "will for war."

And since the will for war is the cause of all wars, in order to avoid wars we must study the causes which produce the state of mind which finds its expression in resort to arms. It is, of course, impossible to mention all these causes, but it is not hard to name some of the chiefest. They are—

Competition in military strength—armies and navies.

Arrogance arising from the consciousness of great military power and national wealth.

Imperialism, whether taking the form of territorial expansion or other infringement on another nation's sovereignty.

Violation by belligerents of the rights of neutrals.

Unneutral participation in conflict through furnishing war supplies and loans.

Chauvinism as expressed in extreme national consciousness, egoism, and sense of superiority.

Secret alliances and agreements between nations.

Glorification of war and of the professional soldier, while minimizing the achievements of the pursuits of peace.

Competition in the exploitation of weak and unorganized peoples.

Protective tariffs, subventions, controls, and other governmental interference with the free flow of trade.

Pressure for unjust advantages in commerce.

Protection of nationals in foreign concessions and investments.

Unfair industrial and commercial competition.

Racial and religious antagonisms, traditional hatreds, jealousies, and ambitions.

Except as to the last, I have not attempted to state these causes of ill feeling between nations in the order of their importance. Racial and religious antagonisms, traditional hatreds, and so forth, have little to do with the decisions of governments. However, they have much influence upon the masses. And this the ruling classes well know, and as soon as they determine upon war they fire the passions of the people with appeals to hatred and prejudice.

Advocates of peace should bend their best thought to the discernment of the causes for ill feeling. Having found them, we must labor to remove them, to destroy the conditions which produce feelings of strife. In every threatening situation we should seek out and remove the cause. Of one thing we may always be sure—peace is never to be attained through war. Also, I believe we may rest assured that no secure and lasting peace was ever based upon force, fear, or injustice.

WHAT IS "NAVAL PARITY"?

The debate on the cruiser bill has been full of profound disquisitions upon naval "parity" between ourselves and Great Britain. Advocates of the bill have asserted that the 5–5–3 ratio, with ourselves and Great Britain first and equal in power and Japan third, should be maintained. The subject has been dealt with as though it was a sum in arithmetic—ships have been matched against ships, guns against guns, and men against men.

Gentlemen have juggled with figures as though parity in this sense was all important, apparently not recognizing that comparison in these respects is merely a single minor factor in parity. Apparently they visualize opposing navies, with all their vessels, meeting in combat at some place on the sea equally accessible and favorable to both sides and there engaging in a battle in which the balance was exactly equal in courage, equipment, efficiency, and morale. Everyone with a knowledge of history or of modern conditions knows that no such situation does, ever will, or ought to exist.

The chief factor in the relative strength of navies lies in the tasks which they are set to do. The navies of the United States and Great Britain might be equal mathematically yet wholly disproportionate in the work which confronted them. Great Britain, an island empire, with a population which would starve within a few weeks if control of the surrounding seas were lost, with the necessity of keeping open communications with her colonies scattered through all the seven seas, and with a continent of hostile nations at her back door, has an entirely different naval problem to that of self-contained and self-supporting America. It is certain that real parity between the two navies would require many more ships and men upon the part of Great Britain.

Again, the nearness of a fleet to its base of operation is of vast importance. If, for illustration, we should attack Japan in Asiatic waters, a ratio of more than 10 to 1 in our favor instead of 5 to 3 as at present, would be required. If Japan should seek to attack us in our waters, she would need 20 ships for every American ship.

Parity also becomes a different matter when the expedition is defensive to what it would be in the case of an offensive. The former is largely a task for submarines and small vessels, the latter a task for large or capital ships.

"BIG NAVY" FOREIGN POLICIES

All of this brings me to ask: What are the schemes of those who demand that our ships shall equal in number and size those of Great Britain? Do they mean to set our Navy to doing the same kind of work as the navy of Great Britain? Obviously their plans are not merely defensive. No such fleets as those demanded can ever be required for purposes of true defense.

I have been greatly interested to note that in the course of the Senate debate no advocate of the cruiser bill has had the temerity to argue that the cruisers were necessary to prevent an invasion of our shores. None have argued that they are needed to repel a foreign invader. To the contrary, it has been assumed that they would not be particularly useful for such purpose. Cruisers are weapons of offense; their value lies in sweeping an enemy's commerce from the seas.

THE NEW "NATIONAL DEFENSE"

The debate has thrown new light upon the purposes of the big-navy advocates. "National defense," within their purview, no longer means merely resistance to invasion. It has been boldly extended to include keeping open the lanes of sea travel and the protection of our trading ships upon the seas. It appears to have been assumed that in the event of a war in which America was neutral we would send a cruiser along with each of our merchant ships to protect it from capture by the belligerants. How absurd is the idea when we reflect upon the vast number of vessels which would be required for the purpose?

When confronted with the absurdity of their position they change front and assert that what they want is a navy so big that powers at war will be afraid not to respect our rights. They propose to build a navy so terrible that all nations and possible combinations of powers will stand in awe of us. Such a point of view is nothing short of militaristic madness.

The big-navy advocates have extended "national defense" to include not merely our ships upon the sea but our trade interests in foreign countries. National defense to them includes the protection of an individual American citizen residing and doing business in a foreign country whose interests may be threatened by the government under which he has chosen to live. And their faith is proven by their works, for they sent us into Nicaragua to protect the investments of American bankers in railroads, lumber and banana fields. We were sent to Nicaragua because American creditors owned bonds and it became our duty to restore order so that they might be assured of their interest.

I want the plain people of this country to know of these perverted ideas of national defense. I want the people to know just what is contemplated by their rulers. The fathers and mothers who will furnish the boys to fight the battles—I want them to know the policies to which we are being committed. Under the cloak of national defense the powers in control have committed us to foreign policies more extreme in their logic and implications than those of the Roman Empire in its heyday. It is imperialism run mad.

THE CHOICE IS ATHENS OR SPARTA

And let me say that if these are to be the policies of America, they do well who advocate an incomparably great navy, and they do well who advocate universal conscription of soldiers for battle and labor for industry in time of war. And no extreme of preparedness is too great. For we will have need of armies and navies and the suppression of liberty and whatever else may add to our military strength. We will have need of force in all its forms, for come it will as certain as to-morrow that eventually we will be confronted by a world in arms.

No democracy should ever conceive of itself as a great military power. Military strength and efficiency is inconsistent with the principles of democratic government. The choice is before us, as it has ever been before virile and numerous peoples. Will we have peace or will we have war? Will we give our strength to military adventures or to the achievements of peace? Will we aim toward the cultural life or will we aspire to military glory? Mind you, we can not have both. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has again expired.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I now yield two minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DALLINGER].

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a brief statement. After my amendment was adopted by the House and the bill passed the House, my attention was called to the fact that there were some parts of the proposed cruisers for the manufacture of which there was no machinery or equipment in any of the Government arsenals or navy yards. When the bill reached the Senate the amendment added by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee was too sweeping, in the opinion of the friends of the measure, but this amendment which the House is about to be asked to adopt was prepared by the friends of the Dallinger amendment and is perfectly agreeable to me. [Applause.]

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA].

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for the time. While I do not suppose anything I may say will make the slightest impression upon the friends of the bill, I want the RECORD to show that this bill has not the unanimous support of the House.

I voted against the bill when it was before us, and I am against it now. I am against the building of 15 additional cruisers for the reason that the defense of the country, in my opinion, does not require it; our position in world affairs does not need it; and there is no reason now in the face of an annual appropriation of $350,000,000 that we are now spending for the Navy to add $15,000,000 more a year besides the $300,000,000 that the 15 cruisers will cost.

While the bill provides that each cruiser shall not cost more than $17,000,000, I predict right now that before the next fiscal year has passed, the Naval Affairs Committee will be in here with an authorization to increase the limit of cost of each cruiser. I predict that each cruiser will cost $20,000,000 or even more.

Now, gentlemen, if you are going to build 15 cruisers, why not admit that you are anxious to start a race in competitive armament in order to obtain military and naval supremacy. But I can not understand the hypocrisy of writing into a bill providing for the immediate construction of 15 cruisers a provision that—

> In the event of an international agreement, which the President is requested to encourage, for the further limitation of naval armament, to which the United States is signatory, the President is hereby authorized and empowered to suspend in whole or in part any of the naval construction authorized under this act.

While in the very first provision of the bill you provide that the building of five light cruisers must commence during the year ending June 30, 1929, within four months from now, five must be commenced during the year 1930, and the remaining five must be commenced during the year 1931. Why such haste? Where is the imminent danger of attack? This is regular wartime speed in naval shipbuilding.

If you are acting in good faith, if you really want to encourage the limitation of armament and you urge the President to bring about such a conference, if you are hopeful of accomplishing further naval disarmament, why the immediate building of these ships and the wasting of millions and millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money? If, on the other hand, you do not mean it, then you should not put any such hypocritical provision in the bill. The President of the United States officially stated in his annual message to Congress that there was no immediate need of these cruisers when he recommended the elimination of the time clause. He was definite and clear in that. These cruisers are not needed.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Certainly.

Mr. BRITTEN. The gentleman, of course, knows that the suspension provision carried in this bill has been carried in every annual naval appropriation bill for the past 12 years.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. And we have continued to build ships during the past 12 years. So what does it mean? To my way of thinking, the way to bring about disarmament is not by building battleships and cruisers.

The American people who know the facts, the people who understand the comparative strength of the navies of the world, they who understand our position and our natural resources, the function of the Navy and what we need for actual defense, do not support this measure providing for the building of 15 cruisers at this time. All 15 to be commissioned within the next few years.

The gentleman from Idaho [Mr. FRENCH], in charge of the appropriation bill before the House at this time, has pointed out that new ships will require additional personnel, and I repeat that it means not only an expenditure of $300,000,000, because these ships will not be built for $17,000,000, but an additional expense of $15,000,000 every year in the cost of maintaining the Navy, and it means losing our position in the world movement for permanent peace. [Applause.]

Just as sure as day follows night, this building program will start a naval race. Every country will use our action here as a justification for increasing their respective navies. What will happen then? Why, the sponsors of this bill will come back with new comparative tables and demand still more ships. That is just what was going on in Europe for 20 years prior to 1914. The plight of Europe to-day is the result of such an insane policy.

We do not need these ships now. We are in no danger of being attacked. I am opposed to the unnecessary, extravagant naval policy, which I believe endangers the sincere desire of the American people for peace.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Is a motion to commit this bill in order?

The SPEAKER. The question is on concurring in the Senate amendment.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Will the Speaker hear a decision on that point? I wish to refer the Speaker to volume 5 of Hinds' Precedents, page 287, section 5575.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. The section reads as follows:

> On November 1, 1893, the House was considering the Senate amendments to the bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of the act of July 14, 1890, relating to the purchase of silver bullion.
>
> Mr. Leonidas F. Livingston, of Georgia, submitted the question of order whether, after the previous question should have been ordered on the motion to concur in a Senate amendment, it would be in order to commit the bill and amendment to a committee with instructions.
>
> The Speaker expressed the opinion that the motion to commit would in such case be in order.

That is the authority which I submit, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. What is the motion the gentleman desires to make?

Mr. HUDDLESTON. A motion to commit with instructions and also a motion to commit. My inquiry applies to both.

The SPEAKER. To commit what?

Mr. HUDDLESTON. To commit the bill.

The SPEAKER. That would not be in order.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Then may I ask the Speaker if a motion to commit the motion to concur in the amendment would be in order?

The SPEAKER. That would not be in order.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. May I ask the Speaker to indicate what proceeding he thinks the decision which I have read would apply to?

The SPEAKER. It does not apply to either of the two propositions the gentleman has cited.

Mr. BRITTEN. I move the previous question, Mr. Speaker.

The previous question was ordered.

The motion to concur in the Senate amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 3: Page 3, line 10, strike out the figure "5" and insert the figure "6."

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion to concur in the Senate amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 4: Page 3, line 4, strike out "1928" and insert "1929."

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the amendment.

The motion to concur in the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Speaker, I move to reconsider the votes by which the motions to concur in the Senate amendments were agreed to and lay that motion on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

PAPER FROM CORNSTALKS

The SPEAKER. Under special order the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOLADAY] for 30 minutes.

Mr. HOLADAY. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, in order that the Members of this body may have a clear understanding of the matter that I propose to discuss I think it advisable for me to make a short historical statement.

That paper pulp could be made in the laboratory from cornstalks and other waste farm products has been known for many years. But until recently no process has been developed which seemed to offer possibilities for large-scale commercial adaptation to the needs of the paper industry. The Cornstalk Products Co., a corporation financed by American capital, opened a factory in Danville, Ill., late in 1927 to produce pulp from cornstalks.

The Cornstalk Products Co. located their factory in Danville without receiving a bonus or subsidy of any kind. This location was chosen because it seemed to offer the following evident advantages:

First. A building already constructed on a site that would permit ample factory extension space.

Second. An ample supply of cornstalks.

Third. An adequate water supply.

Fourth. A system of hard roads that would permit of the transportation of raw material from the field to the factory.

Fifth. First-class railroad facilities.

With the location of their first plant in Danville, the Cornstalk Products Co. commenced an elaborate and thorough system of research not only in their laboratories and manufacturing plant but also in harvesting, transporting, and storing the cornstalks.

On the 19th day of October, 1928, the first commercial run of 58,000 pounds of paper, made from cornstalk pulp, produced by the Cornstalk Products Co., was manufactured in a paper plant in Kalamazoo, Mich., and its success was heralded in the press. It was announced that a daily newspaper and a magazine had arranged to try the new product, and this announcement received additional publicity.

On Sunday, the 16th of December, 1928, the Danville Commercial-News issued the world's first newspaper printed on paper made from cornstalks. This issue attracted the widest publicity and requests for copies were received from all over the world. The same week the Prairie Farmer, the leading farm magazine of Illinois, came out printed on this paper.

The Danville plant of the Cornstalk Products Co. has been making regular shipments of pulp to paper manufacturers since last October, and the pulp is going into various types of high-grade paper. It is now producing about 8 tons of pulp daily, and will have completed within a few weeks equipment to increase this output to 40 tons per day. The present year's production of pulp will use stalks from 20,000 acres of corn fields. This is the only commercial plant in the world making paper pulp from cornstalks. It has been pretty generally known that the Cornstalk Products Co. while developing its cornstalk-pulp process has carried on an extensive research into other farm wastes and that it has perfected processes for converting cottonseed hulls into cellulose and chemical by-products and sugar-cane fiber and various straws into paper pulp, and that its cornstalk pulp has surprised the paper-making world with its qualities as a supplementary raw material.

On December 10, 1928, Senator SCHALL, of Minnesota, introduced Senate bill 4834, to authorize the expenditure of $6,550,000 by the Bureau of Standards for the construction of demonstration plants in Minnesota, Arkansas, Louisiana, Georgia, California, Indiana, and Kansas to manufacture paper pulp and strawboard from flax, wheat or rice straw, sugar cane, or cornstalks; a xylose plant to utilize cottonseed hulls and peanut shells; and a plant for making alcohol from potatoes.

The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for January 7, 1929, carries the remarks of Senator SCHALL relative to his bill S. 4834, and by unanimous consent there was included 17 articles written by one Blair Coan, whom the Senator described as a "well-known author and newspaper correspondent of Washington." The substance of these 17 articles had been published in various newspapers in the Middle West.

One of Coan's articles printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD appeared in western papers under date of December 28, 1928, with this introductory paragraph, which was deleted before it was read into the RECORD:

Perhaps I should not write this story. The band of Washington newspaper correspondents, which is welded together for the purpose of suppressing national information, will consider this narrative unethical. But the American farmer is being so grossly discriminated against that I think this story should be broadcast.

I shall not take the time to read this entire article which deals with the work of the United States Department of Agriculture and with appropriations for research work to be done by the Bureau of Standards. Near the middle of his article Coan says:

Whether coincidently or by design, it can not be said, but about this time the lumber interests opened a Washington office and subscribed $5,000,000 to be spent in advertising. The Bureau of Standards continued its work and this summer announced its marvelous discoveries. But the announcement fell on deaf ears. No newspaper correspondent at Washington decided it was worthy of notice, and so, until this paper began publishing the facts as written by your correspondent, the merit of this work was unknown.

Coan closes this article by saying:

But one thing is certain, despite the Department of Agriculture, the lumber and paper industry, the combination of Washington newspaper correspondents to suppress this news, and every other agency, eventually paper will be made from field crops and the farmers will, indeed, reap a harvest.

Let us examine the truth of Coan's statements with reference to the Bureau of Standards. Coan says:

These new agricultural profits have been made possible by chemistry. The discovery of these facts was made by the Bureau of Standards.

George K. Burgess, Director of the Bureau of Standards, says, in his letter of January 28, 1929, addressed to me:

We have invented no new chemical process for making paper pulp from these materials.

Coan further remarks:

By allowing these plants [proposed Bureau of Standards' plants] to operate Congress will give the corn grower approximately $12 per acre more for his product, the sugar-cane grower the same amount, the cotton and peanut planter $7 per acre, the wheat farmer and rice grower $15 more per acre, while the potato grower will, in reality, make his product a drug on the market in the form of alcohol. None of these statements are guesses. They are cold, hard facts, which will show in detail what has been done in these particular fields by the Bureau of Standards.

The "cold, hard facts" as shown in the letter of the Director of the Bureau of Standards are:

During 1928 we bought 200 tons of cornstalks for this factory (Ames, Iowa) at $7.50 per ton. In both cases these contracts are made with the man who harvests and delivers the stalks. We do not know how much he pays the farmer for the stalks standing in the field. We have no information whatever as to whether or not paper could be made from stalks at this price at a profit.

Here is another statement of "Cold Facts" Coan:

This week Mr. W. E. Emley, of the Bureau of Standards, chief of the division of organic and fibrous materials, completed his experiments in the use of rice straw for the manufacture of high-grade white paper. The test was a complete success. White paper of the highest quality can be manufactured from rice straw.

The Director of the Bureau of Standards writes me:

We are planning to investigate this subject during the next fiscal year.

When "Cold Facts" Coan begins to deal with alcohol he becomes especially enthusiastic. He says:

The Bureau of Standards began experiments on the chemistry of the potato. The results have more than warranted the expectations. These new experiments show potatoes can be converted into grain alcohol. Also, it was discovered that from them can be produced the higher grades of alcohol. These higher grades sell for as much as $1 a pint.

The Director of the Bureau of Standards replies to me:

We have not investigated the production of alcohol from potatoes.

In support of his charges that the Department of Agriculture was "hostile to development of farm wastes" and that the department had entered into a conspiracy to injure the farmers by withholding from the public the knowledge that farm wastes might be utilized for pulp-making purposes, "Cold Facts" Coan says:

About 20 years ago a chemist, working in the Department of Agriculture, discovered that white paper could be produced cheaper and better by using the cellulose of field crops than by the conversion of spruce wood.

The Secretary of Agriculture says in his letter of February 4, 1929, to me:

No responsible employee of the Department of Agriculture has ever claimed, so far as I can learn, that white paper could or can be produced cheaper and better from field crops than from wood.

Here is positive denial of the statement that the Department of Agriculture ever discovered any such process as Coan refers to, and consequently it could not have "conspired" to suppress it.

Time will not permit of me pointing out more specific statements, but practically every statement made in all Coan's 17 articles is as misleading as those I have mentioned.

I am informed Coan appeared at the Bureau of Standards on October 31, 12 days after the first large tonnage of cornstalk paper came from the mill, and again on November 12, representing himself to be the Washington correspondent for 175 newspapers—although it may be noted that he is not admitted to the press galleries of the House or Senate and is not a member of the National Press Club.

Coan professed great interest in what the Bureau of Standards was doing to utilize farm wastes. He was given information which is available to everybody about the bureau's small experimental plant at Ames, Iowa, operated in conjunction with Iowa State College to perfect a process for making wall board or insulating lumber from cornstalks by a mechanical, not a chemical, process; and he was told of the bureau's research into cottonseed hulls and peanut shells as a source of xylose, which is a rare form of sugar.

These unsensational facts did not suit Coan. They offered no weapon of attack to discredit what private capital has accomplished in utilizing farm wastes. But it was easy enough to invent a set of alleged facts and to make them so interesting and plausible that a great many editors to whom Coan sent his series of articles—making no charge for them, at least not to the newspapers—accepted and published them at their face value.

In these articles Coan attributed to the Bureau of Standards these new pulp-making processes, which in reality have been perfected because citizens of my State and of Indiana and Wisconsin, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Kentucky, New York, Connecticut, and New Jersey have had the faith and courage to put more than $1,000,000 into this pioneering enterprise.

Referring to the cornstalk pulp process used at Danville, Coan published the statement that—although the Bureau of Standards has no process and, of course, never made such a statement.

The Bureau of Standards claims to have developed a process far superior to the one privately owned—

The evident purpose of some of Coan's articles was to lead farmers to expect fabuluous prices for their waste cornstalks and straw. He falsely represented that the Bureau of Standards is paying such prices now; therefore if Congress does not build plants to demonstrate the bureau's processes the farmers will be led to believe that private industry is defrauding them if it pays less. The Bureau of Standards is actually paying at its experimental plant operated in conjunction with Iowa State College at Ames a little more than half the price Coan alleges.

Coan's propaganda articles began appearing late in November. Then, on December 10, just a few days before the appearance of a book, a Sunday newspaper and a great farm magazine printed on the first cornstalk paper, Senator SCHALL's bill was introduced, and the effect of it was to discount the importance of this industrial achievement. And Coan in public print takes credit for having inspired the Schall bill.

The bill was predicated upon Coan's false information, which I am convinced the Senator accepted in good faith, that the Bureau of Standards has new processes and that private capital will not embark in farm-waste utilization unless Congress first builds "demonstration" plants to prove that the business is profitable.

It was publicly known that this private company had perfected a rice-pulp process, and that it contemplated a rice-pulp plant in Arkansas; so this Coan-inspired bill provided a $1,000,000 Government rice-straw plant near Little Rock to compete with it. Likewise, this company had developed bagasse pulp and was negotiating with Louisiana interests for a plant there; so Coan would put one of his Federal plants near Baton Rouge. He would scatter eight plants in seven States, to cost $6,550,000.

And then Coan brought his bill to a Member of this House, asked him to write in as many plants as would look well for his own State, and introduce it over here, where appropriation bills must originate. He promised to get the Member valuable publicity! But the Member of this House wisely refused to have anything to do with Coan's bill.

But even this did not discourage Coan from continuing to flood newspapers with his free poison propaganda. That he made no charge for these articles—to the newspapers—is verified by editors in my own State with whom I have communicated. In several of these articles he assailed the integrity of the entire corps of Washington correspondents—men who represent the very highest standards of American journalism.

Showing to what unbelievable extent this man's propaganda has influenced editors, I may cite the publication of a signed article by Coan on the front page of an Iowa paper, enterprising and resourceful enough to bring out the first paper in that State printed on cornstalk newsprint.

Needless to say, the paper was made from Cornstalk Products Co.'s pulp because nobody else makes the pulp and nobody else has had commercial experience in making it. Nevertheless Coan gets by with his front-page warning to the Iowa public, printed on cornstalk paper, mind you, not to invest in cornstalk pulp and paper mills unless they are under experienced management, and he tells the public that the only people competent to run such mills are the Bureau of Standards and the chemical engineering head of Iowa State College, although neither has ever produced a ton of cornstalk pulp commercially for paper making!

Could anything be plainer than the motive of this cowardly propaganda to hamstring an established commercial industry just at the time when private capital, with two years' experience and more than $1,000,000 already invested, has made a conspicuously successful beginning and is preparing to expand?

The idea of farm-waste utilization is too sound economically and too popular as a measure of agricultural relief, and too well sponsored by respectable citizens to be attacked openly. But what could chill public enthusiasm and delay development more effectively than to spread this lie that the Government has perfected superior processes "free to all," as Coan published, by which the farmer should receive fabulous prices for his cornstalks; and that this pioneering enterprise is in danger of Government competition at every point where it has planned to expand?

Of course there will be no Government plants! Of course the Senate bill 4834 was dead before it left the hands of the one that inspired it. But such propaganda, if not exposed, could easily arrest the flow of private capital into this industry and set back its development for many years. If this industry should be throttled now, it would retard the whole program of economic farm relief through the utilization of agricultural wastes—something which every Member of this Congress and every farmer in the United States wishes to avoid.

The movement to utilize farm wastes should and can stand on its own merits, with such research assistance as Government scientific agencies can render and do render to other industries. My colleague from Iowa [Mr. DICKINSON] has a bill pending to further such research.

The following statement by Mr. W. Jule Day, president of Cornstalk Products Co., was published recently in the Danville Commercial-News:

Private initiative may be depended upon to continue solving technical and economic problems of this new industry without the proposed expenditure of millions of dollars to put the Government into competition with it. Such a policy (as the proposed building of Government plants) would have a tendency to retard rather than to encourage the building of more plants, which this company is preparing to do both in the North and the South.

It is evident from this statement that this industry is not seeking Government aid or subsidies but only desires not to be harassed by an attempt to subject it to Government competition based on the falsehoods that the Government has superior processes and that private capital is afraid to venture into this field.

In conclusion may I say that Coan, who is described as a "well-known author and newspaper correspondent" says that newspaper correspondents in Washington, himself excepted, are banded together to suppress information with reference to farm-waste utilization; that the United States Department of Agriculture has conspired with the Washington newspaper correspondents, the lumber and paper industry to prevent the manufacture of pulp from field crops; that the United States Department of Agriculture has attempted to prevent the Bureau of Standards investigating and experimenting to discover new methods to help the farmer; that private enterprise in this field has failed and is unworthy of public confidence. It would seem that Mr. Coan considers himself the only honest newspaper correspondent in Washington.

The facts are that Coan is "well known," not as a Washington newspaper correspondent but rather as a detective and paid propagandist, that he is not a member of the National Press Club nor is he permitted to enter the press galleries of the House or Senate. As a matter of fact the newspaper correspondents of Washington are the most able writers of our country, especially selected to gather the news for the great daily papers of the world, for the Associated Press, and other news-gathering agencies, and they are ever alert to herald to the reading public the real facts of the day.

The facts are that the United States Department of Agriculture is ever ready and anxious to promote the agricultural interest of our country and that there is no friction between the Department of Agriculture and the Bureau of Standards, as both of these governmental agencies have always cooperated with public and private enterprise to foster the best interests of American agriculture. [Applause.]

Mr. DENISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOLADAY. I yield.

Mr. DENISON. Can the gentleman tell us where this man Coan gets the wherewith to carry on this propaganda?

Mr. HOLADAY. I have no definite information as to who is paying him for this propaganda.

Mr. SCHAFER. What is the man's full name?

Mr. HOLADAY. Blair Coan.

Mr. SCHAFER. He is a politician that we heard so much about a few years ago.

Mr. HOLADAY. Undoubtedly you have heard of him.

Mr. SCHAFER. He appeared in the Wheeler campaign and went up in Wisconsin and gathered up a good deal of money.

Mr. HOLADAY. I understand he is the same man.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, following the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, I want to say that for some time I have been interested in the development of farm waste. Not because we have farm waste in my city, but being intensely interested and willing to do anything I can as a Member of the House to bring about farm relief. In the utilization of farm waste we have an avenue whereby we can bring some relief to the farmer without adding unduly to the cost of farm products to the consumer in the city.

Hence my interest in cornstalk paper. As the gentleman from Illinois stated, the manufacture of cornstalk paper has passed the experimental stage. I have some letter heads of my own which I had printed on cornstalk paper, and gentlemen can see that it is not only a theory but an actual paper on the market.

Now, I want to point out in the very few minutes that I have that the United States Government is buying over 26,000,000 pounds of paper every year. I have not the schedule with me but I am sure the total amount is over 26,000,000 pounds every year. I introduced a resolution which was referred to the Committee on Printing which would permit the cornstalk-paper people to bid for Government orders. Under the present specifications and ruling, cornstalk paper can not bid for Government orders. That is manifestly unfair.

When I sent to the Government Printer cornstalk paper to have letterheads printed he refused to print them, and the stationery room had to send the cornstalk paper out to a private printer to have my letterheads printed. I respectfully submit that the censorship on the part of the Government Printer is wholly improper and unauthorized. I had only about 500 sheets of this. It was my intention to send a sheet to each of my colleagues to show the paper. If the use of this paper is not proper in the Government Printing Office, then that is a matter on which I should have to answer to the House and not to the Public Printer.

Mr. SCHNEIDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. SCHNEIDER. What evidence has the gentleman other than the mark on this paper that it is made out of cornstalks?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. I know the source.

Mr. SCHNEIDER. What is the price of the paper?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. What has that to do with it now?

Mr. SCHNEIDER. I am trying to ascertain as to whether it can be made practically in competition with other papers.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. If they can not compete, they can not get the Government's orders. I say that they should have an opportunity to compete.

Mr. SCHNEIDER. Why did the Public Printer refuse to print upon it?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. I do not know; I am trying to find out.

Mr. SCHNEIDER. Did he give the gentleman any reason for that?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Because it was cornstalk paper.

Mr. SCHNEIDER. How did he know?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Could not he see the mark?

Mr. SCHNEIDER. That mark does not indicate it. That might all be made of wood.

Mr. LaGUARDIA. I assure the gentleman that it is made of cornstalk, and not of wood pulp.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LaGUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. On behalf of the Public Printer, I want to say that Mr. Carter is a native of Iowa, and he is just as much interested in making paper from cornstalks as any man possibly can be. If he has refused to use this paper, there must be something in the laws that prevents it.

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. The gentleman defends him. What is the reason?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

IMMIGRATION

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may have three additional days in which to file minority views on the bill H. R. 16580, if I find it necessary.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is that the revised number of the last bill introduced?

Mr. SABATH. Yes. I just received the report upon it and I have not yet had a chance to read it. I may not file minority views.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 16714) making appropriations for the Navy Department and the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes. Pending that, I ask unanimous consent that the time for general debate be limited to four hours, to be controlled one-half by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. AYRES] and one-half by myself. I think the demand for time, after conferring with the gentleman from Kansas, will equal about the amount indicated in the request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Idaho moves that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the naval appropriation bill. Pending that, he asks unanimous consent that the general debate be limited to four hours, half the time to be controlled by himself and half by the gentleman from Kansas. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now is on the motion of the gentleman from Idaho.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 16714) making appropriations for the Navy Department and the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes, with Mr. LUCE in the chair.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WAINWRIGHT]

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, the Members of this House must by now be thoroughly impressed by the fact that there is something radically wrong and defective in conditions affecting promotion and retirement in the Regular Army. The present situation in that regard is, indeed, most unsatisfactory and urgently requires corrective legislation, the purpose of which would be to relieve the present stagnation or congestion in promotion and to set in motion and regulate and keep running for the future the necessary flow of promotion.

No subject more vitally affects the efficiency of the Army in time of peace and its consequent effectiveness in time of war than the prospect which the officers enjoy of advancement or promotion to a higher grade after a reasonable length of service in a particular grade. Without that prospect, interest and ambition so necessary to that subtle spirit we term morale is chilled, with resultant apathy and lack of initiative. The relation of the matter to the entire subject of national defense is obvious.

Most Members not on the Committee on Military Affairs must have had brought to their attention the so-called Wainwright bill, and the Wainwright bill with the McSwain amendment. The impression may prevail that the bill and the amendment are so related as to be inseparable. But the proposal contained in the Wainwright bill is one thing, that embodied in the McSwain amendment another, each quite independent and separable.

The Wainwright bill relates exclusively to the system of promotion in the Army for the future; the McSwain amendment attached to the Wainwright bill relates exclusively to the existing promotion list. Each was the subject of a separate bill capable of being enacted into law without the other. (See H. R. 13180 and H. R. 13246.)

Under the present system of promotion an officer's advancement results solely from and follows vacancies as they occur in higher grades from the various causes which separate officers from the active list of the Army, such as death, retirement, resignation, and so forth. The names of all officers below the grade of general, excepting medical officers, professors, and chaplains, are borne on a single list known as the "single promotion list," created for the first time by the revision of the national defense act in 1920. On this list the names of the officers are arranged in the order in which they are to be promoted.

From the Civil War to 1890 the system in operation was known as regimental promotion, separate lists being maintained for each regiment, and promotions following only when vacancies occurred in that regiment. From 1890 to 1920 separate promotion lists were maintained for each branch of the Army; promotions resulting as vacancies occurred in the particular branch to which the officer was assigned. The single list adopted in 1920 was designed to rectify the inequalities which resulted from the separate-branch list system, and to afford a better and more uniform rate of promotion for all officers. Under the old system of a separate promotion list for each branch, officers who entered the Army at the same time but who were assigned to different branches of the service would, after a period of 20 years, find themselves separated by as much as two grades. In one branch the rate of promotion would be slow, and in another branch the rate would be fast. These inequalities in rates of promotion created great dissatisfaction in the Army. It was to rectify these inequalities in rates and to make a uniform rate for the whole Army that the branch lists were merged into a single promotion list, thereby making an officer's promotion dependent not on vacancies occurring simply in his own branch but on vacancies occurring anywhere in the whole Army.

Unfortunately, before the new system was fairly well started, the authorized commissioned strength of the Army was reduced by Congress in 1922 by some 6,000 officers. This reduction resulted in retarding the promotion of all officers and in actually demoting to a lower grade a very large number of officers, so that at present there is a condition of stagnation in promotion throughout the Army, particularly among certain classes of officers, as bad if not worse than has ever existed. The Wainwright bill is designed to correct this condition of stagnation in promotion and to give to every officer in the Army, and to every officer who hereafter enters the Army, the definite assurance of promotion.

But there is another phase to the promotion problem. The manner in which the present single list was formed, especially with respect to the way in which the World War officers are placed on the list, has given rise to dissatisfaction and complaints of injustice. It is with this last subject that the McSwain amendment deals.

The two subjects, as stated before, are independent and separable. In fact, it is my firm conviction that the dissatisfaction with the arrangement of names on the present promotion list grew out of the fact that promotions as now prescribed by law could and would only follow vacancies as they occur in the single promotion list, and I believe that, if the system of promotion provided for in the Wainwright bill is once enacted into law, this dissatisfaction will rapidly disappear.

In order to provide the necessary number of officers required for the Regular Army as it was increased by the national defense act revision of 1920, and to perform the duties laid upon the Regular Army in connection with the training of the National Guard and the other components of the Army created by the national defense act, namely, the Organized Reserves, Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and citizens' military training camps, it was necessary to take into the Regular Army several thousand former World War officers who had served either in the National Guard or National Army elements of the Army during the war, familiarly known as emergency officers.

These emergency officers were separated by comparatively few years in age, and practically all of them had had two years or less of service. These officers were taken into the Regular Army, principally in the grades from second lieutenant to captain, with some few as majors, lieutenant colonels, and colonels. This great group of officers, together with the officers taken into the Regular Army during the World War period, standing midway in the present promotion list of a total of about 10,000 officers, has come to be known as the "World War hump." It consists of about 5,600 officers, or more than half the total number on the list. Above this "hump" are about 2,150 officers distributed in point of service over a period of about 16 years; below the "hump" are about 2,250 officers distributed in point of service over a period of about 9 years; while the 5,600 officers in the "hump" are distributed in point of service over a period of only about 2 years.

Under the present conditions about half the number within the limits of this "hump" will not reach the grade of colonel before retirement at the age of 64, if they serve that long, and many who are now captains on the list face the prospect of not advancing beyond their present grade even if they serve till retiring age. And, of course, the officers in the "hump" practically block all prospect of promotion of the twenty-two hundred and fifty officers below the "hump." From the standpoint of the officers this is obviously a well-nigh intolerable situation.

A board composed of some of the most distinguished major generals of the Army, which has recently considered the whole subject, thus described the situation and the necessity for congressional action:

> Unless some remedial measure is adopted vacancies in the higher grades will continue so slowly as to produce stagnation in the promotion of officers in and below this "hump." Officers at the top of the "hump" are now being promoted into the grade of major, while those at the bottom, with only two years' less commissioned service, are still first lieutenants, with a prospect of remaining in this grade for some 10 years longer, and of not reaching the grade of major until 23 years after the officers at the top of the "hump" have reached it.
>
> When the seniors of this "hump" becomes lieutenant colonels those at the foot of it may still be captains, with a prospect of continuing as such for about eight years longer. When the officers at the top of the "hump" become colonels, those at the bottom may still be captains. When the grade of colonel is practically filled by officers now in the "hump," there may be some officers near the foot of the "hump" still in the grade of major, and about this time practically all remains of the "hump" will be retired for age in a very brief period. As matters now stand, nearly one-half of the "hump" of about 5,600 officers may reach the age of 64 years before they have reached the grade of colonel. The condition set forth above will be one of severe stagnation. Furthermore, it indicates the serious consequences of a slight difference in position on the promotion list.

A subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs of the House, of which I have the honor to be chairman, studied this subject with great care during the last session of this Congress, and as a result of that study wrote the so-called Wainwright bill.

Now, the Wainwright bill seeks to correct stagnation in promotion and give to every officer the assurance of promotion by regulating the flow of promotion according to a schedule of fixed length of service, so that under this plan, an officer's promotion will come to him not when a vacancy occurs, but when he has completed the number of years of service prescribed in the schedule. Under such an enactment, practically all the officers in the "hump," having already served the requisite number of years, will either at once, or very soon, advance, as they should, to the next higher grade. The Board of General Officers thus explains the considerations involved in fixing the length of service required in the particular grades before advancement to the next higher grade:

The primary consideration in framing this and related sections of the bill has been to establish and maintain a reasonable and effective rate in the progression of officers from grade to grade. A desirable rate of progression is one that advances officers at a rate commensurate with their ages, experience, and general value to the service. Efficiency will be attained if the time served in each grade is sufficient to master the duties thereof, to render effective service therein, and to prepare for service in the grade above. Nor should the period of service in any grade be too long. Unduly prolonged training in any grade is wasteful. It handicaps the individual by keeping him in a grade after he has lost some of the physical activity demanded by the duties of that grade, and it causes stagnation and loss of efficiency.

Obviously the automatic promotion in the lower and more numerous grades will result in increasing numbers in the higher and less numerous grades of lieutenant colonel and colonel. To avoid creating a top-heavy condition in these two higher grades, the bill limits the numbers in these grades. Such limitations, however, will reimpose a check on promotions in the lower grades and to that extent will tend to neutralize the benefit of the full application of the principle involved. But nevertheless, great relief will be afforded. The main features of the Wainwright bill in its unamended form, of the bill without the McSwain amendment (H. R. 13509) are as follows:

It directs that the number of promotion-list officers in each of the grades below brigadier general shall be such as results from the operation of the system of promotion prescribed by the act; it provides that the number of promotion-list field officers shall not be less than 26 per cent of the entire number; the number of colonels shall not exceed 6 per cent; and the number of lieutenant colonels shall not exceed 8 per cent, but that, subject to these percentage limitations and to the examination prescribed by law, officers shall be promoted according to the following schedule of years of service: After 3 years' service to first lieutenant; after 10 years' service to captain; after 15 years' service to major; after 20 years' service to lieutenant colonel; and after 26 years' service to colonel.

If less than 26 per cent of the officers are in the grades of colonel, lieutenant colonel, and major, then captains of less than 15 years' service shall be promoted in sufficient numbers to make up the 26 per cent; and if 8 per cent are in the grade of lieutenant colonel, then majors of 20 years' service will be held back in their promotion so as not to increase the 8 per cent; and if 6 per cent are in the grade of colonel, then lieutenant colonels of 26 years' service will be held back in their promotion so as not to increase the 6 per cent.

The bill, however, provides that when lieutenant colonels are held back in their promotions because of this 6 per cent limitation they shall, if retired, be retired with the rank of colonel, and also they shall be eligible, along with colonels, for appointment as chiefs of branches or as brigadier generals of the line.

There is no objection to, or controversy concerning, the proposal above described, except possibly in the requirement of examination for promotion. Officers of the department and of the Army are in substantial agreement that if the principle of promotion on fixed length of service, as above described, is adopted a large part of the present unrest and dissatisfaction of the officer personnel of the Army will disappear. Also the members of the Military Affairs Committee were unanimously agreed on the wisdom and expediency of this proposed change of system. So that so much of the present bill as embodies the original unamended Wainwright bill may be regarded as absolutely noncontroversial, and if adopted would go a long way toward correcting the present unfortunate situation as to promotion in the Army.

But with the McSwain amendment it is otherwise. The proposition therein involved has given rise to bitter controversy and differences of opinion in the Army. It seeks to recast the single list with the inevitable result that some thousands of officers will be benefited in prospect of promotion and about the same number adversely affected; some raised and some reduced by several thousand files or numbers. It is not too much to say that the 5,600 officers in the hump are practically divided into two hostile camps by this proposal.

The General Officers' Board thoroughly considered this phase of the promotion problem. They recommended that no attempt should be made to recast the list or rearrange the names of officers thereon. Their conclusion, as follows, should be carefully weighed before seriously considering the adoption of a course diametrically opposed to their conclusions. It is worthy of note to consider the personnel of this board. Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, then Chief of the Air Corps, was president of the board. He and Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely, then commandant of the Army War College, are graduates of West Point and have served in all grades in the Army from cadet to major general, inclusive. Maj. Gen. Preston Brown, commanding the First Corps Area at Boston, and Maj. Gen. Robert H. Allen, Chief of Infantry, entered the Army as enlisted men and have served in all grades in the Army from private soldier to major general, inclusive, and Brig. Gen. E. E. Booth, Assistant Chief of Staff, came into the Army as a volunteer in the Spanish-American War and has served in all grades in the Army from second lieutenant to brigadier general, inclusive. These officers have served in the Army for periods ranging from 30 to more than 40 years. They have lived through the various promotion systems in the Army. They said:

There is no doubt that the situation with respect to promotion is not only unsatisfactory and critical but is one which should no longer be permitted to exist. This condition of affairs affects seriously the condition of the Army in time of peace and would have most disastrous effects in time of war. The conditions would not be materially improved by an alteration of the present promotion list, nor would the creation of an entirely new promotion list do more than to improve the promotion prospects of some individual officers on the list, but always at the expense of some others, and without improvement of the present unsatisfactory promotion prospects of the whole large group of officers inducted into the Army during and following the World War and of those below them. The situation must be remedied or at least ameliorated.

The board believes that this is possible by changing the promotion system so that officers in and below the World War hump may have reasonable assurance of advancement before the time comes for them to retire for age and that if this can be brought about most of the dissatisfaction with the promotion list will disappear. This conclusion is practically confirmed by a study of the reports of the local boards. These latter reports show conclusively that what may be called the general sentiment of the Army is against any attempt to alter the promotion list, but seeks some other remedy for the most unfortunate situation now confronting a large number of officers on the list. After its study of all evidence before it, its own investigation of the complaints, the alleged injustices and the inequalities of the promotion list, and after its own effort to devise remedies therefor, this board is unanimously and decidedly of the opinion that any effort to change the promotion list would do more harm than good, that the resulting state of affairs would probably be worse than the present. The board therefore recommends that the present promotion list stand as it is and that all further efforts to alter it cease.

But they recommended a change in the promotion system substantially as embodied in the Wainwright bill.

In order to intelligently consider the questions involved in the McSwain amendment, it is necessary to consider (a) the applicable provisions of the national defense act; (b) the intention of Congress; (c) the interpretation given by the War Department to the language employed; (d) the McSwain amendment itself; (e) the effects involved in recasting the list now more than eight years after it was adopted.

(a) The law: By section 24 of the national defense act of July, 1920 (41 Stat. 771), it is provided:

FILLING OF VACANCIES

Not less than one-half of the total number of vacancies caused by this act (about 7,000 in number) exclusive of those in the Medical Department, and chaplains, shall be filled by the appointment to date from July 1, 1920, and subject to such examination as the President may prescribe, of persons other than officers of the Regular Army who served as officers of the United States Army at any time between April 6, 1917, and the date of the passage of this act. (It will be borne in mind that the United States Army during the period in question in the World War was composed, besides the Regular Army, of the National Guard and the so-called National Army.)

PROMOTION LIST

SEC. 24a. For the purpose of establishing a more uniform system for the promotion of officers, based on equity, merit, and the interests of the Army as a whole, the Secretary of War shall cause to be prepared a promotion list on which shall be carried the names of all officers of the Regular Army and Philippine Scouts, below the grade of colonel, except officers of the Medical Department, chaplains, professors, the military storekeeper, and certain second lieutenants of the Quartermaster Corps hereinafter specified. The names on the list shall be arranged in general so that the first name on the list shall be that of the officer having the longest commissioned service, the second name that of the officer having the next longest commissioned service—

And so on.

Manifestly, the fundamental principle or rule to be observed in the preparation of this list was length of commissioned service.

The section then provides that in computing service for position on the promotion list—

there shall be credited all active commissioned service in the Army performed * * * whether in the Regular, provisional, or temporary forces, except service under a reserve commission while in attendance at a school or camp for the training of candidates for commissions, also service in the National Guard while in active service since April 6, 1917, under a call from the President; and also commissioned service in the Marine Corps when detached for service with the Army by order of the President. * * * The steps in the formation of the original promotion list shall be as follows:

First. Officers below the grade of colonel in the various branches who were appointed in the Regular Army prior to April 6, 1917, shall be arranged without changing their present order on the existing lineal lists, but otherwise as nearly as practicable according to length of commissioned service. * * *

Second. Officers of the Judge Advocate General's Department, Quartermaster Corps, and Ordnance Department shall be placed on the list according to length of commissioned service. * * *

Third. Captains and lieutenants of the Regular Army and Philippine Scouts originally appointed since April 6, 1917, shall be arranged among themselves according to commissioned service rendered prior to November 11, 1918, and shall be placed at the foot of the list as prepared to this point.

Fourth. Persons to be appointed as captains or lieutenants under the provisions of section 24 hereof (namely, the emergency captains and lieutenants) shall be placed according to commissioned service rendered prior to November 11, 1918, among the officers referred to in the next preceding clause (namely, the captains and lieutenants of the Regular Army), and where such commissioned service is equal, officers now in the Regular Army shall precede persons to be appointed under the provisions of this act, and the latter shall be arranged according to age.

Fifth. Persons appointed as lieutenant colonels or majors under the provisions of section 24 hereof (namely, emergency officers appointed to these grades) shall be placed immediately below all officers of the Regular Army who on July 1, 1920, are promoted to these grades, respectively, under the provisions of section 24 hereof.

The McSwain amendment arises entirely from the interpretation and application of "third" and "fourth" My distinguished colleague on the Military Affairs Committee the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. McSWAIN] contends that in applying the above provisions relating to captains, first and second lieutenants—"third" and "fourth" above set forth—the War Department misinterpreted the law and erred in the manner in which the promotion list was framed as to the officers in these three lower grades. It is this alleged error that he seeks to correct by his amendment.

(b) Now, how did the War Department interpret and apply the law in placing officers in these two grades upon the new promotion list? It conceived that the language in the "third," requiring that captains and lieutenants appointed in the Regular Army since April, 1917, "shall be arranged among themselves according to commissioned service," required that these officers should be rearranged entirely according to length of service and without reference to grade, that is to say that the position of a captain, or a first lieutenant, or a second lieutenant, should be determined by his length of service rendered since April 6, 1917, and prior to November 11, 1918, and not by the fact that he was a captain or lieutenant, and thus that first lieutenants and even second lieutenants should be placed on the list above captains; in other words that the names of all these captains and lieutenants should be mingled or scrambled on this new promotion list, the sole determining factor being length of service and not grade. As a consequence, it was obligatory under "fourth" that the emergency captains and lieutenants covered by "fourth" should be interspersed among the regulars according to the same rule, the regular of equal service preceding the emergency officer, the latter of equal service being arranged among themselves according to age. And so the list was formed and so it at present exists.

(c) The effect given to the language of this statute follows the plain meaning of the English language. It is stated that the usual rule or custom would be to arrange officers according to rank or grade; but the language of the act makes it perfectly clear that this usual rule was not to be followed here. The preceding clause, "first," relating to officers appointed before April 6, 1917, does not provide that they shall be arranged according to grade, but merely provides that they "shall be arranged," most of them without changing the order in which they stand on the old branch promotion lists, but otherwise according to length of service. And this provision actually resulted in arranging the officers who were appointed before April 6, 1917, without reference to grade, for in examining the original promotion list that was formed in 1920, we find many majors on the list above lieutenant colonels and many captains on the list above majors.

But Congress did intend that some officers should be arranged on the list according to grade, and so we find the "fifth" clause quoted above. In the case of those emergency officers who were to be appointed in the grades of lieutenant colonel and major this "fifth" clause makes it perfectly clear that they were to be placed on the list according to grade and not according to length of service, and their positions on the list were to be determined with respect to the Regulars already on the list after the Regulars had been promoted on July 1, 1920, and not according to the rank held by the Regulars on June 30 as is now claimed should be done for the captains and lieutenants by the proponents of the McSwain amendment.

And so manifestly Congress intended by the difference in the language employed with regard to captains and lieutenants, and those appointed lieutenant colonels and majors, that there should be a different arrangement on the list. And in order to give the natural effect to the language, it would seem almost obvious that the department correctly interpreted and applied the statute.

But we are not left in doubt as to the meaning as it was understood by those most closely associated with the preparation of the law. We have the clear and convincing evidence of former Senator James W. Wadsworth, of New York, the then very able chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, and of Hon. FRANK L. GREENE, then a member of the House Military Affairs Committee, now a highly respected Senator from Vermont.

Senator Wadsworth says:

I remember very distinctly the long discussions indulged in by the members of the Military Committee of the Senate and the Military Committee of the House of Representatives concerning a proper system of promotion for officers in the Army. * * * The Senate Committee on Military Affairs * * * finally reached the conclusion that the formula which would operate most consistently and bring about by far the greatest measure of justice was "length of commissioned service." * * *

We knew perfectly well that some majors would appear upon the promotion list above some lieutenant colonels; that some captains would appear above some majors; that some lieutenants, both first and second, would appear above some captains * * *. Especially was the Congress anxious to see to it that those emergency officers who were to be appointed to the Regular Army, most of them below field grade, should be so arranged on the promotion list as to most accurately conform to their relative experience during the war, credit being given them for service as emergency officers * * *. The committee provided very clearly in the legislation, under the paragraph headed "Fourth," in section 24a, "That these men should be placed upon the single list for promotion in accordance with the length of their commissioned service during the war and without regard to the grade in which they were appointed.

I have never heard the intent of Congress questioned upon this matter until very recently. And while I can not prophesy what future Congresses may do, I am convinced that the adoption of any other principle than that of "length of commissioned service" will undermine the entire principle of the single list for promotion and destroy the very thing which Congress attempted to set up.

Senator (then Congressman) GREENE says:

Having in mind, therefore, the plain provisions of the law already quoted, i. e., "that names on the list shall be arranged, in general, so that the first name on the list shall be that of the officer having the longest commissioned service, the second name that of the officer having the next longest commissioned service," and so on, "these captains and lieutenants originally appointed since April 6, 1917, were to be 'arranged among themselves' not by grades or by seniority in grades but in the order of their seniority of commissioned service, regardless of grades * * *."

With the cases of emergency officers taken into the Regular Army under the new law in the grades of captains and first and second lieutenants * * * here again it was made plain that these emergency officers taken into the second part of the single list were to be arranged, not by grades but among the Regulars already on that list, and who had already been rearranged "among themselves," not by grades but "according to commissioned service rendered prior to November 11, 1918." * * *

It is plain, then, that all these officers taken into the Regular Army since April 6, 1917, whether officers already in at the passage of the Army reorganization act or emergency men to be taken in under the terms of that act, were to be thrown into a pool together, so to say, regardless of present rank for the Regulars or grade at which taken in

if emergency men. (See also Senator FRANK L. GREENE'S recent very full statement on this subject contained in the RECORD of January 21, 1929, pp. 1960 to 1962.)

The whole subject was also fully considered and discussed in committee and subcommittee of both Houses, as the printed record of the hearings, pages 2034 and 2038, will show. Also the author of these clauses of the law, Maj. Thomas M. Spaulding, still in the Army, who drafted these very provisions for both subcommittees of the Senate and House, fully explained to the committees that length of service during the war, without reference to grade, was to be the determinant of position on the list, and the debates in both Houses clearly demonstrate that it was distinctly understood that length of service without reference to grade should be the determining factor.

Without reference, then, to the wisdom of the procedure, I believe it should not be open now to serious question that the board of officers who framed the list correctly interpreted the intent of Congress.

(d) So assuming now a full understanding of how and why the list was framed as it was, let us consider the McSwain amendment.

Section 4 of the amended bill H. R. 13509: It provides for the recasting of the promotion list in so far as it relates to captains and lieutenants by arranging this portion of the promotion list in three groups, the first comprising all officers who held the permanent grade of captain in the Regular Army on June 30, 1920, and those appointed in that grade to date from July 1, 1920; the second group, all officers who similarly held the grade of first lieutenant; and the third group all officers who similarly held the grade of second lieutenant, and that within each group the names shall be arranged according to active commissioned service between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918. It also contains provisions for the relief of the West Point classes which graduated during the war whose members claim they were unjustly treated by the way in which they were arranged on the list.

The effect of this amendment would be to rearrange captains and lieutenants on the list according to grade and without reference to length of commissioned service, except as among officers of the same grade. And it is significant to note here that, whereas the act of June 4, 1920, as quoted above in the fifth clause, that emergency officers appointed in the grades of lieutenant colonel or major on July 1, 1920, should take their places on the list along with the Regulars who were in those grades on that date, the McSwain amendment would place the emergency officers appointed captains or lieutenants on July 1, 1920, along with the Regulars who were in those grades on June 30, 1920. It is not only changing the rule from an arrangement by length of service to one by grade which makes the McSwain amendment highly controversial but it is in making this change as of June 30, 1920, and not July 1, 1920. On June 30, 1920, the day before the act became effective, promotions in the Regular Army were still being made according to the old branch lists and were therefore very unequal, whereas on July 1, 1920, the first full day of the operation of the single list, these inequalities were straightened out and all the Regulars found themselves promoted to the grades to which they were entitled by their length of service, and this resulted in a considerable number of Regulars being advanced upon the single promotion list above other Regulars who had preceded them on the old branch lists upon which their names appeared on June 30, 1920.

It is this difference of one day, found in the McSwain amendment, and so conspicuously inconsistent with the rule laid down in the "fifth" clause of the act, requiring emergency lieutenant colonels and majors to follow regulars promoted to those grades on July 1, 1920, that adds so much bitterness to the controversy.

When the volunteers of the Spanish-American War came into the Regular Army during and immediately following that war, they were not arranged according to length of service, but in some cases were arranged according to grade; and in practically all cases were not given credit for their volunteer service.

When the single promotion list was under consideration by Congress in 1920, amendments were offered in both Houses of Congress to rearrange the Spanish-American War officers according to length of service, and thereby reverse the action adopted by Congress in 1901.

The debates and votes in both Houses of Congress in 1920 show that Congress considered it unwise to change the action taken in 1901 under which the officers had been arranged for nearly 20 years, but that it was wise, in the light of experience, in bringing in the World War officers to provide that they should be arranged on the list according to length of commissioned service without any reference to grade.

Now, it is interesting to note that the McSwain amendment would now undo what Congress did in 1920, and would go back to the principles of 1901, which were so severely criticized in both Houses in 1920.

(e) Undoubtedly there is a persuasive force in the argument that these officers should originally have been arranged according to grade. That argument proceeds on the contention both that the War Department incorrectly applied the law, and that even though that be not so, that the injustices effected by so applying the law are so manifold and so serious that the change should be made anyway. That the first of these contentions is not sound, I submit has already been established. As to the second, I maintain first, that there was good reason to so provide in the law; and, second, that to now recast the list would probably create greater dissatisfaction, produce greater discontent, and result in a condition more grievous than the one now sought to be corrected. In this I differ from the majority of the Committee on Military Affairs which has reported the bill with the amendment included. I have reluctantly differed not only with the views of my colleagues on the committee, but particularly with those of my colleague from South Carolina, for whose views I usually have so high a regard. My views are briefly stated in a dissenting report, as follows:

> I am firmly of the opinion that the provisions of the national defense act in forming the original promotion list were correctly interpreted and executed by the War Department, and I concur in the recommendations of the various boards that have studied this matter, particularly the General Personnel Board, that my revision of the present promotion list will create more unsatisfactory conditions and more discontentment in the Army than now exists under the present plan.

The printed record of the hearing on this amendment will show that many officers and groups of officers strenuously and bitterly oppose any change in the present plan, many asserting that they accepted their commissions on the faith of the effect given to the law by the War Department, while others who claim to have been unjustly placed and who protest against the effect given to the law as earnestly advocate the change—naturally those who will be benefited favor, and those who will lose oppose.

Major Summers, an officer in the Adjutant General's Department (see testimony, hearings pp. 183–195) undertook to apply the McSwain amendment to the World War officers that were taken in as they stood on the promotion list January 1, 1928. He found that 4,628 officers would be affected by the amendment; 1,963 of these were in the Regular Army before July 1, 1920; 2,589 came in on July 1, 1920. Of the Regular Army officers, 241 were in the grade of captain; 1,689 in the grade of first lieutenant; 30 in the grade of second lieutenant. Of the emergency officers, 832 were in the grade of captain; 1,124 in the grade of first lieutenant; and 633 in the grade of second lieutenant, and 79 former Regular Army officers who have been reappointed. Applying the McSwain amendment, he found the maximum gain to be that of Captain Wilson of the Finance Department, who gains 4,000 files; and the maximum loss is that of Captain Gray, of the Quartermaster Corps, who loses 4,100 files. Major Summers estimated that 2,000 men would gain by the rearrangement and 2,500 would lose.

In the nature of things, the McSwain amendment presents a highly controversial issue. In the application of any general rule to so large a group of persons, there will always arise many injustices and abnormalities. Such is undoubtedly true of the preparation of that promotion list. In the light we have now Congress might now legislate differently. But to undertake to undo now what was done then will, in my judgment, accentuate rather than cure the present dissatisfaction and result in the very opposite of the professed purpose of the readjustment, namely, to remove the causes of discontent and restore the morale of the service so far as it has been adversely affected.

Personally, I am against a revision of the list now, because it has stood for nearly 10 years, and I believe that a rearrangement of any kind will have an adverse effect on the Army.

In the body at the other end of the Capitol the same issue and the same division of sentiment exists in the Military Affairs Committee, and the highly beneficial and remedial measures embodied in the Wainwright bill are being held in abeyance by an attempt to secure a revision of the promotion list by making the adoption of the new system conditional upon the revision.

It will be remembered that the House has already acted on the Furlow bill establishing a new single promotion list for the Air Corps and that that bill affords to the Air Corps in principle the same measure of relief as is proposed in the original Wainwright bill for the other officers of the Army without any McSwain amendment. In fact, the Furlow bill provides "the names on this list"—Air Corps promotion list—"shall be arranged in the same relative order that they now have on the Army promotion list."

That legislation to break the log jam in promotion is urgently needed has been advanced constantly and consistently by the Secretary of War for the past several years. It seems unnecessary to block the entire noncontroversial legislation by insisting that it must be coupled with the highly controversial features carried in the McSwain amendment.

In my judgment, the best interest of the Army, and in consequence, of the national defense, demands that the provision for promotion on fixed length of service should be adopted now. Thus, and thus alone, will the flow of promotion be restored in the lower grades of the Army, and that most desirable result should not be delayed.

Recently, the Secretary of War, in effect, made this same plea in eloquent and forceful fashion before the Senate committee. He plead with the committee—to consider to-day, the broad question of the assurance of that reasonable advancement, which is vitally important to the immediate and future effectiveness of the Regular Army. * * * This question, therefore, is of the utmost consequence to the whole of our national defense. Agitation, disagreement, and discontent have resulted during the long consideration of this subject. There are involved controversial issues. On the other hand, there are a number of distinctly noncontroversial features which are susceptible of early legislative treatment. The commissioned personnel of the Regular Army is practically a unit in agreement upon the desirability of the enactment into law of those noncontroversial features. I urge your earnest consideration of those features with a view to legislative action by this Congress. Otherwise, I fear that there may occur further delay in the solution of this promotion question, with a prolonged uncertainty which can only react adversely on the Army. * * * I believe correction of the evil can best be effected by limiting the first bill to those fundamentals on which there is general agreement. Such a bill can be passed at this session. I doubt if a controversial bill can be passed. Later, other ideas can be argued on their merits, and consequent changes can be made retroactive if so desired. * * * If a policy of promotion on length of service in grade should be adopted without any restriction (although I am not advocating this) the exaggerated importance of an officer's position on the promotion list would disappear. All would advance in grade upon serving the required period of time. Relative positions on the list would be of slight importance. * * *

High morale can not be expected from those who after foregoing the manifest advantages obtainable from civil careers to direct their efforts and talents to national service, have been deprived of the single possible reward—advancement in an honorable profession.

I am content to leave the argument there. [Applause.]

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McFADDEN].

Mr. McFADDEN. Mr. Chairman, the Federal Reserve Board late yesterday afternoon issued a second recent warning in regard to the credit situation. By this statement they have indicated that they are using at this time in management one of the most potential influences under their control, namely, publicity. The other two major powers vested in the system are the "discount rate" and "the purchase and sale of securities in the open market." Heretofore use has been made of these latter two functions within their power without satisfactory results.

This statement just issued indicates special reference to loans made for speculative purposes, as is shown by the following quotation from the publicity notice issued yesterday:

The firming tendencies of the money market which have been in evidence since the beginning of the year, contrary to the usual trend at this season, make it incumbent upon the Federal reserve banks to give constant and close attention to the situation in order that no influence adverse to the trade and industry of the country shall be exercised by the trend of money conditions beyond what may develop as inevitable.

The extraordinary absorption of funds in speculative security loans which has characterized the credit movement during the past year or more, in the judgment of the Federal Reserve Board, deserves particular attention lest it become a decisive factor working toward a still further firming of money rates, to the prejudice of the country's commercial interests.

The resources of the Federal reserve system are ample for meeting the growth of the country's commercial needs for credit, provided they are competently administered and protected against seepage into uses not contemplated by the Federal reserve act.

The Federal reserve act does not, in the opinion of the Federal Reserve Board, contemplate the use of the resources of the Federal reserve banks for the creation or extension of speculative credit. A member bank is not within its reasonable claims for rediscount facilities at its Federal reserve bank when it borrows either for the purpose of making speculative loans or for the purpose of maintaining speculative loans.

The board has no disposition to assume authority to interfere with the loan practices of member banks so long as they do not involve the Federal reserve banks. It has, however, a grave responsibility whenever there is evidence that member banks are maintaining speculative security loans with the aid of Federal reserve credit. When such is the case the Federal reserve bank becomes either a contributing or a sustaining factor in the current volume of speculative security credit. This is not in harmony with the intent of the Federal reserve act nor is it conducive to the wholesome operation of the banking and credit system of the country.

The main function of the Federal reserve system is the maintenance of a proper gold reserve and control of the total volume of credit, and of course, in the exercise of these prerogatives it necessarily must keep in touch with world gold and credit movements but only for the purpose of wise and competent management in the preservation of the gold reserve and total volume of credits.

I do not understand at this time that the gold reserve is in danger, nor do I see any indication of a general rise in the commodity price level, and because of these facts, I do not think that the Federal reserve system should concern itself about the condition of the stock market or of the security loan market.

I desire to quote from a speech I delivered before the American Bankers' Association in Philadelphia on October 1, 1928, as follows:

The Federal reserve system is charged with a grave responsibility in dealing with this situation because it would be easy for them to produce a business slump without intending to do so. In this connection, it is interesting to note the views of a leading British authority on the subject of finance, who is a student and close observer of our Federal reserve operations: "I am now more concerned lest the Federal reserve authorities should accidentally bring about a general business depression by attempting to take action toward the stock markets which, however well meant, is not really compatible with the system's duty toward business. I think the Federal reserve system may have been quite right to try to frighten the speculators a few months ago, but this having failed, I think they would be much better advised to leave Wall Street alone and let it boil over of itself, rather than do things which, if continued, will certainly put at risk the general prosperity of the country."

The emphasis upon this aspect of our credit structure has been much exaggerated, partly by people who are unaccustomed to a new situation and partly by those who are personally interested in a decline of security prices. I do not think that the assumption is warranted that brokers' loans are depriving business of funds, nor that all of the security loans are unproductive. In my judgment there is too little known about the ultimate disposition of stock-market loans to warrant any action designed to depress these loans by the Federal reserve system. There appears at the present to be no danger to the gold reserve, and should the reserve system tighten credit with the purpose of restricting stock speculation, and should it actually succeed, two results may follow: (1) The high interest rates will make it too expensive for corporations to finance by bonds; and (2) if the public is afraid to buy stocks it will be impossible to finance by stock issues which are usually purchased by speculators. I think this may pave the way for that lack of confidence which can easily lead to a business recession if not a depression. If it were possible to show—and I believe it is not—that any positive harm is being done to business and industry, to employment, or to bank depositors by the present growth of security loans, I think restrictive action might be sanctioned. But no such evidence is available. I firmly believe now as I have in the past that the eye of the Federal reserve system should be kept, when the gold reserve is not in danger, on the question of prices and employment. It seems to me to be rather far-fetched to endanger the pay envelope of the workingman and the profits of the business man because some one gets the notion that there is too much stock speculation or that stocks should not sell as high as they now are. There are so many matters of judgment involved in stock prices that I believe most of the critics and experts have erred in predicting the stock market. If, however, the condition of corporate profits does not warrant present prices, the market will correct itself in time. Meanwhile the Federal reserve system should keep its attention chiefly upon the stability of business and employment, which finds itself reflected generally in stable commodity prices.

While money rates remain relatively high in the United States I believe there is little danger of a further drain upon our gold reserves except by the deliberate action of the central banks. In fact, the recent decline in sterling is bringing gold back into this country. Since we are paying a higher price for short-term money than is being paid abroad, this reaction is to be expected. It could be prevented only if the Bank of England raise the discount rate with an accompanying increase of all money rates abroad. As I came into the Chamber this morning I was notified that at a meeting of the board of directors this morning of the Bank of England the discount rate was raised 1 per cent—to 5½ per cent. If in the judgment of borrowers in this country the uses of bank funds are such that they are willing to pay high rates—for use in the stock market or elsewhere—there is nothing that should be done about it and these events should be left to run their course. On the other hand, indications point to a beginning of a fall in commodity prices, although this is not as yet shown by the Bureau of Labor Statistics index number. I am inclined to think that the high discount rates are beginning to show their effect on commodities and are beginning to bring about an inflow of gold, which can be prevented only by raising the rates in England and abroad, and this, again, would tend to depress commodity prices.

Our reserve ratio is ample, and I do not see why we need to be alarmed about it at the present time.

The large loans of our banking system at the present time, I think, are due to a number of causes:

First. The large volume of individual savings which banks must invest somewhere. These savings correspond partly to the production of additional wealth, and they are partly the results of the capitalization of values, such as stocks and real estate. Large bank loans are, of course, required if there are to be large savings.

Second. The large volume of corporate savings which are being retained by corporations in the form of cash. These cash balances standing on the liability side of the balance sheet of banks must be offset by loans and investments on the asset side. Accurate statistics on this question are not available, though I am now planning some research to get more adequate data upon this subject. Most of these savings are the result not of capitalization but of the production of additional wealth, since most corporations are not speculators but producers.

Third. Some portion of our deposits and loans are the result of the capitalization of stocks and bonds and do not represent actual increases in productive wealth, but it is difficult to get any accurate data to substantiate this assertion.

The deposits and loans and investments of the banking system will decrease if (1) there is a decrease in the volume of individual savings, or (2) if savers buy securities directly—or through investment trusts—rather than leave their funds on deposit in banks, (3) if those holding deposit balances derived through the sale of securities go back into the market and repurchase these securities from those who are holding them on margin. This is, of course, what would happen should any extensive decline take place in the stock market. Though I doubt whether any such decline is in prospect unless this present action should bring it about when we have such heavily protected margin accounts as we do at the present time. Furthermore, I do not think that it is the business of the banking system to try to wipe out one group of speculators and investors in order to benefit the other. Such a decline might be initiated among the speculators themselves should corporate earnings fail to come up to expectations. It is my belief that the action of the Bank of England in raising its discount rate is bound to result in a decline in commodity prices in the United States.

Should the indexes of employment or of prices show any tendency to decline, I think that the Federal reserve system should tend to ease money rates, and should there be no change in these indexes I do not think any further credit restriction should be brought about, because I am afraid it might result in a lack of business confidence followed by a recession. Last year the high money rates made it seem to some observers that it would be difficult to finance by bond issues. It is true that bond issues declined and that many feared a resultant decline in new construction, which would mean a slackening demand for steel and other raw materials. This result, however, did not follow for a number of reasons. Some of these, it seems to me, are: (1) Corporations have adequate cash balances so that they can finance themselves without creating additional debts; (2) many, such as Goodyear, United States Rubber, Westinghouse, American Telephone & Telegraph, and others financed by stock issues. The public was still willing to buy stock, and as a result brokers' loans have not yet declined. However, if the reserve system seeks to do so and succeeds in making money rates so high that people will be afraid to buy either stocks or bonds, I think that the depressing results on business may be realized.

There is much to be said for the independence of action and careful planning of our American business men which enabled them to keep their businesses on an even keel in spite of the disturbing money rates. I think it is also being realized that high money rates need not necessarily result in any immediate reaction in business when commodity prices are relatively stable and no lack of confidence is endangered in the future course of profits and prices. If commodity prices had been moving up and the commercial loans of business had been expanding in order to finance increasing inventories at increasing prices, I believe we would then be easily susceptible to the restraining effects of higher money rates. An upward movement in general prices always raises the question of how high the inflation will go; and when people think it will go no higher it is generally followed by a deflation. We have, however, not had a general increase in commodity prices, in spite of all of the talk of wild speculation. When all commodity prices rise there is no general increase in productive wealth, but merely an inflation. However, stock prices should be distinguished from commodity prices since there is often a corresponding increase in value measured by an increased capitalization.

There is a tendency to pay too much attention to the spectacular action of the stock market. But we should remember that the business man, the worker, and the farmer are not greatly concerned as such about stock speculation. Their chief interest is in the continuity of business and of the stability of general prices, which serve as guide to industrial activity and help to maintain employment, wages, and profits.

I do not think that the Federal reserve system should at the present time concern itself about security loans, unless there is a tendency to speculation in commodities, which means a disturbance in the industrial mechanism. To disturb industry merely to prevent stock speculation seems to me to be unwarranted and would work a gross injustice upon the business man and the workingman. This I suggest might be the result of an abortive attempt to restrict speculative and investment activities by banking policy. [Applause.]

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. JONES. Is there any distinction made or is it practicable for the board to make a distinction in rediscount rates where the securities are on speculative investments and where they are on other character of investments?

Mr. McFADDEN. The governor of the Federal Reserve Board quite recently made the statement that they were not looking to the use to which credit was put. The actual operations, however, through the acceptance rate on acceptance, which is the class of paper which is supposed to be the best paper, show that that class has until quite recently been receiving a preferential rate, a lower rate than the prevailing rate on other discounts.

Mr. JONES. Then it is practical from his viewpoint, if he thought it advisable to do so, for him to make a higher discount rate on a purely speculative transaction?

Mr. WINGO. If the gentleman will permit, I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania overlooks the real significance of the gentleman's question. Should not you call attention to the fact that under the law stock-market loans are not eligible for rediscount at a Federal reserve bank?

Mr. McFADDEN. The gentleman is quite correct. I did not know the gentleman from Texas was referring especially to that, but these stock-exchange loans are secured on stocks and investment securities that are not eligible for rediscount.

Mr. JONES. The local banks do lend funds to-day on purely speculative transactions.

Mr. McFADDEN. It has been stated that the borrower will borrow sometimes for commercial purposes and use the money for speculative purposes.

Mr. JONES. That was the very reason for my question. Is there any practical way to stop the applying of a higher discount rate to a purely speculative stock transaction?

Mr. McFADDEN. The Federal Reserve Board assumes there is none by its operations the past year.

Mr. BEEDY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFADDEN. Yes.

Mr. BEEDY. Governor Strong in his testimony before our committee said—I recall it very clearly—that there was no manner by which the Federal Reserve Board as such could trace the use to which loans by the Federal reserve system were put, and therefore it would indicate that they are still of the same mind when they attempt to practice the publicity method of influencing investments rather than the raise in the rediscount rate, which everybody recognizes at this time works great injury to business in general.

Mr. JONES. Then the only way to reach it is by some restrictive law?

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BLACK].

Mr. BLACK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I wish to read a wire to me from William Randolph Hearst:

LOS ANGELES, February 5, 1929.

Congressman LORING BLACK, Jr.,

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I have been advocating the Nicaragua route for nearly 35 years. I advocated it first in preference to the Panama route, because I thought it involved fewer engineering difficulties and fewer foundation problems, and because it provided opportunity for a better canal and a quicker route, and finally because it was more easily defended and less easily destroyed in time of war.

The question now, however, is not which is the better canal. The Panama Canal has been built and another canal is needed to accommodate the constantly increasing transisthmian traffic.

There is practically no other site for an additional canal than the Nicaragua route. Consequently there is no argument as regards location. The only question is whether commercial requirements and military defense demand an additional canal.

The statistics of persistent transportation growth across the Isthmus prove conclusively the immediate need of an additional canal for purely commercial reasons.

The increase in destructiveness of military forces and methods due largely to the perfection of the airplane, show convincingly the advisability of another canal as a protective measure in case of war. It is possible that both canals might be destroyed in war; but if the canals are adequately fortified and adequately defended with guns, ships, and airplanes, it is plainly less likely that both canals would be destroyed than that one would be.

There would seem to me to be very little room for difference of opinion regarding either the commercial or military necessity for this second canal. The facts and figures are so obvious and so conclusive that there could be no reason for opposing the canal except obstinate indifference to the facts and figures, or unwillingness to spend the money for what is practically a commercial and military necessity.

Finally, the Nicaragua Canal would save over the Panama route 550 nautical miles between New Orleans and the Pacific coast of our country, and 360 miles between New York and our Pacific coast. The canal, therefore, has the advantage of being of direct benefit to the three great sections of the country, the Atlantic States, the Pacific States, and the Mississippi River and Gulf States.

It is not an enterprise, therefore, which can be opposed because of special benefits conferred merely upon one section. It will prove of advantage to all sections and should have the support of the Representatives of all sections.

I have papers in various parts of the country, and as far as I can determine through the contacts which these papers provide, the Nicaragua Canal project is supported very whole-heartedly by the people of all sections.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLACK of New York. Yes; assuredly.

Mr. TABER. If the gentleman will take the hearings of the Military Affairs Appropriations Committee on the Panama Canal he will find there the testimony of the manager of the canal, the Governor of the Canal Zone, that we have a capacity in the present canal as it stands now, with the normal possibility of commercial increase, and allowing liberally, for 30 years, and that by building one more lock we will have a capacity for 30 years more at least.

Mr. BLACK of New York. I understand there is a great deal of difference of opinion about when we will arrive at the capacity of the Panama Canal.

Mr. TABER. We are a long ways from it.

Mr. BLACK of New York. That is questionable.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. AYRES. I yield the gentleman three additional minutes.

Mr. BLACK of New York. Mr. Hearst's wire in support of the Nicaraguan canal project demonstrates again his enlightened vision as to the future commercial and defensive requirements of the United States. This canal has been thought of compelling necessity by many of our most eminent men for scores of years, and we are fast reaching the point where the preeminent position of our country depends upon the adoption of this new route from sea to sea.

The Panama Canal is reaching its traffic saturation point, already being employed to 70 per cent of its capacity. The Nicaraguan canal was originally favored over the Panama route. Its outside cost would be, at most, $160,000,000, whereas the Panama Canal has already cost $412,000,000. The Nicaraguan route is three days shorter between New York and San Francisco. Its climate is much better than at Panama. It has a natural lake 120 by 40 miles, which can afford the water necessary for the operation of locks. At Panama such water is stored by artificial means and might readily, in case of an enemy attack, be absolutely depleted.

We paid $3,000,000 under the Bryan-Chamorro treaty for the exclusive right to build the Nicaraguan canal, and I believe that now is the time to initiate the work by the passage of the Edge resolution for a survey.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman yields back two minutes.

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Chairman, I yield 40 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COX]. [Applause.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, cotton is facing the most serious crisis in all of its history. At one time it was king, but long since dethroned and is now the humblest and most unhappy of all subjects. It is produced in greater quantity than any other vegetable fiber and is put to a greater variety of uses than any other commodity with the possible exception of iron and steel. There has been a time when the United States had a monopoly on production, but it now furnishes about one-half of the world's crop. In 1927 India produced 37 per cent as much cotton as the United States. China and Egypt each produced large quantities. Russia and South America are increasing their production. More than 50 per cent of the domestic crop must find a market abroad, and in doing so is forced to compete with foreign cotton grown by the cheapest of all labor. Our best customer is Germany, which grows no cotton. The United Kingdom comes next, with France, Japan, and Italy following close behind.

Domestic cotton could in measure meet foreign competition if it might have the benefit of the home markets, but this has been taken away by other fibrous substitutes that now flood the country. It is in behalf of securing relief from this condition, as far as it is affected by importations of jute, that this appearance is made.

JUTE

Fifteen hundred or more vegetable fibers are produced in the world, but only few on a commercial basis. The more important of these will be mentioned briefly. They fall into four general classes, namely, stem or soft fiber, to which belong jute, flax, hemp, and sunn. Leaf, or hard fiber, which embraces abaca (manila), henequen (sisal), istle (Tampico fiber), phormium (New Zealand flax), mescal maguey (Mazailan hemp), palma, pitera (Mauritius hemp), sisal, cantala (Maguey). Seed fibers, such as cotton and kapok, and fruit fibers, in which class is coir.

Besides cotton the only vegetable fibers produced in the United States are flax and hemp, and these in relatively small quantities. Due to high labor costs domestic production is not likely to soon develop to any considerable proportion. Jute is the cheapest, and next to cotton is the most widely used.

It is largely a product of India, though some is grown in China, Formosa, and French Indo-China, but not on a competitive basis with India. It can be safely said that India has a complete monopoly on production.

Experiments have been made with the growing of other vegetable fibers in the United States, with the result that it is thought that production can not be had on a profitable basis.

Jute is a soft fiber obtained from the jute plant and lies between the bark and the woody stem or stalk. The fiber is soft and pliable, easily spun, and is from 4 to 8 feet in length. Jute butts is that part of the fiber that is taken from the cuttings and woody parts of stalk and varies from 5 to 25 inches in length. The finer fabrics of jute are made from the better quality of fiber, while the poorer fabrics, such as cotton bagging, are made of jute butts. From the standpoint of quality jute is the weakest and poorest of all vegetable fibers capable of being spun. It will not stand wear and rots rapidly, especially when exposed alternately to wetting and drying. Its sole advantage over other fibers is its cheapness. There is not a single use to which it is put but that cotton would serve to better purpose. It is cheaper than cotton, therefore its wide and extensive use.

The story of jute is an interesting one, but to repeat it in this hearing would not likely prove profitable. Interests controlling the industry have for more than three-quarters of a century had a complete monopoly on it. They have wrought great oppression upon a class unable to defend themselves. With them privilege and greed have ridden hard upon the backs of the unshod poor.

The following table, made up from census reports, shows importations and value of jute and manufactures imported in the years 1923, 1925, and 1927:

Imports of jute and manufactures

	1923		1925		1927
	Pounds	Value	Pounds	Value	Pounds	Value
Jute for manufacture	163, 504, 320	$10, 235, 000	139, 932, 800	$11, 997, 000	182, 292, 640	$11, 319, 000
Jute butts, unmanufactured	24, 601, 920	545, 000	4, 661, 440	312, 000	25, 936, 960	835, 000
Waste bagging and waste sack cloth	12, 583, 000	188, 000	16, 130, 000	531, 000	37, 262, 000	950, 000
Burlap	598, 473, 000	66, 971, 000	625, 816, 000	85, 028, 000	569, 649, 000	67, 249, 000
Bagging for cotton gunny cloth, etc.	(1)	1, 845, 000	(1)	3, 474, 000	(1)	4, 230, 000
Jute bags or sacks	40, 079, 000	3, 777, 000	48, 070, 000	5, 946, 000	38, 793, 000	3, 963, 000
Jute yarns	7, 623, 000	869, 000	777, 000	113, 000	2, 514, 000	286, 000
Other manufactures	(1)	259, 000	(1)	360, 000	(1)	486, 000
Average total of value		84, 649, 000		107, 761, 000		90, 087, 000

[1] Not shown.

For the first nine months of 1928 long jute in raw state was imported to the extent of 98,288,960 pounds, of the wholesale value of $6,411,500, and jute butts to the amount of 53,464,320 pounds, of the wholesale value of $2,226,217; a total of 151,753,280 pounds, valued at $8,637,717. If importations for the remainder of the year 1928 continued at same rate, then there came in long jute to the amount of 122,861,000 pounds and jute butts in the amount of 66,825,400 pounds; a total of 189,686,800 pounds, valued at $10,797,146. This would indicate that imports of raw jute for 1928 were under those of 1927, but this is true only as to long jute, as jute butts came in in threefold amount. Imports of manufactures of jute for 1928 were far in excess of previous year. In 1927 total importations of jute and manufactures amounted to 968,397,194 pounds, of a total value of $90,067,308. Total imports for the first nine months of 1928 amounted to 769,357,417 pounds, of a value of $80,749,947. If importations for the remaining three months continued at the same rate and of same value, then there came in during 1928 a total of 961,696,771 pounds, of the value of $100,937,431, a considerable increase over 1927. This is confirmed by the reports of the United States Tariff Commission on jute and manufactures of jute imported for consumption, calendar year 1927, and by like reports of same agency of imports for consumption, January 1 to September 30, 1928.

Mr. BRAND of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. BRAND of Georgia. What is the rate fixed under the present tariff law on jute?

Mr. COX. That will take me away from the discussion as I have outlined it. But the gentleman directs attention to the wickedness of the present law, concerning which the country should be advised. I ask that he be content to find specific answer in observations that will follow.

For jute yarn and rovings falling under paragraph 1003 of the act of 1922 carrying a duty of from 2½ to 7 cents per pound, there came in during 1927 a total of 2,512,691 pounds, whereas the report for 1928 for first nine months show total imports of 75,602 pounds, a considerable dropping off of this class of manufactures of jute.

Jute twist, twine, and cordage, composed of two or more jute yarns or rovings twisted together, falling under same section of the act, and carrying a duty of 3½ to 11 cents per pound, came in during the year 1927 to a total of 467,350 pounds, and for the first nine months of 1928 it was 318,811 pounds, a slight increase over 1927.

It might be well to interpolate here the statement that these reports furnish an example of the influence of the tariff upon importations, for the articles carrying high duty came in in very small quantities, and in some instances none at all. For instance, the report shows that for 1927, of material composed of two or more jute yarns, or rovings, and so forth, falling under the second division of paragraph 1003, carrying duty of 6½ to 11 cents per pound, there were no imports.

It is fabrics falling under 1008, carrying 1 cent and 1 cent plus 10 per cent per pound, and under section 1018, carrying duty of 1 cent per pound plus 10 per cent, and under paragraph 1019, carrying a duty of 6 cents per square yard, that imports for 1928 far exceeded those of 1927. For instance, for the full year of 1927 there were imported fabrics, wholly of jute, plain woven, and all others not specifically provided for, not bleached, printed, stenciled, painted, or dyed, or rendered noninflammable, 567,113,688 pounds, of the value of $67,065,067. For the first nine months of 1928 this same fabric, carrying 1 cent per pound duty, was imported to the amount of 502,845,807 pounds, of the value of $64,592,613.

This same average of increase applies to fabrics assessed under the other paragraphs of the act.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Can the gentleman inform us about what proportion of this imported jute is used in the wrapping of cotton bales?

Mr. COX. About one-tenth.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. If this cotton were wrapped in cotton rather than in jute, how many bales of cotton would be consumed?

Mr. COX. Two hundred thousand.

The history of the case shows that when the duty on manufactures of jute is low, there is a tendency in the trade to reduce imports of better grades of the raw commodity, even though it be on the free list, preferring to buy manufactured products because obtainable at a price under the possible cost of manufacture in domestic mills.

This, however, does not apply to jute butts, which is used extensively for packing purposes, but mainly for making cotton bagging, the manufacture of which requires a minimum amount of labor. Imports of this commodity increased from 4,661,440 pounds, of the value of $312,000, in 1925 to 53,464,000 pounds, valued at $2,782,771, in 1928. Indicating that there is now more cotton bagging made of jute by domestic mills than formerly, which is confirmed by the fact that imports of cotton bagging for 1927 were to the value of $4,230,000, whereas for 1928 they were of approximate value of $2,871,825.

Jute and jute butts were of relatively low price in 1927 as compared to 1926 and 1925, being $83.54 per ton under the price of 1926 and $59.17 under 1925.

Importation of jute and jute butts given in the Cordage Trade Journal of January 24, 1929, were as follows:

	Per ton
Long jute:
Superior, Jan. 3, 1929	$201. 60
Firsts, Jan. 3, 1929	165. 76
Jute butts:
Superior spinning, Jan. 3, 1929	130. 00
Second quality, Jan. 3, 1929	128. 80
Ordinary mixing, Jan. 3, 1929	120. 00

Jute butts of lower grade than "ordinary mixing" not quoted.

There are many kinds of burlap, but the 40-inch, 8-ounce, and 10½-ounce types are the standards. The spot price for these two kinds on January 24, 1928, and January 24, 1929, as quoted in the Daily News Record of January 25, 1929, are as follows:

	Price per linear yard
	Jan. 24, 1928	Jan. 24, 1929
8-ounce 40-inch	$0. 0775	$0. 0675
10½-ounce 40-inch	. 0975	. 0925

Prices given and all prices stated as to other imports are prices quoted at mills in Calcutta or Dundee.

No burlap is made in domestic mills. This is bought by mills and then sewed into sacks, an operation that requires little labor. The reason for this is that due to the low duty on burlap and the slightly higher duty on sewed sacks the material can be bought and sewed into sacks at less expense than sacks would cost. But only a fraction of American labor is employed by domestic mills in the making up of finished fabrics to what would be the case if the work of spinning and weaving were done in American mills.

BAGGING FOR COTTON

There has arisen during the past half century periodical discussion of the use of cotton bagging for baling cotton. This started in 1888, but subsided with the passing of the following year. Agitation was renewed in 1908, 1914, 1920, and 1926, when cotton crops were large and the prices low, but went no further than demonstrating the superiority of cotton bagging over that made of jute.

In 1888 two cotton mills located in New Orleans, La., commenced the manufacture of what is known as Odenheimer bagging, a cotton fabric weighing 12 ounces per linear yard and woven between 42 and 45 inches wide, which they furnished to cotton growers to cover cotton during the years 1888, 1889, and 1909. The demand, however, for this type of bagging for the years named was greater than production, whereas many growers used lighter cotton materials, such as sheeting, osnaburgs, drills, and other fabrics, all too light for the purpose to which they were put. This use of unsuitable fabrics resulted in prejudice against cotton bagging, and the bulk of the cotton crop is still wrapped in jute bagging.

In 1927 the workers in the Division of Cotton Marketing designated four types of cotton bagging and a fifth for patching material. The yarn for all types was manufactured at Clemson College, South Carolina, and weaving done at Clemson College and at Raleigh, N. C., in cooperation with the North Carolina State College.

The specifications of various types were as follows:

Pattern No. 1, 10 ends and 10 picks per inch; weight, 12 ounces per linear yard when woven 45 inches wide.

Pattern No. 2, 8 ends and 8 picks per inch; weight, 16 ounces per linear yard when woven 45 inches wide.

Pattern No. 3, 6 ends and 6 picks per inch; weight, 20 ounces per linear yard when woven 45 inches wide.

Pattern No. 4, 4 ends and 4 picks per inch; weight, 24 ounces per linear yard when woven 45 inches wide.

Pattern No. 5 (patching material), 13 ends and 10 picks per inch; weight, 16 ounces per linear yard when woven 30 inches wide.

With the view of making a comparative test of this material along with the best grade of jute bagging, 120 bales of cotton were divided into groups of 24 bales each. Four of the groups were covered in the different types of cotton bagging, and the fifth in new 2-pound jute bagging. All baling was done at Henderson, N. C., and 6 yards of bagging and 6 bands were used on each bale. Shipment was made to Norfolk, Va., where the cotton was compressed and then shipped to Bremen, Germany—all being handled as any ordinary shipment of cotton. The cotton was reshipped to the United States and the bagging subjected to various tests, with the result that all types of cotton bagging proved superior to jute. Even the lighter-weight cotton bagging proved far better than the new jute bagging. Reference is made at this point to Preliminary Reports on Cotton Bagging for Cotton, published by the United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, division of cotton marketing, February, 1928, which contains valuable information on the subject. From this report is taken the following quotation:

The physical tests, including the breaking strength test and the shipping test, indicate that from the viewpoint of durability, protection to the cotton, and neatness, cotton bagging is a more suitable covering for the American cotton bale than is jute.

This raises the economic question of cost. And in considering this, the discussion might properly be confined to the lighter-weight bagging, that is, the 12 ounces per linear yard bagging, as this has proved its great superiority over jute. Good ordinary cotton selling at 4 cents per pound would produce bagging that would retail to the cotton grower at 62½ cents per pattern of 6 yards. Bagging of same grade of cotton selling at 10 cents per pound would retail at 98⅞ cents per pattern, or when same cotton was selling at 15 cents per pound, at 124⅘ cents per pattern. These figures are taken from computations made by the cotton marketing division in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and make allowance for profit, manufacture, and selling cost.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Is it not true that the present use to which this low-grade cotton can be put is very limited?

Mr. COX. Yes; somewhat limited.

In 1922 when good ordinary cotton was selling at 17.39 cents per pound and jute at 9 cents per pound, 6 yards of cotton bagging of this grade of cotton would have retailed at $1.38, while jute bagging sold at 54 cents per pattern of 6 yards, a difference in favor of jute of 84 cents on the pattern; but in 1926, when good ordinary cotton sold at 10.40 cents per pound and raw jute at 12.77 cents per pound, jute bagging sold at $1.14 per pattern, while cotton bagging would have sold at 90 cents per pattern, a difference of 24 cents per pattern in favor of cotton bagging.

The history of the jute-bagging industry shows that when the cotton crop is heavy and the price is low, the demand for jute bagging is strong with the price high. When there is a small cotton crop, resulting in higher prices, the demand for jute bagging is light and the price is low. In other words, when cotton is high jute is low, and when cotton is low jute is high.

It has been reliably estimated that it would require 200,000 bales of low-grade cotton to cover the entire American cotton crop with a light-weight cotton bagging.

Mr. GREEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. GREEN. I am interested to know whether this cheap cotton bagging would cost more as a wrapper than jute. Is the gentleman advised on that?

Mr. COX. That would depend on the relative prices of jute and cotton, but I think it fair to say that cotton bagging would cost 4 to 5 cents per linear yard more than jute.

Experience in the cotton trade shows that the reduction in the available supply of cotton to the extent of 200,000 bales causes a rise in price of one-half cent per pound, or $2.50 per bale. The use of cotton for purposes not now devoted is equivalent to reduction of available supply. The market price of cotton is determined upon the basis of gross weight, or at least the cotton producer thinks so, and for the purpose of the discussion will be accepted as the case.

There is a difference of 7 pounds in the weight of a pattern of 6 yards of bagging made of jute and that made of cotton. The price being fixed upon basis of gross weight, and with good cotton selling at 20 cents per pound, the farmer gets $1.40 on each bale wrapped in jute bagging that he would not get if wrapped in cotton bagging. If good ordinary cotton should be selling at 15 cents per pound, his cotton bagging should cost him $1.25 per bale, while his jute bagging might cost him as little as 80 cents per pattern, this being about the average cost for the years 1922 to 1926, inclusive. This gives another difference in favor of jute of 45 cents per bale. This added to $1.40, the price received for 7 pounds of jute make a total of $1.85, and this is what the farmer thinks he would lose should he discard the use of jute bagging for his cotton. But is this true? If the use of cotton bagging reduces available supply to extent of 200,000 bales with corresponding raise of price $2.50 per bale, he profits on the transaction to the amount of 65 cents per bale. His profit would increase as price of cotton would drop and jute rise.

There are other advantages that would result to the farmer; in fact, the entire cotton industry. Cotton bagging has a far greater reuse value than jute, which would be reflected in the price the producer receives. A saving to the grower would also result from lowering of charges on exportable surplus. Take the exports for 1923 for illustration, when the country exported 8.8 million bales. The saving on tares made in Europe, inland and ocean freight, insurance commission, insurance, and exchange would have amounted to $4,000,000. Cotton is less inflammable than jute, and cotton baled in cotton bagging would likely take a lower insurance rate than that wrapped in jute, which would be another advantage to the producer.

The appearance of the wrapping or covering of a commodity has much to do with desirability of purchase. American cotton has always suffered disadvantage because it has been so poorly wrapped. It is the most unattractive of all cotton that goes on the exchanges of the world. This handicap would be removed and demand increased if wrapped more neatly.

There is also a saving of cotton when cotton bagging is used. Considerably less lint adheres to cotton bagging in the stripping process than does jute bagging. And many other advantages that cotton bagging has over bagging of jute might be named.

For the purpose of closing this part of the discussion, the following quotation is taken from an exhaustive report made by experts connected with the United States Department of Agriculture, as follows:

1. Cotton bagging may be manufactured from the lowest grades and staple lengths of cotton produced in the United States and can be manufactured from high-grade waste.

2. Cotton bagging, as manufactured at present, makes a very suitable covering for cotton bales. It is reasonable to suppose that a better method of spinning yarns and weaving the cotton bagging fabric may be developed by experimentation and the cost of production consequently lowered.

3. Ordinarily, cotton bagging costs more than jute bagging, but in 1926 it was cheaper because the demand for cotton was weak and that for jute was strong.

4. Adoption of cotton bagging would probably force the price of jute to unusually low levels.

5. Decided economies in transportation and insurance costs would result from the use of a lighter weight bagging.

6. A strong, light-weight cotton bagging of standard construction and weight would tend to obviate the disagreeable and costly practice of challenging and taring American cotton in spinners' markets at home and abroad.

7. Cotton lint does not adhere to cotton bagging so tenaciously as it does to jute bagging.

8. The lightest weight of cotton bagging thus far tested is superior to 2-pound jute bagging and to the burlap covering commonly used on the Egyptian bale, which has the reputation of being the most attractive covering now entering the world markets.

9. The use of cotton bagging for cotton appears to depend upon the following:

(a) The manufacture of a light-weight cotton bagging which can be sold in competition with jute bagging.

(b) The sale of cotton on the basis of its net weight in the market of the world, including the local markets, to obviate the losses which would result from the use of a light-weight bagging when settlements are made on the basis of gross weight.

BAGS

According to recent survey made by Bureau of Agricultural Economics, around 700,000,000 cotton bags, for all purposes, are manufactured annually in the United States, into which goes 500,000,000 yards of cotton fabric, the equivalent of 300,000 bales of raw cotton. Of the domestic cotton bags, the wholesale grocers are the heaviest users. The trade takes approximately 325,000,000 bags weighing 112,000,000 pounds, the equivalent of 268,000 bales of 500 pounds each. The trade uses these bags as containers for sugar, flour, salt, meal, and other edible and non-edible products. Of the total, 48 per cent is used for sugar, 25 per cent for flour, 12 per cent for meal, 8 per cent for feed, 5 per cent for salt and other products, including rice, peas, coffee, seed, and so forth, take the remaining 2 per cent.

Another large user of cotton bags is the cement industry, which uses approximately 45,000 bales of cotton in bags annually. The bakery trade takes 20,000 bales, and the fertilizer industry 4,000 bales. It is with the wholesale grocery trade and fertilizer industry that the greatest possible increased use of cotton in bags lie. At the present time there is an annual use of jute bags by the wholesale grocers of 338,529,790 pounds, for which if cotton bags were substituted pound for pound would consume 789,000 bales of raw cotton and cotton waste, all of an average of 500 pounds each. This much additional cotton, however, would not be taken in the manufacture of cotton bags to take the place of bags made of jute, as cotton bags of same size and strength is much lighter than jute, the latter weighting about one and one-half times as much as cotton. This would mean that to substitute cotton bags for those made of jute now used by the grocery trade would take approximately 525,000 bales. This, added to the 268,000 bales now used, would mean that the trade would use cotton in bags to the extent of 793,000 bales.

In 1927 the fertilizer industry used cotton in bags to the extent of 4,000 bales, which was 2.4 per cent of all bags used for fertilizer in this season. If cotton bags had been used exclusively, the industry would have taken cotton to the amount of approximately 167,000 bales, an increase of 163,000 bales over the amount it did use. In 1928 the amount of commercial fertilizer sold in cotton States for all purposes amounted to 5,590,000 tons, whereas for 1927 the amount sold in same States and for all purposes was 4,552,000. The amount used on cotton for 1927 was 1,847,000 tons and for 1928 it was 2,347,000, the average price for 1927 being $25.38 per ton, and for 1928, $31.47 per ton. There was a corresponding increase of sales in other parts of the country with like increase of prices. Therefore there was a much greater use of bags by the fertilizer industry in 1928 than in 1927, and if cotton bags had been used, its consumption of cotton would have been greater.

There can be no question of the suitability of cotton bags for sacking fertilizer. The industry has learned this from experience, and tests made have proven it to be the case. The objection to the use of cotton urged by some few fertilizer manufacturers is that cotton bags might prove to be more expensive and therefore reduce the profits of the industry.

COST OF PRODUCING COTTON

Complete data on the average cost of growing cotton for 1928 are not yet obtainable, but costs may be approximately arrived at by comparing cost of the 1927 crop with certain elements of cost that went into the crop of 1928.

In 1927 there was used for cotton 1,847,000 tons of fertilizer, at an average cost of $25.38 per ton, whereas in 1928 there was used 2,347,000 tons, at an average cost of $31.47. This means that the commercial fertilizer bill for cotton for 1927 was $46,876,860, while for 1928 it was $73,860,090. The average yield of cotton for the entire country in 1927 was 154.5 pounds of lint per acre, and for 1928 the yield was 151.8 pounds. In other words, the fertilizer bill for cotton in 1928 was $26,928,130 greater than in 1927, while the per acre yield was 2.7 pounds less. The average price paid for the 1927 crop was 20.2 cents per pound, and for the 1928 crop 18 cents. The final ginning figures for the 1928 crop is not yet available, but the final estimate made by the Department of Agriculture places the 1928 crop at 14,373,000 bales of 478 pounds net. The crop of 1927 was 12,956,000 bales of 478 pounds net. The acreage harvested for 1927 was 40,158,000 acres, and for 1928, 45,326,000.

Linters are not included in the number of bales given for 1927 and 1928. In 1927 there were 875,000 bales of linters. The total for 1928 is not yet obtainable, but for five months, August to December, the number was 613,000, while for same months of 1927 the number was 547,000, indicating that the ratio of linters to cotton of the 1927 crop holds true as to the 1928 crop.

The cost of growing cotton varies between the States, all depending upon the amount of labor employed, fertility of soil, fertilizers used, weather conditions, the activity of the boll weevil and other insects, land rents, and other items that enter into the making up of total costs.

For the 1927 crop, latest figures furnished by the Department of Commerce, the cost of production was as follows:

Yield groups (pounds of lint per acre)	Net cost of lint
	Per acre	Per pound
60 pounds and under	$21.65	$0.50
61 to 100 pounds	22.38	.26
101 to 140 pounds	25.51	.20
141 to 180 pounds	25.02	.15
181 to 220 pounds	28.52	.14
221 to 260 pounds	30.66	.13
261 to 300 pounds	35.71	.12
301 to 340 pounds	32.99	.10
341 to 380 pounds	37.64	.10
381 to 420 pounds	42.19	.11
421 to 460 pounds	41.83	.09
461 to 500 pounds	45.71	.09
501 and over	47.36	.08

The 1928 crop cost considerably more than the 1927 crop, the difference in fertilizer being $26,928,130. There are other items of added cost that might be included.

The Commerce Department has furnished the following figures, showing the per acre yield of lint in the United States:

	1927	1928
Virginia	230	265
North Carolina	238	212
South Carolina	148	147
Georgia	154	131
Florida	126	100
Missouri	188	200
Tennessee	178	185
Alabama	180	145
Mississippi	194	176
Louisiana	170	165
Texas	129	139
Oklahoma	138	133
Arkansas	157	161
New Mexico	352	310
Arizona	315	320
California	340	340
Other	160	154
United States	154.5	151.08

From the statement it will be readily seen that the States producing greatest number of bales had the lowest per acre yield. Take Texas, for instance; that State produces on an average of one-third of the cotton crop of the country. In 1927 it had an average per acre yield of 129 pounds of lint. In 1928 the yield per acre was 139 pounds of lint. Take Georgia, which is one of the large cotton-producing States; in 1927 the per acre yield was 154 pounds, and in 1928 it was 131 pounds of lint. The acreage production of these States is always below average of the United States. This is due to the fact that States producing least amount of cotton have the highest per acreage yield. In 1927 California produced 9,871 bales and had an average per acre yield for 1927 and 1928 of 340 pounds of lint. New Mexico in 1927 produced 6,930 bales of cotton, but had a per acre yield of 352 pounds, a yield per acre of more than three and one-half times as great as that of Florida for 1928. These high figures bring up the averages of the total crop.

The cotton produced in these small cotton-producing States sell at a higher average price than that grown in the principal cotton-producing States, which operates to bring up the average price of total crop.

According to statement of cost made by the Department of Commerce, the cotton produced by Florida for 1928 cost 50 cents per pound, which it sold on an average of less than 18 cents per pound. According to same computation, Georgia, Texas, and Oklahoma cotton cost 20 cents per pound to produce. It sold below 18 cents per pound. The Texas crop sold at 17½ cents per pound. The average cost in these States was greater than of other States, the average price received less, for these are averages of totals, and that of these States fall below total averages.

In 1928 there was grown in Florida a 20,000-bale crop, produced at a cost of 50 cents per pound. It was sold at 18 cents, which netted a loss of $3,200,000. For the same year there was produced in Georgia 1,020,000 bales on which growers suffered a loss of $10,200,000. In Oklahoma there was produced 1,180,000 bales, on which the growers in that State suffered loss of $11,800,000. In Texas there was grown 5,150,000 bales, on which was sustained a loss of $64,375,000. In other words, a total loss of approximately $90,000,000 on the cotton crop of these four States for one year. Of a total cotton crop of 14,373,000 bales for 1928, Georgia, Oklahoma, and Texas furnished 7,350,000 bales. These, as well as other large cotton-producing States are, by reason of the soil, climatic conditions, labor, etc., peculiarly adapted to the growing of cotton. It is a crop that they have long produced, and one concerning which the people know most. There is no other crop that could be well substituted. The people are simply wedded to the industry and will not hear to divorcement.

It is pertinent to ask: Where is to be found, in the light of these admitted facts, basis of hope for improvement of the lives of these tillers of the soil with conditions continuing as they now exist? All agriculture is impoverished, but the grower of cotton is the poorest class of farmers in the entire country. They are the most underprivileged of all our workers. Theirs is a cheerless, dreary existence; men, women, and children are pouring the energy of their bodies and the anxiety of their hearts into the soil with the expectation of producing to the extent that there may be new clothing and new shoes in the winter, that new covering may be put upon the house and the children sent to school. It is almost invariably the case that disappointment rises up to meet them at a time when they looked for the fulfillment of their hopes and the next year proves even harder and more impossible than the one through which they have just gone. If it were possible, hundreds of thousands of them would leave and find some other means of livelihood, but in most instances they are wedded to the locality, they do not know how to do anything else, they know of no other place to go. They stay because it is home, because they can there find work for their hands to do for which their hands and minds are trained. Their freedom and their hope of a sweeter and better life lie in the possibility of giving them a greater return upon the labor they expend by way of elevating the price of that which they produce.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. UNDERHILL. I am in entire sympathy with the gentleman, but I want to ask him this question: If the Ways and Means Committee should bring in a bill carrying a substantial duty on jute, would the gentleman be willing to commit himself at the present time to vote for the bill?

Mr. COX. I will say this to the gentleman: That while I am not a new convert to the protective-tariff principle, if you put it that way, I, at least, want to be practical. I accept the protective tariff as a fixed American policy, at least for the present and possibly for some time to come, and, therefore, I shall, so far as my vote is concerned on the bill, be governed by what to me seems fair and right, as representing a proper and decent application of the principle.

COTTON TEXTILE INDUSTRY BENEFITED

It is a notorious fact that the cotton textile industry has for several years past obtained less than its share of the national prosperity. If cotton were substituted for jute, every cotton mill in the country would be kept running on full time and demand arise for expansion. While the cotton mills of America have been running part time and on narrow margins of profit, and behind, in hundreds of instances the jute mills in Calcutta and Dundee have been declaring dividends ranging all the way from 50 to 300 per cent and at the same time carrying over large surpluses and undivided profits. The advantage that jute mills have over those confining their operations to cotton may be illustrated by the case of the jute mills in this country.

In 1925 the average yearly wages paid cotton-mill workers was approximately $794, while for the same year the jute-mill worker of the country received an average annual wage of $895. For the same year cotton mills had a gross earning of $284.30 per primary horsepower, whereas the domestic jute mills had an earning capacity of $454.42. Deducting labor costs, cotton mills had an earning of $171.40 per primary horsepower, whereas after deducting larger labor costs paid by jute mills they had an earning of $254.26 per horsepower.

In 1925 the 1,366 cotton mills operating in the United States had an average earning per plant after deducting cost of labor of $280,623, while the 23 jute mills had an average earning, after deducting labor costs, of $317,869. No deduction is made for items of cost other than labor; and having in mind that average capital investment in cotton mills is far in excess of that of jute mills, and other operating expenses greater, the difference in earnings between the two classes of mills widens.

BENEFITS TO LABOR

In 1925 there were wage earners to the average of 6,312 employed in working jute within the United States. The total wages paid were $5,640,000. The cost of material worked was $14,567,000, and the value of products $27,518,000, or a value added by manufacture to amount of $12,951,000. The total wholesale value of all jute imported for 1925 was $108,491,000. Considering the fact that the labor performed in domestic mills consisted of making coarsest fabrics, such as jute bagging, and minimum amount employed in sewing sacks, it is safe to say that if all jute fabrics used in the United States during 1925 had been manufactured in domestic mills there would have been employed 250,000 workers, with a total annual wage of $200,000,000.

This is simply illustrative of the economic loss that the country sustains under the present practice of importing jute and manufactures thereof.

RELATIVE COST OF LABOR

In Tariff Information Survey of Jute, J-7, page 56, published by the Tariff Commission in 1922, the wages paid in jute mills in India were stated to be as follows:

Average weekly wages paid to Indian jute operatives in Bengal, January, 1920

Class of workers:
Carder	$0.89
Rover	1.75
Winder	1.91
Weaver	2.84

In Prices and Wages in India, published by the department of statistics, Calcutta, India, publication of which was discontinued with the issue of 1923, the average weekly wages of the workers in jute mills in India were given as follows:

Class of workers:
Carder	$0.94
Rover	1.87
Winder	2.04
Weaver	2.98
Average	1.95

The average wage paid by the American cotton-textile industry for 1923 is not available, but from the report given on page 333, Statistical Abstract of the United States, published by the Department of Commerce, 1928, the following data are obtained as to the year 1924:

	Worker		Week (hours)
	Male	Female
Weaver	$21.55	$20.59	48
Spinners	17.71	15.31	48
Speeder tender	18.91	19.73	48
Average	19.39	18.54	48

There are no data obtainable on cost of labor employed in the cotton-textile industry for any year later than 1926, but for this year the average weekly wage paid weavers, male $19.01, female $18; spinners, male $13.87, female $13.54; speeder tenders, male $16.46, female $17.66; or an average weekly wage paid male workers of $16.45; female workers, $16.40. It should be noted that these are averages paid in the industry in the country as a whole. The wages paid in the eastern mills, where the finer cotton fabrics are made, are considerably higher than in the South, where the coarser fabrics are woven, the average difference in favor of the eastern worker being approximately $4.60 per week, which is due in most part to difference in skill of labor.

The computation of comparative costs in American and Indian labor is based upon a different basis as to what constitutes a week's work. In America 48 hours constitute a week's work to the mill worker; whereas in India a week is by law fixed at 72 hours. This means that in 1924 the average wage paid workers in American cotton textile mills was approximately 40 cents per hour, while the jute mills of India paid their workers less than 2⅔ cents per hour. In other words, the American worker received a wage fifteen times as great as the workers of India.

OBJECTIONS TO USE OF COTTON

It is urged that large users of jute bags would object to a high tariff on jute; that it would mean that they would be forced to use cotton bags at greater cost; and in this class is included grain and vegetable producers, growers of potatoes, fruits, nuts, and other farm products.

It is inconceivable that the growers of any farm commodity would object to the raise of price of another farm commodity not produced by him. The realization of the inadequacy of price of his own crop should give him an appreciation of the condition of the growers of other crops. All agriculture lags far behind other lines of industry, and in the fight for relief all farmers must make common cause. All are consumers as well as producers, though the fact that the farmer is a consumer of his own products, as well as others, is often overlooked. The cotton grower should be interested in the wheat producer getting a living price for his wheat. If he is not getting a fair price, then he should have it; and if there is outside competition that holds prices down, it should be regulated wherever possible.

The cotton-growing States are large users of crops that are handled in bags. Their production of many crops is far below consumption. So the wheat or potato grower should want the cotton grower to have the benefits of home markets although they should have to pay more for bags. Nothing more inconsistent could be imagined than for a corn grower to appeal to Congress for better protection through the raising of the tariff against importation of commodities competing with his corn, and at the same time oppose the petition of his brother farmer, the cotton grower, in his effort to protect his cotton through the raise of duty against the importation of other vegetable fibers that take his home markets from him. It is not to be believed that any considerable percentage of farmers take this narrow and selfish attitude toward the whole problem of farm relief.

Strongest objections are made and will continue to be made by the domestic and foreign manufacturers of jute, the makers of jute bagging and other materials, manufacturers of sacks from burlap, and the dealers in jute products. This is a class that understands the problem, and while disclaiming intention of seeking special preference, it is crass selfishness that prompts them, which is here sought to be proved.

First. They oppose any revision of the tariff, being satisfied with operations under existing laws.

Second. If, however, there is to be some revision, they oppose the levy of any duty whatever against raw jute. Some of them import raw jute in large quantities.

Third. They favor continuing present rate on jute "sliver" of 20 per cent ad valorem, equivalent to 1½ cents per pound.

Fourth. They favor continuing present rate on burlaps, equivalent to 1 cent per pound.

Fifth. They favor increasing the duty on bags.

In these recommendations they show their hand. Their chief interest revolves around burlaps. No burlap is manufactured in the United States, therefore the like of special interest in jute sliver, but bags are manufactured in large quantities, hence their interest in keeping duty at 1 cent per pound on burlap but raising the rate on manufactured bags. They would cut down importations of bags but not so as to jute cloth.

Here is the exposure: Jute sliver is the raw jute drawn into fleecy strands, a process through which the raw commodity must be taken preparatory to spinning and weaving. This is dutiable at 1½ cents per pound. This same sliver is carried through several stages of processing when it is finally woven into burlap or Hessian, a finished cloth, which is dutiable at 1 cent per pound. In other words, the labor and other costs expended in working sliver into cloth operates to lower the duty rather than to raise it. And this is a condition that these objections would perpetuate. They want shelter for themselves, but pray that the laborer, the farmer, and all others be left out in the cold.

It has been suggested that American capital has been extensively interested in Indian jute mills, and that, therefore, nothing should be done that would work a hardship upon the country's nationals who have invested abroad. In other words, because of this condition millions of farmers should submit to their home market being destroyed and other millions of workers should be denied performing service that they stand ready to render.

When home capital invests abroad, it accepts the sovereignty of a foreign government and becomes a competitor of homeland. It helps support and develop the country where invested. It employs foreign labor in competition with home labor. It decreases the earning capacity of the American laborer and reduces income of American enterprise. So far as the proposed legislation is concerned, such capital takes the status of foreign capital, and properly so. It should not be heard to say that its welfare is of greater national importance than that of millions of the patriotic, loyal poor.

There is but one legitimate argument against the proposal of a high tariff on jute, and that is cotton is a superior fiber and costs more; and the answer to this is, What is to become of the cotton grower if cotton is not protected? Can American labor compete with Indian labor, that can be had at one-fifteenth the cost of American labor?

Mr. GIFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. I listened to the gentleman's argument before the Ways and Means Committee and I think the gentleman listened to the opponents of his proposition. I would ask the gentleman if the ground they took is good when they said jute products had their own field of usefulness and should not be compared with cotton products, and if an attempt was made to keep them out why should you not make an equal attempt to keep silk products out because silk is in competition more than jute?

Mr. COX. We take it that the Congress is going to be at least sensible about this thing. What we are undertaking to do by the imposition of a rate against jute is to put cotton upon a competitive basis with jute, and that alone.

Mr. JONES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. JONES. I would like to suggest, in answer to the gentleman from Massachusetts, that we already have a tariff rate on silk and the rates on silk are very much higher than any of the suggested rates on jute.

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. With pleasure, sir.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I have heard it stated that the countries from which jute is imported consume more of American-grown cotton than would be used here if the end which the gentleman seeks should be accomplished, and that it is by reason of their ability to sell us jute that they are able to buy our cotton. Has the gentleman given thought to that, and what is the fact in regard to it?

Mr. COX. Yes; I have given some study to that question. That is the argument that was advanced by the manufacturers of jute in this country who are satisfied with conditions as they exist, and it is also advanced and scattered abroad liberally and extensively by the foreign manufacturer of jute, who is also interested in no change being made in the present law.

I want to say to the gentleman that I have found nothing, and I know of nothing, that supports the argument or the statement that the imposition of a tariff upon jute, that would result in putting cotton upon a competitive basis with jute products, would operate to cut down any use of American cotton on the part of India.

The following table gives the rates fixed in the acts of 1913 and 1922. It also shows the rate that is recommended as being necessary to put cotton upon a competitive basis with jute.

Tariff on jute and jute products

Classification	Rates, past, present, and proposed
	Act of 1913	Act of 1922	Necessary to protect
FIRST STAGE—THE FARMER
Raw jute, jute butts, waste bagging and waste sugar sack cloth (pars. 1516 and 1582).	Free	Free	4
SECOND STAGE—THE SPINNER
Jute sliver (1003).
Jute yarns or roving (1003)		1½	4½
Coarser than 20 pounds	15 per cent	2½	5½
20 pounds to 10.01 pounds	do	4	7
10 pounds to 5.01 pounds	do	5½	8½
5 pounds and finer	20 per cent	7	10
5 pounds and finer limited to		40 per cent	12
Jute twist, twine, and cordage, composed of 2 or more jute yarns or rovings twisted together, based on single size (1003):
Coarser than 20 pounds	35 per cent	3½	6½
20 pounds to 10.01 pounds	do	5	8
10 pounds to 5.01 pounds	do	6½	9½
5 pounds and finer	do	11	14

Tariff on jute and jute products—Continued

Classification	Rates, past, present, and proposed
	Act of 1913	Act of 1922	Necessary to protect
THIRD STAGE—THE WEAVER
Bagging for cotton, gunny cloth, and similar jute cloths, weighing per square yard (1019):
15 to 32 ounces	Free	$\frac{1}{10}$ [2]	4½
Over 32 ounces	do	$\frac{1}{10}$	4½
Jute cloth [1] or burlap (lighter than 15 ounces per square yard) composed of single jute yarns or rovings averaging in size (1008):
Coarser than 20 pounds	do	1	7½
20 pounds to 10.01 pounds	do	1	9
10 pounds to 5.01 pounds	do	1	10½
5 pounds and finer	do	1	12
Additional duty if made of same single yarns that have been plied or twisted before weaving; additional duty if bleached, printed, stenciled, painted, dyed, colored, or rendered noninflammable.	10 per cent	10 per cent	1½
FOURTH STAGE—THE BAG MANUFACTURER
Bags or sacks made of cloth composed of single jute yarns or rovings averaging in size (1018):
Coarser than 20 pounds	do	1 cent and 10 per cent.	9
20 pounds to 10.01 pounds	do	do	10½
10 pounds to 5.01 pounds	do	do	12
5 pounds and finer	do	do	13½
Additional duty if made of cloth woven of same single yarns that have been plied or twisted before weaving; additional duty if bleached, printed, stenciled, painted, dyed, colored or rendered noninflammable	25 per cent	5 per cent	1½

[1] The tariff act of 1913, which exempted plain woven cloth from duty, levied 35 per cent on twilled jute cloth.

[2] Specific rates are expressed in cents per pound except present $\frac{1}{10}$-cent rate on cotton bagging, which is per square yard. Percentage rates are all ad valorem.

These rates recommended represent what is thought to be such as would reasonably equalize the difference in labor costs of production.

We have no official data on the cost of producing jute, but costs may be approximately arrived at by deduction, reasoning from reliable data that is in hand.

We know that when an average wage of 2⅔ cents per hour is paid mill workers in India that the mill worker in the United States is paid 33 cents per hour. We know that wages of mill laborers in India are higher than that of farm laborers, the same as in the United States; that the labor of women and children is extensively used in jute production; and since Indian wages of women per month of 312 hours for mill work is $5.27, and that of a child for same work and like hours is $5.38, and since the wages of women in tea gardens in India is $1.82 per month of 312 hours, that of children $1.10, and that of men $2.28, the wages of women and children on jute farms is not likely to be higher than seven-twelfths of 1 cent per hour for women, one-third cent per hour for children, and that of men nineteen-twenty-sixths of 1 cent per hour.

We know Indian jute mills are running full time and declaring enormous dividends—at times as high as 400 per cent—with large carry-overs of undivided profit, while domestic cotton mills are and have been for some time skating on thin ice.

We know that the domestic cotton crop for 1928 cost 20 cents per pound and sold for 18 cents, a loss to the farmer of 10 per cent.

We know that the weaving of a pound of cotton into low-grade 12-ounce cotton bagging increases its value—selling price—7½ cents per pound—see Table 4 in Report on Cotton Bagging for Cotton, made by United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, division of cotton marketing, February, 1928.

We know that farm labor in the cotton States cost on an average of more than $37 per month, which is $31.64 per month less than cotton-textile workers receive, and who receive fifteen times the pay of Indian jute-mill workers.

We know from quotations on selling price of jute and jute butts (the Cordage Trade Journal of January 3, 1929) that long jute firsts that sold at 7⅝ cents per pound sold, when made into burlap, at 13½ cents per pound (Daily News Record, January 25, 1929), an increase of value of 6$\frac{1}{8}$ cents per pound.

We know that it requires more labor to spin a yard of cotton cloth than it does to spin a yard of jute cloth.

If this statement of facts is true—and it is true, supported by reliable data, official and otherwise—it seems fair to draw the following conclusions:

If American wages were paid for the production of jute, it would add to the cost price of the commodity not less than 4 cents per pound. Hence the suggestion that a duty of 4 cents per pound be levied upon raw jute.

If cotton as an essential industry is to ever thrive again, it must be given heroic treatment.

If the American cotton farmer is to have the benefits of his home markets, then the destructive competition of jute must be curtailed.

If American labor is to have employment, importation of manufactures of jute must be cut down.

If the American consumer is to have value received for that which he pays, fabrics other than those of jute must be used.

If there is to be uniformity of the application of the protective-tariff principle, then the duty on jute and manufactures thereof must be high.

If none of these things are done, then cotton will revive with the awakening of the oppressed millions of India; and as to when this time shall arrive man can not foretell. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. COLE].

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, we have had some discussion on cornstalk products this afternoon. I want to correct some statements that have been made, and to confirm others.

First of all, I want to correct a statement in regard to the Public Printer, Mr. Carter, who is a native of my State. He is a farmer's boy, and I am sure he is as much interested in the use of cornstalks for the making of paper as anyone can possibly be. The gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA] made the statement that the Public Printer had refused to use this cornstalk paper in printing stationery. I understand that he did not do so because he was opposed to such paper, but because the paper carried a very conspicuous advertisement. It is the practice of the Public Printer not to use stationery carrying any form of advertising.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLE of Iowa. I yield.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman point out the advertisement he alludes to.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. The advertisement is in the form of a very beautiful picture of a cornstalk, a stalk which looks very natural and homelike to me.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. There is no name attached to it?

Mr. COLE of Iowa. No; but below the cornstalk there is the legend, "This is cornstalk paper," and this particular cornstalk is the advertising badge of a particular company, and it is copyrighted.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. There is a picture of a cornstalk, and below it the words "This is cornstalk paper."

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Exactly. It is a trade-mark quite conspicuous. Of course, all papers carry trade-marks in the form of watermarks which can be seen by holding them up to the light. But this trade-mark is of a different order. I think the Public Printer was not only within his rights but within his duty in not using these particular sheets of paper. As a public official he must conform with public practices. I know of no one who will be more glad to use paper made from cornstalks than Mr. Carter, for he is an Iowan and it is in Iowa that we grow the tall corn we sing about.

Gentlemen, we have been discussing a product that I believe may revolutionize conditions in agriculture. I see in it larger profits for those who till the soil.

We have made a good beginning in the development of a new industry. But we must not be too impatient. We must not force too much haste. More haste may make only more waste. We must be sure of every step in this development. We must lay sound foundations for it. If we build without such foundations, the structure will fall, and we will retard and discourage the development of an industry that is full of promise. Our product is chemically a demonstrated success. All we need more is its development.

I think I have a right to speak on this subject. So far as I know, I was the first member to broach this subject on the floor of this house. Nearly three years ago I ventured to make a speech on what I called the pentosans. The very word then shocked some Members. I had to explain that the pentosans are the cellular substances from plants, so-called because they yield what the chemists call pentoses, which are related in some way to the sugars.

My attention was directed to this subject by Dr. O. R. Sweeney, an eminent chemical researcher in the agricultural college at Ames, Iowa. Accompanied by the president of that college, Dr. Herman Knapp, he came to Washington. He told me he had reached his limit at Ames. He asked for national help through the Bureau of Standards. He coveted also the prestige of that fine scientific organization.

I called up the one man in Washington who might be most interested; that is, Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce, and now the President elect. Mr. Hoover received us at once, not only gladly but eagerly. It did not take Doctor Sweeney long to sell his proposition to a man with an engineering mind. He saw in it at once one of the solutions of our distressful agricultural situation. Mr. Hoover sent us next to the Bureau of Standards, where Director Burgess was already well informed on the subject. We met with favor at the White House and also in the Bureau of the Budget. We were modest. We asked for only $50,000.

The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ACKERMAN], who is on the floor to-day, was a member of the subcommittee which reported out this appropriation. Together with the chairman [Mr. SHREVE] of the subcommittee he was eager to render this assistance to agriculture. The following year, and again this year, this subcommittee has seen fit to continue the modest appropriation. I want to assure them that they have not sown in barren fields.

I want to commend the work of the Bureau of Standards. They have made good use of the funds. Their principal efforts, I think, have been made at Ames in connection with Doctor Sweeney.

But simultaneously others likewise interested have been developing at Danville, Ill., this industry on a commercial basis. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HOLADAY] has told you this afternoon of their success, and he has also related to you some of the things they have had to contend with. The paper which has been exhibited on the floor to-day was made from pulp made at the Danville plant. So far as I know, they are the only ones who have so far been making pulp from constalks on a commercial basis. The relations between the Danville men and Doctor Sweeney, I understand, have been close enough for mutual cooperation.

They are making to-day 8 tons of dry pulp a day at Danville and they are preparing to make 40 tons a day. Other and similar pulp mills will be developed as there is need of them. They are proceeding along the right lines. They are making sure of their way, and in that policy lies the success of the whole undertaking. The procedure in such matters must not only be sound financially but chemically.

Not only can we make this pulp from cornstalks, but there will be a market for it. Paper manufacturers are prepared to make use of it, and they will use it so soon as it can be supplied on a competitive-cost basis. There is, of course, competitiou in the offing. The old order will not make way for the new order. Those who are interested in pulp from wood will not abandon the field. Rather, they will resist so far as they can encroachments on that field. That is the law of trade and of business. The proponents of cornstalk products are not entering this field asking special favors. They want to win a place on merit.

The haste makers have expressed their impatience in the form of a bill now pending in the Senate under the name of Mr. SCHALL, of Minnesota. They would have the Government enter this manufacturing field and other related fields by the establishment of Government-financed and Government-operated factories. For one I do not want to see such procedure followed if it could be followed. I do not believe in putting the Government into this business. Rather I would take it more out of business. I even doubt whether the Government could make a success of such an undertaking. It has never succeeded in such efforts.

I am willing to leave this infant industry in the care of private capital and enterprise. There is ample capital in the land. There are capitalists eager to invest their money. Their money will be available as fast as we pave and prove the way to success. We are doing that. They are doing it at Danville. Doctor Sweeney's research work and laboratory production are helping clear the way to success.

The main problem that remains to be solved is in the cost of assembling the raw products—that is, the cornstalks. On an average acre there are about 3,000 pounds of stalks, field weight, or 2,000 pounds dry weight. The 2,000 pounds dry weight will yield about 800 pounds of pulp, also dry weight. What is to be the cost of that 800 pounds of dry pulp?

At present, I understand, the pulp can not be produced on a competitive basis with wood pulp, so far as the manufacture of ordinary print paper is concerned. But in the production of higher-priced papers, book and bond papers, I am told, competition is already possible.

The solution of this cost problem may lie in the development of farm machinery. At Ames, Iowa, in cooperation, I believe with the International Harvester Co., they have been experimenting with a corn cutter that will gather two rows of corn, husk the ears, and bale the stalks all in one operation. In that machine we may find our solution.

The corn borer may be an important factor in this development. The borer, I fear, is bound to overspread the Corn Belt. But we are less alarmed about him now than we were a few years ago. We see in him another pest and something of a menace, but not an insurmountable one. The borer will not stop the growing of corn.

His relation to our industry is obvious. The only way of combating the borer is to clean up the cornfields. This pest hibernates in the stalks. To get rid of him we must gather the stalks, burn them or bury them. The gathering of the stalks for making paper pulp may make that operation a profitable one. In one operation we may be killing the borers and making the paper we hope for.

Mr. GARBER. Is not the only really effective remedy the rotation of crops?

Mr. COLE of Iowa. I would not say that that is the only effective one. It is one remedy. The absolute remedy is to destroy the cornstalks. The corn borer, or the beginnings of it, hibernate in the stalks. To get rid of the borer, I repeat, we must burn or bury the stalks—or manufacture them into pulp for paper, wall board, and other substitutes for lumber.

Mr. GARBER. And plowing under means rotation of crops, does it not?

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman five minutes more.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Before I was interrupted I was about to add that plowing the stalks under is one way of getting rid of the borers.

Mr. GARBER. That is the only sure way to do it. The campaign that was put on for the extermination of the corn borer has not really demonstrated the wisdom of the investment, has it?

Mr. COLE of Iowa. No; not the only way. It may be more profitable to kill the borers in the pulp mills; that is, converting the stalks into paper may be more profitable than utilizing them for fertilizers. So far as the waste in the methods we have followed, at Government expense, in exterminating the borer, there is probably truth in the statement of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. GARBER]. But that was experimental work in the face of what was viewed as a great national danger.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. And I stopped the unanimous consent for an additional $7,000,000, and every one of you farmers jumped on me for doing it.

Mr. W. T. FITZGERALD. And if making these stalks into pulp will do that, will not that put a premium on the process?

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Yes; it certainly will.

Mr. BRIGHAM. What price will the farmer have to receive for a ton of stalks in order to make it profitable to him?

Mr. COLE of Iowa. That is a question that I am not prepared to answer. We must take into consideration that some loss is involved by taking the stalks from the soil. That is, there is a fertilizing value that has to be considered. The costs of the labor involved is another important factor. If the farmer could realize $6 a ton, it would mean $9 an acre.

There are many other things I might discuss in this connection, but time forbids. It is a vast field that we have entered. But this much we know, that paper can be manufactured from cornstalks and I know that we have inventive genius enough and capital with enterprise in it enough to solve all the problems that remain unsolved.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. It may be of interest to the gentleman for the House to know that we are doing the same thing with wheat straw in the West. Out in my district, in Whitman County, Wash., the largest wheat-producing county in the United States, they are establishing at this time a factory to convert straw into pulp for the same purposes the gentleman is using the cornstalks for. It has been very beneficial for the farmers, because we have enormous quantities of wheat straw which must be burned every year.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. I believe we are at the beginning of a great industrial development in agriculture. The application of chemistry to agriculture will do wonders. My friend, Doctor Sweeney, has assured me that the time is coming when the farmer will realize more from those parts of his products that are now wasted than he is now realizing from the grain. We have only been skimming the surface. We have taken simply the golden grains. We are now finding out through chemical research that there may be as much value, if not more, in the stalk and in the cob.

Take the matter of oat hulls. We have a large factory in my home city where they make Quaker Oats. They used to burn thousands of tons of oat hulls, filling the whole city of Cedar Rapids with layers of soot, for oat hulls make soot. But more recently they have been using these hulls in large quantities in the manufacture of furfural, a chemical for which many uses have been found and more are impending. I cite this merely as an illustration of the possibilities through chemical research and industrial chemistry applied to agriculture.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has again expired.

Mr. FRENCH. I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. I thank the chairman of the committee for the two minutes. I think they will enable me to finish my speech. In fact, I think I am through now, unless it is to assure you that out of furfural it is possible to make a motor fuel for the future, after our oil supplies are more depleted. You need have no fear of automobiles going out of use by oil exhaustion.

Mr. W. T. FITZGERALD. But the oil depletion is coming, is it not, and of gasoline?

Mr. COLE of Iowa. The depletion may overtake us. But if and when it does I am prepared to assure you that from the cornfields and from the oat fields of the Middle West we will supply you with all the motor fuels you need, even if the number of automobiles should be multiplied to 100,000,000. [Applause.]

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA].

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, if this farmer from the asphalt paved and tenement district of New York City has taken an interest in the corn farmers of Iowa and thereby has annoyed or irritated the Representative from a corn district, the gentleman who just had the floor [Mr. COLE], I am extremely sorry and I offer my sincere apologies. But I am more interested in the welfare of the corn farmers than I am in the feeling of a $10,000-job holder. I submit to my colleague, the gentleman from Iowa, who comes to the defense of the Public Printer and the reasons given by the Public Printer that he refused to print my letterhead because it contained this watermark, can not be the real reason and is not the reason. Why, I hold here in my hand the official paper of the House of Representatives, which I just picked up from a desk in the lobby, and here you will find a watermark containing the words "Chieftain Bond," a trade-mark which identifies it absolutely with the manufacturer. You also find the trade-mark of the manufacturer, an owl, and this owl has both eyes open apparently watching the Public Printer, and hence the refusal to print paper made from cornstalk of corn grown in the gentleman's district in the State of Iowa.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I will.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. The gentleman from New York will admit there is some difference between the trade-mark on that particular sheet of cornstalk paper and the watermark on the official paper. One is conspicuous and the other is not.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The difference is that this is made of wood pulp brought from Canada and rags from Syria and Turkey and that is made from cornstalks raised in the gentleman's district.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Granted; but the gentleman certainly would not believe the Public Printer is minded to discriminate against paper from a production grown in his own native State.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. My belief is immaterial. I have the actual fact that he refused to print the cornstalk paper, and this farmer from the tenement district of New York is so interested in the farmer that he went out and had this printed at his own expense, when the Public Printer from Iowa, whom the gentleman defends, refused to print the paper in utter disregard of his official duties.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield for another question?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Certainly.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. I am interested as much as the gentleman is in the cornstalk production, but I am also interested in the gentleman who holds the high office of Public Printer, and I know that his motives are absolutely pure, because I believe they are dictated by his interpretation of the law under which he operates that great institution.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. And again I reply to the gentleman from Iowa that the purity of the Public Printer's motive does not help the farm situation when it prevents the printing of documents at the Government Printing Office on cornstalk paper. My position is based, first, on the necessity for the inevitable relief that must come to the farmer, and if partial relief can be given to the farmer by the use of farm material that is now wasted, I know that then to that extent the price of farm products will not be increased to the consumers in my city. That is why I took this interest in the cornstalk paper, because there is a potential market for cornstalks, which means added revenue to the corn farmers.

It is said that print paper can not be made from cornstalks economically. That may be so, but I am seeking first to obtain an opportunity for manufacturers of cornstalk paper to bid for Government work.

If the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. COLE] had examined the contract pamphlet from the Public Printer, he would have found that we purchase several million pounds of paper per year, and that under the specifications—let me say to the gentleman, and through the gentleman to this farm boy who is the Public Printer—under the specifications cornstalk paper can not bid, although it is conceded that it is just as good and durable as the wood-pulp paper.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. I do not think we have the right to assume that we can not economically make paper from cornstalks. I think we can. My statement was that after we had well developed the process by which we can make it as cheaply as from wood pulp we will help to solve that problem.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. We will help to solve that problem if we permit the cornstalk paper to bid in competition in Government work.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Then I shall yield back the balance of my time. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman yields back three minutes.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I want to take a few minutes to talk over the naval situation. The gentleman from Idaho [Mr. FRENCH], who gives more liberally of himself to his work in the House than almost any other Member here, has covered the ground thoroughly.

There are a few items here that I would like to emphasize. First, there is a general situation in the Navy.

There has been a tendency to keep every ship in the Navy afloat and to make increasing demands for personnel for the ships we have and to increase the expenditures that way regardless of the condition of the fleet or the yards and their general equipment.

They tell us now that they have increased the desired complements of the different ships of the Navy which were in commission by about 3,500 for the year 1930 over 1929. And this after taking into account the new ships coming in. All this in spite of the fact that in almost every instance the complements of our ships exceeds those of Great Britain, and that we now within the last two months have added over 2,000 marines to the personnel of our fleet at sea. These have just been withdrawn from China and Nicaragua, where they have completed their service.

There are about 11,350 in the Air Service, of whom over 6,000 are at sea and 2,000 were without any definite assignment.

Considering these facts and the five old cruisers, which should be taken out of commission, your committee felt that increase of personnel was not the first need of the Naval Establishment, and so when we finally agreed to recommend an increase of 500 for the authorized personnel of the Navy, making a total of 84,500 to be maintained throughout the year 1930, we thought we had been liberal.

Engineering repairs as of July 1, 1929, will show of repairs undone about $2,000,000 and needed alterations $3,200,000. Repairs and maintenance to hulls will run about $2,000,000 behind, and perhaps more. No attempt was made in the Budget estimates to take care of these items or to permit the department to catch up with its uncompleted repairs.

We have been carefully into the situation and have provided a program covering two years, 1930 and 1931, for the expenditure of $3,000,000 to replace the antiquated tools and machinery in the yards, so that we can get more work out of the same money.

This we estimate will materially reduce the overload of uncompleted repairs and alterations if we have the cooperation of the navy yards and their employees.

The engineering repair overload will be reduced over $1,000,000.

In construction and repair work—that is, work on the hulls of the ships—the expense will be reduced upward of another million dollars.

This new scheme will in large part take care of and correct the condition of the machinery in our navy yard, which has been spoken of here by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. UNDERHILL]. And while on this subject I wish to talk about the so-called Dallinger amendment. How much better for the navy-yard employees it would be if the alleged friends of the yards would devote their great energy and eloquence to an effort to put some pep into the yard workers and give us more efficiency out of our workers. They now receive more pay than the employees in the private yards in that they have 15 days' leave with pay and 15 days sick leave with pay which is not given in private yards. Now, we are face to face with a cruiser construction program of a very considerable extent.

The trouble with the Gallinger amendment is that it prevents competition between the yards and the different private shipbuilders. It tends to take away—because they know they are going to get half the ships that come in—all incentive for real honest work on the ships which they are building. We have had a lot of trouble with this sort of thing in the past. I have here with me a statement in the hearings had before the Committee on Naval Affairs in 1922 and in 1926 which shows the cost of the different ships which have been built by the Navy down to and including the year 1926. It shows the cost of the ships in the navy yards to have been almost entirely higher than in private yards, until you get down to the war time when they began to let cost-plus contracts. And then when we get into the period after the war we find this, that out of eight cruisers, which are now under construction without any requirement on the part of Congress, the navy yards have bids submitted to build cruisers and they have been allotted and are now building three. But in addition to those cruisers they have been building and are now building six V-boats, submarines of large type and large size, as against none in private yards.

And what has been the history of these V boats? I am only going to consider three of these, because they are fair samples. The V–4, which is a submarine mine layer, was originally estimated by the department and the yard to cost $5,300,000 in 1924. A little later the cost by a supplemental bill that came here was increased to $6,150,000, and it has now been raised to $6,500,000; so that the cost of that one ship is now practically up to the point of the cost of the battleship Florida and the battleship Utah, more than the cost of one of those ships that was built by private contract in a private yard.

The V–5 and the V–6 are now under construction in the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H. The original limit of cost of these ships was $5,300,000. That was then extended to $6,320,000, and it has now been extended to $6,650,000, and no one knows how much higher we will have to go before they are finished.

Now as to the fleet cruisers that are being built in the navy yards, the bids of the navy yards upon the last cruisers which were to be constructed were lower, substantially lower—upward of $2,000,000 each lower—than the private yards, but the past performance of the navy yards does not justify any feeling of confidence that this situation will or can continue, or that they can possibly get their ships out within the estimates of their yards, or within the bids of the private yards.

The bids upon the Pensacola and the Salt Lake City were practically the same in a navy yard and in a private yard. One contract was awarded to the Brooklyn Navy Yard and the other to the Cramps at Philadelphia. As I say, the bids were approximately the same, being only about $100,000 apart, with the advantage a little bit in favor of the private yard, when you come to consider the engines and all the equipment which goes with them. The navy-yard ship has not been completed, so that we have nothing but past performance to go on as to cost.

Now, we have another thing to consider on this navy-yard proposition at the present time. If we are going to build cruisers and aircraft carriers in the navy yards, very considerable items must be met for renewals, replacements, and extensions. And let me say to you that in figuring the cost of ships in navy yards these renewals and replacements are not taken into consideration at all. They simply take into consideration the actual cost of things that can be directly traceable to the one ship that they are building; they allow no depreciation and no maintenance on the ships or the ways on which the ships are built. They simply take into consideration such things as the blocks and tackles which are used for the individual ship, as well as the light, power, and heat properly chargeable to that proposition and a few other upkeep items which are absolutely chargeable to the particular construction in hand. Now, if we are going to build ships in navy yards, here is our situation: We have just one yard which is now equipped and able to take on the construction of more ships than it already has. That is the New York Navy Yard at Brooklyn. It is equipped, in so far as physical equipment is concerned, to take on the construction of two ships at the present time, but its commandant reported at the time bids were received last spring upon the cruisers which were then under construction that they could not expand the personnel of the navy yard efficiently or economically so that they ought to bid upon more cruisers than the one they were then building, so they did not bid. Mare Island has one ship under construction, which will be out of the way in about a year, so one ship could be put there at that time. Puget Sound has one ship under construction in the building dock at that place, and no more can be placed in that dock until the one that is now in is taken out. Two could be built at once, but when one is under way it is impossible to start another there efficiently. Boston can do nothing without the expenditure of $250,000 for the lengthening of a way, and a very large expenditure along other lines. Philadelphia and Norfolk each have two ways which are available, but each of those ways will require the expenditure of $500,000 to put them in any kind of condition to work with. So much for the navy-yard situation.

I want to talk for just a minute or two about the proposition that has been made to expend a lot of money at Charleston for the construction of a large addition to the Charleston dry dock. Our good friend who represents the Charleston district [Mr. MCMILLAN] has asked us to make an appropriation of $300,000 for the construction of a large addition to the dock. This is an item which has not been presented to the Bureau of the Budget by the Navy Department, and one which your committee never heard of until the gentleman from South Carolina took the floor. The dock is now long enough to take the Florida and Utah and the 10 light cruisers of 7,500 tons, and all of our destroyers. It is away down on the list of projects which the Navy Department would like to present to Congress. There is about $7,000,000 in more important projects ahead, and it does not seem right to adopt such a large item when it is so far down the list, and this committee has had no chance to investigate it. The necessary work on all ships of the fleet when in the Caribbean is performed at the Canal Zone, where we have a 1,000-foot dock.

Much interest has been shown on the floor about a German ship in process of construction, and I would like to put in the RECORD what I have found out about that. This ship is a capital ship, supposed to be comparable to a battleship, which Germany is allowed to construct under the treaty of Versailles. It is of 10,000 tons and it is supposed to have a speed of 26 knots and a steaming radius of 10,000 miles at 20 knots. It is supposed to be driven by Diesel engines which are to weigh 17½ pounds per horsepower and to mount six 11-inch guns. How much armor it is to carry we do not know. The Diesel engines of this type are experimental and whether they will be successful or not we do not know. The lowest successful type that we know about at the present time in actual service weighs something like 68 pounds per horsepower. The Diesel engines on an ordinary commercial ship weigh 200 pounds per horsepower. This ship, if a success, will undoubtedly have a marked effect in revolutionizing methods of propulsion. Its gun range of 30,000 yards is said to be a little below that of our best battleships and our new 10,000-ton light cruisers, which have a range of from 33,000 to 35,000 yards. At long range the 10,000-ton cruiser would be nearly as effective, because of the greater speed and the speed of firing, but probably at short range the 11-inch guns would outmatch the 8-inch guns of our cruisers with their armor.

I have made this little statement of some of the features of the Navy and the naval appropriation bill which I believe deserves a good deal of thought and a good deal of attention. I have felt all along that the bill which we have brought here marks quite a radical departure toward something which will force the Navy Department to adopt the policy of presenting a more balanced budget to us in the future, because I believe the first thing we must look after is to keep our ships in proper engineering and mechanical condition and to keep our yards up and not try to have so many old ships in commission which we can just as well get along without, and try to keep the unnecessary expenses down.

One of our cuts was in the item of fuel. It has been developed since we came on the floor with our bill that the price of fuel oil has gone down 25 cents per barrel. If this price continues as it now is long enough, so that our Navy Department can take advantage of these prices in letting its contracts for fuel next year, there will be an excess in our appropriation for fuel of at least $1,500,000 and perhaps $2,500,000. This should not be used for larger steaming, because now our steaming is as large as it ought to be, but should be either turned into the Treasury or should be used to buy fuel oil at the low prices and store it, to be used when we can use it to a great deal better advantage. [Applause.]

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as may be necessary to complete my statement.

Mr. Chairman, on Thursday of last week when this bill came up for consideration the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. FRENCH], in presenting the measure, said:

> The bill you are called upon to consider is concerned with engineering and scientific investigations that are of incalculable value to commerce and industry and progress.

He might have added that a vast majority of the people of this Nation never think of the United States Navy only in the light of a fighting machine, when, as a matter of fact, the peace-time Navy has done more to relieve suffering humanity in times of distress than any other agency.

Three years ago when the annual naval appropriation bill was under consideration, I spoke on the peace-time missions of the Navy, emphasizing particularly the part the Navy had taken in opening up new fields in foreign trade; the protection it afforded American commerce; also some of the diplomatic missions so creditably executed by naval officers; and more especially of the frequent humanitarian activities of our ships in giving relief to communities stricken by an earthquake or a storm, and many other activities of this character, which I shall not now repeat. At that time I attempted to show that the Navy was something other than a mere fighing machine.

In view of the declaration made the other day by the gentleman from Idaho, calling attention to the fact that our Navy is concerned with engineering and scientific investigations that are of such value to commerce and industry, I feel that I am justified in pointing out where, in many instances, the Navy has been the pioneer in the development of many things which are to-day produced by the industries of the Nation.

Take the Bureau of Ordnance, for instance. It has been the pioneer in the development of heavy machinery, also in the development of high-grade steels and alloys, and there is no question but what this bureau has been, indirectly, the cause of the development of many articles necessary to peace-time pursuits. In order to insure safety and efficiency along with economy, the Bureau of Ordnance experimented in the use of steel castings to supplant many of the large and expensive forgings then in use and these experiments resulted in the development of high-grade steel castings. The manufacture of enormous gun forgings and thick, heavy armor plate by the Bureau of Ordnance required special machinery, so hydraulic forging machinery with high-power hydraulic pumps was developed. Machine shop tools, larger in size than had ever been thought of before in this country, were made, and many other things I might mention along this line were developed by this bureau, all of which was done at the expense of the Navy and through the efforts and experiments of the naval experts. Much of this machinery has been adopted by the industries of the Nation.

History records the fact that prior to 1890 there were no heavy forging plants in this country capable of producing heavy forgings either of wrought iron or steel. All of these were made abroad and this country was at the mercy of foreign producers of such forgings. Our only means of production at that time was under the hammer, which was inefficient and not at all satisfactory as to results. History reveals the further fact that the Navy began to search for a way out of this dilemma with the result, it is said, that it was found that an Englishman by the name of Sir Joseph Whitworth had invented a hydraulic forging press. Unsuccessful attempts were made to obtain the use of his patents in this country. An accurate description of the press could not be obtained and strangers were not permitted to visit the Whitworth shops, nor would he make a press for use in this country. So, in 1883, the Navy Department sent a gun foundry board, of which Lieut. William Jaques was secretary, to Europe for the purpose of visiting iron and steel plants. Arriving in England, the board, after considerable difficulty, was permitted to visit the Whitworth shops and Lieutenant Jaques obtained from Whitworth a contract which gave him, personally, authority to build a plant in the United States, the Whitworth works furnishing the plans.

Lieutenant Jaques was sent to Bethlehem, Pa., where he took up with John Fritz, the general superintendent of the Bethlehem Iron Co., the question of building at Bethlehem the forging plant which he had contracted for with Whitworth, and after considerable difficulty persuaded the directors of the Bethlehem Iron Co. to undertake the project. The result was that on June 1, 1887, the United States Government placed its first contract for armor with an American concern, the Bethlehem Iron Co. This company, then a small concern, expanded greatly, finally becoming the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. Thus the Navy might be given the credit of establishing the Bethlehem Steel Co.

The Bureau of Ordnance made many experiments with a smokeless powder which, by the way, was invented by Professor Monroe, of the naval torpedo station. These experiments were made under the direction of Commander Jewell of the Ordnance Bureau, and after many tests covering a period of about two years, it was manufactured by the bureau in large quantities. Then commercial institutions took it up and manufactured it, but it must be remembered that the Navy is entitled to the credit of producing smokeless powder.

It may be interesting to some to learn that the moving pictures we enjoy at this time are largely due to naval activities. The history of this discovery is that in 1913 the Bureau of Ordnance found it necessary to make a scientific study of the motions of projectiles in flight. After making thorough investigations it was discovered that there were no cameras produced in this country or abroad that could do this satisfactorily; so the Naval Gun Factory collaborated with the Edison laboratories and built the first three high-speed cameras in the world. These cameras have been used extensively by the Navy Department, and it is a well-known fact that they have been copied, in their most essential features, by the various manufacturers of cameras in commercial use. It is, of course, unnecessary to mention the fact that these high-speed cameras have a place in educational and athletic performances as well as amusement activities. Undoubtedly the Navy is entitled to the credit of producing high-speed cameras.

The Waterbury hydraulic speed gear, which is used at present for steering gears, pinch presses, riveting machines, locomotives, textile-printing presses, and motion-picture machines, was developed by an employee of the Bureau of Ordnance for use in connection with training and elevating guns. For several years this speed gear was used for this purpose before being taken up and developed by the commercial industries of the country for the purposes already indicated.

The Navy has done more to perfect artificial ventilation than any other agency or institution. For over a quarter of a century there has been a constant demand for better ventilation. This is especially true of schools, theaters, subways, and mines. It seems that prior to 1905 there was but little scientific information available. However, the Navy began experiments in 1903 under the supervision and direction of a naval constructor to determine what was necessary to provide scientific methods for testing the capacities and efficiencies of fans used for ventilating naval vessels. After a thorough and satisfactory testing had been made the Navy Department prepared instructions which have been invaluable to the heating and ventilating industry of the Nation.

The metal-furniture industry is indebted to the Navy Department, as the Navy was one of the first users of metal furniture for other purposes than office equipment. At first special sheet metal was used for this furniture, but the Navy, not satisfied with this, equipped the navy yard at Norfolk to turn out metal furniture made of aluminum-manganese sheets and shapes which makes it just as durable and much lighter. The use by the Navy of the aluminum sheets and shapes, not alone for furniture but for light bulkheads and joiner doors, has caused many commercial manufacturers to receive orders for such aluminum work for such vehicles as Pullman cars, automobile furniture, and so forth.

It is a well-known fact that the development of helium production is due entirely to the Navy. It was the Navy that supervised the construction of the first helium plant ever established in the world and was in full charge of the plant until it was transferred to the Bureau of Mines.

The Navy was the pioneer in the development and construction of radio towers, and was one of the earliest users of this method of communication which is now so common that most any high-school boy can make his own set sufficient to satisfy the most critical. It is said that the radio industry and radio service we have at this time in this country is the direct result of the Navy's radio policy.

It is well known that the standard of quality in lubricating oil is largely due to the exacting requrements of the Navy. Because of these requirements there has been established the grades of "light," "medium," or "heavy" which are kept at all up-to-date filling or service stations to meet the needs of the automobile engine. In other words, the Navy standards of lubricating oil have become not only the Federal standards but those of the country at large. The owner of a good automobile, who is particular about oil for his engine, can thank the Navy for fixing these standards.

There is ample proof to show that the Navy was the pioneer in the electrical field. It started with the incandescent lamp, and the record shows that every new electrical discovery has been tested out by the Navy long before the commercial institutions of the country would find the same to be practicable. History records the fact that the Navy Department enabled the General Electric Co. to produce the first electrically propelled ship, namely, the Jupiter, which is in use at this time as an airplane carrier.

I might mention many more things in which the Navy has been the pioneer and has so developed them as to attract commercial institutions, but time will not permit, and I could fill at least 100 pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD telling of the wonderful services rendered by the Navy, all of which is for the benefit of the general public, but that is unnecessary.

However, I do want to call attention to the outstanding peace time service rendered, which is especially significant at this time in view of the many recent casualties at sea. There is no doubt but that the greatest service the Navy performs in peace time is in furthering the safety of life and property at sea.

For 24 hours of every day in the year, the Navy radio stations ashore and afloat are on the alert for the S O S or distress signals from ships at sea, and the radio-compass stations are furnishing bearings to ships in the Great Lakes and off the coasts of the United States and Alaska as requested by masters in doubt of their position. The letters in praise of this service reach the department regularly and are countless in number. The radio-compass stations were started to guide our ships and transports through fog, rain, and snow during the war. They proved such a valuable aid to navigation that the system was extended and continued as a permanent service. During the past fiscal year 86,436 merchant vessels were furnished 180,648 bearings, not to mention 44,047 bearings furnished naval vessels. To cite an example: A ship in distress during a gale off the Atlantic coast sends out an S O S. A Coast Guard cutter goes to her rescue, heading for her reported position. The radio-compass station cuts her in and finds she is 60 miles out of her reckoning. The ensuing report to the Coast Guard cutter enables the rescuing ship to locate the ship in distress. There are innumerable other instances that may be cited from the merchantmen aided around Hatteras in a gale to the location of missing fishing vessels off Alaska which were later assisted into port. Such instances are considered as all in a day's work.

Much more could be said concerning this service, but the incidents of the past few days are fresh in the minds of all who read the newspapers of the wonderful rescues that have been made. My purpose in making these few observations is simply to show that the United States Navy is not alone a mere fighting machine.

The efficient chairman of this committee in presenting this measure, as usual, so thoroughly explains every item in the bill that it leaves nothing to be said unless it would be a repetition; but owing to the fact it has been a week since he made that speech it might be well for some of us to make a further explanation even though it may, to a great extent, be repeating.

First, I will refer to the item of personnel. While this committee is desirous at all times of having sufficient officers and enlisted personnel to efficiently man the Navy, we can not lose sight of the fact that economy must be practiced in this as well as other governmental activities. There is not a member of this committee who is unmindful of all of the requirements of a good and efficient Navy, and the committee is in favor of maintaining the officer personnel at practically the authorized strength of 5,499. As to the enlisted personnel, it was fixed for the current year at 84,000. The pending bill, however, provides an increase of 500 men, or 84,500; and while the increased number of men will not meet the requirements for the complements of the ships that will be brought into commission during the fiscal year of 1930, it is expected that the men for the new ships placed in commission during that time will be available by withdrawing from active service the old cruisers, which are obsolete, or practically so, and placing in reduced commission certain other ships which are not needed in order to have a well-rounded-out and efficient Navy. Your committee provided for this increase of enlisted personnel with the thought and expectation that this enlisted personnel will be kept up at the figure of 84,500, and not be allowed to exceed or fall below that figure.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, may I express my gratitude that the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. AYRES] has taken this opportunity to refer to the number of enlisted personnel. The question has been raised whether or not under administration it might not be possible to permit the enlisted personnel to sag, say, during the first six months of the next fiscal year, with the thought that the sag could be added to the total, 84,500, making the number at the end of the year perhaps 86,000 or 87,000. Of course, such a thing as this is possible, yet inconceivable, as I take it, upon the part of the department in administering the law. I have no doubt the department will administer the law so as to carry throughout the year not more than approximately the number authorized. In other words, you can not have 84,500 enlisted personnel every day throughout the year. Sometimes the enlisted personnel strength will be a little under that number, sometimes it may be a little over, but the thought is, as I understand it and as I think the members of the committee understand it, that the enlisted personnel shall approximate that number.

Mr. AYRES. That is my idea and I appreciate the chairman's position in the matter. I know it is the idea of every member of the subcommittee.

While the members of this committee endeavor to cooperate with the Budget, however, we do not at all times find ourselves in agreement with its estimates, and when we do not there is no hesitancy on our part to do our duty as we see it.

For instance, in this bill we have provided an item of $1,500,000 for the replacement of tools in the navy yards, in excess of the amount recommended by the Budget. There is no question but what this is in the interest of economy. The hearings disclose the fact that the tools needing replacement are either entirely worn out or worn to such an extent as to be practically useless, as they are worn beyond the requisite degree of accuracy. Because of this condition of the tools we are told that it requires a higher degree of skill in the workmen and much hand fitting, which naturally delays production and increases costs. It is estimated that the present labor cost at the navy yards per dollar of material used is $2.94, which is an increase of 9 cents over last year. We were told that with modern equipment and honest work it is believed that this figure could be reduced to as low as $2.50 per dollar of material, or a saving of 44 cents per dollar of material. This would represent a saving under engineering alone of $1,101,793, together with a relative saving of all appropriations expended at navy yards. Some of these tools have been in use since the Civil War and many of them for 25 to 40 years. There is not an industrial concern in the country but what would have discarded most, if not all, of these tools long ago. What has been said of the condition of the tools in engineering can be said also of the condition of the tools and machinery in construction and repair. In view of the deplorable condition in both the Bureaus of Engineering and Construction and Repair and the further fact that it will take from 18 months to two years to install new machinery and tools, we made the $1,500,000 item immediately available. As already stated, the committee feels that this is a matter of good business judgment and should have been done long ago.

This committee feels that it has made ample appropriation for aeronautics. We realize that the Air Service is about as important as any other department of the Navy. This bill carries an appropriation of $31,360,000, which is not as much as the current year by $596,000 and even less by $200,000 than estimated. The fiscal year 1930 will be the fourth year of the 5-year program authorized by the act of 1926. The pending bill provides for 273 additional planes for that program and also 36 planes for the Naval Reserves, thus making a total of new planes purchased and ordered, or rather to be purchased, since the beginning of the 5-year program 1,124. At the time this program started we had only 351 useful planes and 288 ordered. It is estimated that at the end of the fiscal year for which this appropriation is made that we will have 910 planes and 208 on order. I am a strong believer in this arm of our national defense. You know I am a resident of the city of Wichita, Kans., called the air capital of the Nation. Although the city of Wichita has a population of only a little over 100,000, it has more airplane factories in it than any other city in the United States.

There are at present six airplane factories in the city of Wichita in full operation, and a seventh factory being established. The record of production of planes shows that during the year 1928 there were produced approximately 1,500 planes, with a total valuation of $8,000,000. This represented between one-fourth and one-third of the Nation's commercial plane production for the year 1928. It is estimated that at least 2,500 planes will be produced in Wichita in 1929.

These factories are planning to engage in the production of multimotored transports as well as small commercial planes. Wichita has over 1,000 acres of airports, including two municipal airports, one of 160 acres and the other 640 acres, and only yesterday a contract was let to build a $72,000 hangar at one of these municipal airports. I am proud to say that the entire aeronautical industry in that city is a home industry, financed and controlled by Wichita men. Recently eastern capital has been attracted and has invaded the local field, and while it is welcome we did not have to have it. We have a plant which is the largest producer of commercial aircraft in America, according to the Department of Commerce. This plant has produced as high as 23 planes per week.

It might be of interest to relate some of the important events won by Wichita-made planes. The Admiral Fullum Derby at St. Louis in 1924 was won by Walter Beach, a Wichita pilot and producer of planes. In 1925 Mr. Beach won the Ford reliability tours in a Wichita airplane. The Dole trans-Pacific race which created such excitement and interest was won by Arthur Goebel in a Wichita plane. Smith and Bronte, flying a Wichita plane, flew the first commercial ship from the United States to Malakai Island of the Hawaiian group. I am informed that a Wichita plane, flown by Deed Levy, made the only perfect score in the 1928 National Air Tour, and that a Wichita plane, flown by Earl Rowland, won the Class A Derby of the National Air Races, and I could relate many important air tours and air conferences that Wichita has sponsored, but time will not permit. Recently the Five hundred and sixty-first Reserve Air Corps Observation was assigned to Wichita, and we are ready to take on the Navy air force at any time.

A few days ago Mrs. New, wife of Postmaster General New, christened a Wichita-made plane for the air-mail service.

In this morning's Wichita Eagle there is a picture of a Wichita-made plane and a statement showing that this plane was stored on the ship in which Maj. Clarence M. Young of the Department of Commerce sailed yesterday for Europe. It is to be used by Major Young to fly over European airways in the interest of the Commerce Department. So, gentlemen, you can see it will be but a short time before we will be ready to take on the Army and Navy flying activities.

I am frequently asked the reason why the airplane business has become such an industry in Wichita. There are many reasons. Some of them are that Wichita is one, if not the most progressive city of the Middle West. Its flying slogan is "Where opportunity to expand has no limit and every day is a pleasant day for flight—that's the air capital of the Nation, Wichita." I might say further that it is blessed by nature with a continuous landing field, and such a thing as fog is almost an unheard-of thing in that country, and, as I have already said, the people are air-minded. I could give many more reasons, but enough has been said, I think, to convince the whole world that Wichita is truly the air capital of the United States. Having lived there for 48 years you can see why I am air-minded; but that is not all. I repeat, that to my mind, the air forces, both as to land and sea, are the most essential arms of our national defense, and for that reason I am in favor of encouraging and maintaining it to the fullest extent. [Applause.]

Mr. SEGER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AYRES. Yes.

Mr. SEGER. The gentleman made the statement that we are going to build 1,124 new planes. Can the gentleman from Kansas tell us how many planes we have in use now in the Navy or in commission?

Mr. AYRES. I am not sure, but as I remember, 959 on hand and on order 192.

Mr. WOODRUFF. Before the gentleman yields the floor, may I ask the gentleman if he can give us information as to how many of those planes are obsolete?

Mr. AYRES. No; and I can not tell how many are obsolete, for the reason that the planes that were produced at the beginning of this 5-year program are now obsolescent.

Mr. WOODRUFF. I will say to the gentleman that I would go further than that and would say that the planes that were built at the beginning of this program are now obsolete.

Mr. AYRES. I expect the gentleman is right about that. As I remember, there are about 112 that are obsolete.

Mr. WOODRUFF. And many of the planes that were built later are obsolescent.

Mr. AYRES. I agree with the gentleman; and before this program is completed it is hard to tell how many planes built only two years ago will be obsolescent and how many obsolete.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. KOPP].

Mr. KOPP. Mr. Chairman, the reapportionment bill was considered in the House on January 10 and 11. These were sad days for those of us that opposed the bill, for we were repeatedly, with malice aforethought and with the specific intent to injure and wound our tender feelings, charged with the unholy purpose of preventing a reapportionment under the 1930 census. Those of you who were in the majority on those fateful days little realize how we who were in the minority suffered from those cruel and unjust reflections upon our patriotism. I wish I could portray to you the agony we endured, but this is impossible. Some things are so harrowing that words can not describe them, and this is one of them.

Our good and celebrated friend the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. QUIN], with his rare eloquence, once told us that there comes a time in the life of every Congressman when he must rise above principle. It is not my purpose at this time to do so, or even to discuss the profound observation of the gentleman from Mississippi; but I do want to add that there also comes a time in the life of every Congressman when he must rise above the injuries and injustices that may be inflicted upon him. We of the minority cling to that high ethical standard. We hold no malice. We have no spirit of revenge. We are at peace with all the world, including Michigan. It must be admitted however, that the blow from Michigan was felt most keenly. We are still dazed by it. How the valiant knight from Detroit [Mr. MCLEOD] could stab us with his dagger we can not understand. Speaking now for my own State, I say, think what Iowa has done for Michigan! We have made Michigan rich and ourselves poor by buying her automobiles. What an awful sin ingratitude is! You remember old King Lear said:

> How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child!

The old King was right. When I think of the great wrong we have suffered I feel like exclaiming:

> How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to buy our automobiles from Michigan and in return have our honor impugned and our patriotism questioned!

How could Michigan do it? We gave her all we had and all we could borrow. If we could have raised more money it would have gone to her, and yet she turned upon us. As Cæsar, on another but not a sadder day, exclaimed, almost with his latest breath, "And thou, too, Brutus!" so we now in our agony and despair exclaim, "And thou, too, Michigan!" If I were speaking after the manner of Mark Anthony, I would hold up Iowa's mantle and say:

> Look—in this place ran brave MCLEOD'S dagger through
> See what a rent the gentle MICHENER made;
> Through this the well-beloved HOOPER stabbed.

[Laughter.]

But pray do not misunderstand me. Iowa will not pay in kind. We will return good for evil. We will heap coals of fire on Michigan's head. We will continue to buy our automobiles from Michigan.

Massachusetts also surprised us. We common people, way out beyond the Mississippi, have always had a high regard for Massachusetts. We never dreamed that Massachusetts would ever insinuate that we were not devoted and sincere followers of the Constitution. We have always thought of Massachusetts as being the most exalted State in the Union. We have always looked upon its people as a superior people—a race apart. We have always felt that the poet was not only highly poetical, but also entirely truthful when he said:

> And this is good old Boston,
> The home of the bean and the cod,
> Where the Lowells talk to the Cabots,
> And the Cabots talk only to God.

But, as we hold no malice toward Michigan, so likewise we hold none against Massachusetts. Far from it. Some years ago a gentleman from Massachusetts was the orator on a public occasion in Iowa. In the course of his address he paid our State a remarkable compliment. He said—actually said it—that if Iowa would continue to toil and progress, that if it would thoughtfully and diligently continue to put forth its best and highest efforts, it might some time—some time—become known as the Massachusetts of the West. I well remember what an inspiration that was to us common people in Iowa. The people of Iowa, however, can not be surpassed in generosity. On their behalf, I now want to return that compliment. On their behalf, I now want to express the hope that Massachusetts may sometime—and that right soon—become known as the Iowa of the East. A greater compliment than this I could not bestow upon any State. [Laughter.]

I discussed the reapportionment bill somewhat when it was before us for consideration. My remarks are found on page 1505 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Surely I have no desire to repeat what I said then. What I want to do now is to call your attention to what happened to the reapportionment bill on the floor of the House.

This is really an interesting story and a situation has resulted which some might term a humorous one. I have no criticism to offer of anybody or anything. As far as I am concerned, everybody and everything is all right. I simply want to tell you, in the most amiable spirit possible, what happened to the bill on the floor of the House.

Before this bill was even read for amendment it was evident that an attempt would be made to change the manner of making the apportionment fixed by the bill. The language of the bill on this point, self-evidently contrary to the Constitution, was as follows:

By apportioning one Representative to each State (as required by the Constitution) and by apportioning the remainder of the 435 Representatives among the several States according to their respective numbers as shown by such census, by the method known as the method of major fractions.

The reading of this provision to the House, particularly the words "by apportioning one Representative to each State (as required by the Constitution)," at once arrested the attention not only of the constitutional lawyers of the House, but also of the editors, bankers, doctors, and other Members of the House. A large question mark was immediately seen hovering over the Chamber, and close observers say it was still there when the House adjourned late that evening. At first some were led to think from this provision that there must be a revised version of the Constitution, just as we have a revised version of the Bible. But when they found that no revised version of the Constitution had yet been printed it was apparent to them that the provisions of the bill and the provisions of the Constitution were irreconcilably in conflict. This is the language of the Constitution on the point in question:

Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. * * *

But each State shall have at least one Representative.

Plainly it was time to vindicate the Constitution, and vindicated it was by an overwhelming vote. Clearly it would not do to let such spurious language as that contained in the bill and quoted above pose as being in harmony with the Constitution. The constitutional lawyers in the House led the fight and the others ably and enthusiastically followed after. It was a noble phalanx. It was demonstrated then and there that the old Constitution will never be deserted in the hour of need. As the fight waxed warmer, the Members of the House did not lift up their eyes to the mountains, as men were advised to do in the olden time, but they cast them down to the statue of the great defender of the Constitution at the base of Capitol Hill and exclaimed in their hearts, "John Marshall, we are here."

I wish I could include in my account of this great constitutional battle all that was said and done, but this is manifestly impossible for lack of time. I deeply regret that I can make only a few brief references to this great debate. In this matter let us start at the beginning, even though that is not the customary way to proceed.

The amendment to save the Constitution was offered by the brilliant Member from Kansas [Mr. HOCH]. Here are some of the unanswerable arguments that were put forth by this able Member of the House:

Now, I submit that this is not in accordance with the Constitution of the United States; that nowhere in the Constitution is there a provision calling for the apportionment of one Member to each State before you start the reapportionment.

What does the Constitution provide? It provides that the representation shall be proportionate to the number.

Then it says in another place no State shall have less than one Member of Congress, but that is an entirely different proposition from saying that you shall first apportion one Representative to every State and then shall subsequently apportion according to their numbers. To illustrate that, suppose it were provided in this bill that we should take half of the proposed Representatives and apportion them equally among all the States regardless of population, and then should apportion the remainder according to numbers. Obviously, that would be unconstitutional.

For instance, let me put it this way: Suppose after we have apportioned all of the Representatives according to the numbers of the respective States we then find that no State has less than one Representative. I submit that we have fulfilled all the constitutional requirements, and there would be no necessity of apportioning one to every State. In other words, you have taken 48 Members of the 435 and apportioned them not on the basis of the Constitution, which is according to numbers, but you have apportioned them equally, 48 of them, among all the States of the Union, and you only provide that the remainder, namely, 435 less 48, shall be apportioned according to the Constitution.

Suppose we have given one to every State, and we then find under the apportionment of the balance that at least one goes to every State. What would be the result if this happened, and it might easily happen? We would then have a State having two Members instead of having only one Member, according to population. That is very plain.

By the time Mr. HOCH had finished his argument practically every one agreed with him, but more punishment was to be administered to the bill. Even a gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON], who always scores heavily, took a hand. He said:

I am quite in sympathy with the gentleman's view. I think he is correct. As I understand his view, it is this, applying it: That a State with a population of 250,000, under the language of this bill, would be given two Representatives. I do not see how it could help happening.

And then even a gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. STOBBS], well known for his unusual legal attainments, directed a telling blow. Said he:

I think the contention of the gentleman from Kansas is absolutely sound in that the phraseology of the present bill is not in conformity with the provisions of the Constitution.

Then followed the great leader of Democracy, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT], who enjoys the confidence and respect of both sides of the House in an extraordinary degree, and indorsed Congressman HOCH's position in these significant words:

I think the gentleman from Kansas deserves the thanks of the House for calling attention to the situation which manifestly will be created by the language of the bill if unchanged.

It was a grand sight to see men of both parties entirely forget partisan considerations and come to the rescue of the Constitution. It reminded one of the good old times spoken of by Macaulay. Said he, in his great poem:

Then none was for a party,
Then all were for the State.

When the gentleman from Tennessee had finished speaking it was evident that the matter was settled. It was now all over but the voting. Nobody could defend the bill; no one tried to defend it. The argument was all one way. When a division of the House was demanded, 219 Members arose for the amendment and only 1 against it.

As old Kaspar said to Peterkin and Wilhelmine: "It was a famous victory." Just why one Member voted "no" will probably never be known. All that we are sure about is that this one was a Congressman and not a Congresswoman. He evidently was the exception that proved the rule.

When the Members of the House went home that night they felt as though they had really done something worth while, having thus saved the Constitution from destruction. One Member was supremely happy and remarked to me as we were making our way through the subway to the House Office Building: "We have come to the end of a perfect day." All, except the one dissenting Congressman, felt a peculiar satisfaction when they retired that night, and all were soon sleeping the sleep of the just.

After the amendment had been perfected and adopted, the controverted provision of the bill read, as follows:

By apportioning the 435 Representatives among the several States according to their respective numbers as shown by such census, by the method known as the method of major fractions, no State to receive less than one Member.

At the time we thought the Constitution had been saved; but, alas! such after all was not the case. Strange as it may seem, with all our labors, we had really accomplished nothing. It was a case of "love's labor lost." The unsound provision, which we thought had been eliminated from the bill, is still in it; and will still govern the apportionment if the bill becomes a law.

It may aid me in explaining the situation if I relate an incident that occurred in Colorado in the early days. In a shooting affray that took place in a mining camp one night a man was wounded and his pals called the one doctor then located there. This doctor had but little education and even less experience, but he was doing the best he could. Upon examination he found that the wounded man had been shot in the right side and he extracted a .44-caliber bullet. He treated the wound and then went to his boarding house feeling that he had given the wounded man excellent service. A few hours later, however, he was aroused from his sleep and informed that the wounded man was rapidly growing worse.

The doctor was perplexed, but dressed hurriedly and hastened back to the shack where his patient was being cared for by men of the camp. When he got there he turned the wounded man over and reexamined him. Much to his surprise, he found that the man had also been shot in the left side and that there was a .44-caliber bullet still in the man. [Laughter.]

Figuratively speaking, this bill, like the man in Colorado, was shot twice. We took one bullet out, but the other bullet is still in the bill, and the bullet that is still in it is exactly like the one we took out.

The bill still directs that the apportionment shall be made "by the method known as the method of major fractions." The definition of the method of major fractions contains the very language stricken out by us as unconstitutional by a vote of 219 to 1. The objectionable provision stricken out was the one requiring that one Representative be first given to each State and that the remainder be then apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers.

We said, by a vote of 219 to 1, that it was unconstitutional first to apportion 1 Representative to each State and then apportion the remainder of the 435 Representatives. But that is the very thing that the method known as the method of major fractions requires to be done. Here is what the Census Committee says is the procedure when the method of major fractions is used. I quote the language of the committee verbatim, namely:

> Each State is assigned 1 Member, as provided for by the Constitution, which makes 48. The remainder, 387 (435 less 48), is then assigned to all of the States.

This is exactly what we said could not and should not be done; and yet the method known as the method of major fractions, which is the method designated in the bill, requires that very thing to be done.

Doctor Hill, of the Census Bureau, told the Census Committee just what is done when the method known as the method of major fractions is used. I now quote Doctor Hill verbatim. Says he:

> The first step is to assign 1 Representative to each State, making 48 in all.

Doctor Hill's statement has been expressly approved and indorsed by Professor Willcox, who is the author of the method called by the Census Committee "the method known as the method of major fractions." Professor Willcox does not agree with us as to the meaning of the Constitution. He does not agree with the able argument made in support of Congressman HOCH'S amendment. He takes an exactly opposite view. I now quote verbatim from an address delivered by Professor Willcox and printed in the hearings of the Census Committee. Said he:

> Seats in the House of Representatives are of two classes, the 48, 1 for each State, which are guaranteed by the Constitution and are as completely beyond the control of Congress as the seats of the Senators are, and the remainder, the number and distribution of which are under congressional control. The two classes might be named the apportionable and the unapportionable seats.

The Census Committee, Doctor Hill of the Census Bureau, and Professor Willcox, who according to the Census Committee is the author of the method known as the method of major fractions, all agree that the method of major fractions will do the very thing which we said it would be unconstitutional to do, and it is wholly impossible for anyone to claim otherwise. So the reapportionment bill still requires the new apportionment to be made by first apportioning one Representative to each State and by then apportioning the remainder among the several States.

The great battle which we waged for the Constitution and which we won by the impressive vote of 219 to 1 means absolutely nothing under the circumstances. It has no effect whatever. Unfortunately, there were two .44-caliber bullets in the bill and we took out only one.

As a matter of fact, an amendment was offered to strike out the requirement in the bill that the apportionment should be made by the method known as the method of major fractions. But as the Member who offered that amendment was opposed to the bill it was looked upon by the proponents of the measure as some nefarious work of the devil and was promptly defeated. Thus, as Shakespeare nearly said, "Suspicion doth make cowards of us all."

Of course, this House did not knowingly and understandingly vote the same thing up on one vote and down on another vote. Had the method known as the method of major fractions been described in the bill no doubt it would have been eliminated. But the definition of the method of major fractions was hidden away and concealed in the report and hearings of the committee. It is now, however, as plain as the noonday sun that the bill is in conflict with the Constitution on account of the requirement that the apportionment must be made by the method of major fractions.

It perhaps, however, would have done us no good even if a definition of the method of major fractions had been incorporated in the bill and had been right before us. Perhaps we could not have understood it. The Census Committee heard from a number of professors. One professor made this statement, referring to the method of major fractions:

> The most untutored mind can understand this method.

This looks as if Members of Congress might possibly be able to understand the method of major fractions also; but before you reach that conclusion hear what another professor said. In referring to the method of major fractions and two other methods, he made this significant statement:

> It is true, after all, that the members of a congressional committee and the Members of Congress as a whole will not readily understand any one of the three methods.

So while the most untutored mind can understand the method of major fractions, the Members of Congress as a whole, meaning, I presume, the average Members of Congress, can not readily do so. In other words, the most untutored mind is superior to the average Member of Congress. This professor is to be commended for not damning with faint praise.

I do not have the temerity to deny the statement of the last-named professor. I never challenge the statement of any learned man. Sometimes I think it would be justifiable to question the words and wisdom of Professor Beeswax, the man without a summer, but further than that I would hesitate to go.

Our good friend Robert Burns thought it would be fine if we could see ourselves as others see us, and we have all quoted him with approval times without number. But would that really be a fine thing? I fear not. How distressed, discouraged, and dismayed we would be if we could see ourselves as this professor sees us. It would be simply terrible. Fortunately, the Speaker and the floor leader and the Democratic leader and the Socialist leader and the chairman of the Rules Committee and the Republican and Democratic whips would not be included, for they are not average Members of Congress—I mean they are above, not below—but the rest of us would be in an awful fix.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KOPP. I gladly yield to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I thank the gentleman for the compliment; I was about to reach the conclusion from the opinions expressed by these eminent professors that perhaps all of us were in the situation somewhat analagous to the individual described by another as being so very low that he could never hope to reach the plane of total depravity. [Laughter.]

Mr. KOPP. While the Census Committee is revising the Constitution of the United States, might it not be well for it to revise Robert Burns also?

While it is disappointing that we did not succeed in doing what we undertook to do by the amendment, yet we accomplished a most remarkable feat. In one respect we broke all records. For ages logicians asserted that no man could at the same time ride two horses going in opposite directions. Never again can that be said, for we have done it. Any body of men that can accomplish such a marvelous thing has a right to be proud of its achievements. But we should not stop there. We should seek to perform even greater and nobler deeds.

I ask your indulgence while I make a further brief observation on "the method known as the method of major fractions." The Census Committee took the view that there was only one known method of major fractions and for that reason referred to it in the bill as "The method known as the method of major fractions." The hearings and the report of the committee clearly show that the committee regarded Professor Willcox's plan as "The method known as the method of major fractions." I can not agree with the Census Committee, however, that there is only one method of major fractions. As I view it, there are at least three methods of major fractions, namely, the method of major fractions developed by Professor Willcox, the method of major fractions used in 1840, and the method of major fractions outlined by Daniel Webster in 1832. In either event, however, the requirement that "the method known as the method of major fractions" be used is clearly unconstitutional.

If the Willcox method of major fractions is the only known method of major fractions, then the requirement is unconstitutional because the Willcox method is unconstitutional; and if there are several methods of major fractions then the requirement is unconstitutional for the reason that in that event the Secretary of Commerce must exercise discretion and must select one of the several methods of major fractions. It is clearly unconstitutional to delegate such discretion to the Secretary of Commerce.

The way in which this bill flouts the Constitution is really delightful. Some years ago, a great American published a book on The New Freedom. This bill has a "new freedom" all its own. How can that be explained? Only by remembering that this bill also rises above principle. Apparently, it is thought that whatever we do in Congress will be sustained by the Supreme Court. Thirty years ago, as you will remember, one of the questions foremost in the public mind was whether the Constitution followed the flag. When Dooley was asked about this he said he did not know much about it, but that he had noticed that the Supreme Court always followed the Administration. As a witticism that was fine, but for legislative purposes it would hardly be a safe guide.

In this connection, I think I should make a reply to the statement frequently made that a bill like this one was passed in 1850. The truth is that the bill of 1850 was very unlike this bill. Under the bill of 1850 the duties of the Secretary of the Interior, who was the officer authorized to make the apportionment, were simply ministerial. Under that bill the Secretary of the Interior had no discretionary power whatsoever. Under that bill the Secretary of the Interior was neither required nor permitted to determine what constituted any particular method of making the apportionment. That bill did not name any method. The bill of 1850 clearly and definitely defined how the apportionment should be made. That bill fixed the number of Representatives at 233 and provided that the apportionment should be begun by dividing the aggregate population by the number 233 and that the product of such division should be the ratio or rule of apportionment. Nothing could have been clearer or plainer than the provisions of that bill. It absolutely limited the Secretary of the Interior to ministerial duties. The bill of 1850 did not require the Secretary of the Interior to begin by assigning one Representative to each State and then apportioning the remainder among the several States. The bill of 1850 did not contain a single one of the constitutional defects pointed out in this bill, and that means a world of difference between the two. It takes a strong imagination to claim that the act of 1850 was a precedent for the bill now before us. The act of 1850 can no more be cited as a precedent for this bill than a Sunday school convention could be cited as a precedent for a prize fight.

It has also been said that the method directed to be used in the present bill was used in 1910. That is incorrect and misleading. It is true that in 1910 Professor Willcox first presented his method, referred to by himself as a "novel method," to the Census Committee. The act of 1910 nowhere, however, recognized that "novel method." The Census Committee of that year listened to him and to others, adopted such suggestions as it thought wise, and then Congress made its own apportionment. No one was authorized to make an apportionment for Congress. The apportionment was in the bill itself. Congress completed the task. Let me say that by using the term "novel method" I mean no criticism. I readily concede that any method that squarely conflicts with the Constitution of the United States is entitled to be called a "novel method."

This bill is now pending in the Senate. Notwithstanding all its defects, this bill was reported favorably by the Senate committee without the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t." Of course, the Senators of that committee well knew its constitutional defects. Never could you make me believe otherwise. They reported the bill without any change whatsoever simply to show their high regard for the House. It was a delicate compliment bestowed upon the House by gallant and chivalrous Senators.

In conclusion I call the proponents of this bill back to a defense of the Constitution. I ask you to join us in the great work in which we are now engaged. I beseech you not to enact a law that will blush for shame every time it meets the Constitution face to face. There is still time to return. An old familiar quotation, with a slight modification to make it accurate and truthful, fits this situation, and with that quotation I close:

While yet the lamp holds out to burn
The vilest sinner may return.

[Applause.]

Mr. FRENCH. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOOPER].

Mr. HOOPER. Mr. Chairman, I have listened to this beautiful ex post facto exordium delivered by the gentleman from Iowa with the same delight that Members must have heard Proctor Knott many years ago when he was describing the beauties of Duluth. I am glad the gentleman paid his tribute to Michigan. I was fearful when he mentioned the name of Hon. CLARENCE MCLEOD, who did so much for reapportionment, that instead of quoting from Julius Cæsar he was going to quote Richard III and speak thus of my colleague from Michigan:

Clarence hath come, false, fleeting, perjured Clarence.
Who stabbed me near the fields of Tewkesbury.
Seize him, ye Furies, take him to your torments.

but he did not; he referred to Mr. MCLEOD, Mr. MICHENER, and myself as the Cæsarian conspirators—reiterating stab after stab on Iowa's prostrate form.

The speech of the gentleman from Iowa was one of the finest literary treats I ever heard. He quoted from one of my favorite authors, Macaulay:

Then none was for the party;
Then all were for the State;
Then the great man helped the poor,
And the poor man loved the great.

I am going to give you something for Iowa from Michigan—something better than that, a sentiment from Macaulay also. In the years that are to come, after the smoke and tumult of the reapportionment battle have died away, when the Iowan warriors who battled so magnificently for the Constitution and against reapportionment shall take their grandchildren on their knees to tell them all about the war, and what we fought each other for, then, in that golden day, those other words of Macaulay will be appropriate:

With weeping and with laughter
Still is the story told
How well Horatius kept the bridge
In the brave days of old.

I have something else to commend to the gentleman from Iowa this afternoon. Let him, when he becomes gloomy over the wrongs heaped on Iowa, crushed and bleeding as she is to-day, reapportioned and dismembered beyond recognition; let him dip into English literature and revive himself and Iowa with this:

In the fell clutch of circumstance,
I have not wailed nor cried aloud;
Beneath the bludgeonings of chance,
My head is bloody but unbowed.
It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishment the scroll;
I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul.

[Applause.]

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Chairman, I yield now to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. O'CONNOR] such time as he may desire.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, to use a bromide, the hour is growing late, and I shall not make any lengthy address to-day. In view of the concluding part of the splendid speech just now made by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOOPER] in which he invoked Henley's spirit to come to his aid in answer to the gentleman who preceded him, I am tempted to say that years ago in the old Grand Opera House, of New Orleans, across the boards of which strolled some of the mightiest figures in the dramatic world, such as Booth and Barrett, Salvini, James, Marie Wainwright, Joe Wheelock, Modjeska, Rustin, Fannie Davenport, Joseph Jefferson, Mansfield, Ellen Terry, Julia Arthur, and a host of others, I saw a performance called A Milk White Flag, by Hoyt. It was a musical comedy and was quite the vogue in that day.

The purpose of it was to show that some military companies were organized purely for the purpose of maintaining officers in social position. The company was called the awkward squad, and was composed of a few broken-down, dilapidated-looking men who served as the military basis for the officers who paraded, arrayed in all the panoply of brilliant uniforms, gorgeous plumes, and headgear, and gained great prestige, social and otherwise, by their peace-time bellicose activities and high-sounding military titles. That insignificant circumstance gave a slant to my whole afterlife. The more I read of the United States standing Army, the more I came to the conclusion that it was in peace times largely for the purpose of supporting an upper ten who had high official title, and gained great social prestige therefrom. That viewpoint was largely accentuated by the fact that the enlisted men were poorly paid in that day, as they had no divine poet to sing them into immortality nor had they any statesmen to stand behind them, even though they were blood of the blood and bone of the bone of our country. Nor have conditions materially changed since then in so far as concerned that compensation which would make it an inviting field for young men to enter.

That thought was applicable to the United States Navy years ago and is, to a certain extent, applicable to it to-day. Gentlemen, we must pay those who enlist and are prepared to yield their lives as holocausts to their country's needs, if we expect hopeful, ambitious young Americans to enter the military and naval service. We passed the cruiser bill. It is in behalf of the national defense, but there is no use concealing the fact that it is in the interest also of the shipbuilders of the country. Some of the gentlemen in another body were indiscreet enough to talk about the languishing ship industry and the necessity for such a bill, and as long as the cat is out of the bag we may as well see him run. The bill, while in the interest of the national defense, and I am for the national defense, unquestionably makes for the profit of those that are already opulent, rich, great, powerful, and strong. What is going to be done to the men who in the last analysis might have to go to the bottom if those ships are ever called into fighting requisition. Has anyone ever thought of their status, the status of the man who enlists at $30 a month, but who will not participate in the benefits that are to flow from this legislation, which will enrich the shipbuilders and their employees and take care of those that are already well taken care of in the navy yards?

Mr. Chairman, I am glad that Mr. MORIN has introduced a resolution proposing an investigation by a joint committee of the pay of the men in the Army and the Navy from every standpoint, going down from the top to the bottom, and I hope that in behalf of the American Army and the Navy some thought will be given to the fellow whose glory has never been sung in the history of this country, the fellow who has to stumble to his death like a dog, maybe in the trenches, or go to the bottom, whose services are ill requited by a magnificently opulent country like this. Until that is done, cynics may be justified in looking with suspicion upon the so-called patriotic efforts of statesmen to build a national defense, the profits of which will go to those who need them not, while those who serve as the basis for that Army and Navy are uncared for, unthought of, and go through the entire journey of life unrequited of that which they ought to have during their living years.

I hope the joint resolution to which I have referred (H. J. Res. 349) will pass. Here it is:

Joint resolution for the appointment of a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives to investigate the pay and allowances of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service.

Resolved, etc., That a joint committee to be composed of five Members of the Senate, to be appointed by the Vice President, and five Members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, shall make an investigation and report recommendations by bill or otherwise to their respective Houses, relative to the readjustment of the pay and allowances of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the several services mentioned in the title of this joint resolution.

It exemplifies the truth of the Latin maxim, multum in parvo, for it indeed contains much in a few words, and is a harbinger of hope to the American Tommy Atkins and the young fellow who would be glad to take to the deck of a battleship as a career, or the barracks, if the pay at the beginning was sufficient to make him believe that the Army and Navy wanted as recruits men who have not abandoned all hope of making homes for themselves while wearing the uniform of their country.

"A cheap coat makes a cheap man," said the lamented McKinley, and small pay for soldiers, marines, and Navy enlists indicates a desire to secure cheap service in the lower grades, where the majority are, which is not the attitude that should be assumed by a Government of a country as rich as ours. Let the joint resolution be adopted. The appointment of such a committee as is provided for will make for that investigation which will strengthen the base of the Army and Navy by raising the hopes of the personnel through a just compensation, known as the living wage.

"I care not who writes the laws of a country if you permit me to write its songs," said Fletcher. I care not what laws you write or who are in the ascendency—Democrats or Republicans—if you permit me to write that American labor standards must be maintained in the only way they can be maintained, by a just wage for those that labor for us on land or sea. I am for national defense and for ships, which must include the boys on and below decks, if we are to maintain a Navy where hope, enthusiasm, and courage will be felt uniformly from bottom to top and not in spots and sporadically, as it were.

Give the Cæsars crowns and arches; let his brow the laurel twine, but don't forget the recruits. As my distinguished friend from Michigan, Congressman HOOPER, left off with the inspiring Invictus altered to suit his purpose and the occasion, let me call upon a bard for a line that will convey the thought that is struggling for expression in my mind.

Open my eyes to visions girt
With beauty and with wonder lit.
But never let me forget the dirt
And all that spawn and die in it.

Open my ears to music. Let Me hear spring's first flutes and drums,
But never let me dare forget
The bitter ballads of the slums.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. ROY G. FITZGERALD].

Mr. ROY G. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, on the 21st of January the junior Senator from Tennessee inserted in the RECORD the opinions of the Attorney General on questions put to him by the Director of the Veterans' Bureau, relative to the proper administration of the act for the retirement of disabled emergency officers of the World War, and on the 22d I addressed this House with reference to the administration of that act. This morning I received from General Hines, the Director of the Veterans' Bureau, a copy of the reply to his request of November 10, 1928, for opinions and interpretations by the Comptroller General, and at this moment I would like to have those who are interested in the administration of the act know that in compliance with a Senate resolution the director reported that on the 29th of January 8,053 applications for retirement of disabled veterans had been received, that 1,134 men had been retired with pay, and that 90 had been retired without pay. I have received the most heart-rending appeals from all over this country from 30 to 50 of the individual disabled veterans who complain about their treatment by the Veterans' Bureau. Veterans of 14 different States, Alabama, California, Georgia, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, and Texas have appealed to me for help. This morning came the appeal from Minnesota alluding to the "inhuman" conduct of the Veterans' Bureau. Now, we have this opinion at last of the Comptroller General, applied for on November 10, 1928, many months after the enactment of the law on May 24, and rendered at this late date.

I am hoping that administration of the act may now proceed and that there may be an end to the cause for complaints which have been made to me and, I presume, to all the Members of this House. I therefore ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks by inserting in the RECORD the resolution of the American Legion, Department of Ohio, on the administration of the Veterans' Bureau and a portion of a letter in regard to its improvement and the opinion of the Comptroller General.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, I want to ask the gentleman from Ohio if he has given thought to the desirability of having printed as a public document the opinion of the Attorney General, which has been inserted in the RECORD in the Senate, and the opinion of the Comptroller General. Would he be desirous of having that done?

Mr. ROY G. FITZGERALD. I think it would be desirable. I may say that at private expense 5,000 copies of the opinion of the Attorney General have already been printed and distributed to those who are known to be directly concerned.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. That ought to be sufficient.

Mr. ROY G. FITZGERALD. There ought to be added, however, the opinion of the Comptroller General, because, as was suggested on the floor of the House on the 22d of January, the Comptroller General was the court of last resort, and that there have been occasions when the Comptroller General adhered to his opinion as to the proper construction of the law not in accord with the opinion of the Attorney General.

Mr. W. T. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROY G. FITZGERALD. Certainly.

Mr. W. T. FITZGERALD. Would it take care of the dissatisfaction of the veterans of the World War in regard to some decisions as to rating, particularly some in which they are not 10 per cent disabled and therefore they are not entitled to remuneration? I might say further; take a diabetes case, absolutely incurable, where life may be prolonged for several years; that is, since the discovery of insulin and allied products. Now, to my mind, a man who has once had diabetes is never a man who can make his way in the world. I have had letter after letter in which they say they have 2, 3, or 4 children, in which they ask for help, and they are not people who get much.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FRENCH. I yield the gentleman two additional minutes.

Mr. ROY G. FITZGERALD. In reply to the gentleman I may say the text of the law seems plain to me, and it seems plain to many others, but the minds of those who are called upon to administer it are filled with doubts. My friend may read in to-morrow's RECORD the opinion of the Comptroller General. He will find that some cases similar to that he has presented have been considered. But I do not know of the rulings on diabetes. The law provides that there shall be retirement on three-fourths pay of the disabled veteran officer who, because of and in consequence of his military service, was disabled, and at the date of the passage of the act or within one year after could be found to have been or to be 30 per cent or more permanently disabled.

Now, the degree of disability is one for doctors and men of good judgment to determine. Doctor Dunham, of Cincinnati, an eminent authority on tuberculosis, said in testifying before the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation that any man with an arrested case of tuberculosis of the lungs is at least 25 per cent permanently disabled. Diabetes presents a like problem, to be solved in accordance with medical experience.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio to extend his remarks in the manner indicated. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. ROY G. FITZGERALD. When I addressed the House on this subject on January 22, some of the Members took occasion to criticize the regional offices of the Veterans' Bureau. There has been reason for such criticism. Here is the resolution of the Department of Ohio of the American Legion, adopted at the tenth annual convention August 19 to 21, 1928:

Whereas the rehabilitation of our wounded and those who are sick and suffering because of their service to our country in the Great War is the most sacred duty and solemn obligation of the American Legion; and

Whereas though we recognize that the major portion of the officials of the Veterans' Bureau are performing their duties ably and well, yet it is established that certain officials in our regional offices manifest a degree of harshness, lack of sympathy, and kindliness to claimants; that delays occur in the examination of claimants and a definite interpretation of the claimant's condition is prolonged to unreasonable length, bringing upon the claimant suffering, misery, and sometimes death before care is given him; that many of our unfortunate comrades have become discouraged, heartsick, and convinced that they are victims of ingratitude; that all too often claimants are regarded with suspicion, are accused of moral dishonesty, and are frequently ordered to give proof of service connection with present sickness that is humanly impossible to produce; and

Whereas the act creating the bureau admonished its administrators to give liberal interpretation of the act to the benefit of the claimant and the national director of the bureau has admonished all regional officials to comply with the spirit and intent of the act in this respect, with the thought that no proper claimant should be wronged: Be it therefore

Resolved by the Tenth Annual Convention of the American Legion, Department of Ohio, That any harsh or unfeeling attitude on the part of any official of the Veterans' Bureau toward a claimant be most unqualifiedly condemned; that delays in the examination and treatment resulting in further suffering and injury to the claimant are heartless and inhuman; that every possible effort be made to eliminate red tape and bureaucracy in our Nation's treatment of our unfortunate comrades; and that the most liberal interpretation be given to every case, to the end that injustice be not done.

There has, however, been improvement, for on November 21, 1928, I received a letter from a disabled veteran, from which I quote:

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN: Deeply appreciating the effort you have already shown in my case, I am again coming to you with the latest developments.

Following your letter to * * * regional manager, you were no doubt informed that the applicant was in * * * for examination on October 12, and was under orders to report back on November 19. As per schedule, I reported there yesterday, November 19, and for the first time since I have been before the Veterans' Bureau I received sympathetic attention from everyone with whom I came in contact. For this "human" treatment I am pleased to give you the credit.

Here is the letter which I received this morning from the Director of the Veterans' Bureau and the opinions of the Comptroller General:

UNITED STATES VETERANS' BUREAU,
OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR,
Washington, February 6, 1929.

Hon. ROY G. FITZGERALD,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. FITZGERALD: With further reference to my letter of January 19, 1929, forwarding for your information two opinions from the Attorney General of the United States, each dated January 18, 1929, in which he construes the emergency officers' retirement act of May 24, 1928 (45 Stat. 735, 736), you are advised that I have just received a decision from the Comptroller General, dated February 4, 1929, covering three of the questions passed upon by the Attorney General.

As the decision of the Comptroller General sets forth in full my submission, preliminary to passing upon the questions presented, the decision is self-explanatory.

For your information I inclose copy of the decision. A copy of this letter is also inclosed for your use.

Very truly yours,

FRANK T. HINES, Director.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, February 4, 1929.

The DIRECTOR UNITED STATES VETERANS' BUREAU.

SIR: There has been received your letter of November 10, 1928, as follows:

"I have the honor to refer to your decision of August 3, 1928, in response to my letter of July 26, 1928, in which there was considered the authority of the bureau to pay traveling expenses incident to necessary examinations of claimants for benefits under Public, 506, Seventieth Congress, 'An act making eligible for retirement under certain conditions officers and former officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps of the United States, other than officers of the Regular Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, who incurred physical disability in line of duty while in service of the United States during the World War.'

"In deciding that the appropriations for the Veterans' Bureau are available for expenses incurred incident to necessary examinations for applicants under this legislation to the same extent and for the same purposes as other beneficiaries of the bureau, you held further:

"'It is apparent the intent of the act is that only those who have a permanent disability entitling them to a rating of 30 per cent or more under the schedule of ratings are entitled to retirement under the act of May 24, 1928, and if in any case the description of the disability upon which an award has been made by the Veterans' Bureau suggests that the disability may now be less than 30 per cent, it is competent for the director, in his discretion, to require the medical examination provided by the World War veterans' act in order that the rating accorded may be "in accordance with law."'

"Prior to the receipt of this decision the language limiting the benefits of this act to those 'who have been, or may hereafter, within one year, be rated in accordance with law at not less than 30 per cent permanent disability by the United States Veterans' Bureau for disability resulting directly from such war service,' had been construed by the general counsel as follows:

"'Inasmuch as the present act (lines 7 and 8, p. 1) contains the phrase, "who have been or may hereafter," it is believed that where an officer has a disability in line of duty resulting directly from his military service on account of which he received a 30 per cent permanent partial-disability rating prior to the passage of the act, he would be entitled to appropriate benefits of the act, even though since the passage of the act he has been rated less than 10 per cent permanently disabled.'

"A diversion of opinion, however, existed in the bureau on this matter, and the procedure established was based upon the theory that the intention of the legislation is that a previous rating of 30 per cent permanent, which was later reduced to less than 30 per cent permament, should be considered as an erroneous rating, and therefore not one which would entitle an officer to the benefits provided. Your decision of August 3, 1928, has been regarded as confirming this construction and the bureau has continued to act on the theory that a permanent disability of not less than 30 per cent must exist now, or within one year after the enactment of the legislation, before an ex-officer may be extended the benefits of retirement pay thereunder, and that in order to determine the present existence of such 30 per cent permanent disability reexamination would be necessary, except in the following cases:

"(1) Whenever the officer whose compensable disability, directly connected with service and incurred in line of duty, results from amputation, enucleation, organic blindness, organic deafness, organic loss of speech, fractures, scars, peripheral of cranial nerve injuries, disfigurements, or ankyloses.

"(2) Whenever the officer has had a complete physical examination by a board of three physicians (as required for permanent ratings under the regulations governing the Veterans' Bureau) within a period of 90 days.

"It is my belief that this is a reasonable interpretation of the provisions of the law and that your decision of August 3, 1928, is in substantial agreement therewith.

"In view, however, of the fact that your decision of August 3, 1928, was primarily directed at another phase of this matter, reconsideration is requested with particular reference to the following questions:

"(1) In a case where an officer has heretofore been rated 30 per cent permanently disabled for disability incurred in line of duty directly resulting from war service, and the file now shows that the rating was in error under the law or the facts, or both, may the bureau reexamine and rerate the applicant?

"(2) Where an officer has heretofore been rated 30 per cent or more permanently disabled for a disability incurred in line of duty directly resulting from war service and such rating was correct under the law and the schedule of disability ratings in effect at that time, but such rating would not be the same under the schedule of disability ratings in effect at the present time, is there authority to place the man on the retirement list on the strength of the former rating, or must a rerating be made under the present disability-rating schedule?

"In this connection consideration should be given to the change in the law governing the principles of disability ratings effected by the act of June 7, 1924, which introduced the principle of ratings based on impairment in earning capacity in occupations similar to the occupation at time of enlistment, and to the fact that the formal rating schedule thereunder was not put into effect until January 1, 1926, the schedule in effect prior to June 7, 1924, being used in the interim in conjunction with instructions to the rating authorities to apply the old schedule in the light of the law itself pending the promulgation of the new schedule. Since January 1, 1926, there have also been promulgated several extensions to that schedule of disability ratings which have caused distinct variations in ratings of individual cases on the identical disability; for example, due to a revision in the occupational variants for students, a man who has heretofore been assigned a variant as a student because he was engaged in the study of law at the time of his entrance into the military service is now under extension No. 5, dated June 29, 1928, assigned a variant as a lawyer, the use of which in the evaluation of some disabilities will bring the degree of rating for exactly the same disability below 30 per cent. Is the bureau authorized to take the rating in effect at the time of the enactment of the law which would bring him within the terms of the legislation, or must the amended schedule be applied? Conversely, where a change in occupational variant or other rating element subsequent to the enactment of the law would bring the same disability to a rating of more than 30 per cent permanent, is the bureau authorized or required to rerate the applicant under the amended schedule so as to bring his rating up to 30 per cent and give him the benefits of the retirement law?

"(3) In a case where an officer has been rated 30 per cent or more permanently disabled under the laws, regulations, and schedules of disability ratings in effect at the time the rating was made, for a disability incurred in line of duty directly resulting from war service, but the evidence now shows that he is not at the present time permanently disabled to a degree of 30 per cent or more, must the old rating be accepted and the benefits of the retirement act be accorded? Or should he be reexamined and rerated under the law and schedule of disability ratings in effect on May 29, 1928, or that in effect on the date of administrative determination? (See decisions of your office in the case of Edward L. Marthill, C–405,236, dated October 2, 1926, and January 7, 1927.)"

In the decision to which reference is made, the question for consideration was whether the appropriations for the Veterans' Bureau available for travel expenses of claimants for the benefits accruing under the World War veterans' act might be used to pay transportation and travel expenses of applicants for retirement to secure physical examination. In reaching the conclusion that the appropriations were available for payment of transportation and travel expenses for applicants for retirement under the act of May 24, 1928, it was necessary to conclude that a physical examination in some cases was necessary, and that the mere fact that the records of the Veterans' Bureau showed that at some time in the past a rating of 30 per cent, or more, disability had been given a former officer; but upon subsequent examination a less degree of or no disability was found and the record had been corrected to show the true facts would not entitle the officer to retirement. Extended discussion as to the basis for reaching such a conclusion was not deemed necessary, as that conclusion was in consonance with the conclusion reached by you and that was the reason for the submission.

If the strict literal language of the quoted phrase were the only guide as to the description of the beneficiaries it might include anyone who, whether by mistake or otherwise, had ever received a rating of physical disability of 30 per cent or more in the Veterans' Bureau under either or any of the schedule of ratings ever employed by the bureau, and who subsequently, under the authority of the Veterans' Bureau to reexamine beneficiaries, had been later correctly rated with a less degree of disability, or with no disability, might now be required to be placed on the retired list created by the act of May 24, 1928, to receive retired pay for life. In such circumstances there might be one or many, with no present disability, awarded retired pay for life, while one or many with permanent disability rated at 29 per cent would necessarily be denied any retired pay. In many cases it is understood no benefits are now being paid persons who soon after the war had ratings equal to, or in excess of, 30 per cent disability, so that the retired pay to be paid them under the act of 1928 would not in fact "be in lieu of" any disability compensation they are now receiving. The act extends its benefits to the former officers therein described—

"* * * who during such service have incurred physical disability in line of duty, and who have been, or may hereafter, within one year, be rated in accordance with law at not less than 30 per cent permanent disability by the United States Veterans' Bureau for disability resulting directly from such war service: * * *"— and in addition to other benefits provides that former officers so placed on the retired list therein created—

"* * * shall receive from date of receipt of their application retired pay at the rate of 75 per cent of the pay to which they were entitled at the time of their discharge from their commissioned service, except pay under the act of May 18, 1920: Provided, That all pay and allowances to which such persons or officers may be entitled under the provisions of this law * * * shall be in lieu of all disability compensation benefits to such officers or persons provided in the World War veterans' act, 1924, and amendments thereto, except as otherwise authorized herein, and except as provided by the act of December 18, 1922: * * *."

Section 302 of the war risk insurance act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 406), provided a schedule of payments for total disability and for a percentage of such payments if the disability is partial, and required that a schedule of ratings of reduced earning capacity from specified injuries or combinations of injuries of a permanent nature should be adopted and applied by the bureau. By section 305 it was provided:

"That upon its own motion or upon application the bureau may at any time review an award, and, in accordance with the facts found upon such review, may end, diminish, or increase the compensation previously awarded, or, if compensation has been refused or discontinued, may award compensation."

That provision has been continuously in the law, although amended from time to time, the present provision for reviewing an award being contained in section 205 of the World War veterans' act (43 Stat. 622), which was quoted at length in decision A–23876, August 3, 1928, referred to by you. This provision clearly assumes not only that awards may have been made of permanent partial disability which time has shown was either temporary or susceptible of improvement but also that awards might be improvidently made or made as the result of undetected malingery. In any such case where a rating was incorrectly accorded the former officer of 30 per cent or more permanent disability, it is competent for the director to review the award and accord a rating which will correctly show the present condition of the beneficiary.

As to the beneficiaries intended by the act of May 24, 1928 (see S. Rept. 115, 70th Cong. 1st sess., to accompany S. 777, which became the act of May 24, 1928), where the committee made the following statements as to the purpose and effect of the bill:

"The bill provides retirement pay of 75 per cent of the compensation paid at time of discharge from active service to emergency Army officers who incurred permanent disability of 30 per cent or more as a result of their service during the World War.

"It is believed that this degree of disability in the keen competition of civil life is, on the average, the equivalent of the 'incapacitated for active service,' which is the basis of retiring officers from the Regular Establishments on account of disability.

"The number of disabled emergency Army officers to be benefited by this proposed act, together with its costs, are shown in the appended letter and table from the Director of the Veterans' Bureau dated January 19, 1928, which are made a part of this report."

In House Report 1082, Seventieth Congress, first session, to accompany S. 777, the following statement is found:

"Your committee points out that the Senate act (S. 777) includes those disabled emergency officers of the Navy and Marine Corps, 201 in number, who did not obtain retirement under the act of June 4, 1920. The increased annual cost under this amendment will be $117,624.

"In all other respects the text of S. 777 is similar to that of H. R. 500, which was favorably reported by this committee on January 20, 1928, perfected copy of which report follows and is made a part of this report:

* * * * * * *

"The bill provides retirement pay of 75 per cent of the compensation paid at time of discharge from active service to emergency Army officers who incurred permanent disability of 30 per cent or more as a result of their service during the World War. * * *

* * * * * * *

"The number of disabled emergency officers to be benefited by this proposed act is estimated by the Director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, under date of March 21, 1928, to be 3,251. This increase over previous estimates is in part due to the operation of the new rating schedule recommended by this committee and authorized by the Sixty-eighth Congress, in part due to the fact that the physical condition of these older disabled officers has been gradually breaking down under the handicaps of their war-incurred disabilities, and in part due to the inclusion of 185 naval officers and 16 Marine Corps officers not already retired.

* * * * * * *

"The increased annual cost to the Government, based upon the figures of the United States Veterans' Bureau, is $2,294,265, being the difference between the amount to be paid under this bill, $5,136,225, and in lieu of the amount the 3,251 are now receiving as compensation $2,841,960. The death rate of these men disabled in war is high, more than 125 deaths having occurred during the year 1927. Therefore, it is obvious that when this act becomes operative its cost should diminish rapidly.

* * * * * * *

"To relieve the War Department of the, to it, objectionable necessity of disbursing from its funds money not applicable to strictly military purposes, the bill provides that the administration of the act be committed to the United States Veterans' Bureau, which has the complete medical records of the beneficiaries. * * *."

All discussion was on the basis of former officers who were permanently disabled as the beneficiaries of the act; in other words, former officers who under the World War veterans' act (including the authority of the Veterans' Bureau to review an award under the statutory provisions cited above), were permanently disabled to an extent of 30 per cent or more and who were otherwise within the act.

The language cited defines and limits the beneficiaries under the act, with the further qualification that the disability shall have been, or shall be, rated by the Director of the Veterans' Bureau at 30 per cent, or more, in accordance with law, i. e., in accordance with the schedule of ratings in effect on the date of the act for awarding compensation under the World War veterans' act, and it is thus clear that the mere rating of a particular percentage of disability under any scheme of rating at any time in effect was not designed to be the test of the right to retirement under the act of May 24, 1928. Until the requisites for retirement under the act have been established in a particular case, the applicant for retirement continues to be a beneficiary, or an applicant for benefits, under the World War veterans' act; the act of May 24, 1928, does not suspend the application of the World War veterans' act as to persons prima facie coming within the terms of the retirement act; until the person has been retired under the terms of the act, he continues to be subject to the provisions of the World War veterans' act, including the provision of law authorizing the bureau to reexamine and rerate beneficiaries of the World War veterans' act.

On the foregoing premise your several questions will be answered in their order, the answers in each case being predicated on the assumption that the Director of the Veterans' Bureau, in the exercise of his discretion, and on the evidence available to him, has determined in a given case that the present records sufficiently suggest error to warrant a reexamination.

1. Yes.

2. The second paragraph of subdivision (4) of section 202 of the World War veterans' act, 43 Stat. 618, provides:

"A schedule of ratings of reductions in earning capacity from injuries or combinations of injuries shall be adopted and applied by the bureau. Ratings may be as high as 100 per cent. The ratings shall be based, as far as practicable, upon the average impairments of earning capacity resulting from such injuries in civil occupations similar to the occupation of the injured man at the time of enlistment and not upon the impairment in earning capacity in each individual case, so that there shall be no reduction in the rate of compensation for individual success in overcoming the handicap of an injury. The bureau in adopting the schedule of ratings of reduction in earning capacity shall consider the impairment in ability to secure employment which results from such injuries. The bureau shall from time to time readjust this schedule of ratings whenever actual experience shall show that it is unjust to the disabled veteran."

The rating must be in accordance with law, and the law in effect May 24, 1928, is the law contemplated by the act by which is to be tested the question whether the rating is in accordance with law. On the facts suggested a rerating should be made under the disability rating schedule in effect May 24, 1928. In the matter of retirement, equality of treatment for the same disability, other requisites being established, requires that all claims be rated under the same schedule, the one in effect May 24, 1928, pursuant to law; otherwise some former officers would be retired and others having identical disabilities, would not be retired. The law contemplates equal treatment for all otherwise within the law having the same degree of disability under the applicable rating schedule.

3. It is assumed that the date "May 29, 1928," was inadvertent and that May 24, 1928, the date the act providing for retirement of disabled emergency officers became effective was intended, and answer will be on that basis. All beneficiaries of the Veterans' Bureau were required by section 202 (4) of the act of June 7, 1924, to be rated on the schedule of ratings therein directed to be adopted. Section 202 (4) of the act of June 7, 1924, directs that "A schedule of ratings of reductions in earning capacity from injuries or combinations of injuries shall be adopted and applied by the bureau." It will be observed that the enactment requires not only the adoption of schedule of ratings, but also their application, i. e., that the schedule shall be put into effect; and if to put such schedule into effect required examination, the rating would not be in accordance with law until such examination had been had. It is understood that has been the administrative procedure and the law was being so administered when the act of May 24, 1928, was passed. The old ratings were not, therefore, for the purpose of the retirement act, "in accordance with law," and in any case where the description of the injury or disability or other evidence available to the bureau suggests that the application of the new schedule of ratings may affect the percentage of disability, a matter for the exclusive determination of the Director of the Veterans' Bureau, the rating is not in accordance with law, a rerating is required, and the schedule of ratings in effect May 24, 1928, should be followed. The decisions cited relate to the effective date of an increase in compensation resulting from a rerating under the schedule of ratings put into effect under the act of June 7, 1924. In a degree the status of the beneficiaries of the act of May 24, 1928, is changed. Their right to compensation under the World War veterans' act ceases after retirement, and from the date of receipt of their application for retirement in the bureau they are to be placed on the retired list therein created and are entitled to retired pay based on their commissioned rank at date of discharge from their war service. The percentage of disability should be determined under the schedule in effect on the date of the act, that all in the same situation should be treated with exact equality. For the purpose of retirement, the rating is required to be in accordance with the law as of that date.

What is here said, of course, has no application to the decisions cited by you in this connection.

Respectfully,

J. R. McCarl,
Comptroller General of the United States.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I have one or two gentlemen on my list to speak. May I ask the gentleman from Kansas if he has any more requests?

Mr. AYRES. I have one Member here. He would like to extend his remarks by reading a short article. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Hare].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Chairman, I hold in my hand a short, unsigned tribute which appeared in the Jasper County Record, at Ridgeland, S. C., October 11, 1928. The tribute is to the surroundings, life, character, and services of Miss Mary M. Colcock, who has taught for 52 successive years in a one-teacher school at McPhersonville, S. C., and I ask to extend my remarks by inserting same in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Carolina asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HARE. Mr. Chairman, bumping slowly along the rough little country road out of Yemassee, S. C., through the glaring sunshine of Indian summer, one stops involuntarily as sudden cool shadows fall athwart the white, sandy road. It is like stepping without warning from a humdrum work-a-day into fairyland, getting into the wee town of McPhersonville. Here and there on either side are great picture-book gates and at the end of the long avenue leading from each gate is a low, rambling, white house.

A little pebbly singing brook gurgles happily along one side of the white road. Gen. Stephen Elliott and Capt. Thomas Hegenin, gallant defenders of Fort Sumter, were small boys in McPhersonville. They waded in this same brook and tracked their small footprints over the well-scoured pine floors of these rambling old houses. They must have scooped up this same white sand to feel it trickle coolly through their childish fingers. They doubtless many times stretched their length on the brown carpet of sweet pine needles to listen to the music of the winds passing through the long, leafy trees.

There is a little Episcopal chapel beside the road and farther back in the pines, the old Stoney Creek Presbyterian Church, of which the father of the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the Rev. Edward Palmer Axson, was one time pastor. It was while the Axsons lived at McPhersonville that little Ellie Lou, who was to grow up to be the first lady of the land, took her first steps. And it was Mrs. Glover who still lives at McPhersonville with her three daughters, one of whom, Miss Julia Lestarjette Glover, is a well-known writer of children's stories, who cut off little Ellie Lou's long baby dresses and made them shorter.

On the books of this famous old church, whose architecture is particularly beautiful, is also recorded the marriage of the parents of Theodore Roosevelt. This marriage, which was to give to the world the colorful figure of Theodore Roosevelt, took place at Roswellville, Liberty County, Ga., and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Dunwoody, cousin of the family and, at the time, pastor of Stoney Creek Church. It was his custom to record all marriages on the books of his church, and that is how the Roosevelt marriage came to be recorded in the books of Stoney Creek Church.

Few people of this section know about Miss Glover, the writer of children's stories, so quietly does she live in this little place. And yet she has written hundreds of stories which have delighted thousands of children. She has also written two books, Hilda's Sowing and Children of Grey Court. Her sister, Miss Emily Glover, has also written a few stories for children and some poems.

Next to the Glover home, tucked away into the pines, is the home of Miss Mary Mellicent Colcock, who has just resigned after teaching in the McPhersonville School for 52 successive years. When the school bell rang Monday morning it was the first time in 52 years that Miss Colcock was not in her tiny schoolhouse at McPhersonville awaiting her handful of pupils. She sat on the porch of her old-fashioned, clapboarded, whitewashed home at McPhersonville and rocked back and forth, looking wistfully through the pines to where her little deserted schoolhouse gleamed whitely in the early morning sunshine. Her thin, white, blue-veined hands moved restlessly on her lap. "I don't know what to do with myself," she laughed gently. "It seems so strange, the school bells ringing without me." She was immaculate in her black skirt, high neck, long-sleeved, old time shirt waist with a tiny black ribbon around her collar. It was though she had forgotten and dressed for school.

Miss Colcock has retired and the McPhersonville school children are being transported to the Yemassee school, a distance of about 4 miles.

Fifty-two years of teaching have stooped the shoulders of this diminutive lady, brushed her hair with silver, and etched lines of understanding in her gentle, high-bred face. Yet youth looks out of her eyes. Perhaps she is young in soul because she has lived with youth so long; perhaps it is because, in this quiet, beautiful place she has been able to keep her dreams. It is certain, at least, that life has laid gentle hands upon her. It has not wrung her, broke her, or left marks of violence upon her. She has been one of life's darlings, this wee, gentle old lady, for it has set 73 years upon her head and left her looking like a rare old painting in a silver frame.

Everybody who has gone to school in McPhersonville since 1876 Miss Colcock has taught. How many of them there has, even she does not know. There are doctors, lawyers, writers, business men and women. They remember her from time to time, and on the occasion of her 50th anniversary of teaching she received a substantial purse as material evidence of the memory of those she had taught.

Miss Colcock was born in Charleston, S. C., and came to McPhersonville, the summer home of the rice and cotton planters of the coastal country, to conduct a private school. A year or so later this was made a public school and Miss Colcock continued to teach it. She says that she first came in April of 1876, and then left when the political situation in South Carolina became so intense and went to Hendersonville, where she remained until after the election in November, when she returned to resume her school duties.

Miss Colcock holds the record for continuous teaching in one place in South Carolina and probably in the United States. A bill has been introduced in the South Carolina Legislature by Representative W. H. Lightsey, of Brunson, whereby, if passed, she will receive a pension of $50 per month for the remainder of her life. She lives alone with a sister, 11 years younger, and a cousin, who is in her sixties and confined to her bed. They bemoan the fact that there is no young blood in the family; no nephews nor nieces—nothing at all that is young, they say.

Their home, like the dozen others of this quaint little peaceful place, sits back from the road, up a winding path that runs through sweet-smelling singing pine trees. Through open windows and doors there are glimpses of old-fashioned sofas, quaint old whatnots of a day gone by, beautiful old tables, and delicate slender-legged chairs. It is like a page out of a story book, this little place and its bent, white-haired, young-eyed, tiny lady, who for more than a half century taught the youth of the community.

Here at McPhersonville is utter peace, quiet, and solitude. There is no sound except a bird's plaintive cry and the brook's contented babbling and perhaps the thin music of a cow's bell in the distance. The likeness of the place, hidden away from the world in the fastness of its tall pine trees, may not be found for many days' searching. It is a place where one might find balm for a wounded spirit, surcease for a troubled mind, or rest for a weary body. Once here, the problems of the world that go on just 4 miles away are of no consequence. The beauty and solemnity of being wraps one around. It is as though cool fingers soothed away the fevers of life.

It is not strange that so much romance is to be found in this quaint, still, little place—rather, it is to be expected. The best blood of the country has gone into the making of the place. The culture and high courage and fineness and dauntless spirit of these people, long since dust, permeate the place like a subtle perfume. Small wonder it is that here have been bred men and women who have held their torches high.

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. ALLGOOD] two minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama is recognized for two minutes.

Mr. ALLGOOD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to read a resolution:

Resolution

Whereas the Goodyear Manufacturing Co. has located a mammoth plant at Gadsden, Ala.; and

Whereas with the development of this entire section it is highly desirable that the Coosa, Tallapoosa, and Alabama Rivers be developed at the earliest practical moment to meet the situation: Therefore be it

Resolved by the executive committee of the Mayors Association of Alabama, That they go on record as urging Congress, through the Alabama delegation, to complete this work at the earliest practical moment to meet the growing demands of this section.

HARRY T. HARTWELL, President.

Adopted.

M. L. ROBERTSON, Secretary.

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, on account of the locating of the Goodyear tire and rubber plant at Gadsden additional post-office space is sorely needed, and I am presenting an article from the Gadsden Times, also a letter from the postmaster addressed to me with copy of letter he addressed to the Supervising Architect. The demand for more post-office space is urgent at this time. With the industrial development of our section making great strides, the improvement of our waterways must more and more have the attention of Congress.

The matter referred to is as follows:

RECEIPTS JUMP IN PAST MONTH AT POST OFFICE—GAIN OF 20 PER CENT IN JANUARY OVER 1928 MONTH

The Gadsden post office made a gain of 20 per cent in its January receipts, as compared to the same month a year ago.

The net gain was $1,055.31 for the month, which is regarded as very good by postal authorities. The gain for December was high, and it is expected that February will show another big gain. By summer it is believed the increase in receipts will have grown to large proportions, for by that time several thousand persons will have been added to the population of Gadsden.

UNITED STATES POST OFFICE,
Gadsden, Ala., February 5, 1929.

Hon. M. C. ALLGOOD,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. ALLGOOD: You will find herewith copy of letter to Supervising Architect. The time has come when the Government has either got to enlarge the building or rent a building so that we can have adequate space in which to work the mails. The present building was designed and erected before the days of parcel post and C. O. D. packages, and we were already crowded to capacity before the announcement of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. plant at this place. I hope you will take such action as will be necessary to get the required appropriation for the erection of an annex to the post-office building.

Yours truly,

THOS. H. STEPHENS, Postmaster.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CUSTODIAN,
Gadsden, Ala., February 5, 1929.

SUPERVISING ARCHITECT,
Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Owing to the location of the Goodyear tire and rubber plant at this place and the erection of a steel-plate mill by the Gulf State Steel Co., there is a great influx of people and several smaller industries are locating here. It is estimated by the chamber of commerce and others that the population of Gadsden will double, or increase 100 per cent within the next 12 months. The workroom in the post-office building is taxed to its capacity with the incoming and outgoing mails and the present working force, all of which will materially increase within the next few months. It will therefore be necessary to provide more space in the workroom of the post-office building to take care of the increased mails, furniture, and working force at the earliest date possible.

Yours truly,

——— ———, Custodian.

Copy to First Assistant Postmaster General.

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. NELSON].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. NELSON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, just about a year ago I read in this House a letter from a mother in my district, Mrs. Minnie G. Short, mother of Roger Leslie Short, who lost his life in the sinking of the S–4. To-day it seems, judging by what I have just read in an Associated Press dispatch, that this mother's prayers are about to be answered. I now read in part from that letter of a year ago:

> Nothing can bring back my precious boy to me. I know that, but I hope that out of all this discussion there will come something that will make it safer for the other brave boys who go down to sea for Uncle Sam. I wish you could read some of the letters I received from other mothers who have boys in the Navy and whose hearts are always filled with dread. They know my sorrow, and I know their dread of what may happen to their boys. I know these dear mothers feel as I do. They are not thinking about blaming any one; they are concerned with the increased safety of our American boys who are on their country's ships.
>
> I hope, Mr. NELSON, that the investigation will be a thorough one and will in so far as possible result in preventing another such awful catastrophe as that which robbed me of a loving son.

Because I know so much of this matter and because this brave boy was one of my constituents, I am pleased to read in the daily papers that the Government is using this same submarine, the S–4, which was the grave of so many noble boys, to add to the safety of those who go down into the deep. Yesterday, by means of the so-called "safety lung," three men were able to escape from the submersible, from a depth of 40 feet of water. As this device is being perfected and its dependability demonstrated, the prayers of a devoted and patriotic mother are being answered.

I read the following statement from an Associated Press dispatch in the Evening Star:

> If these Navy tests prove successful—Lieutenant Commander Dunbar said—there will have been discovered a protection against a catastrophe such as befell the S–4 December 17, 1927, when 40 men lost their lives.

May I add that I have hope that the Congress is yet to do fitting honor to the memory of those who lost their lives in the sinking of the S–4, and to show in a substantial way our appreciation of their work and worth. Personally, I should like to see pensions for the mothers or other dependents of all the men who lost their lives in that terrible disaster, and I want to see the prayer of Mrs. Short answered in the fullest and finest way. We are warranted in entertaining such a hope, for who can measure the power of a mother's prayer! [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I want to bring to your attention a bill which I introduced two or three days ago to correct a condition that exists in the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Serious and just criticism has been made of the Interstate Commerce Commission in recent year because of its delay in deciding cases and its failure to keep its work upon a current basis. This criticism has applied more particularly to the cases involving complaints against freight rates. The commission has endeavored to meet this situation by increasing its force of examiners and devising means for expediting their work. These efforts have produced results, for in the calendar year 1928 the commission ended the year, for the first time in several years, with fewer cases pending on its formal docket than at the beginning. It is also seeking a slight increase in its general appropriation for the year ending June 30, 1930, in aid of further efforts along these lines.

It is believed, however, that the difficulty which the commission has experienced in keeping abreast of its steadily growing work can also be attacked with great advantage in another way. The problem is one of efficient organization and administration. At present a very heavy burden of detailed work falls upon the commissioners. The commission is authorized by section 17 of the interstate commerce act to assign work to divisions made up of not less than three commissioners, subject to a right of appeal to the commission, but this is the limit of its power in the assignment of duties. For the decision of every formal case, therefore, as well as for many other duties, at least three commissioners are in the first instance personally responsible.

The number of these formal proceedings, involving such matters, among others, as rates, service, valuation, security issues, certificates of public convenience and necessity, and mergers, is so great that an enormous amount of time is consumed in the hearing of arguments, the reading and studying of proposed reports, exchange of memorandums, conferences, and similar work; and much of this work must now be done outside of office hours if it is to be done at all.

The load upon the commissioners is so heavy, in short, that not only is there danger of congestion at the top after the staff of the commission has done all the work that can now be delegated to it but the commissioners are prevented by this very burden of detailed work from giving all the time and attention which they ought to give to the larger transportation questions which are of really vital importance to the country. Furthermore, analysis of this detailed work for which the commissioners are now personally responsible in the first instance shows that many of the cases are of very trifling consequence from a national point of view, although they may be and often are difficult to decide. For example, there are many formal cases which involve only an interpretation of freight tariffs, or whether shipments were misrouted, or whether reparation should be awarded on a few isolated shipments or even on the movement of a single car. The procedure before the commission is so simple and involves so little expense that traffic managers of industries bring even very minor controversies with the carriers to it for settlement.

Under these circumstances the commission has come to the conclusion that principles of efficient organization and administration require a subdivision and assignment of duties beyond what is now possible under the law. It believes that the decision of many minor matters which now demand the personal attention of at least three commissioners could be assigned, without any public disadvantage whatsoever, in the first instance to individual commissioners or even to boards made up of employees, subject in all cases to the right of appeal to a division of the commission and finally to the commission itself.

Such boards of employees could specialize upon particular subjects, like the interpretation of tariffs, and could allow both shippers and carriers better opportunities for oral presentation of their views than it is now possible for divisions of the commission to accord. If rights of appeal to the commission were preserved in all such cases, it is believed that the proposed method of handling them would not only relieve the commissioners of a great burden of detail in minor matters but would also prove more satisfactory to litigants. It is also believed that as a result of relief from this burden of detail the commissioners would be able to do more effective and constructive work upon questions of major importance.

I want to explain that the Interstate Commerce Commission comes annually before one of the appropriation subcommittees of which I am a member, the subcommittee on independent offices. They brought out these facts when presenting their testimony before us this year and suggested the need of legislation which would permit them to delegate these less important cases in the way I have indicated. I have therefore introduced H. R. 16883, which I ask unanimous consent to have incorporated as a part of my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The bill referred to follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
February 5, 1929.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and ordered to be printed:

A bill (H. R. 16883) proposing to amend section 17 of the interstate commerce act

Be it enacted, etc., That section 17 of an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, as amended by an act approved March 2, 1889, as further amended by an act approved August 9, 1917, and as further amended by an act approved February 28, 1920, the same being section 17 of title 49 of the Code of Laws of the United States of America, be, and the same hereby is, amended by adding thereto at the end thereof a new subdivision, to be known as subdivision (6), as follows:

"(6) The commission is hereby authorized to direct by order that any particular matter or class of matters of its work, business, or functions arising under this or any other act or joint resolution, or referred to it by Congress or either branch thereof, be assigned to an individual commissioner or to a board consisting of an employee or employees of the commission, to be designated by such order, for action thereon. The commission may at any time amend, modify, supplement, or rescind any such order, and all such orders shall take effect forthwith and shall remain in effect until otherwise ordered by the commission. In conformity with and subject to the order or orders of the commission in the premises, each board so constituted or individual commissioner, to which or to whom any matter or class of matter shall have so been assigned for action, shall have power to hear and determine, order, certify, report, or otherwise act as to such matter or class of matters, and in respect thereof shall have all the jurisdiction and powers conferred by law upon the commission and be subject to the same duties and obligations. Any such board shall act by a majority thereof. In case of the absence, or inability for any other reason to act, of any such individual commissioner or of an employee or employees designated to serve upon any such board, the chairman of the commission may designate another commissioner or other employee or employees, as the case may be, to serve temporarily upon such assignment until the commission shall otherwise order. Any order, decision, or report made, or other action taken by any such individual commissioner or by any such board in respect of any matters so assigned or referred, shall have the same force and effect and may be made, evidenced, and enforced in the same manner as if made or taken by the commission, and shall be subject to rehearing by a division of the commission or, in its discretion, by the commission in the manner provided in section 16a hereof. The commission may, as provided in subdivision (1) of this section, make and amend rules for the conduct of proceedings before such individual commissioner or board and for the rehearing of such action before a division of the commission or the commission. Any action by a division as to a rehearing shall be itself subject to rehearing by the commission as provided in section 16a hereof and in subdivision (4) of this section. The secretary and seal of the commission shall be the secretary and seal of each such individual commissioner or board."

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. This bill makes possible that delegation of power to which I have referred. Every part of the United States undoubtedly has important cases which are pressing, on which hearings have been held but on which no decision has finally been reached, after a lapse of many months and possibly after the lapse of years. So we are all anxious—I know this is true in the Pacific Northwest—to have some of the major problems which have been brought before the commission determined as soon as possible; and while this will be a change in the basic law it will make for efficiency and will speed up the work of the commission. In the Northwest we are awaiting the commission's decision on fruit and grain rates, Pacific coast differentials, and as to a railroad extension.

The commission is very anxious to have this legislation. The bill has been referred to the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the House, and that committee is asking an immediate report on it. We hope to secure this legislation during this session, and to that end invite the fullest cooperation of all Members of Congress.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON].

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and also permission to have read in my time a letter which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. CRAMTON. The letter I am sending to the Clerk's desk for reading is one which I am sure will be followed with a great deal of interest by all on both sides of the aisle. It is a letter from Bishop Cannon to the recent anti-Smith Democratic conference in Virginia. It discusses forcefully and with a great deal of insight into existing conditions in the Democratic Party the present situation confronting that party. I am sure it will be a letter of much interest on both sides of the aisle as well as to the country.

The Clerk read as follows:

FEBRUARY 6, 1929.

To the members of the Conference of Anti-Smith Democrats, assembled in the city of Lynchburg, February 5, 1929.

MY DEAR FELLOW WORKERS: In view of the fact that I will not be present at your conference, I have been requested by some who will attend to send a statement expressive of my views concerning the present political situation. In complying with this request I desire to emphasize as strongly as possible that it is not my purpose or desire to impose my views upon anyone else. Circumstances and duty seemed to join in a demand that during the recent campaign I should give primary direction to the anti-Smith movement, which was later carried to such a successful culmination by the aid of many able, patriotic men and women throughout Virginia and the entire South. All of my activities in that campaign were carried on under the authority of the Asheville conference, and upon the platform adopted by that body. In this statement I speak only for myself as one of the hundreds of thousands of southern anti-Smith Democrats.

Immediately following the election, as chairman of the headquarters committee of the anti-Smith Democrats, I issued to the press a statement from which I quote:

"Positive, explicit warning was given more than a year ago that the southern people would not commit both political and moral suicide by supporting the wet Tammany candidate. But Tammany in absolute control of the Houston convention ignored all protests and danger signals and nominated its wet candidate. Faced by such a situation men and women of the South, who placed principle above party, deliberately organized to preserve southern Democracy by the overwhelming defeat of the wet Tammany candidate. It is a political tragedy that so few southern Democratic political leaders recognized the nature and extent of the revolution among the southern people and believed to the last that party regulatity would be a more potent force than moral conviction. However, sincere they may have been, by their lack of understanding and by their unjustifiable denunciation of anti-Smith Democrats, many of these Democratic leaders have thoroughly discredited themselves for future leadership.

"Governor Smith and Mr. Raskob, by the ever-increasing emphasis of their attacks upon prohibition, and by their denunciation of those opposing Governor Smith as 'intolerant bigots, hypocritically using prohibition and Tammany as a cloak for their bigotry,' fanned the flames of the revolution and aided in Smith's overwhelming defeat and in the retirement in the near future of some of our Democratic leaders who have so bitterly denounced anti-Smith Democrats as 'traitors' and 'intolerant bigots.' As this wet Tammany leadership has brought upon the Democratic Party the well-deserved and the greatest defeat in American political history, it is in order for Mr. Raskob to resign at once that the Democratic Party may be reorganized free from the taint and pollution of wet or Tammany control."

Nothing has occurred to change in any way the position taken in the above statement. On the contrary, on January 5 Hon. JOHN C. BOX, of Texas, the new Democratic whip in the House of Representatives, addressed a letter to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, which insisted that the Democratic Party be relieved of the incubus of the Smith-Raskob leadership as the only alternative to its complete breakdown. Mr. Box said:

"The situation culminating in the nomination of Governor Smith and Secretary Hoover, and the election of the latter, was a calamitous political miscarriage. If the situation and forces which nominated Governor Smith and controlled the campaign continue to dominate the party, Texas and the entire South will cease to be Democratic. The East will not be controlled. The West will be permanently estranged, and the party will break up, some of its voters going to the Republican Party, others remaining with the organization, and others becoming independent."

This letter was not written by an anti-Smith Democrat, but nevertheless is absolutely accurate and genuinely prophetic.

But this frank, accurate statement by Congressman Box called forth a roar of rage from Tammany Congressmen, and an amazing letter from Governor Roosevelt, which ignored utterly the determining moral factors in the campaign, and most absurdly declared that Governor Smith has been cheated out of the Presidency by ignorance, bigotry, and religious fanaticism.

Later on ex-Governor Smith, speaking over the radio, made a statement calling upon members of the Democratic Party to contribute to pay off the unprecedented debt of $1,500,000, and with characteristic effrontery proposed that the debt be paid by the purchase of copies of his campaign speeches at $2 per volume (which would require the purchase of at least a million copies), which speeches, including his attacks upon prohibition, and his efforts to make capital by posing as a martyr on account of his religion, and his repudiation of the policy of properly restricted immigration, if distributed by the approval of the Democratic National Committee, would be an official effort by the highest authority of the Democratic Party to reassert—indeed, to emphasize—those policies which the people had so overwhelmingly repudiated at the polls on November 6.

Within the past week there has been another very striking illustration of the utter lack of agreement between our southern people and the wet Tammany leadership. An amendment to the general deficiency bill was proposed by Senator HARRIS, of Georgia, appropriating $24,000,000 to be placed at the disposal of the President of the United States to be used as he might think best to secure more effective prohibition-law enforcement, the Secretary of the Treasury having three times officially declared that the Coast Guard, border patrol, customs officials, and Department of Justice needed strengthening, but having utterly failed as the responsible head of the prohibition department to ask for sufficient appropriation to carry out an adequate, efficient program. Every southern Democratic Senator and practically every southern Democratic Congressman voted for this proposal to carry out the wishes of the southern people concerning prohibition-law enforcement as clearly expressed in the last election. But the Tammany Congressman, representative of those elements in New York City which have consistently supported ex-Governor Smith and made possible his political career, bitterly denounced the proposed appropriation and voted practically solidly against it.

Other facts might be presented, but these are sufficient to show the wide cleavage which exists between the different wings of the Democratic Party. In view of these facts, it has seemed to me that there are three courses open to the anti-Smith Democrats at the present time:

First. They can absolutely sever their ties with the Democratic Party and declare themselves to be members and supporters of the Republican Party for the future. Personally, and speaking for myself alone, I do not think the time has come for me to take such action. I have been a lifelong Democrat, and I am not the less a Democrat, as I have always understood the meaning of that word, because of certain issues emphasized in the recent political campaign. These issues, strictly speaking, could not be branded as either Democratic or Republican. They were more specifically personal and moral than in any previous campaign in the history of our country, and before I permanently depart from the Democratic Party, or join the Republican Party, I must clearly understand what is to be the attitude of the official authoritative leadership of both parties on those issues which affect the moral welfare of the Nation. For the present at least, I have personally dismissed the idea that it is necessary for me, as an anti-Smith Democrat, to join the Republican Party.

Second. It is proposed that, having accomplished their purpose to defeat ex-Governor Smith, the anti-Smith Democrats should now be satisfied, should be content to follow the Democratic State party leadership as in the past, and should enter the August primary of the Democratic Party, without any conditions or stipulations. Again, personally, speaking for myself alone, I can not see my way clear to follow this course, unless or until there should be some very clear, explicit, positive, satisfactory statements from the present Democratic Party leaders concerning their attitude toward the issues raised in the most recent campaign and toward the action taken by the anti-Smith Democrats. Will these leaders frankly and publicly agree that, holding the views they did, the anti-Smith Democrats were conscientious and were justified in their active opposition to the nomination and election of Governor Smith, and will they withdraw their denunciations of the anti-Smith Democrats as "traitors" and "intolerant bigots"? Furthermore, will they express their agreement with the attitude of Congressman Box "that if the Smith-Raskob leadership continues to dominate the party, the entire South will cease to be Democratic"?

The State leadership of the Democratic Party in Virginia during the campaign appeared to be strangely lacking in ability to understand and to appreciate the moral issues involved in the election which determined the attitude and votes of the anti-Smith Democrats. Can those leaders who so thoroughly misunderstood the situation and so fiercely and unjustifiably denounced men for following their moral convictions, be accepted again as leaders, with confidence, and without loss of self-respect, unless they frankly and publicly admit their mistakes? And of vital importance is the question: Will those State leaders openly and actively call for the retirement of the Smith-Raskob leadership of the National Democratic Party?

Whether, therefore, I, as an individual voter of the State of Virginia, will enter the August primary to select candidates for State offices is a matter to be determined later on. I certainly can not agree to bind myself to do so under existing conditions.

Third. The other course open to anti-Smith Democrats is to remain for the time at least as independent Democrats, openly declaring that they are not Republicans but that they can not accept the present State or National party leadership with all that would be implied in such acceptance under present conditions. Again, speaking only for myself, this third position is the position which I hold to-day. I will not accept the Smith-Raskob leadership, nor will I accept any State leadership which upholds and supports that national Smith-Raskob leadership or which denies equal party loyalty to the anti-Smith Democrats. A clear majority of the people of Virginia repudiated Governor Smith and supported Mr. Hoover. Probably the Hoover vote in Virginia was nearly equally divided between Republicans and anti-Smith Democrats. The Smith vote in Virginia included practically all of the wet element in the State, and it is probably true that out of 143,000 votes cast for Smith a clear majority of that number were wet in sympathy. As a dry anti-Smith Democrat I will not agree to put myself in such a position that I will be obliged to vote for anybody for State offices, especially governor, lieutenant governor, and attorney general, whose record has not been for years personally and politically dry or who has denounced and reviled anti-Smith Democrats, or who does not agree with anti-Smith Democrats did not surrender their genuine Democratic principles in their efforts to defeat the wet Tammany candidate, ex-Governor Smith.

Personally I am not very optimistic as to the immediate future of the Democratic Party in national elections. In the last election it was clearly shown that there were very incongruous elements in the one party and that the differences between some of the Democratic groups were as great as the differences between some of the Democratic groups and the Republicans; indeed, the differences were greater. It was not necessary, as has been sneeringly stated, for southern Democratic Senators and Congressmen to support the Harris amendment mentioned above in order to convince their constituents that they favor prohibition. The anti-Smith Democrats have not in the main questioned the sincerity of the support of prohibition by the southern Members of Congress.

The burning issue in the South is not concerning the "dryness" of their Representatives in Congress but it is concerning whether those Representatives will continue to support the Smith-Raskob leadership, which stands upon and advocates a platform which is directly contrary to the views of the great majority of the southern people. It must be evident to every thoughtful person that some radical adjustments are necessary before there can be any hope of the triumph of the Democratic Party in national elections. And apparently it has been, and possibly will continue to be, exceedingly difficult to prevent the blight of the discredited national leadership from affecting injuriously the Democratic organization in various States. Personally, I can not at this time venture any prediction as to what will be the final outcomes.

It is possibly unnecessary for me to say to those members of your conference, who know my public record for more than 30 years, that I have never taken any interest in the political situation in State or Nation for the sake of securing office either for myself or for my personal friends, but I have been called upon for many years to speak and to act for certain groups of our citizens who believe that great moral principles and social reform are matters of most vital importance and should always take precedence over struggles to secure the control of public offices. I have neither the time nor the inclination to take any prominent part in political life, and I trust it will not be necessary for me to take any part in the approaching State campaign other than to cast my ballot at the appointed time. But in event that conditions should be such as once again to involve distinctly moral issues, I should use whatever strength and influence I might have to secure the triumph of what I should consider to be right.

In conclusion may I at this time publicly express my very high appreciation of the members of your conference and of other men and women who, under galling fire from many quarters, stood by their convictions and taught the world that Virginia would not commit moral suicide for the sake of purely partisan political victory.

Hoping that the conference will take such action as will be for the best interest of the State of Virginia and the Nation at large, I am,

Yours sincerely,

JAMES CANNON, Jr.

RICHMOND, VA., February 2, 1929.

Mr. CRAMTON. I yield back the balance of my time, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. AYRES. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT].

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I just want to make this comment at the moment upon certain phases of the letter which has been read from the desk, particularly in their relation to the very recent attitude of the gentleman who presented the letter for reading.

Bishop Cannon, apparently, from that letter, is disturbed about many things, and the matter of most recent disturbance is the fact that there was a failure to support the $24,000,000 appropriation for prohibition enforcement, and the bishop pointed out that most of the men from the South had supported that, but the Representatives from Tammany failed to support it. I am sure it will take the bishop by surprise when he learns that the letter was presented for insertion in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] who, on that day at least, wrenched the flag from Tammany and himself assumed the leadership of the wet cause on the floor of the House. [Applause.]

I am not at all surprised that the bishop in the letter states, if I caught the reading correctly, that he remains in doubt as to what party he will affiliate with in the future until he has a more specific declaration not only from what he terms the leadership of Virginia, I believe it is, or of the South, whichever it may be, but also certain leadership of the Republican Party itself. [Applause.]

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, the gentlemen to whom I had agreed to yield time are not here. So I am going to ask that the Clerk begin reading the bill and pending that I will say I am going to move to rise when we reach the bottom of the first page, so that Members who had expected to be here during the full reading of the bill will not be disappointed.

The Clerk read down to and including line 6, on page 1.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LUCE, chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that the committee having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 16714), the Navy Department appropriation bill, had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted to:

Mr. CULLEN, for three days, on account of death in his family.

Mr. O'CONNOR, of New York, indefinitely, on account of the death of his father.

INCREASE OF THE NAVY

Mr. MORTON D. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD brief remarks delivered by myself January 9 last before a conference on the cruiser bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MORTON D. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to present to you my views on the naval bill now pending in the Senate. Quickly stated, I think it a mistake to pass this naval authorization bill at this time. Perhaps its passage at a coming session would be a mistake. That is another question. But just at this time, when the Senate is expecting to approve a treaty renouncing war, the passage of a bill authorizing a $270,000,000 increase in our Navy is, to my mind, more than a doubtful thing. It is a serious blunder.

Some one has said that the Briand-Kellogg treaty is a magnificent gesture—implying futility. I confess that in a civilized world, so called, which is yet a savage and cynical world, I share some of the doubts of those who call this proposed treaty a magnificent gesture. I am not overconfident of its effectiveness. I fear that when interest dictates it will be forgotten. But just the same, while I fear, I also hope. And in that issue of fear against hope I do not propose to let fear conquer. It may be a magnificent gesture. But I do not forget that gestures have their value in the behavior of nations and of men—the value of the gesture depending upon its apparent sincerity. If we act on this treaty in a confident way, carrying conviction to the rest of the world, we may hope to build a moral barricade upon which the peoples of the world may brace themselves against future wars. If we act upon the treaty in a doubtful, hesitating, and suspicious way, we may indeed destroy all confidence in it from the beginning. To pass, immediately after the ratification of the treaty, a naval authorization bill authorizing an expenditure of $270,000,000 within three years will, I fear, nullify the wholesome effect of the general pact for the renunciation of war.

The question whether this authorization bill should be passed at the next session or at a later time, and whether it should have a 3-year time limit or no time limit, and whether it should provide for the building of the ships in Government yards—these are other questions. They involve an appraisal of the international situation and its tendencies and our relations to others. Personally I do not believe we can throw away our Navy.

We shall for a long time need a Navy suitable to the changing situation of the world. And the question of what is adequacy is not easy to determine. But my suspicion, growing now to a conviction, is that the present naval authorization proposal grows not out of our naval needs, not out of our inadequacy in naval preparedness, not out of anything threatening in the international situation, either now or in prospect, but out of the needs of the shipbuilding industry. Let me remind you that during the Great War we with our allies were engaged in a difficult contest between the submarines of the Central Powers engaged in destroying allied ships and the ability of the allied powers to build new ships as fast as the old ships were sunk. As a consequence our shipbuilders had an enormous inflation of business. With the coming of peace this shipbuilding business ended. There was an almost complete collapse. It is this consequent hunger for business among those left in the shipbuilding industry that makes the urge for this naval bill. Let me produce the evidence to support this.

When the measure now pending in the Senate was before the House, Congressman DALLINGER, of Massachusetts, introduced into the bill a provision which is now known as the Dallinger amendment. The Dallinger amendment provided that the Government shipyards should build the first and every other one of the ships to be contracted for. This amendment met bitter opposition in the House but ultimately prevailed. In the Senate a serious effort is to be made to defeat the purpose of this amendment by adding a proviso excepting from the amendment such material or parts thereof as the Secretary of the Navy may find procurable by contract or purchase at any appreciable saving in cost to the Government. In other words, under a discretion given to the Secretary of the Navy and under the plea of economy, the entire building of the ships is to be given to private yards.

Under date of Monday, December 17, I find a statement in the New York Times from the National Council of American Shipbuilders, said to comprise 90 per cent of the companies engaged in building and repairing vessels and in manufacturing marine equipment, confirming what I say. The plea is to give the contracts to private enterprise because it is alleged it will cost the Government less and because it will save the American shipbuilding business.

I have in my possession a resolution passed by the United States Shipping Board, an agency of the Government, in which after a long preamble reciting the decline of American shipping and shipbuilding industry it resolves that it is the earnest belief of said board that the United States Senate will strike out the Dallinger amendment and leave with the Secretary of the Navy the power which he now possesses to use his discretion in deciding whether cruisers shall be built in navy yards or privately owned yards.

Economy hoped for if not expected—the building up of an American merchant marine through the profits to private shipyards out of Government contracts for warships—and the natural American prejudice against the Government engaging in competition with private industry in business—these all present plausible appeals to American sentiment. Why, then, should not the Dallinger amendment go out of the bill? The answer is very simple, because to permit private profit to big business out of the institution of war is to put a premium on war. As long as the shipbuilding industry can get private profit out of contracts running into hundreds of millions of dollars, it can afford an active and aggressive campaign for more ships. It can ring the alarm bell about the inadequacy of our national defense. It can afford to promote canned editorials circulated over the country for the country press.

In section 5 of article 8 of the covenant of the League of Nations, I find the following:

> The members of the league agree that the manufacture by private enterprise of munitions and implements of war is open to grave objections. The council shall advise how the evil effects attendant upon such manufacture can be prevented, due regard being had to the necessities of those members of the league which are not able to manufacture the munitions and implements of war necessary for their safety.

Back of that solemn declaration of the league covenant there lies a whole world of experience on the part of the great military nations of the world.

In spite of which experience our busy generals and admirals go about making the appeal to private gain in behalf of cruiser building. From a later edition of the same paper, the New York Times, I cut an article describing General Bullard's appeal to the executive committee of the Hardware, Metals, and Allied Trades in behalf of the cruiser bill. It would contribute, he tells us, $135,000,000 to the prosperity of the land—just as though money spent in cruiser building were a productive expenditure. Whatever happens to the cruiser bill, the Dallinger amendment should remain in, even though the immediate cost is more. If American shipping is failing, if it needs help in order that American trade may have its own ships for the carrying of American goods to foreign customers, why not meet the issue frankly and openly by a subsidy. This is an offensive thing to many people.

It does not please me, but it would enable us to know the subsidy we are paying instead of concealing it in profits to industry. And it would be free from the very undesirable feature of profit to war profiteers in time of peace.

In the hearings before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs upon the Burton resolution, the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy presented objections. The Burton resolution proposed that in case of war between two or more foreign powers it should be unlawful for an American national to sell certain contraband articles specifically enumerated to either belligerent without the consent of Congress. Its purpose was obvious—to prevent the participation of America in foreign wars and to discourage foreign wars by refusal to furnish the means. What, then, was the objection of our Secretaries of War and of the Navy? The objection was that as America was dependent upon private industry in case of war, American private industry should be permitted to profit by foreign wars in order to be properly equipped for America in case we ever were involved. Both Secretaries were driven up to the dilemma that we must foment war abroad in order to be properly equipped at home. Neither Secretary could answer the dilemma.

In conclusion, I regard the passage of the naval bill, or of any naval bill, at this time as very unfortunate; but, if such a bill should pass, it should include the Dallinger amendment.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Craven, its principal clerk, announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 5514. An act for the relief of E. Gellerman, doing business under the name of the Lutz-Berg Motor Co. at Denver, Colo.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1347) entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to provide relief in cases of contracts connected with the prosecution of the war, and for other purposes,' approved March 2, 1919, as amended."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 3581) entitled "An act authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to settle claims and suits against the District of Columbia."

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 11526. An act to authorize the construction of certain naval vessels, and for other purposes;

H. R. 15657. An act to provide for the improvement and preservation of the land and buildings of the Abraham Lincoln National Park or Reservation;

H. R. 16208. An act authorizing the Cedar Point Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the southeast arm of Sandusky Bay at or near Sandusky, Ohio;

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 1347. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide relief in cases of contracts connected with the prosecution of the war, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1919, as amended;

S. 2792. An act reinvesting title to certain lands in the Yankton Sioux Tribe of Indians;

S. 4338. An act to authorize the President to award, in the name of Congress, gold medals of appropriate design to John H. Towers, Albert C. Read, Elmer F. Stone, Walter Hinton, H. C. Rodd, J. L. Breese, and Eugene Rhodes;

S. 5146. An act to reserve certain lands on the public domain in Santa Fe County, N. Mex., for the use and benefit of the Indians of the San Ildefonso Pueblo;

S. 5147. An act to reserve 920 acres on the public domain for the use and benefit of the Kanosh Band of Indians residing in the vicinity of Kanosh, Utah; and

S. 5180. An act to authorize the payment of interest on certain funds held in trust by the United States for Indian tribes.

BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President for his approval bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 14151. An act to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station at or near the mouth of the Quillayute River, in the State of Washington;

H. R. 14800. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers, sailors, and marines of said war; and

H. R. 16035. An act to extend the time for completing the construction of the bridge across Port Washington Narrows, within the city of Bremerton, State of Washington.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, it is expected that the bill now under consideration, the Navy Department appropriation bill, will continue as the order of business to-morrow until finished.

Mr. EDWARDS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TILSON. Yes.

Mr. EDWARDS. If we finish the Navy bill to-morrow, will the Private Calendar be taken up?

Mr. TILSON. No; it is expected that a special rule will come up, probably the rule for the consideration of the so-called Norbeck bird refuge bill.

Mr. AYRES. I understand we are to go ahead with this bill to-morrow?

Mr. TILSON. Yes; it is expected that the Navy Department appropriation bill will be the order of business until finished.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 21 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, February 8, 1929, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Mr. TILSON submitted the following tentative list of committee hearings scheduled for Friday, February 8, 1929, as reported to the floor leader by clerks of the several committees:

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

(10 a. m. and 2 p. m.)

Tariff hearings as follows:

SCHEDULES

Wool and manufacturers of, February 8.
Silk and silk goods, February 11, 12.
Papers and books, February 13, 14.
Sundries, February 15, 18, 19.
Free list, February 20, 21, 22.
Administrative and miscellaneous, February 25.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS

(10 a. m.)

Second deficiency appropriation bill.

COMMITTEE ON EXPENDITURES IN EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS

(10.30 a. m.)

To authorize the President to consolidate and coordinate governmental activities affecting war veterans (H. R. 16722).

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause2 of Rule XXIV, Executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

809. A letter from the Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting report with his recommendations thereon of certain claims transmitted by the Secretary of War, covering damages for personal injury, death, or property loss, as required by law (H. Doc. No. 562); to the Committee on Claims and ordered to be printed.

810. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting supplemental estimate of appropriation for the Treasury Department for the fiscal year 1929, $15,000; also a draft of proposed legislation affecting the use of an existing appropriation (H. Doc. No. 563); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

811. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting supplemental estimate of appropriation for the office of Public Buildings and Public Parks of the National Capital for the fiscal years 1929 and 1930, $104,840 (H. Doc. No. 564); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. FREE: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 16926. A bill granting preference within the quota to certain aliens trained and skilled in a particular art, craft, technique, business, or science; without amendment (Rept. No. 2400). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BOX: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 16927. A bill to clarify the law relating to the temporary admission of aliens to the United States; without amendment (Rept. No. 2401). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. LEAVITT: Committee on Indian Affairs. S. 4517. An act appropriating tribal funds of Indians residing on the Klamath Reservation, Oreg., to pay expenses of the general council and business committee, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2402). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. S. 5094. An act making it a felony with penalty for certain aliens to enter the United States of America under certain conditions in violation of law; with amendment (Rept. No. 2418). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. TEMPLE: Pursuant to Public Resolution No. 70, Sixty-ninth Congress. H. R. 16953. A bill to provide for the purchase of the use of the Harriman Geographic Code System; without amendment (Rept. No. 2419). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HILL of Washington: Committee on the Public Lands. H. R. 5729. A bill to establish the Ouachita National Park in the State of Arkansas; with amendment (Rept. No. 2421). Referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. IRWIN: Committee on Claims. H. R. 12492. A bill for the relief of Andrew T. Bailey; with amendment (Rept. No. 2399). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GARRETT: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 4611. A bill to remove the charge of desertion and grant an honorable discharge to Marion M. Clark; with amendment (Rept. No. 2403). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GARRETT: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 4624. A bill to correct the military record of Thomas Finley; with amendment (Rept. No. 2404). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. REECE: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 16560. A bill to correct the military record of Francis J. Moore; with amendment (Rept. No. 2405). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. DREWRY: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16889. A bill for the relief of Lieut. Francis D. Humphrey, Supply Corps, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 2406). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BURDICK: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16890. A bill for the relief of Capt. P. J. Willett, Supply Corps, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 2407). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BURDICK: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16894. A bill for the relief of Lieut. Edward F. Ney, Supply Corps, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 2408). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WOLVERTON: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R 16893. A bill for the relief of Lieut. Thomas C. Edrington, Supply Corps, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 2409). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LEECH: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16895. A bill for the relief of Lieut. Henry Guilmette, Supply Corps, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 2410). Referred to the Committe of the Whole House.

Mr. LEECH: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16897. A bill for the relief of Lieut. Edward Mixon, Supply Corps, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 2411). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. DREWRY: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16898. A bill for the relief of Lieut. Robert O'Hagan, Supply Corps, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 2412). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BURDICK: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16900. A bill for the relief of Capt. William L. F. Simonpietri, Supply Corps, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 2413). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BURDICK: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16902. A bill for the relief of Lieut. John M. Holmes, Supply Corps, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 2414). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BURDICK: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16903. A bill for the relief of Lieut. Commander Thomas Cochran, Supply Corps, United States Navy; without amendment (Rept. No. 2415). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BURDICK: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16896. A bill for the relief of Capt. Walter B. Izard, Supply Corps, United States Navy, retired; without amendment (Rept. No. 2416). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ANDREW: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16892. A bill for the relief of Daniel A. Newman, formerly a lieutenant in the Supply Corps of the Naval Reserve Force; without amendment (Rept. No. 2417). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. HOFFMAN: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 13127. A bill for the relief of Lowell G. Fuller; without amendment (Rept. No. 2420). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 16480) granting an increase of pension to Sarah A. Niles; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 16804) granting a pension to Mary L. Sumney; Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. TEMPLE: A bill (H. R. 16953) to provide for the purchase of the Harriman geographic code system; committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

By Mr. DEAL: A bill (H. R. 16954) granting the consent of Congress to the Camp Manufacturing Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Chowan River, in Gates and Hertford Counties, N. C.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16955) granting the consent of Congress to the Camp Manufacturing Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Meherrin River in Hertford County, N. C.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HUGHES: A bill (H. R. 16956) to amend the longshoremen's and harbor workers' compensation act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. ZIHLMAN: A bill (H. R. 16957) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide compensation for disability or death resulting from injury to employees in certain employments in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved May 17, 1928; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BACHMANN: A bill (H. R. 16958) to provide an appropriation for the payment of claims of persons who suffered damages from deaths, personal injuries, or property loss due to an airplane accident at Langin Field, Moundsville, W. Va., July 10, 1921; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 16959) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Tiptonville, Tenn.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. TATGENHORST: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 408) providing for the issuance of a special postage stamp in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of building and loan associations in the United States; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

By Mr. WELSH of Pennsylvania: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 409) to create a joint committee to consider and report on the adequacy of the compensation of the officers and employees of Congress; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. LaGUARDIA: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 410) authorizing the President by general proclamation to grant pardon and amnesty in certain war-time cases; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MOORE of New Jersey: Resolution (H. Res. 309) to pay Mary McLane, dependent sister of John McLane, six months' salary and funeral expenses; to the Committee on Accounts.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BACHARACH: A bill (H. R. 16960) granting an increase of pension to Jennie M. Jeners; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CANNON: A bill (H. R. 16961) granting a pension to Eliza Trower; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CROWTHER: A bill (H. R. 16962) granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Wilday; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. EATON: A bill (H. R. 16963) granting an increase of pension to Mary Jane Stahl; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH: A bill (H. R. 16964) for the relief of Robert R. Calder; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HARE: A bill (H. R. 16965) for the relief of Florence M. Humphries; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HOOPER: A bill (H. R. 16966) granting a pension to Jennie M. Hill; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MANLOVE: A bill (H. R. 16967) granting a pension to Mary Ann Senseney; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MURPHY: A bill (H. R. 16968) granting an increase of pension to Lavina Jackson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16969) granting an increase of pension to Linea E. McCamon; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NEWTON: A bill (H. R. 16970) granting a pension to Otto S. Langum; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ROWBOTTOM: A bill (H. R. 16971) granting a pension to Martha Bennett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16972) granting an increase of pension to Sarah C. Welch; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH: A bill (H. R. 16973) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Stewart; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16974) for the relief of J. C. Thompson; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. STALKER: A bill (H. R. 16975) granting a pension to Jesse Lester Chapman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16976) granting an increase of pension to Jennie Rust; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16977) granting an increase of pension to Lucy Middleton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16978) granting an increase of pension to Rachel McIntosh; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STRONG of Kansas: A bill (H. R. 16979) granting an increase of pension to Charles M. Siever, jr.; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. VESTAL: A bill (H. R. 16980) granting an increase of pension to Matilda J. Gates; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

8692. By Mr. BACHARACH: Petition of 40 citizens of the town of Pemberton, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8693. Also, petition of 49 citizens of Atlantic City, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8694. Also, petition of 64 citizens of Ocean City, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8695. Also, petition of 37 citizens of Mays Landing and vicinity, State of New Jersey, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8696. Also, petition of 50 citizens of Bridgeton, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8697. Also, petition of 20 citizens of Bridgeport, Burlington, and vicinity, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) and similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8698. Also, petition of 67 citizens of Beverly, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8699. Also, petition of 78 citizens of Maple Shade, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8700. Also, petition of 16 citizens of Smithville, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8701. Also, petition of 22 citizens of Lumberton, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8702. Also, petition of 96 citizens of Pemberton, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8703. Also, petition of 80 citizens of Pointville and vicinity, of New Jersey, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8704. By Mr. BEERS: Petition of 405 citizens of the eighteenth congressional district of Pennsylvania, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8705. Also, petition of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society (sent by Bessie Loomis), of Lewistown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8706. Also, petition of 48 members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Vira, Lewistown, R. F. D., Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided for in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8707. Also, petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union (175 members), of Lewistown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8708. Also, petition of 160 members of the Grove Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, Lewistown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8709. Also, petition of 135 members of the Presbyterian Sunday school of East Kishacoquillas Presbyterian Church, located at Reedsville, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8710. Also, petition of 122 members of the Lake Park Sunday School, Lewistown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8711. Also, petition of 18 members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church, Lewistown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8712. Also, petition of 205 members of the First Baptist Sunday School, of Lewistown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8713. Also, petition of 200 members of the Spring Run Sunday School, located near McVeytown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8714. Also, petition of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 225 in number, Newton Hamilton, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8715. Also, petition of 20 members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Newton Hamilton, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8716. Also, petition of 105 members of the Milroy Presbyterian Church, Milroy, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8717. Also, petition of members of the Milroy Presbyterian Sunday School, 100 in number, Milroy, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided for in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8718. Also, petition of the Presbyterian Sunday School, 110 members, of Belleville, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8719. Also, petition of 88 members of the Sunday school of the Vira (Lewistown, R. F. D.) Methodist Church, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8720. Also, petition of the members of Ellen Chapple Sunday School, 127 in number, of Lewistown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or in similar measures; to the committee on the District of Columbia.

8721. Also, petition of the Presbyterian Sabbath School, 110 members, of Lewistown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8722. Also, petition of members of the church and Sunday school of Little Valley Presbyterian Church, numbering 126 in all, and located at Vira (Lewistown R. F. D.), urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar meaures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8723. Also, petition of 250 members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Waynesboro, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8724. Also, petition of the 513 members of the Grace Evangelical Sunday School, Lewistown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford Sunday rest bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8725. Also, petition of 187 members of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School, at McVeytown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8726. Also, petition of 32 members of the Mifflin County Ministerial Association, in session, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8727. Also, petition of 310 members of the St. Johns Lutheran Church, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8728. Also, petition of the members of the convention of the Mifflin County Sunday schools, representing 65 Sunday schools, with a membership of over 2,000, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8729. By Mr. BOYLAN: Petition of firemen, water tenders, and coal passers at Ellis Island, N. Y., asking for an increase in salary; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

8730. By Mr. CARLEY: Petition of Anton P. Nielsen, 753 Fifty-second Street, Brooklyn, representing firemen of Ellis Island, for increase of pay; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

8731. By Mr. CHALMERS: Petition of 116 citizens of the ninth congressional district of the State of Ohio, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8732. By Mr. CRAIL: Petition of 1,600 members of the Southern California Annual Conference of the Free Methodist Church, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as one day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8733. Also, petition of 575 members of the Federated Women's Aid Society of the Presbytery of Los Angeles, Calif., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in the enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8734. Also, petition of the Ministerial Association of Los Angeles and vicinity, representing 175,000 members, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as one day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8735. By Mr. CROWTHER: Petition of the pastor and 43 members of the Presbyterian Church of Minaville, N. Y., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8736. By Mr. CULLEN: Petition of the Buffalo Lumber Exchange, protesting against the proposal to place a duty on Canadian timber, lumber, lath, and shingles; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8737. Also, petition of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, urging that legislation should be immediately enacted for the relief of such congested conditions in the United States district courts; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

8738. By Mr. EATON: Petition of 38 citizens of Trenton, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8739. Also, petition of 33 citizens of White House and vicinity, N. J., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8740. Also, petition of members of Prospect Street Presbyterian Church, Trenton, N. J., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8741. By Mr. ESTEP: Petition of motor-vehicle employees of the Pittsburgh (Pa.) post office, urging action by House of Representatives on Senate bill 1727; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

8742. Also, petition of 72 citizens of Pittsburgh, Pa., urging the enactment of House bill 78; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8743. By Mr. EVANS of California: Petition of the Ministerial Association of Los Angeles and vicinity, representing 175,000 members, more than 100,000 of whom are voters, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8744. By Mr. GREEN: Petition of six citizens of Lake City, Fla., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8745. By Mr. HALE: Petition of 25 citizens of Laconia and Meredith, to enact into law the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the District of Columbia (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8746. By Mr. HOOPER: Petition of 32 members of the Portage and Schoolcraft Methodist Episcopal Churches, of Schoolcraft and Portage, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8747. Also, petition of 44 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Sunfield, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8748. Also, petition of 19 members of the Simpson Methodist Episcopal Church of Kalamazoo, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8749. Also, petition of 35 members of the Maple Street Methodist Episcopal Church, of Battle Creek, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8750. Also, petition of 16 members of the First Methodist Church of Grand Lodge, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8751. Also, petition of 68 members of the Amboy Baptist and United Brethren Churches, of Amboy, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8752. Also, petition of 15 members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Union City, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8753. By Mr. JACOBSTEIN: Petition of 13 citizens of West Webster, N. Y., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8754. Also, petition of the Sixth Ward Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Rochester, N. Y., representing 280, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8755. Also, petition of 11 citizens of Rochester, N. Y., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8756. By Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois: Petition of 42 residents of Milledgeville, Ill., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8757. By Mr. McCORMACK: Petition of C. M. Knowles, 569 Dudley Street, Roxbury, Mass., protesting vigorously against enactment of equal rights amendment and Newton child labor amendment; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

8758. Also, petition of A. C. Lawrence Leather Co., 210 South Street, Boston, Mass., recommending early and favorable consideration of House bill 9195, pertaining to the Cuban parcel post; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8759. Also, petition of New England Manufacturing Confectioners' Association, E. F. Gibbs, secretary, 40 Court Street, Boston, Mass., protesting against any increase of duty on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8760. Also, petition of Michael J. Perkins Post, American Legion, South Boston, Mass., Capt. John J. Lydon, commander, unanimously indorsing cruiser bill; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

8761. By Mr. McSWEENEY: Papers to accompany House bill 16805, granting a pension to Margaret Frizzell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

8762. By Mr. MAPES: Petition of 111 members of the Burton Heights Christian Reformed Church, of Grand Rapids, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8763. Also, petition of 46 members of the Fuller Avenue Christian Reformed Church, of Grand Rapids, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8764. Also, petition of 76 members of the Garfield Park Reformed Church, of Grand Rapids, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8765. Also, petition of 15 members of the Sixth Reformed Church of Holland, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8766. Also petition of 17 members of the Beaverdam Reformed Church, of Beaverdam, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8767. Also, petition of 62 members of the Knapp Street Reformed Church, of Grand Rapids, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8768. Also, petition of 40 members of the Third Reformed Church of Grand Rapids, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8769. Also, petition of 31 members of the Christian Reformed Church, of Noodeloos, Holland, Route No. 10, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8770. Also, petition of 13 members of the First Reformed Church, of Grant, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8771. Also, petition of 11 members of the North Blendon Reformed Church, of Hudsonville, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8772. Also, petition of 15 members of the First Reformed Church, of Allendale, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8773. Also, petition of 34 members of the Van Roolte Avenue Reformed Church, of Holland, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8774. Also, petition of 81 members of the Second Reformed Church at Jamestown, Mich., urging the enactment of the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8775. By Mr. O'CONNELL: Petition of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, Local Union No. 368, Washington, D. C., favoring the passage of Senate bill 4186, to regulate the use of spray-painting, compressed-air machines, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

8776. Also, petition of C. Bruno & Son (Inc.), New York City, opposing the passage of House bill 13452, to amend the copyright laws; to the Committee on Patents.

8777. Also, petition of Michael J. Ball, New York City, favoring the passage of the Norbeck game refuge bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

8778. Also, petition of the Buffalo Lumber Exchange, Buffalo, N. Y., protesting against the proposal to place a duty on Canadian timber, lumber, lath, and shingles; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8779. By Mr. SANDERS of New York: Petition of the Holley Baptist Church, of Holley, N. Y., 185 present and voting, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8780. Also, petition of 72 citizens of the thirty-ninth district of New York, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8781. Also, petition of 30 citizens of Brockport, N. Y., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8782. By Mr. SANDERS of Texas: Petition of the Sunday school of the First Presbyterian Church, Forney, Tex., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee of the District of Columbia.

8783. By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: Petition of the president and 65 members of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid, of Grand Junction, Colo., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8784. Also, petition of the president and 40 members of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church, Grand Junction, Colo., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8785. Also, petition of the president and 25 members of the Busy Women's Bible Class, Presbyterian Church, Grand Junction, Colo., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8786. Also, petition of the Fiske Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church, 30 members, Grand Junction, Colo., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven. as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8787. By Mr. SWING: Petition of 19 members of the men's Bible class of Calvary Presbyterian Church, Riverside, Calif., protesting against the Lankford Sunday bill (H. R. 78); to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8788. By Mr. THURSTON: Petition of the pastor, trustees, and 12 members of the Bedford Baptist Church, Bedford, Iowa, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8789. Also, petition of the chairman of official board and 300 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Bedford, Iowa, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Commiteee on the District of Columbia.

8790. Also, petition of 49 members of the Presbyterian Church, Bedford, Iowa, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8791. By Mr. WARREN: Petition of 73 citizens of the first district of North Carolina, earnestly petitioning Congress to enact into law the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the District of Columbia (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8792. Also petition of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterion Church, 125 members, to enact into law the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the District of Columbia (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8793. Also, petition of the Addisco Club, 24 members, of the first district of North Carolina, earnestly petitioning Congress to enact into law the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the District of Columbia (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8794. Also, petition of the students of the Washington Colored Public School, 790 present, and bearing the signature of the principal, P. S. Jones, located at Washington City, N. C., in behalf of the passage of the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8795. Also, petition of the students of Washington City School, 522 present, Washington City, N. C., in behalf of the passage of the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the District of Columbia.

8796. By Mr. WASON: Petition of Charles J. Corriveau and 35 other residents of Berlin, N. H., requesting no change be made in the present tariff on hides and leather used in the manufacture of shoes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8797. By Mr. WELCH of California: Petition of William H. Metson, representing Mono County, Calif., advocating increased tariff on sodium sulphate; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8798. Also, memorial of the California Gold and Silversmiths Association, advocating a reduction of the tariff rates on diamonds and other precious stones to 10 per cent and the admission of rough diamonds free of duty; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

8799. By Mr. WOODRUM: Petition of the members (2,000 present) of the Christian Church of Roanoke, Va., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8800. Also, petition of the Melrose Baptist Church, Roanoke, Va., with 1,000 members present, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8801. Also, petition of the Christian Church of Roanoke, Va., 225 members present, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8802. By Mr. WYANT: Petition of 146 members of the Pine Run Presbyterian Church, Pine Run, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

8803. Also, petition of 27 citizens of Monessen, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

SENATE

FRIDAY, February 8, 1929

(Legislative day of Thursday, February 7, 1929)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate will receive a message from the House of Representatives.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 1347. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide relief in cases of contracts connected with the prosecution of the war, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1919, as amended;

S. 2792. An act reinvesting title to certain lands in the Yankton Sioux Tribe of Indians;

S. 4338. An act to authorize the President to award, in the name of Congress, gold medals of appropriate design to John H. Towers, Albert C. Read, Elmer F. Stone, Walter Hinton, H. C. Rodd, J. L. Breese, and Eugene Rhodes;

S. 5146. An act to reserve certain lands on the public domain in Santa Fe County, N. Mex., for the use and benefit of the Indians of the San Ildefonso Pueblo;

S. 5147. An act to reserve 920 acres on the public domain for the use and benefit of the Kanosh Band of Indians residing in the vicinity of Kanosh, Utah;

S. 5180. An act to authorize the payment of interest on certain funds held in trust by the United States for Indian tribes;

H. R. 11526. An act to authorize the construction of certain naval vessels, and for other purposes;

H. R. 15657. An act to provide for the improvement and preservation of the land and buildings of the Abraham Lincoln National Park or Reservation; and

H. R. 16208. An act authorizing the Cedar Point Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the southeast arm of Sandusky Bay at or near Sandusky, Ohio.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Caraway	Goff	Keyes
Barkley	Copeland	Gould	King
Bayard	Couzens	Greene	McKellar
Bingham	Curtis	Hale	McMaster
Black	Deneen	Harris	McNary
Blaine	Dill	Harrison	Mayfield
Blease	Edge	Hastings	Neely
Borah	Fess	Hawes	Norbeck
Bratton	Frazier	Hayden	Norris
Brookhart	George	Heflin	Oddie
Bruce	Gerry	Johnson	Overman
Burton	Glass	Jones	Phipps
Capper	Glenn	Kendrick	Pine

Pittman	Sheppard	Swanson	Walsh, Mass.
Ransdell	Shipstead	Thomas, Idaho	Walsh, Mont.
Reed, Mo.	Shortridge	Thomas, Okla.	Warren
Reed, Pa.	Simmons	Trammell	Waterman
Robinson, Ark.	Smith	Tydings	Watson
Robinson, Ind.	Steck	Tyson	Wheeler
Sackett	Steiwer	Vandenberg
Schall	Stephens	Wagner

Mr. BLAINE. My colleague [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is unavoidably absent. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. FRAZIER. My colleague the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] is still detained at home by illness. I wish to let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. JONES. The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] is detained at home by illness. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. NORRIS. I desire to announce the absence of the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HOWELL] on account of illness.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I wish to announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] is unavoidably detained from the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCNARY in the chair). Eighty-two Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas presented a letter in the nature of a memorial from H. V. Beasley, of Texarkana, Ark.-Tex., remonstrating against the passage of House bill 13452, increasing the copyright royalty on talking-machine records, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Patents.

Mr. BURTON presented petitions of sundry citizens of Barnesville, Quaker City, Cleveland, Lakewood, Northfield, Chagrin Falls, Salem, and Garfield, all in the State of Ohio, praying that action be deferred on the enactment of the cruiser construction bill, which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. FESS presented the following resolutions adopted by the Ohio State Senate, which were referred to the Committee on Civil Service:

EIGHTY-EIGHTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY,
REGULAR SESSION, 1929.

A resolution (by Mr. Shafer) memorializing the United States Senate Civil Service Investigating Committee in behalf of Ohio's quota of positions in the Federal service at Washington

Whereas Ohio's quota of positions in the Federal service at Washington, as allowed by law, is 1,910, while on March 24, 1928, there were only 937 positions filled by residents of Ohio, while on June 20, 1919, there were 2,154 positions filled by Ohioans, or a reduction of 1,217 in less than nine years; and

Whereas the quota of Federal positions of residents of the District of Columbia, as allowed by law, is 145, while on March 24, 1928, there were 12,620 residents of the District of Columbia in the Federal service; and

Whereas, in addition to the District of Columbia, the legal quota of the State of Maryland is 480, while 2,318 residents of that State were on the Federal pay roll on March 24, 1928; and while the legal quota of the State of Virginia is 765, there were 2,477 positions in the Federal service held by residents of Virginia; and

Whereas on July 1, 1919, 26 States had more than their quotas, but on March 24, 1928, none of them had their quotas, due to reductions of force, while during the same period appointments from the District of Columbia have more than doubled; and

Whereas from July 16, 1927, to March 24, 1928, the District of Columbia received 1,966 appointments; and

Whereas, if the increase for the District of Columbia continues at that rate, in less than 10 years it will have all the appointments: Therefore

Resolved, That the Ohio Senate shall go on record as protesting against this unfair discrimination in the apportionment of civil-service appointees in favor of the District of Columbia, of Maryland, and of Virginia as against all the other States of the Union; and

Resolved further, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Senator PORTER H. DALE, chairman of the Senate Civil Service Investigating Committee, Washington, D. C., and to Hon. SIMEON D. FESS and to Hon. THEODORE E. BURTON, United States Senators from Ohio.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. BRATTON, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 12322) to quiet title and possession with respect to certain lands in Faulkner County, Ark. (Rept. No. 1665); and

A bill (H. R. 15328) to authorize the exchange of 18 sections of Government land for an equal value of State land located in Box Elder County, Utah, for experiments in sheep growing, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 1676).

Mr. ASHURST, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 15732) making an additional grant of lands for a miners' hospital for disabled miners in the State of Utah, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1678) thereon.

Mr. WATERMAN, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 10015) authorizing the promotion on the retired list of the Navy of Herschel Paul Cook, lieutenant, junior grade, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1666) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 13795) for recognition of meritorious service performed by Lieut. Commander Edward Ellsberg, Lieut. Henry Hartley, and Boatswain Richard E. Hawes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1667) thereon.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7244) for the relief of Mary Martin Harrison, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1673) thereon.

Mr. BLACK, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4258) to authorize credit in the disbursing accounts of certain officers of the Army of the United States and for the settlement of individual claims approved by the War Department, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1668) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 5221) for the relief of Cary Dawson, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1669) thereon.

Mr. STEPHENS, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4776) for the relief of Dr. Stanley R. Teachout, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1670) thereon.

Mr. BAYARD, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each with amendments and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 11698) conferring jurisdiction upon certain courts of the United States to hear and determine the claim by the owner of the steamship W. I. Radcliffe against the United States, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 1671); and

A bill (H. R. 11699) conferring jurisdiction upon the United States Court for the Southern District of New York to hear and determine the claim of the owner of the French auxiliary bark Quevilly against the United States, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 1672).

Mr. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 4815) for the relief of members of the crew of the transport Antilles (Rept. No. 1674); and

A bill (H. R. 9659) for the relief of F. R. Barthold (Rept. No. 1675).

Mr. ROBINSON of Indiana, from the Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 16500) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1677) thereon.

Mr. EDGE, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, to which was referred the bill (S. 4577) to amend section 29 of the Federal farm loan act, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1681) thereon.

Mr. GLASS, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, to which was referred the bill (S. 5684) to amend the War Finance Corporation act, approved April 5, 1918, as amended, to provide for the liquidation of the assets and the winding up of the affairs of the War Finance Corporation after April 4, 1929, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1680) thereon.

HARRIMAN GEOGRAPHIC CODE SYSTEM

Mr. BINGHAM, from the Select Joint Committee on the Harriman Geographic Code System, submitted the views of the minority, which were ordered to be printed as part 2 of Report No. 1655.

FEDERAL RESERVE BANK, DALLAS, TEX.

Mr. GLASS. From the Committee on Banking and Currency I submit a report on Senate Resolution 152, which I ask may lie on the table and be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Pursuant to Senate Resolution 152, Mr. MAYFIELD, patron, passed February 24, 1928, directing the Committee on Banking and Currency, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, to make a full and complete investigation of the administration of the affairs of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, Tex., responsive to charges that the affairs of the said bank had been maladministered and that the governor of the institution had failed to cooperate with the member banks of the eleventh Federal reserve district, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency appointed Messrs. GLASS, SACKETT, and STEIWER as a subcommittee to make such investigation.

At the outset the subcommittee found that there had been an apparently exhaustive investigation of the charges in question by the board of directors of the Federal reserve bank at Dallas in December, 1927, on which occasion public hearings were had and testimony given covering some thousand printed pages. A comprehensive digest of this testimony, covering 150 pages, was furnished the subcommittee, after which prompt notice was given of the readiness of the committee to hear additional testimony not included in the evidence taken by the board of directors of the Dallas bank. It seemed to the committee that it would be futile to have a repetition of the testimony given over a considerable period of time by scores of witnesses in the eleventh Federal reserve district, all of which testimony was available in printed form.

In response to the expressed readiness of the subcommittee to hear additional testimony there came an urgent request from the patron of Senate Resolution 152 to have the committee go to Dallas, Tex., for such additional hearings as the circumstances might seem to justify. The committee did not deem it either necessary or desirable to pursue this course, whereupon repeated requests were made that the chairman of the subcommittee be authorized to go to Dallas and take evidence in the case.

This latter course was decided upon; and, accordingly, the chairman of the subcommittee, as of date June 15, 1928, sent the following dispatch to the governor of the Federal reserve bank at Dallas:

Gov. LYNN P. TALLEY,
Federal Reserve Bank, Dallas, Tex.:

Pease notify member banks of Dallas Federal reserve district that, as chairman of a subcommittee of the Banking and Currency Committee of the United States Senate, I shall go to Dallas immediately upon adjournment of convention at Houston to receive any documentary evidence or to hear any oral testimony from persons who may desire to prefer charges of mismanagement or maladministration against the governor or board of directors of the Federal reserve bank at Dallas. Have it distinctly understood that there will be no repetition of the testimony given before the board of directors of the Dallas bank. Only new and additional testimony will be received, as the Senate subcommittee does not care to have a rehearsal of testimony already given. Please engage the services of a competent stenographer to take any testimony offered and acknowledge this communication.

CARTER GLASS.

To the foregoing telegram the following response was received on the same date:

DALLAS, TEX., June 15, 1928.

Hon. CARTER GLASS,
Care Senate, Washington, D. C.:

As requested in your telegram of this date I will immediately notify member banks this district of your visit to Dallas and its purposes. I would appreciate telegraphic authority from you to quote your telegram in the notice. If there are any further arrangements which we could make in your behalf please advise us.

LYNN P. TALLEY, Governor.

In furtherance of this arrangement the governor of the Federal reserve bank at Dallas mailed to all member banks in the eleventh reserve district a circular letter notifying them of the appointed hearing of charges affecting the administration of the Federal reserve bank and the chairman of the subcommittee proceeded to Texas with a view to receiving the testimony of such member banks or responsible persons as might desire to be heard concerning the administration of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, where a competent stenographic reporter had been directed to hold himself in readiness to take testimony. While at Houston the chairman of the subcommittee received a dispatch from the governor of the Federal reserve bank as follows:

DALLAS, TEX., June 28, 1928.

Hon. CARTER GLASS,
Care Rice Hotel, Houston, Tex.:

As requested in your telegram of June 18 and in connection with my circular letter of like date to all member banks of this reserve district, I have to advise that up to date no replies have been received signifying a desire to be heard upon the occasion of your visit to Dallas. When you are able to advise date of your arrival I shall be glad to reserve accommodations for you.

LYNN P. TALLEY, Governor.

No member bank or responsible person having responded to the invitation to be heard in respect of the charges of alleged mismanagement and arbitrary actions of the governor of the Dallas bank, the chairman of the subcommittee wired Governor Talley as follows:

HOUSTON, TEX., June 29, 1928.

Hon. LYNN P. TALLEY,
Governor Federal Reserve Bank, Dallas, Tex.:

In view of the fact that no member bank of the Dallas Federal reserve district has signified any desire to prefer charges of mismanagement or maladministration against the governor or the board of directors of the Dallas Federal Reserve Bank or any desire to be heard by the Subcommittee of the Banking and Currency Committee of the United States Senate empowered to investigate charges and to hear testimony, there seems to be no necessity for me to come to Dallas. Therefore, I am returning to Virginia to-night.

CARTER GLASS.

It should be stated that the officials of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas not only evinced entire willingness, but an obvious eagerness, for the proposed investigation of the bank's affairs and its relations with member banks of that Federal reserve district; and it should further be stated that information derived from authentic supervisory sources fully justifies the statement that, at the time of the proposed hearing at Dallas, the Federal reserve bank there and the member banks of the entire eleventh Federal reserve district were in a more satisfactory condition and in a better state to meet the credit requirements of the district than ever before since the Federal reserve system was instituted.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mr. GREENE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on this calendar day that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 1347. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide relief in cases of contracts connected with the prosecution of the war, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1919, as amended;

S. 2792. An act reinvesting title to certain lands in the Yankton Sioux Tribe of Indians;

S. 4338. An act to authorize the President to award, in the name of Congress, gold medals of appropriate design to John H. Towers, Albert C. Read, Elmer F. Stone, Walter Hinton, H. C. Rodd, J. L. Breese, and Eugene Rhodes;

S. 5146. An act to reserve certain lands on the public domain in Santa Fe County, N. Mex., for the use and benefit of the Indians of the San Ildefonso Pueblo;

S. 5147. An act to reserve 920 acres on the public domain for the use and benefit of the Kanosh Band of Indians residing in the vicinity of Kanosh, Utah; and

S. 5180. An act to authorize the payment of interest on certain funds held in trust by the United States for Indian tribes.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BINGHAM:

A bill (S. 5738) to approve, ratify, and confirm an act of the Philippine Legislature entitled "An act amending the corporation law, Act No. 1459, as amended, and for other purposes," enacted November 8, 1928, approved by the Governor General of the Philippine Islands December 3, 1928; to the Committee on Territories and Insular Possessions.

By Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas:

A bill (S. 5739) to amend section 7 of the Public Act No. 391, Seventieth Congress, approved May 15, 1928; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. TRAMMELL (for Mr. FLETCHER):

A bill (S. 5740) to legalize a bridge across St. Johns River, 2½ miles southeast of Green Cove Springs, Fla.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A bill (S. 5741) granting an increase of pension to Alice M. Rhodes (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BURTON:

A bill (S. 5742) granting an increase of pension to Frank H. Bruce; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A bill (S. 5743) authorizing an appropriation of $50,000 for the purchase of seed, feed, and fertilizer to be supplied to farmers in the flooded sections of Orange County, N. Y., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. REED of Pennsylvania:

A bill (S. 5744) to authorize the maintenance of post exchanges and educational and recreational facilities at military posts and stations; and

A bill (S. 5745) to authorize appropriations for the Army Transport Service; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 5746) to legalize the sewer outlet in the Allegheny River at Thirty-second Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. JOHNSON:

A bill (S. 5747) granting a pension to Walter L. Harmon (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. EDGE:

A bill (S. 5748) authorizing the United States Shipping Board to sell or lease certain property to the mayor and council of the city of Hoboken, State of New Jersey; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. BINGHAM:

A bill (S. 5749) authorizing the presentation of the distinguished flying cross to Capt. Benjamin Mendez; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

On motion of Mr. REED of Pennsylvania, the Committee on Military Affairs was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 9453) for the relief of Tracy Lee Phillips, and it was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION OF DISABLED RESIDENTS OF THE DISTRICT

Mr. COUZENS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 13251) to provide for the vocational rehabilitation of disabled residents of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

CONSTRUCTION AT MILITARY POSTS

Mr. HAYDEN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 13825) to authorize appropriations for construction at military posts, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD FUNDS

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I send to the clerk's desk a resolution, which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the resolution.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 323), as follows:

Whereas in press dispatches recently the Federal Reserve Board has complained that money is being drawn from the channels of business and used for speculative purposes, and that some of said speculation is illegitimate and harmful; and

Whereas said Federal Reserve Board, in its efforts to correct what it regards as an evil in this matter, has increased the rediscount rate: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Federal Reserve Board is hereby requested to give to the Senate its reason for increasing the rediscount rate, and to give any other information and suggestions that it feels would be helpful in securing legislation necessary to correct the evil complained of and prevent illegitimate and harmful speculation.

Mr. HEFLIN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I would like to have it go over, under the rule. I have not had an opportunity to consider it.

Mr. HEFLIN. It just calls for information.

Mr. CURTIS. I ask that it may go over, under the rule.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will go over, under the rule.

CELEBRATION OF COMPLETION OF CANALIZING OF THE OHIO RIVER

Mr. FESS submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 38), which was referred to the Committee on Commerce:

Whereas the completion of the canalizing of the Ohio River from Pittsburgh, Pa., to Cairo, Ill., represents an achievement of great importance in the development of the inland waterways of the United States; and

Whereas the Congress of the United States has by legislation contributed to the realization of this project; and

Whereas a celebration commemorating the accomplishment of this great improvement is to be held October 15 to 20, 1929, at which officials of the United States and of the States adjoining the Ohio River will attend; and

Whereas it is fitting that the Congress of the United States be represented at such celebration: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That a committee consisting of three Members of the Senate to be appointed by the President of the Senate and three Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall represent the Congress of the United States at the celebration of the completion of the canalizing of the Ohio River from Pittsburgh, Pa., to Cairo, Ill., to be held October 15 to 20, 1929. The members of such committee shall be paid their actual expenses, one-half out of the contingent fund of the Senate and one-half out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives.

EMERGENCY OFFICERS' RETIREMENT ACT

Mr. TYSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD a communication from the Director of the United States Veterans' Bureau transmitting a very important decision in regard to the emergency officers' retirement act by the Comptroller General of the United States.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES VETERANS' BUREAU,
OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR,
Washington, February 6, 1929.

Hon. LAWRENCE D. TYSON,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR TYSON: With further reference to my letter of January 19, 1929, forwarding for your information two opinions from the Attorney General of the United States, each dated January 18, 1929, in which he construes the emergency officers' retirement act of May 24, 1928 (45 Stat. 735, 736), you are advised that I have just received a decision from the Comptroller General, dated February 4, 1929, covering three of the questions passed upon by the Attorney General.

As the decision of the Comptroller General sets forth in full my submission preliminary to passing upon the questions presented, the decision is self-explanatory.

For your information I inclose copy of the decision. A copy of this letter is also inclosed for your use.

Very truly yours,

FRANK T. HINES, Director.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, February 4, 1929.

The DIRECTOR UNITED STATES VETERANS' BUREAU.

SIR: There has been received your letter of November 10, 1928, as follows:

"I have the honor to refer to your decision of August 3, 1928, in response to my letter of July 26, 1928, in which there was considered the authority of the bureau to pay traveling expenses incident to necessary examinations of claimants for benefits under Public, 506, Seventieth Congress, 'An act making eligible for retirement under certain conditions officers and former officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps of the United States, other than officers of the Regular Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, who incurred physical disability in line of duty while in service of the United States during the World War.'

"In deciding that the appropriations for the Veterans' Bureau are available for expenses incurred incident to necessary examinations for applicants under this legislation to the same extent and for the same purposes as other beneficiaries of the bureau, you held further:

"'If is apparent the intent of the act is that only those who have a permanent disability entitling them to a rating of 30 per cent or more under the schedule of ratings are entitled to retirement under the act of May 24, 1928, and if in any case the description of the disability upon which an award has been made by the Veterans' Bureau suggests that the disability may now be less than 30 per cent, it is competent for the director, in his discretion, to require the medical examination provided by the World War veterans' act in order that the rating accorded may be "in accordance with law."'

"Prior to the receipt of this decision the language limiting the benefits of this act to those 'who have been, or may hereafter, within one year, be, rated in accordance with law at not less than 30 per cent permanent disability by the United States Veterans' Bureau for disability resulting directly from such war service,' had been construed by the general counsel as follows:

"'Inasmuch as the present act (lines 7 and 8, p. 1) contains the phrase "who have been or may hereafter," it is believed that where an officer has a disability in line of duty resulting directly from his military service on account of which he received a 30 per cent permanent partial disability rating prior to the passage of the act, he would be entitled to appropriate benefits of the act, even though since the passage of the act he has been rated less than 10 per cent permanently disabled.'

"A diversion of opinion, however, existed in the bureau on this matter and the procedure established was based upon the theory that the intention of the legislation is that a previous rating of 30 per cent permanent, which was later reduced to less than 30 per cent permanent, should be considered as an erroneous rating and, therefore, not one which would entitle an officer to the benefits provided. Your decision of August 3, 1928, has been regarded as confirming this construction, and the bureau has continued to act on the theory that a permanent disability of not less than 30 per cent must exist now, or within one year after the enactment of the legislation before an ex-officer may be extended the benefits of retirement pay thereunder, and that in order to determine the present existence of such 30 per cent permanent disability reexamination would be necessary except in the following cases:

"(1) Whenever the officer whose compensable disability, directly connected with service and incurred in line of duty, results from amputation, enucleation, organic blindness, organic deafness, organic loss of speech, fractures, scars, peripheral or cranial nerve injuries, disfigurement of ankyloses.

"(2) Whenever the officer has had a complete physical examination by a board of three physicians (as required for permanent ratings under the regulations governing the Veterans' Bureau) within a period of 90 days.

"It is my belief that this is a reasonable interpretation of the provisions of the law and that your decision of August 3, 1928, is in substantial agreement therewith.

"In view, however, of the fact that your decision of August 3, 1928, was primarily directed at another phase of this matter, reconsideration is requested, with particular reference to the following questions:

"(1) In a case where an officer has heretofore been rated 30 per cent permanently disabled for disability incurred in line of duty directly resulting from war service, and the file now shows that the rating was in error under the law or the facts, or both, may the bureau reexamine and rerate the applicant?

"(2) Where an officer has heretofore been rated 30 per cent or more permanently disabled for a disability incurred in line of duty directly resulting from war service, and such rating was correct under the law and the schedule of disability ratings in effect at that time, but such rating would not be the same under the schedule of disability ratings in effect at the present time, is there authority to place the man on the retirement list on the strength of the former rating, or must a rerating be made under the present disability rating schedule?

"In this connection consideration should be given to the change in the law governing the principles of disability ratings effected by the act of June 7, 1924, which introduced the principle of ratings based on impairment in earning capacity in occupations similar to the occupation at time of enlistment, and to the fact that the formal rating schedule thereunder was not put in effect until January 1, 1926, the schedule in effect prior to June 7, 1924, being used in the interim in conjunction with instructions to the rating authorities to apply the old schedule in the light of the law itself pending the promulgation of the new schedule. Since January 1, 1926, there have also been promulgated several extensions to that schedule of disability ratings which have caused distinct variations in ratings of individual cases on the identical disability; for example, due to a revision in the occupational variants for students, a man who has heretofore been assigned a variant as a student because he was engaged in the study of law at the time of his entrance into the military service, is now under extension No. 5, dated June 29, 1926, assigned a variant as a lawyer, the use of which in the evaluation of some disabilities will bring the degree of rating for exactly the same disability below 30 per cent. Is the bureau authorized to take the rating in effect at the time of the enactment of the law which would bring him within the terms of the legislation, or must the amended schedule be applied? Conversely, where a change in occupational variant or other rating element subsequent to the enactment of the law would bring the same disability to a rating of more than 30 per cent permanent, is the bureau authorized or required to rerate the applicant under the amended schedule so as to bring his rating up to 30 per cent and give him the benefits of the retirement law?

"(3) In a case where an officer has been rated 30 per cent or more permanently disabled under the laws, regulations, and schedules of disability ratings in effect at the time the rating was made, for a disability incurred in line of duty directly resulting from war service, but the evidence now shows that he is not at the present time permanently disabled to a degree of 30 per cent or more, must the old rating be accepted and the benefits of the retirement act be accorded? Or should he be reexamined and rerated under the law and schedule of disability ratings in effect on May 29, 1928, or that in effect on the date of administrative determination?" (See decisions of your office in the case of Edward L. Marthill, C-405236, dated October 2, 1926, and January 7, 1927.)

In the decision to which reference is made the question for consideration was whether the appropriations for the Veterans' Bureau available for travel expenses of claimants for the benefits accruing under the World War veterans' act might be used to pay transportation and travel expenses of applicants for retirement to secure physical examination. In reaching the conclusion that the appropriations were available for payment of transportation and travel expenses for applicants for retirement under the act of May 24, 1928, it was necessary to conclude that a physical examination in some cases was necessary, and that the mere fact that the records of the Veterans' Bureau showed that at some time in the past a rating of 30 per cent or more disability had been given a former officer, but upon subsequent examination a less degree of or no disability was found and the record had been corrected to show the true facts, would not entitle the officer to retirement. Extended discussion as to the basis for reaching such a conclusion was not deemed necessary as that conclusion was in consonance with the conclusion reached by you and that was the reason for the submission.

If the strict literal language of the quoted phrase were the only guide as to the description of the beneficiaries it might include anyone who, whether by mistake or otherwise, had ever received a rating of physical disability of 30 per cent or more in the Veterans' Bureau under either or any of the schedules of ratings ever employed by the bureau, and who subsequently under the authority of the Veterans' Bureau to reexamine beneficiaries had been later correctly rated with a less degree of disability, or with no disability, might now be required to be placed on the retired list created by the act of May 24, 1928, to receive retired pay for life. In such circumstances there might be one or many with no present disability awarded retired pay for life, while one or many with permanent disability rated at 29 per cent would necessarily be denied any retired pay. In many cases it is understood no benefits are now being paid persons who soon after the war had ratings equal to or in excess of 30 per cent disability, so that the retired pay to be paid them under the act of 1928 would not in fact "be in lieu of" any disability compensation they are now receiving. The act extends its benefits to the former officers therein described—

"* * * who during such service have incurred physical disability in line of duty, and who have been, or may hereafter, within one year, be rated in accordance with law at not less than 30 per cent permanent disability by the United States Veterans' Bureau for disability resulting directly from such war service: * * *."

and in addition to other benefits provides that former officers so placed on the retired list therein created—

"* * * shall receive from date of receipt of their application retired pay at the rate of 75 per cent of the pay to which they were entitled at the time of their discharge from their commissioned service, except pay under the act of May 18, 1920: Provided, That all pay and allowances to which such persons or officers may be entitled under the provisions of this law * * * shall be in lieu of all disability compensation benefits to such officers or persons provided in the World War veterans' act, 1924, and amendments thereto, except as otherwise authorized herein, and except as provided by the act of December 18, 1922 * * *."

Section 302 of the war risk insurance act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 406), provided a schedule of payments for total disability and for a percentage of such payments if the disability is partial and required that a schedule of ratings of reduced earning capacity from specified injuries or combinations of injuries of a permanent nature should be adopted and applied by the bureau. By section 305 it was provided:

"That upon its own motion or upon application the bureau may at any time review an award and, in accordance with the facts found upon such review, may end, diminish, or increase the compensation previously awarded, or, if compensation has been refused or discontinued, may award compensation."

That provision has been continuously in the law, although amended from time to time, the present provision for reviewing an award being contained in section 205 of the World War veterans' act (43 Stat. 522), which was quoted at length in decision A-23876, August 3, 1928, referred to by you. This provision clearly assumes not only that awards may have been made of permanent partial disability, which time has shown was either temporary or susceptible of improvement, but also that awards might be improvidently made or made as the result of undetected malingery. In any such case, where a rating was incorrectly accorded the former officer of 30 per cent or more permanent disability, it is competent for the director to review the award and accord a rating which will correctly show the present condition of the beneficiary.

As to the beneficiaries intended by the act of May 24, 1928, see Senate Report No. 115, Seventieth Congress, first session, to accompany S. 777, which became the act of May 24, 1928, where the committee made the following statements as to the purpose and effect of the bill:

"The bill provides retirement pay of 75 per cent of the compensation paid at time of discharge from active service to emergency Army officers who incurred permanent disability of 30 per cent or more as a result of their service during the World War.

"It is believed that this degree of disability in the keen competition of civil life is, on the average, the equivalent of the 'incapacitated for active service,' which is the basis of retiring officers from the Regular Establishment on account of disability."

"The number of disabled emergency Army officers to be benefited by this proposed act, together with its costs, are shown in the appended letter and table from the Director of the Veterans' Bureau, dated January 19, 1928, which are made a part of this report."

In House Report No. 1082, Seventieth Congress, first session, to accompany S. 777, the following statement is found:

"Your committee points out that the Senate act (S. 777) includes those disabled emergency officers of the Navy and Marine Corps, 201 in number, who did not obtain retirement under the act of June 4, 1920. The increased annual cost under this amendment will be $117,624.

"In all other respects the text of S. 777 is similar to that of H. R. 500, which was favorably reported by this committee on January 20, 1928, perfected copy of which report follows, and is made a part of this report:

* * * * * * *

"The bill provides retirement pay of 75 per cent of the compensation paid at time of discharge from active service to emergency Army officers who incurred permanent disability of 30 per cent or more as a result of their service during the World War. * * *

* * * * * * *

"The number of disabled emergency officers to be benefited by this proposed act is estimated by the Director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, under date of March 21, 1928, to be 3,251. This increase over previous estimates is in part due to the operation of the new rating schedule recommended by this committee and authorized by the Sixty-eighth Congress, in part due to the fact that the physical condition of these older disabled officers has been gradually breaking down under the handicaps of their war-incurred disabilities, and in part due to the inclusion of 185 naval officers and 16 Marine Corps officers not already retired.

* * * * * * *

"The increased annual cost to the Government, based upon the figures of the United States Veterans' Bureau, is $2,294,265, being the difference between the amount to be paid under this bill, $5,136,225, and in lieu of the amount the 3,251 are now receiving as compensation, $2,841,960. The death rate of these men disabled in war is high, more than 125 deaths having occurred during the year 1927. Therefore it is obvious that when this act becomes operative its cost should diminish rapidly.

* * * * * * *

"To relieve the War Department of the, to it, objectionable necessity of disbursing from its funds money not applicable to strictly military purposes, the bill provides that the administration of the act be committed to the United States Veterans' Bureau, which has the complete medical records of the beneficiaries * * *."

All discussion was on the basis of former officers who were permanently disabled as the beneficiaries of the act; in other words, former officers who under the World War veterans' act (including the authority of the Veterans' Bureau to review an award under the statutory provisions cited above), were permanently disabled to an extent of 30 per cent or more and who were otherwise within the act.

The language cited defines and limits the beneficiaries under the act, with the further qualification that the disability shall have been, or shall be, rated by the Director of the Veterans' Bureau at 30 per cent or more, in accordance with law, i. e., in accordance with the schedule of ratings in effect on the date of the act for awarding compensation under the World War veterans' act, and it is thus clear that the mere rating at a particular percentage of disability under any scheme of rating at any time in effect was not designed to be the test of the right to retirement under the act of May 24, 1928. Until the requisites for retirement under the act have been established in a particular case, the applicant for retirement continues to be a beneficiary, or an applicant for benefits, under the World War veterans' act; the act of May 24, 1928, does not suspend the application of the World War veterans' act as to persons prima facie coming within the terms of the retirement act; until the person has been retired under the terms of the act, he continues to be subject to the provisions of the World War veterans' act, including the provision of law authorizing the bureau to reexamine and rerate beneficiaries of the World War veterans' act.

On the foregoing premise your several questions will be answered in their order, the answers in each case being predicated on the assumption that the Director of the Veterans' Bureau, in the exercise of his discretion, and on the evidence available to him, has determined in a given case that the present records sufficiently suggest error to warrant a reexamination.

1. Yes.

2. The second paragraph of subdivision (4) of section 202 of the World War veterans' act (42 Stat. 618) provides:

"A schedule of ratings of reductions in earning capacity from injuries or combinations of injuries shall be adopted and applied by the bureau. Ratings may be as high as 100 per cent. The ratings shall be based, as far as practicable, upon the average impairments of earning capacity resulting from such injuries in civil occupations similar to the occupation of the injured man at the time of enlistment and not upon the impairment in earning capacity in each individual case, so that there shall be no reduction in the rate of compensation for individual success in overcoming the handicap of an injury. The bureau in adopting the schedule of ratings of reduction in earning capacity shall consider the impairment in ability to secure employment which results from such injuries. The bureau shall from time to time readjust this schedule of ratings whenever actual experience shall show that it is unjust to the disabled veteran."

The rating must be in accordance with law, and the law in effect May 24, 1928, is the law contemplated by the act by which is to be tested the question whether the rating is in accordance with law. On the facts suggested, a rerating should be made under the disability rating schedule in effect May 24, 1928. In the matter of retirement, equality of treatment for the same disability, other requisites being established, requires that all claims be rated under the same schedule, the one in effect May 24, 1928, pursuant to law; otherwise some former officers would be retired and others having identical disabilities, would not be retired. The law contemplates equal treatment for all otherwise within the law having the same degree of disability under the applicable rating schedule.

3. It is assumed that the date "May 29, 1928," was inadvertent and that May 24, 1928, the date the act providing for retirement of disabled emergency officers became effective, was intended, and answer will be on that basis. All beneficiaries of the Veterans' Bureau were required by section 202 (4) of the act of June 7, 1924, to be rated on the schedule of ratings therein directed to be adopted. Section 202 (4) of the act of June 7, 1924, directs that "A schedule of ratings of reductions in earning capacity from injuries or combinations of injuries shall be adopted and applied by the bureau." It will be observed that the enactment requires not only the adoption of schedule of ratings, but also their application, i. e., that the schedule shall be put into effect, and if to put such schedule into effect required examination, the rating would not be in accordance with law until such examination had been had. It is understood that has been the administrative procedure and the law was being so administered when the act of May 24, 1928, was passed. The old ratings were not, therefore, for the purpose of the retirement act "in accordance with law," and in any case where the description of the injury or disability, or other evidence available to the bureau, suggests that the application of the new schedule of ratings may affect the percentage of disability, a matter for the exclusive determination of the Director of the Veterans' Bureau, the rating is not in accordance with law, a rerating is required and the schedule of ratings in effect May 24, 1928, should be followed. The decisions cited relate to the effective date of an increase in compensation resulting from a rerating under the schedule of ratings put into effect under the act of June 7, 1924. In a degree the status of the beneficiaries of the act of May 24, 1928, is changed. Their right to compensation under the World War veterans' act ceases after retirement and from the date of receipt of their application for retirement in the bureau they are to be placed on the retired list therein created and are entitled to retired pay based on their commissioned rank at date of discharge from their war service. The percentage of disability should be determined under the schedule in effect on the date of the act, that all in the same situation should be treated with exact equality. For the purpose of retirement, the rating is required to be in accordance with the law as of that date.

What is here said, of course, has no application to the decisions cited by you in this connection.

Respectfully,

J. R. McCARL,
Comptroller General of the United States.

CONVICT LABOR

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the Wheeling (W. Va.) Register of the 5th instant entitled "Convict Labor."

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONVICT LABOR

The State road commission in a report to the legislature requested by Senator Ben Hiner, Democrat, of Pendleton, expresses opposition to the use of convict labor for excavating, grading, and other heavy work. The commission thinks prison labor would be more costly than having the work done by contract, but the reasons given are neither lucid nor convincing.

Why, we ask, can not convict labor be employed on road construction more cheaply than under contract with private concerns using free labor? The board of control several years back offered the road commission from 600 to 800 prisoners, at $1.50 per day each, to include "delivery," guarding, feeding, transportation, clothing, medicine, etc., while free labor costs approximately $3.75 per day. Yet the road commission has ever held back and employed convict labor only in emergencies and where public opinion demanded.

It is our sincere hope that the legislature will compel the use of prison labor on State roads, not only to relieve the horribly crowded conditions at the Moundsville Penitentiary but to make great savings for the Commonwealth. Already $50,000,000 has been expended upon disjointed, disconnected roads with very little results. The fact of the matter is that after seven years and the exhaustion of $50,000,000, plus Federal aid, West Virginia to-day does not have one single first-class trans-State highway. To go anywhere in West Virginia one has to drive out of West Virginia and use the roads of neighboring States. And unless the legislature is very careful as to the manner in which the extra $35,000,000 voted last fall is expended, the people may awake some day to find that they still are without main, trunk-line roads running from north to south and east to west and vice versa capable of handling the traffic which the natural beauties, scenery, and business of the Commonwealth should draw.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 15712) making appropriations for the military and nonmilitary activities of the War Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is on the committee amendment, under the subhead "Military posts," on page 26, line 3, after the word "made," to insert a colon and the following proviso:

Provided further, That no part of the sums appropriated or authorized to be contracted for in this paragraph shall be available for construction at Scott Field, Ill.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, if there is no further discussion to be had on the amendment and we can have a vote, I am ready to have the vote taken; otherwise, I desire to submit a few remarks.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from Mississippi that I think we shall reach a vote very soon. There may be some further discussion. I want to say a word or two to Senators who were not here yesterday.

Mr. HARRISON. Very well.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, a number of Senators are now in the Chamber who were not here yesterday afternoon when the Scott Field item was discussed. I want as briefly as I can to summarize for them the question which has to be decided.

At Scott Field, in southern Illinois, about 20 miles east of the city of St. Louis, there is an aviation field which was established in 1917, on which are officers' quarters for 28 officers, noncom quarters for 36 noncommissioned officers, and barracks for 750 men. There are at present at Scott Field five airships, nonrigid, of small size, known colloquially as blimps. There are four observation balloons and a number of the old-type balloons. In heavier-than-air equipment there are one observation airplane and two training airplanes kept there permanently. There are hangars there suitable for the heavier-than-air and lighter-than-air equipment.

It is a very necessary field in the scheme of things for aviation. The War Department has no intention of abandoning the field. If it goes out of the business of operating nonrigid dirigibles, the field will still be used to great advantage for heavier-than-air operations. It is a necessary stopping place for all planes flying from east to west and from west to east across the United States.

The Committee on Military Affairs of the Senate, the subcommittee which considered the pending appropriation bill in the Senate, and the subcommittee which considered the appropriation bill in the House, have felt for more than two years that it was a sheer waste of Government money for the Army to be conducting lighter-than-air experimentation. The Navy is doing it on a large scale and expending millions of dollars each year in that work. The Army has been spending less than a million dollars a year, not including the pay of the soldiers, and has discovered nothing and has improved nothing. General Fechet, the Chief of the Air Service, admitted to our committee that the blimps which they have at Scott Field are of no value whatsoever for combat purposes. He further admitted that the observation balloons which they have there, which are useful and always will be useful for artillery observation and staff observation, can not be used for artillery observation because there is no artillery near them. The observation balloons would serve a much better purpose and be of more service if stationed at Fort Sill, in our opinion, where they could actually be used for spotting artillery fire, the purpose for which they would be used in war times.

The impression has gotten about in Illinois and in Missouri, I am afraid, that we are determined upon the abandonment of Scott Field, but that, I assure the Senate, is not the case. Scott Field will have to be maintained and, under the proposed program, except that the citizens of that vicinity will no longer see the little nonrigid airships flying around, they will not be able to observe any difference. That, briefly stated, is the first reason for the committee amendment.

The second reason is even more cogent. Under the 5-year program for the Air Corps, 1,200 additional enlisted men each year have to be assigned to aviation.

The size of the Army has been limited for several years to 118,750 enlisted men. We can not and ought not to increase the size of the Army. The consequence is that each year 1,200 men have had to be taken out of regiments in the other branches and put into the Air Corps. The result has been an increasing number of skeletonized regiments, brigades, and divisions. It tells very heavily on the other branches of the Army to have annually to take those increments from them.

It was stated in the evidence that there were 508 enlisted men at Scott Field engaged in lighter-than-air work, and the report which comes to me from the War Department this morning states that there are 527. When enlisted men are so much in demand in every branch of the Army we can ill afford to have 527 of them devoted to experimentation with the little nonrigid dirigibles. I should like to see those 527 men kept in the Air Corps, but to that extent I should like to see the other branches of the Army relieved from providing 527 additional men this year.

If we are going to keep the Army efficient, we have got to have more men in each organization than are necessary for the elementary duties of kitchen police, stable police, and the drudgery of Army life; there has got to be some opportunity for military training also and it is becoming increasingly hard to do so because of the reduction in the number of enlisted men attached to the different regiments, brigades, and divisions of the line of the Army. So, first, because we want to save money and quit spending it on a useless activity, which the Navy can much better conduct; and secondly, because we want to save this number of enlisted men for use in the heavier-than-air activities of the Air Corps, the committee thinks, and thinks very sincerely, that the Army ought to give up this side show which it is running.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SIMMONS. Is there anything in the military service which especially qualifies and equips a man for duty in the Air Corps; that is, is such a man any better qualified for such duty by reason of the fact that he has had Army training than would be an ordinary civilian?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes, Mr. President; the military flying of airplanes is a vastly different thing from the commercial flying of airplanes.

Mr. SIMMONS. If that be so, ought we not to select the men who are to constitute the personnel of the Air Service from the Army, because of their training and experience?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I do not object to that, Mr. President, and, as I have said, we are doing that. Each year we are taking out a group of 1,200 enlisted men, soldiers, and assigning them to aviation work.

Mr. SIMMONS. I understood the Senator to state that that is exactly what we are doing, but I had in mind that the remedy would be to increase the Army, if necessary, to that extent?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. We should hope to do that, Mr. President, except for a sort of general agreement that the strength of the Army ought not to be increased over the present figures. The Army could advantageously use an additional 20,000 enlisted men, but by general agreement the committee has not tried to provide for any such increase.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, is it the Senator's suggestion that we discontinue a part of this Air Service and thereby relieve the drain upon the Army?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. No; my suggestion is that we discontinue the operation of the lighter-than-air dirigibles.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator has stated that that requires about 500 men.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. About 527 men are engaged in that activity.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator is not making an argument against using enlisted men of the Army for that purpose——

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Oh, no; not at all.

Mr. SIMMONS. But he is merely contending that we ought to discontinue this lighter-than-air service?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes; in the Army.

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator thinks we ought to discontinue it in the Army?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes. Mr. President, when this matter was put up to the Chief of the Air Service and the Assistant Secretary of War for aviation they both asked the committee not to discontinue this lighter-than-air activity. Of course, they are sincere in their statements, I grant you, but I do not remember any case in which an Army or Navy commander ever willingly relinquished any activity that he had once got in his hands. Last year the committee took similar action, and expressed strong views against this waste of money, as we consider it to be; and the House of Representatives, the Senate, and the President acquiesced in that decision; so that it was something of a surprise for us this year to find the action challenged. We had supposed it would be considered as settled policy. We think the men engaged in this activity and the Army itself are not profiting by it, and we think that it much better could be discontinued.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, Scott Field was leased by the Government in 1917. At that field we trained many of the participants in the World War. They were taught flying there. After the war in 1919 the Government made a permanent investment in this field, and now has an investment, as I understand, of some $10,000,000. At Scott Field there is a hangar for airships costing $2,000,000.

Scott Field is within 20 miles of St. Louis and within one night's journey of Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Louisville, Memphis, Kansas City, and Omaha; it is within 8 hours of the great cities of the Central West. It is the only field of any kind that really belongs to the Central West. That section of the country has sent men into the Army and into the Navy, and it pays its proportion of the taxes for the Army and for the Navy. We believe that this is the first move to destroy Scott Field, and the advisability of the move is not sustained by the opinion of any man connected with the Army, from the Assistant Secretary of War down to the last witness who appeared before the committee.

If anybody connected with the Navy has proposed the change which has been suggested by the members of the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate it is not disclosed in the hearings. So we find here a change proposed by a subcommittee of the Committee on Military Affairs that is not supported by the Army, that is not supported by the Navy, and that was defeated on a roll call in the House of Representatives.

It is contended by the proponents of this change that control of the lighter-than-air service should be given to the Navy. Airships, according to the testimony of the commander at Scott Feld, are necessary. I should like to say something about the commander at Scott Field. He is Colonel Paegelow. Senators may not have heard of him, but he is the man who commanded and had charge of our balloon service on the battle front.

He said in his testimony that all together he had lost 32 balloons, one of which was taken in Germany, and he speaks of the destruction of others. He is an officer experienced in war, who has studied the Air Service and who understands the climatic changes in the district where Scott Field is situated. He has had all the experience derived from 11 years' service there.

Now, it is proposed to remove the airship from the control of the Army. It is true that provision for captive balloons to direct artillery fire remains in the appropriation, but I can not understand, and apparently the Navy can not understand, and the Army certainly can not understand, why the Navy should direct the firing of artillery by the Army.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, the Senator did not understand me to suggest that, did he?

Mr. HAWES. I understand that the Senator proposes that all these airships shall be transferred from the jurisdiction of the Army to that of the Navy.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Precisely; but the observation balloons, which are the only things used for observing artillery fire, are to be kept under the control of the Army, and the bill so provides.

Mr. HAWES. The Assistant Secretary of War, who testified on this subject, had this to say:

> The airship is used strategically or tactically in a situation favoring its employment as a complement or replacement of the airplane, such conditions as inclement weather, long-range operations, and situations wherein the peculiar characteristics of the airship make it a suitable agency for use in conjunction with or in lieu of heavier-than-air craft. The airship has a number of capabilities which are not enjoyed by heavier-than-air craft.

I could quote from other distinguished authorities who want this question at least left open.

If the position of members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee is sustained by a single Army officer, if it is sustained by the Navy, it is their duty to tell the Senate about it. The matter was discussed in the House, and the House refused to adopt the suggestion which is here proposed.

Mr. President, we are not asking at this time for more money; so that the striking out of these amendments which cripple the usefulness of Scott Field and forever remove lighter-than-air machines from the jurisdiction of the Army is the only question now before the Senate.

I suggest that if the entire subject of lighter-than-air craft is to be transferred to the Atlantic coast, and that is the policy and the thought back of the three amendments to this bill, it should be given further consideration, and that it at least should be supported by technical experts of the Army and the Navy. So that this amendment which we of the Central West are asking to have stricken from this bill comes before you having been defeated in the House and not approved by any competent naval or military authority in either branch of the service.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Missouri what is the position taken by the Secretary of the Navy with respect of this controverted matter?

Mr. HAWES. I find no expression from him.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. What is the position of the Secretary of War?

Mr. HAWES. He is opposed to it.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator point to his testimony?

Mr. HAWES. Yes, sir.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The Senator means the Assistant Secretary of War; does he not?

Mr. HAWES. I mean the Assistant Secretary of War, acting as agent for the Secretary of War, and speaking for the Secretary of War.

Mr. SHORTRIDGE. That would seem to be so; but does the Secretary of War dissent from the views expressed by his assistant?

Mr. HAWES. No, sir. I know personally—not as a matter of record—that he is very much opposed to this change, and has so stated.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, it is recognized that all efforts made by Congress to abolish any governmental agency, particularly any executive bureau, department, or organization, are resisted to the utmost, and all such efforts have proven abortive. Executive organizations cooperate to resist efforts to dislodge them and to increase their power, authority, and jurisdiction.

The Republicans, during the campaign of 1920, made the most solemn promises to reorganize departments, eliminate bureaus, and coordinate the activities of executive instrumentalities. Since securing control of all branches of the Government following the inauguration of President Harding, whatever efforts they have put forth in the direction indicated have proven utterly unavailing. Senators will remember that a commission was appointed to consider the question of consolidating Federal agencies. President Harding selected Mr. Brown, of Ohio, as the chairman of the commission. When the commission began its futile and inconsequential activities, executive departments engaged in acrimonious discussions as to the powers and functions which belonged to them, and all resisted efforts to consolidate, reorganize, and effectuate administrative reforms. Since then more bureaus have been created, more Federal agencies have sprung into existence, and the power of the executive department is greater than ever before. The personnel of the executive departments and bureaus are increasing, and there is every promise of the extension of bureaucracy, the multiplication of Government agencies, and the assertion of greater power and authority by various branches of the executive departments of the Government.

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] has, with the utmost accuracy, just stated that no Federal agency has been known to concur in a movement to reduce its authority or restrict its jurisdiction So it is not surprising that officers of the War Department have resisted the recommendation of the committee that useless activities relating to Scott Field be abolished and that such work there being performed be transferred to another department better equipped for the performance of the same. The duplication of activities in Federal organizations and agencies is so great as to shock every business man who comes into contact with the work of the executive departments.

There are many activities engaging the attention of the Navy Department which receive consideration in the War Department. These numerous duplications in part account for the enormous expenses of the Federal Government. If the work of the executive departments of our Federal Government were performed by private persons and business organizations, the expenditures would be reduced to the extent of hundreds of millions of dollars annually. Waste and extravagance and uneconomical methods are characteristic of governmental activities.

Mr. President, an examination of the pending bill reveals that it carries more than $346,000,000. In addition there are authorizations which will call for tens of millions of dollars additional, and this bill carries appropriations for but one fiscal year for the Army.

We are at peace with all the world. There are no clouds of war. We are not making military preparations for an impending conflict and yet there is placed before us a bill which takes from the Treasury of the United States for the next fiscal year more than $447,000,000 to meet the ordinary expenses of the Army. It should be stated, however, that approximately $80,000,000 of this huge sum is to be devoted to flood control and for the improvement of our harbors and inland waterways.

The House will pass to-day or to-morrow the naval appropriation bill which, as I am advised, will carry items aggregating at least $375,000,000. We have already passed a number of bills during this session appropriating approximately $25,000,000 for the Army and the Navy. This sum is to be added to the amounts that I have just given. I have no doubt that before Congress adjourns on the 4th of March the appropriations for the Army and the Navy for the next fiscal year will approximate $800,000,000, and if we are to judge the future by the past, when Congress meets next December deficiency bills will be presented calling for tens of millions of dollars to meet the obligations incurred by the War and Navy Departments.

Mr. President, the American people do not appreciate the tremendous burdens under which they labor to meet the expenses of the military arm of the Government. No country in all the history of the world has ever expended for military purposes, except in time of war, the amount which the United States has been expending during the past five or six years. We often hear of the military character of the German Empire during the years preceding the World War, and we are often told that the military expenses of the German Government during the period mentioned were enormous. Mr. President, we will appropriate very much more for our Army and Navy for the next fiscal year than Germany expended in any year preceding the outbreak of the World War in 1914. My recollection is that Germany's budget for military purposes in 1913 was considerably less than $500,000,000. We can not justify the enormous appropriations which are being made for military purposes. The overhead of the Army and the Navy is entirely too great. It is inconceivable that we are appropriating for the small Army that we have the stupendous sum carried in this bill. As Senators know, the expenses of the Federal Government for all purposes in 1900 were considerably less than $700,000,000 and for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, they were but slightly over $1,000,000,000.

Mr. President, the expenses of the Federal Government are increasing out of all proportion to the service rendered and the duties performed. We have been led to believe by repeated promises from the party in power that there would be a great reduction in Federal expenses but the promises have not been fulfilled and our Republican friends with the greatest cynicism now declare that expenditures will increase. Of course, that will involve an increase in taxation and will result in imposing heavier burdens upon the taxpayers of the United States.

The Federal Government is extending its activities; it is projecting itself into fields where it is an alien and where, under the Constitution, it has no jurisdiction. The executive departments welcome the conference upon them of additional authority and many of them are constantly intriguing to secure additional power and to multiply the activities with which they shall be concerned. Where the end will be it is not difficult to foresee. Bureaucracy, like the rolling snowball down the hillside, increases in size and in momentum. Sooner or later it reaches the bottom. It may rest in peace for awhile; more often it is dashed to pieces; sometimes it waits the scorching rays of the sun to destroy it. Bureaucratic governments are always the most oppressive and the most extravagant. Often they meet a premature end. History supports the statement that bureaucracies thrive in liberal and democratic governments, but with their increase in authority the cause of liberalism is diminished and the interests of democracy are imperiled. But I return to the subject before us. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. HAWES] has just referred to the fact that Scott Field was selected in 1917 during the World War and that a large number of men were drilled for military service at that point.

In those exciting and dramatic days of 1917, when this great Nation entered the World War, a large number of fields were provided in various parts of the United States. Millions of men were drilled and sent to cantonments and various points of our country, where they were drilled for service upon the seas and beyond the seas. When the war was over most of these fields and cantonments were useless. Many were promptly abandoned; too many were retained. Several years ago, as a member of the Naval Affairs Committee, I made an examination of a large number of the naval bases and stations and navy yards. My recollection now is that there were more than 150 falling within the categories just referred to. Recommendations were made by members of the committee to abandon many stations and some navy yards and stations. There were a large number of military posts scattered throughout the United States. Millions were expended in maintaining these unnecessary naval yards, bases, stations, and Army posts throughout the land. Some were finally abandoned, but the contest to secure the abandonment of a post or navy yard or station was a most bitter one. Opposition of the fiercest character was often encountered by the communities in which these Army and Navy posts, stations, and so forth, were found. Too often the interests of the country were sacrificed to meet these demands for a continuation of these governmental activities.

A considerable portion of the expense of the Army and Navy results from the maintenance of unnecessary stations, naval bases, navy yards, repair shops, arsenals, stations, and so forth, and nearly every session of Congress a number of bills are introduced to create additional stations, aviation bases, submarine bases, Army bases, and so forth. An examination of the bill before us reveals the enormous expense incident to maintaining the military posts and stations throughout the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. HAWES. Is the Senator under the impression that if this proviso is stricken out it will add to the cost, or add to this bill? I want to disabuse the Senator's mind of that impression if he has it, and then to direct his attention to the statement of the Senator from Pennsylvania that there is no intention of abandoning Scott Field; so the question the Senator has been discussing does not seem to apply to this amendment.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The department requested $667,000 for this lighter-than-air activity at Scott Field, which has been denied them by the House, and which stands denied as the bill now is; and, while I am correcting the matter of figures, the amount heretofore spent on the permanent improvement of Scott Field is not $10,000,000 or anything like it. The amount actually spent down to June 30, 1928, for permanent improvement, including the original cost of the land, was $3,561,056.67. The authority for that is a letter of General Fechet, which is printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at page 1434.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, even if this field had cost $50,000,000, it would not, it seems to me, be an appealing argument for its continuation. We spent more than $3,000,000,000 in the construction of a merchant fleet during the war. We spent at Hog Island more than $50,000,000 for the construction of that plant, and it has been abandoned. Many other plants were built during the war which, when the war was over, were of no use whatever. They were war losses and should have been promptly written off as such.

As I stated a moment ago, there are fields and camps and posts and naval bases by the scores and hundreds throughout the United States, most of which should be abandoned. I do not agree with the Senator from Missouri that to continue the use of Scott Field in the manner in which it is now being used will not increase the expenses of the Government. It was stated by the Senator from Pennsylvania that more than 500 of the enlisted men now at Scott Field are needed for active service of various military posts. He stated that many of the military units were mere skeletons and that a considerable number of enlisted men of the Army are spending their time in kitchen duty and in work quite outside of military service. If the enlisted men at Scott Field are to remain there in practically nonmilitary service, an insistent demand will be made that the Army be enlarged and, of course, that would involve additional expenditures. Whenever enlisted personnel are called upon to perform nonmilitary duties additional men will be called for to recruit the ranks thus depleted. This policy of weakening the Army by assigning our soldiers to nonmilitary activities is not wise and will tend to disorganize the Army and more or less demoralize the administrative machinery of our Military Establishment.

The discussion shows that there is duplication of work by the Army and the Navy, and that if there is any value to the work now being performed at Scott Field it is quite insignificant and could be better performed by the naval organization which is devoting attention to all forms of aircraft, whether heavier than air or lighter than air. I repeat what I said a few moments ago, that there is too much duplication of work by Government agencies. Each bureau and department is jealous of all others and is unwilling to surrender any field in which it is interested, although some other agency of the Government is performing the same character of work and in many instances in a much better manner.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. HAWES. How many men does the Senator think it takes to operate an airship?

Mr. KING. It depends upon the character of the ship, whether it is a ship like the Roma, the Los Angeles, or the Graf Zeppelin, or the balloon types operated at Scott Field.

Mr. HAWES. Five or ten or fifteen or twenty?

Mr. KING. As I have stated, does the Senator mean the great airships, such as those I have mentioned?

Mr. HAWES. No; such as we have at Scott Field now.

Mr. KING. An inconsiderable number; but there are more than 500 enlisted men there, and a considerable number of officers.

Mr. HAWES. They can take them away. They are not necessary to this service.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BINGHAM. I should like to ask the Senator from Missouri if he has ever seen a dirigible brought down with the "inconsiderable number" of men spoken of? The Senator knows perfectly well that the reason why there are 400 enlisted men at Scott Field is that they are necessary to act as human anchors when a dirigible is being walked into its hangar.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President——

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. HAWES. Does the Senator dispute the fact that there ought to be four or five hundred men at this field? Does he want to move them all away? Is that his thought?

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President——

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BINGHAM. I shall be glad to answer that question as soon as the Senator from Utah yields the floor.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the arguments which have been made during this debate—and this leads me to an avenue not quite pertinent to the discussion—confirm the view which has been expressed by General Mitchell and by others, and which is represented by bills which I have introduced upon numerous occasions in the Senate, that there ought to be a consolidation of the Army and the Navy under one control. All agencies connected with the national defense should be under one organization. We should have a department for national defense under the head of a Cabinet officer. There should be an assistant having charge, under the secretary, of naval matters; an assistant looking after what might be called military matters; and a third assistant who would have charge of aviation in all of its various forms. In this manner there would be a coordination of all of the activities relating to national defense. There would be no further quarrels as to who should have charge of coast defense or aviation activities along the coast, or who should defend our harbors. The different departments which now exist make for waste, duplication, extravagance, uneconomical methods and inefficiency.

It is recognized that aviation is in its infancy. It is destined to be for commercial, as well as for military purposes, one of the great agencies and forces in the world. All of the activities of the Government in connection with aeronautics and all forms of aviation should be under one control. There is much scientific work, much research work, much administrative and executive work to be done in order to coordinate all of the activities, whether they are administrative, scientific, military, or naval.

It is not my purpose to discuss the bill which I have pending providing for a consolidation of these departments and agencies, and I have alluded to it only in passing because it was pertinent to the discussion which has taken place.

Mr. President, I observe the bill carries an appropriation of more than $30,000,000 for aviation, and various appropriations for other activities in connection with balloons and dirigibles. I repeat that all of this work should be under one head. There are needed at the present time radical reforms in every branch and department of the Government. It is unfortunate that we can not select some commission of five of the ablest business men of the United States to examine our executive departments and their multitudinous offshoots and formulate a plan that will consolidate, coordinate, and bring together, in proper groups for better service and better economy, all of these executive and administrative branches of the Government. But it is hoping too much that we will have the courage, good sense, and wisdom to pursue such a course. Moreover, in trying to accomplish this end we would be attacking an almost irresistible force, which would probably hurl back all who had the temerity to assail the great citadel of bureaucracy and departmentalism which to-day is the most powerful agency in the Government.

Mr. President, I support the amendment reported by the Senate committee and hope that it will be adopted.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, there have been so many erroneous statements made in the course of this debate that it is impossible to correct them all, but I think it is only fair that attention be called to two or three of the most important ones.

In the first place, it was stated a few minutes ago that one reason for not agreeing to the committee's proposal is that $10,000,000 have already been spent at Scott Field. That is the kind of thing that local communities all over the world, and in probably every State in this Union, are fond of saying about governmental institutions which they would like to obtain in their neighborhood for sentimental or economic or other reasons.

As a matter of fact, Mr. President, that is an error by something like 200 per cent; in other words, about three and a third million dollars have been spent there and not ten million.

The reason why that much money was spent there was that it was expected, when the money was appropriated, that the Army would continue to need the services of blimps or semirigids, small dirigibles, in other words.

At the end of the war airplanes were still in a state, particularly as regarded their power plants, where they were not considered reliable, and it was not until nearly 10 years afterwards that an aviation motor was sufficiently reliable to enable a pilot to fly from New York to Paris.

The use of the dirigible over land by armies is generally regarded by military experts to-day as being unjustifiable, because the observation airplane is so much more reliable than it was at the end of the war, is so much more rapid, is so much better able to defend itself, and to get back, with its information than a dirigible that no Army corps commander would care to have his observation airplanes replaced by dirigibles. In fact, I have heard it suggested on the floor of the Senate that we ought not to have any more dirigibles in the national defense at all.

The situation over water is very different. The experience last summer of the Graf Zeppelin, coming across the ocean, having an accident, and being able to stay in the air for a number of hours while repairs were made to its steering apparatus, and even then, crippled as it was, to make faster speed than any ocean liner had ever made, shows the importance of the dirigible for overwater service and for the Navy.

To go back to another of the erroneous statement's, the statement was made a few moments ago on the floor that Scott Field is the only one in the Middle West, that it is centrally located, that it is within a few hours of all the great cities of the Middle West, and that therefore it is very important that this field should be developed as a lighter-than-air field.

As a matter of fact, even in Illinois, whose Senators are making a very earnest effort to have the committee overruled in this matter, the Air Corps has maintained and is maintaining a large and important field at Chanute.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BINGHAM. Certainly.

Mr. GLENN. Does not the Senator know it to be a fact that there is a very determined effort now being made to have Chanute Field abandoned also?

Mr. BINGHAM. If the effort is determined, it has not made itself heard yet in any of the committees, either the Committee on Military Affairs or the Committee on Appropriations, of which I have the honor to be a member.

Mr. GLENN. An appropriation was authorized at the last session of $220,000 for Chanute Field, none of which has been expended, for the reason that the Government is making a study now looking toward the abandonment of Chanute Field.

Mr. BINGHAM. I have not heard of any such consideration. I do know that there are a large number of buildings authorized by act of Congress for which no appropriations are made, and I was about to refer to that in a minute.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield.

Mr. HAWES. The Senator made an observation about reckless statements regarding the cost of this field, evidently referring to my statement as to the $10,000,000. I would like to give the Senator my authority, which is found on page 234 of the hearings.

Senator FLETCHER. What investment have we got there at Scott Field?

General FECHET. I beg your pardon.

Senator FLETCHER. What investment does the Government have at Scott Field?

Senator DENEEN. Over $5,000,000.

Colonel PAEGELOW. Around $10,000,000.

Senator DENEEN. Ten million dollars?

Senator FLETCHER. You built a hangar there not long ago costing something over $3,000,000.

General FECHET. The hangar cost $2,000,000, and was finished about six years ago.

That is my authority for that statement.

Mr. BINGHAM. I do not think the Senator was listening when the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] a few moments ago referred to a letter, found on page 1434 of the RECORD, from General Fechet, Chief of the Air Corps, dated January 3, 1929, in which he said:

Permanent improvement including original cost of land to June 30, 1928, approximately $3,561,056.67.

I notice the Senator from Missouri walks away, so I assume he is not interested in this phase, and I shall proceed.

Mr. HAWES. I can hear the Senator.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, no argument has been made on this floor, so far as I have been able to read in the RECORD, or so far as I have heard, to show that the Army needs to maintain dirigibles. Nevertheless, there are perhaps three good reasons why the wishes of the Senators from Illinois and the Senators from Missouri should be carried out.

The first is that in the 5-year air program passed by the Congress in 1926 there was inserted a provision that the Secretary of War was authorized to carry out such experimental work on lighter-than-air equipment as he should deem wise. It was not felt at that time entirely wise to strike out dirigibles entirely from use by the Army, although the committee which finally drafted that bill was unanimously convinced that it was only in the use of observation balloons that the Army should be really interested.

It was in order to carry out that part of the 5-year program just referred to that the Assistant Secretary of War made his estimate, as stated in the hearings, with regard to the fact that the War Department would like to have something over $500,000 in this year's appropriation bill in order to buy more dirigible balloons, to buy more equipment, and to carry on with the lighter-than-air work, apart from the observation balloons.

The second reason why this amendment recommended by the committee should be opposed is that there are a certain number of officers in the Army who wear balloon wings, if I may use such a contradiction in terms. The wings which they obtained were obtained by flying lighter-than-air craft. They draw their 50 per cent additional pay on account of taking flights in balloons, sometimes captive balloons, sometimes dirigible balloons that are tied up to a mooring mast.

Several of the older officers in the Army Air Corps are "flying officers" by reason of their dirigible balloon experience. They have friends in the Army. If we were actually to take away from the Army, as we believe wise, this lighter-than-air dirigible service—and I may say parenthetically that there is no effort on the part of anybody to take away from the Army the use of the observation balloons—there would be a small number of officers, some of them with a good deal of influence, some of them with a good deal of rank, who would no longer be "flying officers," who would no longer have the excuse of qualifying for their 50 per cent increase in flying pay, who would, in a way, be out of a job, and human nature being what it is, and all of us sympathize with people who are out of work, or facing unemployment, there is a good deal of sympathy with the position in which these officers find themselves, due to the fact that there is no real military excuse for the Army to play with dirigible balloons.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BINGHAM. It is difficult to carry out an argument when yielding; but I yield.

Mr. HAWES. I am not an expert and my knowledge of this subject is confined to what I can see in the record.

Mr. BINGHAM. Let me say to the Senator that there is a great deal in this matter that does not appear in the record. That is known to all of us. It is difficult to bring this out on the floor without embarrassing individuals, and I have no desire to embarrass any individual. I am not asking for anything except what I believe to be in the interest of the Air Service of the United States. The 5-year airplane program is not fully provided for in this bill. We are not even given a sufficient amount of money to buy enough airplanes to carry out the third-year increment. This bill as it stands represents a shortage of 55 airplanes in the third increment of the 5-year program, because we can not get money enough to carry on the 5-year airplane program.

Mr. HAWES. The question I desired to propound was this: Whether the Senator's expressions of opinion were individual, or whether they were supported by the experts either of the Army or of the Navy? I have been unable to find any support for this provision in any testimony of any Army officer or any Navy officer.

Mr. BINGHAM. That is true, Mr. President; and I am trying to give the reasons for that. In the first place, the Army officers who agree with me in this matter perfectly do not like to go on record as stating that belief, because they know that it is directly contrary to the interests of their brother officers.

In the second place, there are officials in the War Department who do not like to go on record as agreeing with me for other reasons which I do not desire to state at this time.

Mr. HAWES. That is a very lamentable situation.

Mr. BINGHAM. It is. The trouble is there is a lot of politics in this matter, both local and Army. All I am trying to do is to see to it that the Army shall get all the aviation to which it is entitled and which it can use well and shall not waste any money on blimps. Blimps should be used by the Navy over the water. Blimps should not be used by the Army.

Mr. HAWES. That is not the testimony of the experts who appeared before the Senator's committee, and I can assert that neither the Navy nor the Army supports the Senator's position; the House, by a record vote, has repudiated it; so if there is any authority either from the Army or the Navy to support the Senator's position, I think the Senate should have the benefit of the quotation.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator is taking a very unfair advantage of a position which I stated a few moments ago. There is a great deal more in this than can appear of record. He is trying to force me to state things which will embarrass certain individuals, and I do not propose to do it. I would rather be defeated in this matter than to embarrass those individuals. Now, if the Senator will kindly refrain for a few moments until I finish my argument I shall be greatly obliged to him.

Mr. President, the point is that Scott Field, one of the earliest fields to be established, was in 1919 reserved for future use when a great many fields were closed all over the country, as a place where the Army would use its dirigibles. As time has gone on the officers of the Army and of the Air Corps have become more and more convinced that the Army has no real use for dirigibles, but they are not going to say so in public for perfectly obvious reasons. The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] pointed out that in all his experience he has never heard of an Army officer being willing to testify in public that the Army would like to give up something it has been doing. Of course they would like to go on playing with dirigibles.

When I brought this matter to the attention of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs some time ago and it became known that arguments were being used to convince that committee unanimously that the Army ought not to go on playing with blimps, within 48 hours there were one or two Army blimps sailing beautifully along over Washington in an effort to show how attractive they were and how mistaken I was and how mistaken the committee was. It was a beautiful sunshiny day, there was no wind, and they sailed gracefully over Washington in the hope that those connected with them might be able to save their jobs as officers flying balloons for the Army.

Mr. President, no reason has been given to the committee and no reason has been given on the floor of the Senate why the Army should continue to use blimps in view of the tremendous increase in the efficiency of observation planes to-day.

The third reason which is back of the plan for defeating the committee's proposal is that certain good people living within a radius of 25 miles of Scott Field would feel badly if their friends on Scott Field, who have been kind to them, who have treated them courteously in a social way, who have traded with them, who have given them a pleasant place to which to go on a sunny afternoon when they desired to take a ride in their automobiles, should be out of a job.

Those are the real reasons. I respect, of course, the position of the Senator from Missouri and the position of the Senators from Illinois, who do not want to have an Army post interfered with or permanent construction at a post in their State or in the vicinity of one of their large cities interfered with. The truth is that there are already too many garrison posts all over the United States. Instead of being limited to a few points where they can be used to the greatest advantage for the best interests of the military policy of the Government, they are, to please the communities and the Congressmen representing those communities, scattered over a wide area. I have no doubt that there are some Congressmen who are influenced by recommendations of that kind.

As a matter of fact, in the State of Illinois there are six garrison posts to-day, counting Scott Field, and there is an excellent field where officers and men are trained for the Air Service at Chanute Field. I may say to the Senator who questioned me a few minutes ago that I do not think there is the slightest danger of what he fears happening at Chanute Field. I never have heard any reference made to it in any committee. The trouble is that there is not money enough to go around. The trouble is that the building program laid down in connection with the 5-year program and recommended by the War Department can not be carried out, because we have not money enough for it. Of $2,000,000 additional needed for hangars and shops and flying fields to carry out the accepted 5-year aviation program of the Army, we were only able to secure something less than $500,000; we had to leave out $1,500,000. That is the reason why technical building does not go on faster in the aviation posts of the United States, where it should go on.

Mr. President, I wish that it were wise and expedient to move that the appropriation for aviation be increased so as to cover all the desires of those who want to see our program for airplanes go forward and of all those who still believe in the Army using blimps, as the Senator from Missouri [Mr. HAWES] does. But in view of the fact that we are not even able to get money enough to carry out the 5-year program in regard to airplanes, it seems to me that it is only wise that the Navy, which is doing so extremely well in connection with its dirigibles, and is now about to build, and is commencing to build two of the largest dirigibles in the world, should be given the duty of experimenting, training, and carrying on the work with lighter-than-air equipment, except observation balloons, and that the Army should be given as free a hand as possible in carrying on its work with airplanes.

Mr. DENEEN. Mr. President, I desire to restate some of the facts about the amendment by the committee, and to answer some of the statements that have been made regarding it. I shall address myself first to the remarks made by the distinguished Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BINGHAM].

I am somewhat surprised at the argument put forth by him to sustain his position. He states that he thinks that certain officers of the Army desire Scott Field and others like it for the purpose of increasing their pay by 50 per cent as a bonus for flying. There is no authority for such a statement. On the contrary the responsible officers who have to do with aviation for the Army have testified before the committee that this branch of the Army service is an essential branch. We not only have a few who state that, but we have all connected with it.

On the 2d of July, 1926, the Congress passed an act the title of which I read yesterday, and which I will read again, which indicates the scope of the act:

> An act to provide more effectively for the national defense by increasing the efficiency of the Air Corps of the Army of the United States, and for other purposes.

Section 8 of that act reads as follows:

> Five-year Air Corps program: For the purpose of increasing the efficiency of the Air Corps of the Army and for its further development, the following 5-year program is authorized.

The amendment now before us seeks indirectly to do something which is not proposed to be done directly, and that is to repeal the act to which I have just referred, which has three years yet to operate. The distinguished Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] intimated that this would increase the appropriations. The only reference to appropriations in the bill is found on page 34. The appropriation there is for $36,239,643. This is not questioned by the Senator from Utah. No one questions the amount there. I take it no one will question it. There is nothing in the amendment that would increase or change the amount just referred to.

Yesterday in the debate the assertion was made by the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania that if this amendment were not incorporated in the bill the Army would be able to expend $150,000 for barracks for officers. I took occasion this morning to make an inquiry regarding this matter. There is no estimate, I am informed, for $150,000, and no appropriation asked for that purpose, and it is not conceivable that the Army officers would endeavor to expend that amount of money even if they had the authority.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an interruption?

Mr. DENEEN. I yield.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. On page 316 of the House hearings, under the heading "Scott Field, Ill.," is the item:

> Designation of project, barracks, amount $100,000.

I think that is the amount I stated.

Mr. DENEEN. I think the Senator said $150,000.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The remarks given are:

> Authorized, but no appropriation made in Army act, 1929. Specific provision was made that no part of the appropriation would be available for this project.

Without the amendment of the committee now in the bill, and to which the Senator is objecting, that $100,000 could be spent on the 1st of July.

Mr. DENEEN. I was informed by the Army officers just to the contrary this morning. They made the statement, which I think will appeal to the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania, that the items for the amount that will be appropriated are all covered specifically and that in order to withdraw any money some of them would have to be avoided.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is perfectly correct.

Mr. DENEEN. And that no one could conceive that the Army officers, after seeking appropriations for specific items, would fail to spend the money for those purposes, but would expend it on matters not covered in the bill. That is the position of the Army officers, as I understand it.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I think every year some items are overrun and others underrun, and the money is interchangeable.

Mr. DENEEN. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania contend that if the proposition is not retained in the bill there is any danger that the Army would expend that amount of money, in view of their testimony and in view of the other items covered? Does he really think there is any danger of it?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. We want to make it clear, as we did last year, that it must not be expended for the purpose named.

Mr. DENEEN. The provision to be voted on is as follows:

> Provided further, That no part of the sums appropriated or authorized to be contracted for in this paragraph shall be available for construction at Scott Field, Ill.

We are not asking for any money for construction. The Army officers believe that there should be $667,900 for equipment. Yesterday in the debate it was practically conceded that $80,400 should be expended for observation balloons, and that if the Navy undertook to operate this field all the other items making up the $667,900 could be used to advantage. The larger sum I have just mentioned does not refer to any construction but to equipment. There is, however, nothing before the Senate at this time regarding that amount of money.

Now, let me say a word or two in reference to the so-called blimp. An effort has been made to change the facts by calling names. The smaller aircraft that is operated at Scott Field is the same kind, I am informed, that is being operated by the Navy. In the charge here about the Army they are called "blimps," but they have a politer name when they are operated by the Navy Department.

Mr. BINGHAM. Oh, no; Mr. President, they are called "blimps" no matter who operates them, and there is nothing derogatory in the term whatever.

Mr. DENEEN. I understood it was so, not only by the language but by the emphasis that was placed upon it.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois suffer an interruption?

Mr. DENEEN. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I first used the word. The word "blimp," as I understand, means a nonrigid airship; that is all.

Mr. DENEEN. I understand that, but I gathered also from the Senator's remarks—and I refreshed my recollection this morning—that a "blimp" was being regarded as a sort of toy that was used to entertain the people who live in the locality and others who go there as visitors.

The Army officers have testified that advantage should be taken of progress in the aviation art; that the flyers of the Army should be trained by officers of the Army for that purpose; that men trained in the Navy would be utilized in the naval combats and attend the fleet in emergencies; that the Army is called upon to defend the coast, and the area 200 miles from the coast, and that there are in the continental United States 7,500 miles of shore line; that there is no dispute between the Army and the Navy as to the advantage of having the Army flyers trained in the Army, and there is certainly nothing in the record to indicate otherwise.

Every officer of the Army who has responsibility in connection with this work has testified that it is to the distinct advantage of the Army to develop its own flyers, and the record does not reveal any contention by anyone else against the views of the Army officers.

To sum up, we do not ask for an appropriation, and the amendment does not carry an appropriation; this amendment is an effort indirectly to repeal legislation that should not or could not be repealed directly, and the amendment should be defeated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 26 to insert the proviso from line 3 to line 6, inclusive.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. President.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DENEEN. I ask that the question may again be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is upon agreeing to the committee amendment found on page 26, to insert the proviso beginning in line 3 to line 6, inclusive.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I suggest the absence of a quorum, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Barkley	Edge	Kendrick	Shortridge
Bayard	Fess	Keyes	Simmons
Bingham	Frazier	King	Smith
Black	George	McMaster	Steck
Blaine	Gerry	McNary	Stephens
Blease	Glass	Neely	Swanson
Borah	Glenn	Norbeck	Thomas, Idaho
Bratton	Goff	Norris	Thomas, Okla.
Brookhart	Gould	Oddie	Trammell
Bruce	Greene	Overman	Tydings
Burton	Hale	Phipps	Tyson
Capper	Harris	Pittman	Vandenberg
Caraway	Harrison	Ransdell	Wagner
Copeland	Hastings	Reed, Mo.	Walsh, Mass.
Couzens	Hawes	Reed, Pa.	Walsh, Mont.
Curtis	Heflin	Sackett	Warren
Deneen	Johnson	Schall	Waterman
Dill	Jones	Sheppard	Watson

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-two Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment found on page 26, lines 3 to 6, inclusive. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 26, line 3, after the word "made," it is proposed to insert:

Provided further, That no part of the sums appropriated or authorized to be contracted for in this paragraph shall be available for construction at Scott Field, Ill.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLASS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN]. Not knowing how he would vote, and in his unavoidable absence, I withhold my vote.

Mr. MCKELLAR (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], and withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CURTIS (after having voted in the affirmative. I desire to ask if the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] has voted?

The VICE PRESIDENT. That Senator has not voted.

Mr. CURTIS. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Arkansas, and withdraw my vote.

Mr. SMITH (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. WATSON]. I find that he has not voted. Not being advised as to how he would vote if present, I transfer that pair to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDWARDS], and will allow my vote to stand.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I desire to state that my colleague the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER] is unavoidably detained from the Senate.

Mr. RANSDELL. I desire to announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD] is detained from the Senate by reason of illness.

Mr. NORRIS. I wish to state that my colleague the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HOWELL] is necessarily absent from the Senate on account of illness.

Mr. JONES. I have been requested to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] with the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER]; and

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. MOSES] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD].

Mr. GERRY. I desire to announce that the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], the senior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], and the junior Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] are necessarily detained from the Senate on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 33, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—33

Bayard	Edge	Kendrick	Swanson
Bingham	Gerry	King	Trammell
Black	Goff	McMaster	Tyson
Blaine	Gould	Norris	Walsh, Mass.
Borah	Greene	Oddie	Walsh, Mont.
Bruce	Hale	Overman	Warren
Burton	Harris	Phipps
Capper	Hastings	Reed, Pa.
Dill	Jones	Sackett

NAYS—35

Barkley	Frazier	Pittman	Steck
Blease	Glenn	Ransdell	Stephens
Bratton	Harrison	Reed, Mo.	Thomas, Idaho
Brookhart	Hawes	Robinson, Ind.	Thomas, Okla.
Caraway	Heflin	Schall	Tydings
Copeland	Johnson	Sheppard	Vandenberg
Couzens	McNary	Shortridge	Wagner
Deneen	Mayfield	Simmons	Waterman
Fess	Neely	Smith

NOT VOTING—27

Ashurst	Gillett	McKellar	Robinson, Ark.
Broussard	Glass	McLean	Shipstead
Curtis	Hayden	Metcalf	Smoot
Dale	Howell	Moses	Steiwer
Edwards	Keyes	Norbeck	Watson
Fletcher	La Follette	Nye	Wheeler
George	Larrazolo	Pine

So the amendment of the committee was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the next amendment passed over.

The CHIEF CLERK. The remaining committee amendment is on page 34, line 24, where the committee proposes to strike out the words "lighter-than-air craft" and insert "observation balloons," so as to read:

Not exceeding $2,255,930 may be expended for experimental and research work with airplanes or observation balloons and their equipment, including the pay of necessary civilian employees; no part thereof may be expended for the production of lighter-than-air equipment.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, this amendment involves somewhat the same question, but does not restrict the building at Scott Field. It merely confines the Army to the observation balloons which the Army authorities agree are necessary for Army use. It deals with experimentation and research only.

I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. DENEEN. Mr. President, on this matter the Army officers are unanimously of the opinion that the lighter-than-air service should be had at Scott Field and these other fields. This relates not alone to Scott Field but to all the Army fields. "Lighter than air" is the generic term. "Observation balloons," following, is the specific term. We should have the general definition; and I think the "lighter-than-air" amendment should be defeated.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I do not think it is quite understood that this amendment refers solely to the experimental and research work, which is not carried on at Scott Field or other fields, but is carried on near Dayton, at Wright Field; and the question is whether the experimental and research work in connection with lighter than air should be divided between the Army and Navy, as it is at present, or should be confined to the Navy.

The committee's amendment does not allow the money for experimental purposes at Wright Field to be used for anything in lighter than air except observation balloons. It does not affect the expenditures at any other field.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, I desire to state that this is another amendment that is not supported by the Navy and is not supported by the testimony of the Army before the committee and was defeated in the House. Having stricken out the last amendment, all that will be done if this one is stricken out is to leave the subject open for further consideration by Army officers and Navy officers.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator tell us when and where it was stricken out in the House?

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I should like to read briefly the statement of the Chief of Staff, General Summerall, in relation to this matter, on page 70 of the record of the Senate committee hearings:

Our best judgment—and the Air Corps is in accord with what I say—is that we should not abandon in the Army lighter-than-air equipment nor leave it to commercial enterprise or to the Navy to keep it on a basis of development that we think necessary.

On page 232 I read the statement of Mr. Davison, Assistant Secretary of War:

Now, then, the War Department takes the attitude that we should continue from a military standpoint, lighter-than-air operations on the same general basis as is provided in the act of July 2, 1926. We believe that is a sound basis. We believe that it is important from a military standpoint to keep abreast of the times in lighter-than-air development.

The War Department does not think that lighter-than-air development at the present time, in any event, is anything like as important as the heavier-than-air development; but we do believe that we should keep abreast of the times; and we should have a small group of officers and men who are technically familiar with and would be technically qualified on the various phases of this branch of aviation in order that we might be able to take advantage of any development that might be made during the next few years. Since last year, as a matter of fact, there has been a very greatly increased interest in the development of lighter-than-air equipment throughout the world, and that applies in this country as well as Europe.

That is the general position of the Army, the Chief of Staff, the Assistant Secretary of War, and there is no testimony in the record to the contrary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FESS in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment. [Putting the question.] The ayes have it, and the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. NORRIS, Mr. HEFLIN, and other Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I was trying to get a division of the vote.

Mr. NORRIS. For that purpose I shall be glad to yield, Mr. President.

Mr. HEFLIN. I am not in favor of the amendment. The Chair declared that the ayes had it. I think we ought to have a rising vote on it.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I call for the yeas and nays, Mr. President.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CURTIS (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as on the previous vote of my pair with the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], I withhold my vote.

Mr. NORRIS (when Mr. HOWELL'S name was called). I desire to state that my colleague the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HOWELL] is necessarily absent from the Senate on account of illness.

Mr. BRATTON (when Mr. LARRAZOLO'S name was called). I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. LARRAZOLO] is absent on account of illness.

Mr. McKELLAR (when his name was called). On this vote I am paired with the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], and therefore I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GLASS. Making the same announcement as on the previous vote, I withhold my vote.

Mr. JONES. I desire to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. MOSES] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD]; and

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] with the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER].

Mr. RANSDELL. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. BROUSSARD] is detained by illness.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. FLETCHER] is unavoidably detained from the Senate.

Mr. GERRY. I desire to announce that the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. STECK,] the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] are detained on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—31

Bayard	Dill	Kendrick	Reed, Pa.
Bingham	Edge	King	Trammell
Black	Gerry	McMaster	Tyson
Blaine	Goff	Norbeck	Walsh, Mass.
Bruce	Greene	Norris	Walsh, Mont.
Burton	Harris	Oddie	Warren
Capper	Hastings	Overman	Watson
Caraway	Jones	Phipps

NAYS—35

Ashurst	Frazier	Pine	Simmons
Barkley	Glenn	Ransdell	Smith
Blease	Harrison	Reed, Mo.	Stephens
Bratton	Hawes	Robinson, Ind.	Thomas, Idaho
Brookhart	Heflin	Sackett	Tydings
Copeland	Johnson	Schall	Vandenberg
Couzens	McNary	Sheppard	Waterman
Deneen	Mayfield	Shipstead	Wheeler
Fess	Neely	Shortridge

NOT VOTING—29

Borah	Fletcher	Hale	Larrazolo
Broussard	George	Hayden	McKellar
Curtis	Gillett	Howell	McLean
Dale	Glass	Keyes	Metcalf
Edwards	Gould	La Follette	Moses
Nye	Smoot	Steiwer	Thomas, Okla.
Pittman	Steck	Swanson	Wagner
Robinson, Ark.

So the amendment of the committee was rejected.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 66, after line 13, add a new paragraph, as follows:

And provided further, That no part of the moneys herein authorized to be appropriated shall be used or expended under contracts hereafter made for the repair, purchase, or acquirement, by or from any private contractor, of any ordnance, machinery, article, or articles that at the time of the proposed repair, purchase, or acquirement can be repaired, manufactured, or produced in each or any of the Government arsenals or navy yards of the United States, when time and facilities permit, and when, in the judgment of the Secretray of War, such repair, purchase, acquirement, or production would not involve an appreciable increase in cost to the Government.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, this amendment is similar to that contained in the appropriation bills for the Navy. I think there is no objection to it. It merely provides for giving preference when possible to Government arsenals in ordnance work and materials. I believe the Senator in charge of the pending bill is willing to accept it, and I therefore move its adoption.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment, and before doing so I want briefly to explain the amendment. I would like to have the RECORD show, when this bill goes to conference, what the facts are in regard to the matter covered by the amendment.

Mr. HAWES. Mr. President, I have a small amendment which affects the part of the bill we have been discussing to-day and which we discussed a part of yesterday afternoon. If the Senator would allow me, I wish to present that amendment at this time.

Mr. NORRIS. There will be plenty of opportunity for the Senator to offer his amendment.

Mr. HAWES. Very well.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, in northern Nebraska there is a small town called Niobrara, one of the oldest towns in the State. It has a population of about a thousand people, as I remember it. It is on the south bank of the Missouri River, which at that point forms the line between Nebraska and South Dakota. For several years the river has been gradually encroaching, coming nearer and nearer to the town, and the last high water in the Missouri brought the river very close to the town. Another period of high water will put the town out of existence; and because if we wait for legislation in the regular course it would perhaps be too late, at the beginning of this session I offered a joint resolution authorizing an appropriation of $250,000 to be expended by the War Department in revetting the banks of the Missouri River at that point. By the way, the revetting would have to take place on the opposite side of the river, so that the people of the town of Niobrara, or even of the State, would have to go out of the jurisdiction of the State if they made the repairs necessary to be made to save the town from destruction.

The Corps of Engineers of the Army are well familiar with the situation and are not opposed to this amendment. I think all of those who have investigated it are in favor of it, but they have not been able to use any public funds in that direction because it was not authorized.

I offered a joint resolution, as I have said, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and after a hearing before that committee lasting one entire day the committee unanimously recommended the passage of the resolution. It afterwards came up in the Senate and was passed. I have on my desk a report of the hearings before the committee. I think there is nothing in the matter that would not appeal to one who knew the facts. I know of no other way to save this town from destruction than that provided for by that resolution.

It is true that high water may not occur there again in a year, it may not occur in 10 years, but it may occur this very spring, depending on the condition of the river. The town can not withstand another period of high water such as was experienced there two years ago. The joint resolution which I introduced provided that one-third of the expense should be paid by the citizens of that locality.

With this explanation I offer the amendment which I send to the desk, which is a part of a joint resolution the Senate has already passed at this session of Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FESS in the chair). The clerk will report the amendment.

Mr. McMASTER. Mr. President, would the Senator object if I attached to his amendment one I have to offer?

Mr. NORRIS. I have no objection if they could go together; but I do not know whether that could be done or not.

Mr. McMASTER. I will just add mine to the Senator's. Would that be all right?

Mr. NORRIS. I have no objection, although it may possibly result in the defeat of my amendment.

Mr. McMASTER. Very well; I will wait.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS].

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 79, after line 24, insert:

For bank protection for the control of floods and the prevention of erosion of the Missouri River at and near the town of Niobrara, in the State of Nebraska, said work to be carried on under the control and supervision of the Chief of Engineers of the War Department: Provided, That the local interests shall contribute one-third of the cost of the said work.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I will send to the desk and ask to have read, after which I would like to make a few remarks in explanation of it.

Mr. McMASTER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield while I offer a small amendment?

Mr. NORRIS. I will say to the Senator from Maryland that the Senator from South Dakota has an amendment similar to the one I offered, and presenting the same conditions, with the exception that it refers to an interstate bridge that is about to be washed away.

Mr. TYDINGS. I may say to the Senator that my amendment will not take three minutes, I think, and the Senator from South Dakota then may offer his amendment.

Mr. McMASTER. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 80, after line 15, insert:

That the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army, under the direction of the Secretary of War, is authorized and directed to make an examination and survey of the Conduit Road from the District of Columbia line to Great Falls, Md., of Cabin John Bridge, and of land contiguous to that part of such road and to such bridge, for the purpose of making recommendations for improving and widening that part of such road and such bridge, and, upon the completion of such examination and survey, to report to Congress the results thereof, together with estimates of the probable cost of carrying out such recommendations. There is hereby appropriated the sum of $4,800, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of this paragraph.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I would like to say to those who are interested in this amendment that the Government now owns all the road, that the Budget Bureau is in favor of this amendment, and that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, and the chairman of the subcommittee on military affairs of the Appropriations Committee, have both familiarized themselves with it, and, I am free to state, are in favor of it. It is only for a survey of a road which the Government now owns, and I hope there will be no objection to it.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an inquiry?

Mr. TYDINGS. Certainly.

Mr. KING. I notice that there is a movement on foot to acquire on both sides of the Potomac River, between here and Great Falls or between here and Cabin John Bridge, a considerable area of land to be used as a national park. I was wondering if that plan, which would cost from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 if carried into effect, would not dispense with this road.

Mr. TYDINGS. I do not think it would, because the plan would not be put in operation for some time and the road is now in daily use. The Government owns all the road and has built practically all of it except this one link. My State is powerless to do anything because we do not own the road. The Federal Government owns it, and all I have asked for is a survey. If the park is finally decided upon, this road will not in any way interfere with the park; but it will take care of a very immediate need. The road is in very bad condition, is very dangerous, and a number of serious accidents have occurred upon it. I am simply asking for a survey, and that is all.

Mr. KING. Why can not the Senator offer a separate measure?

Mr. TYDINGS. There is no basis upon which it can be fixed covered by any measure now before the Senate for consideration. I had hoped to get all the facts before the Senate so that Senators would know exactly what they were voting upon when the matter came up, but I thought I would ask merely for a survey at this session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McMASTER. Mr. President, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 79, at the end of the page, after the amendment submitted by Mr. NORRIS, to insert:

That there is appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $250,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for bank protection for the control of floods and the prevention of erosion of the Missouri River at and near the town of Yankton, in the State of South Dakota; said work to be carried on under the control and supervision of the Chief of Engineers of the War Department: Provided, That the local interests shall contribute one-third of the cost of said work.

Mr. McMASTER. Mr. President, the amendment is in the language of the bill which I had previously introduced as a companion bill to that of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] and which went before the Committee on Commerce. They recommended the bill favorably to the Senate, it was passed by the Senate and went to the House, but the committee of the House feels that this is the proper place for the amendment to be inserted.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. TRAMMELL. No, Mr. President! The Chair will pardon me, but I feel that when a Senator was addressing the Chair before the Chair announces the amendment is agreed to, that he has a right to have recognition prior to the vote being taken.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair was not aware that the Senator desired to speak on the amendment.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I certainly was speaking loud enough to be heard all over the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator want to have the vote reconsidered?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Yes; I ask that it be reconsidered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the vote by which the amendment was agreed to will be reconsidered.

Mr. TRAMMELL. As an amendment to the amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. McMASTER], I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment to the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. Add at the end of the amendment submitted by the Senator from South Dakota the following:

That for the purpose of navigation and flood control of Lake Okeechobee, Fla., and the Caloosahatchee River, Fla., by the deepening and widening of the said Caloosahatchee River, the enlarging and deepening of the canal connecting said river with Lake Okeechobee, the enlarging and deepening of canals and improving of natural waterways from said Lake Okeechobee to the Atlantic Ocean, the constructing of channels, the construction of dikes on the border of Lake Okeechobee, the construction of dams, locks, and such other works as necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose of this act, the sum of $5,000,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

That said improvements herein authorized and directed shall be made by the Secretary of War under the supervision and direction of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors in accordance with plans submitted in House Doc. No. 215 made to the Seventieth Congress, first session, and such modified, additional, and supplemental plans as may be necessary and hereafter adopted by the said board for providing ample flood control and improvement of navigation contemplated by this act, and the cost thereof shall be paid from the appropriation herein made, except and provided that all rights of way and lands necessary in the accomplishment of the project shall be furnished by the owners thereof free of cost to the Government.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, when the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota was offered I did not object to it because it had been previously passed upon by the Committee on Commerce and had passed the Senate in the form of a bill earlier in this session. The amendment now offered by the Senator from Florida has not been recommended by the Committee on Commerce, has not passed the Senate in any form, and therefore I feel obliged to make the point of order against it.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I would like to be heard a moment on the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I have offered this as an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota, which the Senator from Pennsylvania, in charge of the appropriation bill, seems willing to accept. I do not think that it is irrelevant if the amendment to which I have proposed it as an amendment is relevant. It should properly be considered as coming within the parliamentary rules.

I desire to state my object in offering the amendment. My colleague and I and also the Members of the House from Florida, since Congress convened in December, have been very diligent in our efforts to obtain relief for an emergency situation in the State of Florida. Of course, we have pursued our efforts through the proper committees both in the House and in the Senate. I little dreamed that emergency measures could be tacked on to this particular bill, but that seems to be the practice and seems to be accepted as proper, so under those circumstances I feel that all emergency cases should be treated alike.

I have no objection to the measures which have been proposed by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] and the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MCMASTER]. I am not objecting to them, but I think we have a situation in Florida which is equally as meritorious and as much of an emergency as exists in either of the other cases. In the State of Florida in what is known as the Okeechobee Lake section of the State in 1926 we suffered a very disastrous flood as a consequence of the hurricane of that time. Again in 1928 we had a recurrence of that disaster in a more intense hurricane and a more disastrous flood at Lake Okeechobee. There were something more than 2,000 lives lost in that disaster.

We have there a situation which is equally as dangerous as to the possibility of a recurrence of the disaster as that which exists in the two cases covered by the amendments which have just been sent to the desk. We are just as apt to have another flood in that locality that will be destructive of life and destructive of property as in the two cases which seem to be perfectly acceptable and agreed upon as possessing merit sufficient to entitle amendments relating to them to be incorporated in the pending bill.

The engineers have carried on an investigation in that territory, and as a result of the investigation referred to in Document 213 relating to the amendment which I propose, the engineers recommended certain improvements. I recall that they mentioned that dikes should be built on the south side of the lake and that there should be a deepening and widening of the Caloosahatchee River as a means of flood control. The Chief of Engineers recently appeared before the House committee and made recommendations in regard to the improvements there. The improvements recommended by the Chief of Engineers would come within the purview of the amendment which I have proposed. In fact, in the preparation of the bill, the language of which I have offered as the amendment, I employed the language which has been set forth in the report of the engineers based upon the investigation which they conducted last year.

We have been asking for this relief. I think it is equally as meritorious as the cases which are covered by the other amendments to which I have referred. If the Senate is going to depart from its rule of not allowing amendments of this character to be placed upon an appropriation bill, why should we in Florida not have the same treatment as other parts of the country? Mr. President, I have been a Member of the Senate for nearly 12 years. I have sat here and voted time and time again for relief to all sections of the country and, I will say in particular, for relief to the western part of the country in the way of all kinds of contributions and donations and every character of improvement, and yet when someone from the South rises and submits an amendment to provide a little relief for a Southern State or a section of the South, as a rule he can not get an attentive ear, and we can get even no sympathy.

I ask the same consideration for my State and for my part of the country, the same sympathetic consideration, and the same friendly attitude which I have manifested toward the western part of our great country during the 12 years I have been a Member of the United States Senate. We recently passed the Boulder Dam bill involving millions and millions of dollars, and I supported it, and yet when we ask for a little relief in connection with the improvement of flood conditions in the territory mentioned in my amendment we have a point of order raised.

When we ask for farm relief, when we ask for relief for the farmers who suffered so disastrously during the hurricane of 1928, they having suffered equally with the people of Porto Rico so far as the individuals were concerned, we have not been able to get it. We have been struggling all through the session of Congress, thus far unavailingly. I very greatly appreciate that the Senate saw proper to pass some bills of the kind, but in the House we have been unable to get any action.

A bill was presented here to provide $3,000,000 for the purchasing of seed for certain Western States, and it passed without any question. I was very glad to support it. All we are asking is fair treatment and that my State be considered as a part of the Union. We ask for the same generosity that has been displayed toward other parts of our country. I am not making any complaint about the amendments which have been offered heretofore, but I hope to have my amendment treated in the same manner. Those amendments I believe are meritorious, but we have an equally meritorious case presented by my amendment.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TRAMMELL. I yield.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I am in hearty sympathy with the Senator from Florida; I think he is absolutely right; but I want to suggest to him that the opposition to his amendment does not come from the West, but from Pennsylvania, I believe.

Mr. TRAMMELL. If the Senator will pardon me, I want to correct him. I did not say the opposition came from the West; I said that there was a spirit of generosity toward that section which did not prevail in regard to the southern part of our country. I have been one of those who have participated in that generosity toward the West and I wanted to do all I could to assist them.

Mr. HEFLIN. The Senator has done so. I am going to ask the Senator if it is not a fact that the Agricultural Committee has looked into the matter about which he has been speaking, seeking to give some measure of relief, and has expressed its approval of legislation looking to that end.

Mr. TRAMMELL. That was in regard to farm relief; that legislation, of course, has been passed by the Senate, but has been held up in the other branch of Congress.

Mr. HEFLIN. It has not been acted on by the other House?

Mr. TRAMMELL. No; we have not obtained any relief at all. We passed a bill here providing $15,000,000 for sufferers from the hurricane in Porto Rico, providing that loans up to the extent of $25,000 could be made even to an individual farmer; that $100,000 should be provided for the purpose of free seeds to be given to the people of Porto Rico; and that $2,000,000 should be donated as a gift for the reconstruction of highways in Porto Rico; and yet in the case of our plea on behalf of American citizens who were equally as stricken as the result of the hurricane in 1928, one month has passed, two months have passed, the end of the session of Congress is almost here, and we have not yet obtained any relief for those American citizens living upon American soil who suffered equally with those in Porto Rico.

Mr. COPELAND. Will the Senator from Florida yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Certainly.

Mr. COPELAND. I am in hearty accord with the Senator from Florida, and am anxious to help him, but I feel that he has failed to use his most convincing argument. He should remind the Senators on the other side of the Chamber that Florida is now a Republican State and should be "kept in the Union" by being given the proper appropriations.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I think that such an argument would have quite an appealing influence with my good friends on the other side. I am glad the Senator from New York reminded me of that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May the Chair inquire of the Senator from Florida whether any committee has recommended this item?

Mr. TRAMMELL. No committee has recommended this exact amendment, but the War Department has reported upon the project and recommended the improvement. The Chief of the Board of Engineers appeared before the House committee some two or three weeks ago and recommended improvements involving even a larger expenditure than that covered by the amendment which I have proposed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will have to sustain the point of order.

The question now is on the amendment offered by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MCMASTER].

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I desire it to be understood that I am not opposing at all the amendment which has been presented by my good friend from South Dakota, but I wished also to bring before the Senate this other case, which I consider a very meritorious one. If we can not get relief at this time, I hope that we may obtain it at a very early date.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from South Dakota what obligation there is upon the part of the Federal Government to undertake the work provided for in the amendment which he has offered?

Mr. McMASTER. The same obligation there was under the flood relief bill which we passed containing an appropriation of $500,000,000 to prevent the destruction of property by flood. The same principle exactly is involved, there is no difference.

Mr. KING. The principle may be the same, but I fail to perceive it. As I understand, a railroad built a bridge over the Missouri River——

Mr. NORRIS. No, Mr. President; it is an automobile bridge. Will the Senator from Utah permit an interruption?

Mr. KING. Certainly.

Mr. NORRIS. It is a public bridge, Mr. President, in the construction of which the two States participated. It is the only bridge for a good many miles which is above that portion of the river the improvement and navigation of which have already been taken over by the Government as a matter of law. Everybody concedes it is at a point where the river will eventually become navigable. It is navigable now, of course, but it needs some work, although the Government has not authorized the improvements on the river that far up. If something of this kind is not done, then the bridge is likely to be spanning a lot of dry sand and the river will be running around one end of it.

Mr. KING. Why does not the State, if it constructed the bridge, take the necessary steps to protect it?

Mr. NORRIS. The amendment provides that one-third of the expense shall be contributed by the parties interested.

It is exactly of equal merit with the amendment which we have adopted, excepting that in that case a larger number of people and their homes are involved. However, the principle in this instance, as I understand, is exactly the same.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I do not find myself in accord with the Senator as to the obligation of the Federal Government in connection with the inland waterways of the United States. I was opposed to the principle announced in the Mississippi River flood control bill to the effect that the United States had the right to, and did, assume control over all the rivers, streams, and springs between the summit of the Rocky Mountains and the top of the Allegheny range. The principle announced in that bill, as I interpret it, was: That the Federal Government would take charge of these streams and be responsible for their control. Under this assumption of authority by the Federal Government the States were to be denied any control over the streams; their police powers were not to be employed in any manner which would give them jurisdiction or control over the waters or the banks and beds of such streams whether interstate or intrastate. The Federal Government was to assume the burden of flood control and the States be relieved therefrom. It is obvious that this policy will impose upon the Federal Government enormous burdens; indeed, it is difficult to visualize just what the costs will be to the United States.

When the Mississippi River bill was before the Senate, the chairman of the committee admitted that the cost to the Government in the Mississippi Valley would be $750,000,000 or more. I have been told by persons more or less familiar with the matter that the cost for the improvements in the lower reaches of the Mississippi River will exceed a billion dollars. What the costs will be to the Federal Government, if it is to be responsible for all the streams and is to control them and protect the banks and the towns and farms within the watersheds, no one can predict, but it is certain they will be not only hundreds of millions of dollars but several billion dollars.

Mr. President, I find no warrant in the Constitution for many of the appropriations made by Congress for navigable and nonnavigable streams within the United States. Congress has the power to prevent interference with navigation, but that grant of power has, in my opinion, been perverted or expanded or prostituted until the doctrine is now announced by some that the Federal Government owns the streams in all the States and may exercise such control over them as to it may seem proper. There is to be no limitation upon its authority and the States are powerless to exercise any control or jurisdiction over the streams within their borders.

Something has been said during the debate about storms and cyclones which caused destruction of property and inundated private lands. The contention is made that the Federal Government should pay for these injuries.

Recently in the city of Washington there was a cyclone; the rain fell in torrents, property was damaged by the floods, and houses were unroofed. I suppose under this doctrine the Federal Government is responsible. In my own State a few years ago there was a heavy rainfall and a mighty torrent rushed down from the mountain side destroying farms and houses and worked devastation and ruin within a rather restricted area. Under the view which I have heard expressed in this Chamber, Congress should make an appropriation to reimburse the unfortunate persons who were the victims of this flood.

Yesterday the Senate voted to take from the Treasury over $4,000,000, and pay the same to the State of California because that State had expended considerable sums in improving the Sacramento River. The money expended by California was for the benefit of that State and its inhabitants. It was expended not at the request of the Federal Government but by the State because of its duty to its own people. Congress seems to have adopted the policy that the Government is not only to be responsible for all improvements and developments and expenditures in all streams throughout the United States in the future but the Federal Government is to tax the American people and then make appropriations to pay to the States all that they have expended, from the beginning of the Government I suppose down until the present time, upon the streams within their respective borders. Mr. President, this is a most dangerous policy, one which I opposed when the Mississippi flood control bill was before the Senate and one which I protest against now. That policy is in violation of the rights of the States; it takes from them the control of the streams within their borders; it relieves them of responsibilities which it is their duty to assume. It places upon the Federal Government enormous burdens the extent of which and the evils resulting from which it is impossible to determine.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I think that we are going far afield in our legislation on this particular bill. With most of the legislation relating to other subjects than that embraced in the bill itself I have been in sympathy, and am still in sympathy, because I sympathize with the distress afflicting people in this country growing out of certain providential visitations of an extraordinary character during the last few years; but I think, after all, it is a great deal better for us in legislating to follow the line that has heretofore been prescribed for safeguarding against hasty legislation.

I think every member of the Commerce Committee will bear me out in the statement that there is no member of that committee, nor of the Senate, who sympathized more profoundly than I with the people living along the Mississippi River who were victims of the great flood which produced the overflow that was so disastrous to that section of our country. I supported that legislation; indeed, I was inclined to be a little radical in my support of it; I went probably further than any member of the committee in my support of it; but we followed the ordinary lines of legislation with respect to it and acted upon the report of a commission which had made a very thorough investigation and which furnished the committee with data as the basis of their action.

We were very particular in making that vast appropriation for flood control—the expense of which was to be paid by the Government—to reserve the question for future determination as to what expenditure the States which were affected by the flood and which were the recipients of the benefits of the appropriation should contribute. We have in this bill, without any regard to what may be the ultimate policy of the Government with respect to these matters, made definite appropriations, and I think we have set a precedent that may trouble us in the future.

On yesterday, with very little debate—scarcely any—and without any reference to a committee, I think, we adopted an amendment to this bill appropriating nearly $4,000,000 for the benefit of four States that were affected by the flood.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield.

Mr. CARAWAY. There was a favorable report from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry on that bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. The bill was reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. Ordinarily those bills are referred to the Committee on Commerce; but there was a report. I could not find it in my heart then to object, and I do not object now, and I am not criticizing the action of the Senate in any way whatsoever. I am simply saying that it establishes a precedent.

A flood has visited my State. A flood has visited the State of the distinguished senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], who sits at my left. A flood has swept over the State of the distinguished Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], who sits at my left. A flood has swept over the State of the distinguished Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL], who has just addressed the Senate. It was a flood the like of which has never been seen before in either of those States, carrying ruin in its wake to thousands and tens of thousands of homes.

In my State the disaster was not as great as it was in the other Southern Atlantic States, but it was very heartrending. It absolutely destroyed the crops of many farmers. It overflowed the rivers, and destroyed expensive roads which had been constructed by the States. Concrete roads were undermined, and fell in and had to be rebuilt. Bridges were swept away over many of the main waterways of the States, and had to be rebuilt by the State or by the county, depending upon whether they happened to be along the State system or the county system of roads. I have had no estimate made, and I presume the Senator from South Carolina and Georgia and Alabama and Florida have had no estimate made, as to the amount of damage to the roads and the bridges in those States. I am sure that it was very much greater in the other States than in my State; but in my State I am sure the amount of damage done runs well up into the millions of dollars.

We have now, by legislation, recognized the duty and the obligation of the Government to assume the burden of replacement and reimbursement to the States. Of course that means that each of these States, if they are assertive of the rights which the Senate has declared that they possess, will at once proceed to have an investigation with a view to ascertaining what was the damage, and in the future they will be knocking at the doors of Congress asking that the Government reimburse them.

Where this legislation will end, I do not know; but I do feel that bills of this kind ought to be carefully examined by the proper committees of Congress, and that the Senate ought to have a report.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY] says that they had a report in that case. I would make no trouble about that case if there were no report, because their distress is so great and my sympathy with those people is so profound that I am willing to do almost anything, regular or irregular, for their relief; but as to these other States we ought to be regular about it, and we ought not to undertake what is really road work or river and harbor work without having bills referred to a committee and investigated by the committee and by the engineers, and having the Congress put in possession of accurate information before it acts.

I am not speaking in opposition to any bill. I am only saying that I think the character of the amendments we are now making to this bill, probably without proper investigation in some instances, sets a new precedent and opens the door for claims against the Government that otherwise probably never would have been thought of.

I have profound sympathy with the Senator from Florida and his people. That State suffered terribly and exceptionally. In certain localities of that State the result of the flood of 1928 was as disastrous as the result of that which overflowed the Mississippi River's banks at an earlier date. The distress of the people was almost unspeakable, and I am willing to go very far toward relieving them. I am willing to abandon the precedents of the Senate and the rules of the Senate in order to help them; but I want to file notice now that other States similarly situated which have made no demand will regard this action as an invitation to them to make demand not only for relief from the disasters that have taken place but for relief from similar disasters that may take place in the future; and we will find the Government finally engaged in a vast field of reparation and restoration wherever the operation of the laws of nature shall result in injury to the property of the people of the different sections of the country.

Like the Senator from Florida, if these benefits are to be dealt out, I want the section of the country from which I come to be treated in the same spirit of liberality that is manifested in the treatment of other sections of the country; but I think it would be much safer for us to have legislation of this character upon a bill framed for this purpose and not upon a bill which relates to the military operations of the country. It is so easy to secure amendments to bills of this character, especially when the Senate is weary and tired and anxious to get through its business, and we are in danger of hasty and ill-considered legislation.

I did not object to the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS]. That had been before the Commerce Committee. It has not been the rule of the Commerce Committee to report bills of that character without referring them to the Army engineers for investigation. I do not know whether this amendment was referred in that way or not. It makes no difference. The committee acted upon it. If it did so without that reference, it acted contrary to its usual custom. The same thing was true, I take it, of the amendment offered by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MCMASTER]. The committee acted upon it. The committee has not acted upon the bill introduced by the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL]. The bill introduced by the Senator from Florida is distinctively a river and harbor proposition. It is for the improvement of a waterway. It is for the enlargement of a waterway. It involves an expenditure of $5,000,000 for the improvement of one of the waterways of his State.

I am not going to object to it, because I know that right there was the center of that terrific storm which destroyed the lives of a large number of the inhabitants of that territory and devastated their property. My heart is too big to raise a question of order or a question of regularity with reference to a bill that looks to their relief, and I will not do it; but, Mr. President, I hope that this method of legislation will not be continued. I think it would be better to invoke our rules, but they ought to be invoked in the beginning. They ought to be invoked as to every bill that is presented, and not invoked merely as to a part of them.

The chairman of the Committee on Commerce is not present. If he had been present, I would have asked him to call the attention of the Senate to what is before us as the result of the precedent we set here. As the chairman of the committee is not here, however, and I feel that some member of that committee ought to do it, I am doing it; but I want it distinctly understood that in doing so I do not voice any opposition to the action of the Senate yesterday with reference to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY], because that, too, like the one offered by the Senator from Florida, was to relieve a situation in a section of the country that has suffered to an extent that invokes the sympathy not only of the United States but of the whole world.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I want to join with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] and express my views in regard to this matter. I have had no advices from my State as to the amount of damage done. I know, roughly speaking, that, so far as the hard-surfaced roads, as well as others, but particularly the hard-surfaced roads, and the expensive bridges which have been built, a great percentage of them in cooperation with the Government, were concerned, they were practically destroyed in sections.

I had no intimation whatever that any such relief would be asked as has been asked here. My State has given me no intimation that they desired any reimbursement for the moneys they had to expend, mounting into the millions, in order to repair the roads which were damaged by the unprecedented floods and storms. But I feel that I would be derelict in my duty as a representative in part of my State in particular, and of the Government as a whole, if I did not join with the Senator from North Carolina in his suggestion that this matter ought to be considered in a comprehensive manner, so that every State and every community that has a just claim on the same basis that has already been acted upon might submit its claim and have it passed upon by a properly appointed committee.

The amount of damage to property and roads in the three States of South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida, running southward in the territory covered by that storm and by the preceding flood, was, in my opinion, as great as the damage in the Mississippi Valley from the disastrous flood of a few years ago.

In sections the inhabitants were driven out, the livestock was destroyed, the houses in great areas were either destroyed or partially ruined, and the crops were a total loss. The area covered was not as great, of course, as that covered by the great Mississippi flood, but the damage was as intense and disastrous over the region it did cover.

I do not know whether, in conference or elsewhere, the appropriations will be maintained, but if they are I shall insist that my State, which has suffered perhaps more than any other one in the territory visited by the storm and the floods referred to, shall be recognized on the same basis on which recognition has been given to those affected by the same elements in other States.

I do not know whether the precedent is a wise one or not. I do not know whether it can be carried out to its fullest extent, in justice and equity, without disastrous results following from the establishment of the precedent, but if the precedent is established, justice and equity demand that the relief shall be equally apportioned among those who suffered from like causes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MCMASTER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I send to the desk two amendments, to which I am sure there will be no opposition. One is to extend the time for the building of a road until the Legislature of Georgia can meet and accept the road upon the part of the State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 72, after line 22, insert the following:

Paving La Fayette extension road: The appropriation of $193,500 for the "paving of Government road from Lee & Gordon's mill to La Fayette, Ga.," contained in the second deficiency act, fiscal year 1928, approved May 29, 1928, is hereby continued and made available until expended (act May 29, 1928, vol. 45, p. 929).

Paving Ringgold Road: The appropriation of $117,000 for "Government road, known as the Ringgold Road, extending from Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park to the town of Ringgold, Ga.," contained in the second deficiency act, fiscal year 1928, approved May 29, 1928, is hereby continued and made available until expended (act May 29, 1928, vol. 45, p. 929).

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I understand that this has been authorized by previously enacted legislation.

Mr. HARRIS. In legislation enacted a year ago.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I understand also that it has the approval of the Budget Bureau.

Mr. HARRIS. It has. It is a part of the supplemental estimate sent to the Congress.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I understand also that it does not call for the appropriation of any additional funds, but merely continues in effect a previous appropriation.

Mr. HARRIS. That is quite correct.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS. Now I ask for action on the second amendment I sent to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 73, after line 26, insert the following:

To enable the Secretary of War to have surveys made of the battle fields around Atlanta, including the Battle of Kennesaw Mountain, to determine the cost of adequately marking the battle lines and of a suitable memorial park at Kennesaw Mountain, $6,000.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I understand that this has been recommended by the board of engineers appointed by the War Department in a report which has been sent to the Congress.

Mr. HARRIS. And is the first on the list.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. And this amendment is on the list recommended by the board; and, in fact, is the first item on it.

Mr. HARRIS. The Senator is quite correct in his statement.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. REED of Missouri. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 81, after line 14, insert:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT

For the payment to John W. Stockett the sum of $142,500, on account of the use by the United States of the patent device of the said John W. Stockett for breech-firing mechanism.

Mr. REED of Missouri. Mr. President, a bill carrying this item, approved by the War Department, approved by the Chief of Ordnance, and approved by the commitee, has been already passed by the Senate. It is tied up in some way, and I am asking to have it inserted on this bill as an amendment. There is no dispute about the correctness of the bill.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I know of no appropriation that has passed the Senate in recent years which appeals more than does this one. This man was the inventor of the first successful breech mechanism that made it possible to open heavy guns, with a caliber of 5 inches and upward, by one motion. Always before his invention three motions were required, and considerable time was taken in opening the breech of a heavy gun.

Mr. Stockett was a draftsman in the Ordnance Bureau, and he invented this out of a clear sky, I might say. It was better than anything ever known in Europe up to that time, and better than anything we had. We used it on about a thousand guns, as I recall the number.

Another thing that was wrong with our guns in those days was the method of firing the charge. It was extremely dangerous and very slow. The charges had to be fired by a primer which was screwed into the breech after it was closed, and then by a sort of a scratching action was detonated. Several men were killed by those appliances because they had not been screwed in tightly. This man invented a primer which was proof against all those faults, and saved many a life, no doubt, by his invention, and the Government made over 2,000 of them.

The going royalty on breech blocks at that time being paid by the Government to a Swedish and British concern was $400 per breech block. If Stockett got that much for his invention, he would be entitled to over a quarter of a million dollars, instead of the amount carried by this amendment, to say nothing of the value of his other inventions.

This has been recommended by the Chief of Ordnance in most glowing terms, by the Secretary of War, has been unanimously approved by our Committee on Claims, and passed the Senate without dissent. It is being held up for some reason that I can not understand, some personal objection, in the House. I hope no Senator will object to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to be inserted in the bill at an appropriate place. There will be no objection to it, I understand. It simply authorizes the Chief of Engineers to change the location of a levee. It calls for no appropriation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 79, after the amendment of Mr. MCMASTER, insert:

That in the reconstruction of the levee along the left bank of the Arkansas River in Conway Levee District No. 1, Conway County, Ark., as provided under the terms of section 7 of the flood control act (Public, No. 391), approved May 15, 1928, authority is hereby granted to the Secretary of War, upon the recommendation and approval of the Chief of Engineers, to relocate all or any part of said levee when in the opinion of the Chief of Engineers such relocation shall be deemed practical and feasible.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That does not carry any appropriation.

Mr. CARAWAY. It does not.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I can not promise the Senator that we shall be able to hold it in conference.

Mr. CARAWAY. I think there will be no objection to it, because it has been reported in the House.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I desire to make an inquiry with reference to the provision which was placed in the bill by the House on pages 12 and 13, which would limit each officer of the Army to one mount. What has been done with that?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The committee recommended that the House provision be stricken out, and the Senate has concurred in that action, so that the law will remain as it now is if the Senate amendment is maintained. An officer over the grade of captain who is required to be mounted will be permitted, if he pleases, to maintain two horses at the public expense.

Mr. BLACK. I understood that if there was any objection to any committee amendment agreed to last Saturday it could be voted on. I do not want to present any argument, or anything of that kind, but I do ask for a vote on this amendment after the Senate shall understand what it is.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I am very glad to agree in asking that the Senate reconsider its action, if the Senator wants a vote on the amendment.

Mr. BLACK. I request that the Senate do take a vote upon striking out that particular House provision.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is found on page 12, the provision beginning in line 18 and running to line 3 on the following page.

Mr. BLACK. I will just state what it is. This amendment of the Senate committee would strike out a House provision, limiting each Army officer to one horse. It does not amount to so very much; there are several hundred horses, the number having been given in the debate in the House.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator knows that if the horses are not provided privately they will be provided by the Government, because it is necessary that such mounts be provided.

Mr. BLACK. But the provision of the bill would limit each man to one horse, whether it is provided by the Government or provided by himself.

Mr. COPELAND. No; it does not do that.

Mr. BLACK. The Government will not pay for the expense of the additional horse.

Mr. COPELAND. If the Senator will read the record, he will find that it is plainly set forth that if the amendment prevails the Government will be called upon to maintain more horses at Government expense.

Mr. BLACK. The Senator must be wrong, because this is the language of the amendment:

Provided, That the number of horses owned by any officer of the Army occasioning any public expense, including extra compensation, shall be reduced to one on July 1, 1929, and no appropriation contained in this act shall be available for any expense on account of a Government-owned horse used by any officer who has a privately owned mount occasioning public expense, including extra compensation, except in the case of an officer serving with troops whose privately owned mount may be sick or injured, and except in the case of an officer away from his regular post of duty.

Mr. COPELAND. Suppose the one mount he owns goes lame.

Mr. BLACK. That is provided for.

Mr. COPELAND. He has then got to take a Government horse.

Mr. BLACK. Yes; except in the case of the officer serving with troops whose privately owned mount may be sick or injured. If his horse gets sick or is injured, the Government lets him take a horse.

Mr. COPELAND. I gained the very distinct impression from the testimony that any man serving with troops, who had occasion to use a horse, needed to have two horses, either privately owned or maintained by the Government, because he could not hope to do full effective service with one mount alone.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. If his horse goes lame and he takes a Government horse, he has to take it from some one, and that means some enlisted man who would be no longer mounted. Furthermore, the important reason which should prevail against the House action is that it is a very severe blow at the horse-breeding industry, which needs all the encouragement the Army can give it.

Mr. BLACK. I do not care to argue it, but I do not see any more reason why we should encourage the horse-breeding industry by keeping a surplus of horses that are not needed any more than we should encourage the making of uniforms by providing two or more uniforms for each man.

Mr. BARKLEY. In order to have the required number of horses for the Cavalry of the Army it is necessary to have in the country a large surplus of well-bred horses from which selections can be made. If we cut down the number of horses by one-half, it not only discourages and demoralizes the Cavalry itself, but it also discourages the breeding of horses for the creation of this reservoir from which the Army makes its selection in order to obtain the required number of the proper kind of horses.

Mr. BLACK. I do not understand how that could be. I did not rise to argue the question. I simply wanted to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that the whole issue is whether an Army officer should have one horse or two horses. I know that when I was in the Artillery we did not have saddles most of the time. Part of the time we were compelled to get along with one horse. I can not see why an Army officer should have two horses.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, there is one more matter that I want to call to the attention of the Senate and to the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, being an amendment on pages 21 and 22 with reference to procurement. As I understand it, the objection in the House to the item of procurement was that it was money which was utilized for the purpose of sending men out into the various fields of industry and manufacturing activities in order to acquaint themselves with industry and manufacturing. Is that the object of the provision?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is a small part of the larger subject of what is called procurement plans. As the Senator knows, when the last war broke out no one in the War Department could say what industries were capable of producing shells or guns or blankets, and so forth. With few exceptions they were perfectly ignorant of the capacity of the country for war-time supplies. It is with the idea of preventing a recurrence of such a situation that a study has been going on since the conclusion of the war to determine just from which industries could be had what quantities of essential supplies for war time. The language refers to that activity. There are two amendments in the bill touching on the subject. One of them is that found at the bottom of page 21 dealing with the number of officers who should be assigned to that work and the other relates to having only one office in any city. The obvious result of the House provision would be that if we had an officer in each of two Government buildings in the same town, they would have to abandon those offices and hire two rooms in some other place. We figured it would add much to the cost of the work and would make no saving at all, so we proposed to strike out that language.

As to the number of officers, at the urgent request of the Secretary of War or his assistant, the committee unanimously decided to strike out the provision to which the Senator calls attention.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, there are one or two matters about which I wish to inquire and to have emphasized. First, I refer to the Organized Reserve. As I understand it, we trained last year 16,000 men. This year provision was made for 19,500. In the pending bill the number is increased to 21,000. Am I correct?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes, Mr. President; the Senator is correct.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course, there are many in the reserve, like General Delafield and others who appeared before us, who think that number is entirely inadequate. But I think in defense of the bill and of the general spirit of the Congress it should be pointed out to the country that we have increased the number 19,500 trained last year to 21,000 for next year.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is correct; and it was only 16,000 the year before that.

Mr. COPELAND. It was 16,000 last year, 19,500 this year, and it will be 21,000 the coming year.

Now, I wish to inquire about the appropriation made for the Reserve Corps flying. I was very much disappointed because I did not succeed in impressing upon the committee the importance of appropriating more money for the sake of safety in the air. But in the subcommittee we agreed that the number of hours should be increased to 22,500 in order that we might have 4 hours a month in the air instead of 1 as it is at present.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I doubt if it will give four hours, but it ought to give at least two hours to every reserve aviation officer of class 1, the class considered ready for active war-time service.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course the testimony was very clear before the committee that, in order to have safety in the air, these men should have four hours a month. In order to have that much it was necessary to increase the appropriation by $477,000.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is correct.

Mr. COPELAND. I observe the amount was increased only about one-half that sum, and I desire to inquire about it because in the subcommittee we had a different plan in mind. That will be found on page 56 of the bill, line 3.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The addition was $477,389 to provide the additional 7,000 hours of reserve flying.

Mr. COPELAND. Then am I to understand the Senator to say that we increased the amount by the amendment to the House bill to add $477,389?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is correct.

Mr. COPELAND. Then, if I am correctly advised, that will provide for four hours of flying instead of one, and of course will increase materially the safety of the air. I am right about that, I assume?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I am afraid the Senator is not correct. I wish he were correct. I agree with him that four hours a month are desirable, but it is one of the many places at which a saving had to be made.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator is quite confident that the Congress of the United States desires to appropriate money enough to make flying as safe as possible. I am quite disappointed if the Senator takes the view that the appropriation as agreed upon will not give four hours a month for such flying as we are discussing. How much more would we need to give that much flying?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. To give four hours of flying per month for the 630 officers who are classed as class 1 on inactive duty we would have to add $980,036 to the amount now in the bill.

Mr. COPELAND. Does the Senator mean $980,000 in addition to the $477,000 already added? I think he is mistaken about that.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That would be the amount, I am told, necessary to be added to the amount provided by the House, so that the increase would be approximately $490,000 over the increase we have provided.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I think the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs is wrong, for this reason: The House, in their wisdom, only provided for one hour of flying a month for each of the first-class reserve officers on an inactive status. The Senate committee doubled that amount, to provide for two hours a month, and the cost of that additional one hour per month is nearly $500,000. To double that again and make it four hours per month, as those of us who are interested in aviation would like to see done, would mean the addition of nearly $1,000,000 to the amount provided by the House.

Mr. COPELAND. I assume that Senators may be well informed on aviation, but are not always good mathematicians. As a matter of fact, we add to the bill as it came from the House $233,095; but it was testified before the subcommittee that by the addition of $477,000—that is, by an addition of $244,000 over what is provided in the Senate committee bill—there could be four hours of flying.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, on page 206 of the Senate committee hearings the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BINGHAM] asked:

> What about those figures on the 4-hour proposition?

The answer was:

> Mr. DAVISON. Well, to add 20,000 hours to the 15,531 hours that are included by the bill would require $980,036.

So the addition of $980,036 to the amount included in the House bill would provide four hours, according to his testimony. I confess I can not see how it figures out that way.

Mr. COPELAND. As reported in the bill that we have before us there is an increase of 50 per cent in the number of flying hours. Is there not an increase from 15,000 hours to 22,500? Am I right about that?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That is correct.

Mr. COPELAND. And the view of the Senator is that with that addition it would not be possible to give four hours of flying service?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I think that is correct.

Mr. COPELAND. Am I right in assuming that a point of order would lie against a motion to increase the amount?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes; and I should feel obliged to make the point of order.

Mr. COPELAND. I can quite understand the position of the Senator, and I realize that his motives are entirely honorable. But, of course, I want it understood, so far as I am concerned, that I am very much disappointed that the committee did not recommend a larger amount for safety in flying. I tried hard in the subcommittee to have a million dollars added to the appropriation for safety service and investigation. That idea did not prevail, and I am again disappointed. From the notes that I took at the time I thought reserve officers would have four hours of flying. But that seems impossible, and we are precluded from increasing the amount because of the parliamentary situation. We shall try again next year to promote safety in the air.

Now, I want to ask the chairman of the committee about the citizens' military training camps. As I understand, last year or year before last we provided for the training of 35,000 and in the bill before us there is provision for 37,500 men. Am I right in that?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. We hope they will be able to train a larger number than that. We are appropriating the same amount of money as last year, but it is with the hope and expectation that a larger number of young men will be provided for.

Mr. COPELAND. May I ask the chairman of the committee what is the attitude of the committee or of its chairman regarding the use of reserve officers in training the trainees in the citizens' military camps?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. In our judgment it is a very good thing, both for the trainees and for the officers, assuming that the proper selections are made.

Mr. COPELAND. Is it the judgment of the Senator that that plan will be followed?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I hope it will be. It was tried in one camp last summer, and was found to be very successful; a good thing for the officers and a fine thing for the young men under them.

Mr. COPELAND. I hold in my hand, Mr. President, an editorial from the Reserve Officer, the official organ of the Reserve Officers' Association, volume 5, December, 1928, No. 9, from which I quote the following:

> The most important advancement in the training of the Officers' Reserve Corps and, we think, the citizens' military training camp students, is the plan just announced by the War Department.

I ask that the article be included in the RECORD without reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The article is as follows:

[Editorial from The Reserve Officer, official organ of the Reserve Officers' Association of the United States, vol. 5, December, 1928, No. 9]

RESERVE REGIMENTS TO TRAIN CITIZENS' MILITARY TRAINING CAMPS

The most important advancement in the training of the Officers' Reserve Corps and, we think, the citizens' military training camp students, is the plan just announced by the War Department. The plan comes to us through the clear understanding of the needs of the reserve officers by the Assistant Secretary of War, Col. Charles Burton Robbins, who has had the plan under consideration for months.

Adequate training can not be afforded a reserve officer that does not provide an opportunity to command, one thing that can not be accomplished in any correspondence course ever devised. The new plan of training will afford practical problems in administration and opportunities to exercise command that will enable superior officers to give instruction and actual knowledge of the capabilities of the officers of their command.

Supplementing the terse instructions of the War Department comes a fuller understanding of the way the plan is to be operated. Reserve officers will be placed in full charge and made responsible for the success of the citizens' military training camps, under the supervision of post commanders and Regular Army executive officers with the citizens' military training camps and reserve officers, through a system of inspections and critics. The command of the camps, however, will be actually exercised by the reserve commanders.

Such training as this plan does not incidentally supply the various grades of officers present will be afforded by specially prepared schedules which will be carried out in addition to the routine camp work.

Those reserve officers most familiar with the plan which might well be designated the "Robbins plan of training" are enthusiastic and unhesitatingly predict its complete success for both the citizens' military training camps and the Organized Reserves.

Mr. COPELAND. If I understand the Senator correctly, it is his view that it would be advantageous both to the reserve officers and the citizens in the camps if this plan of training by the reserve officers prevailed?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes; quite so.

Mr. COPELAND. Let me ask the Senator if this plan has been studied by the War Department?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes, Mr. President; and after study the War Department authorized the establishment of the scheme in one camp in order to try it out.

Mr. COPELAND. As I understand, the Senator says in that camp there was approval of the plan?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. There was general approval by both the officers and the trainees and also by the Regulars who observed it.

Mr. COPELAND. Was there approval from any other camp or any other conspicuous source of that plan?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. No other camp had it.

Mr. COPELAND. I mean in so far as the theory is concerned?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I saw a number of editorials in the Hearst newspapers denouncing it, but it was perfectly evident that the man who wrote the editorials did not know anything about the subject.

Mr. COPELAND. I suppose a man might write for the Hearst newspapers or any other newspapers and yet have some patriotic intention.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I am quite sure that the Hearst newspapers are animated by nothing but unselfish patriotism, but they are sometimes wrong, and that was one of the times.

Mr. COPELAND. Does the Senator resent any reference to this matter because it happened to be mentioned in the Hearst newspapers?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. No; I resented the editorial bitterly because many of the reserve officers learned to manage men and to command men by actual battle service in the World War, and I resented very much that the newspapers of large circulation such as those should publish unfair editorials denouncing them as if they had had no training at all.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course, the Senator realizes that the Senator from New York has made no reference to the Hearst editorials.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I so understand.

Mr. COPELAND. And that the particular sentiments to which he refers are not pertinent to the present discussion, I take it.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I did not mean to ascribe to the Senator from New York any of the sentiments of those editorials.

Mr. COPELAND. I am very much interested in the matter under discussion. It has been brought to my attention that complaints have been made by citizens who have gone to the military training camps that a system of training directed by reserve officers may not be so perfect as a system directed by officers of the Regular Army.

I realize that no finer training could be given than by the men who served in the late war. If I were to study under the instruction of any military teacher, I should be proud to have one who had the heroic experience of actual warfare; but, of necessity, as was pointed out before our committee, the men who served in the late war, with notable exceptions in the Senate, are growing old. Of course, I realize that the able and vigorous Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED], the distinguished Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BINGHAM], and other Senators who served in the World War are young men.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I have aged considerably since the Senate began the consideration of this bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. COPELAND. I can realize that, and I hope not to add more than a few weeks to the age of the Senator by prolonging the discussion, and I trust that the bill may pass very soon. However, the point I was making was that, as suggested by General Delafield, for instance, and by other reserve officers, the fact is that it is very necessary for us to encourage officers who come from the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, the college training corps, to take part in this activity in order that they may help maintain our citizen army; but the question does enter my mind whether it is wise to turn over to reserve officers work which in the past has been done by Regular Army officers. It is probably all right, but I think that the Senate is entitled to have a report from the General Staff of the studies made regarding this innovation and the recommendations they have to make about it before the order shall actually be issued.

Furthermore, while the Senator has spoken about a report from the officers of one camp, it seems that we ought to know exactly what was the attitude of the trainees in the camps regarding this particular plan. It was because I felt that we were entitled to know the facts that I rose to my feet to-day. May I ask the Senator if he will be good enough to see that there shall be made to the Senate a report from the Army regarding this question?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I shall be very glad to do that, Mr. President. I think the Senate is entitled to full information about it; but I hope the Senator will understand that to the young man who goes as a trainee to one of those camps it is a matter of comparative indifference whether the lieutenant and the captain of his company are graduates of the West Point Military Academy or are graduates of some other university where military training is given. Neither of them when they graduate have had any experience in the command of men; to become valuable officers, both the Regular and the reserve officer must have it, just as the National Guard men must have it. We never can tell except by actual trial which men have the gift of command; it is one thing that can not be weighed or tested in advance by any species of analysis or checking. These young officers are criticized most severely, but I hope the Senate will believe that any one of them found wanting in the qualities that go to make up a proper and considerate leader of men would be instantly dismissed from his assignment and probably dismissed from the reserves.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course, that is one of the things I had in mind, if I may say so to the Senator. Sometimes these men might be so inexperienced and so temperamentally unfit that they would fail in their command of men in the camp, and in that way demoralize their respective groups.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Any officer who showed such a tendency would be dismissed the very first day of his service. We had the same situation during the war. In the organization of the National Army divisions there were scarcely a handfull of Regular officers assigned to each division. The company officers, the battalion officers, and many of the other field officers were reserve officers who had never commanded men; many of them had never exercised command. The weeding out process was very rapid, and that is what we will have in another war. If we can weed the officers out in advance we shall have gained just that much time, and I can assure the Senator that their work will be rigidly scrutinized.

Mr. COPELAND. It is because I am anxious that we should not have that state of affairs if we ever have another war, which God forbid, that I think we must make very certain that the men from civil life who give of their time and forego their vacations and frequently their pay in order to have the training, shall be well taught and trained. I have sometimes criticized the colleges because the freshman student does not receive instruction from trained teachers. Often new instructors, new teachers, are placed in charge of the freshmen in a college, when, as a matter of fact, in that formative period of their lives and of their minds they need the very best instruction they can have.

Likewise, I feel that in the case of these citizens' training camps we should make sure that the citizens who go there to train are given the very best of instruction; and I know that is exactly what the Senator from Pennsylvania desires. I rose to ask these questions and am very glad of the promise of the Senator that we shall be given this information. I want to be able to say to my constituents that this matter has been given serious consideration by the Senate and by the General Staff of the Army, and that the plan, if it is adopted, is a proper plan. At this time there is some doubt in certain minds about it; and I hope this information promised by the chairman of the committee will dissolve all doubts, and that the country will be satisfied.

I thank the Senator.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, apropos of the subject referred to by the Senator from Iowa, I have had a number of communications from reserve officers urging an increase in the membership of that organization. I have also had communications from members of the National Guard in which the contention was made that Congress had been too generous to the reserve officers' organization; that there was no necessity for increasing the number of reserve officers, but, upon the contrary, that there should be a gradual reduction. There were some complaints that there was a disposition to retain in the organization too large a number who were, because of age or other causes, not suitable for efficient and active service.

Mr. President, I am inviting the attention of the chairman to these statements in order that he may have an opportunity to reply to the same. I confess that I have had considerable interest in the reserve officers' organization and have felt that it was serving a useful purpose. It seems to me that I have believed that if the Government is to maintain military organizations outside of the Regular Army to aid in military training, the National Guard organizations should be developed and strengthened. I should dislike to see any rivalry between the reserve officers' organization or the National Guard. Some of the communications which I have received emphasize the importance of developing the National Guard and making it an important auxiliary of the Army.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, it is difficult to answer so many question by a single "yes" or "no"——

Mr. KING. I know it is.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. But I shall try to be brief.

A good many people follow the method of the poor salesman: They try to get an advantage for some cause they believe in by running down something else.

To start with, I do not believe that at any time in its history the National Guard has been as efficient, as well officered, as well disciplined, or as much interested in its work as it is to-day. We have every reason to be proud of the National Guard and of the system under which it is now working.

All of the National Guard officers are themselves reserve officers. Nine thousand of them have commissions in the reserve; so that we have to start by excluding that group, for presumably they are not criticizing themselves.

About thirty-five or forty thousand—I forget the exact number, but approximately that many—are physicians, veterinarians, dentists, chaplains, officers of staff qualifications, who are never intended to have command of troops, who do not need to be experienced in military science. We have to exclude them, too, because they are practicing their professions all the time and presumably are keeping in practice.

When we take the remainder of the Reserve Corps, sixty-five or seventy thousand—they run all the way from young men, full of ardor, who keep up their military studies all the time, like these class 1 pilot aviators—there is not a finer group of young men on earth than they are—and the younger officers in the line regiments, the Infantry and the Field Artillery and the Engineers. It is a great national asset to have them in the reserve, already assigned to skeleton regiments that will be organized when war is declared. They are a great asset; and the complaints that the Senator has heard do not apply to them. Then, there are a lot of old fellows like myself who are rapidly getting past their days of military fitness, who are still on the list of reserve officers, and who ought to be weeded out; and the process of weeding out is going on now. The examinations are very drastic. They have to pass both physical and mental examinations and repeated courses in paper work; so that the ineffective ones are being weeded out. To the extent that they are still there, the criticism is just; but everybody is aware of it, and in a couple of years the weeding-out process will have given us a very fit reserve.

I hope that answers the Senator's question.

Mr. KING. I think it meets the question submitted to me, Mr. President. I am glad to receive the information.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. May I add further that in their sympathy with the National Guard the subcommittee and the full Committee on Appropriations have adopted all of the suggestions urged by the adjutants general for increases in the National Guard appropriations, and we hope that we shall be able to hold them in conference.

Mr. KING. I desire to inquire of the Senator whether there is any appropriation carried in the bill for Alaska except the $1,000,000 found on page 78?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes, Mr. President; there is an item under the Signal Corps for the cable which runs from Puget Sound to Alaska.

Mr. KING. May I say to the Senator that I am not so much concerned about that. Is there any item carried in the bill for the railroad in Alaska?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I do not think there is any item in this bill for the railroad. I do not recall.

Mr. KING. There should not be; but I was fearful that there might be, in view of the item which I find on page 78—

$1,000,000, to be available immediately, and to include $1,000 compensation to the president of the Board of Railroad Commissioners for Alaska, in addition to his regular pay and allowances.

I was wondering, first, what this $1,000,000 is to be used for; and, if it is for roads or bridges or trails or anything of that nature, I was wondering why it should be in this bill.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Because it is expended under the Corps of Engineers. It costs about half a million dollars a year for current maintenance of the roads and bridges in Alaska. The additional half million dollars is for the extension of roads into new communities. The Senator knows how much it costs to transport freight in the interior of Alaska. The road system there ought to be much extended. This item does not include anything for the Alaska Railroad.

Mr. KING. Is this road system, for which provision is made, postulated upon the ground that it is a military necessity?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. No, Mr. President. It is postulated on the same theory that leads us to appropriate money for road assistance throughout the United States; and we must remember that practically every acre of land in Alaska is land owned by the United States Government. We are building roads through our own property, in a sense; and we must remember, also, that very large contributions are made out of the Territorial treasury from taxes levied in the Territory.

Mr. KING. Why should not the appropriations made by the Federal Government for roads in Alaska be expended by the Bureau of Public Roads in the Department of Agriculture, rather than by the military organization?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Presumably because they have no organization there.

Mr. KING. If that is true, that probably would be a sufficient reason for departing from the accepted plan which is employed in the construction of Federal roads.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The Army always has done it, Mr. President, ever since the development of Alaska began.

Mr. KING. I notice, beginning with line 17, on page 66, and terminating with line 3, on page 67, a number of items. I am making no objection to the items. I was wondering what the liability of the Government was, and why these items were not carried in some pension bill.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Those, as I recall, are all widows of doctors who took part in the yellow-fever experiments under Maj. Walter Reed. Those are special payments that have been authorized by a previous act of Congress.

Mr. KING. Then they would not come within the general pension act?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. No, Mr. President. There is a bill which will be reported to the Senate to-morrow providing for pensions for all of those heroic people who exposed themselves to the yellow-fever tests, about 30 of them in all.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator if the item of $50,000,000, carried in the bill for rivers and harbors, includes the appropriations which would be made under the recent Mississippi River flood control act?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. No, Mr. President; that is a separate item. The Mississippi flood-control item will be found on pages 80 and 81. The $50,000,000 is for work regularly done each year under the Chief of Engineers. The flood-control item is found at line 24, page 80. That is why this appropriation bill is so much bigger than that of last year.

Mr. KING. I should like to ask the Senator who is to determine where the $50,000,000 is to be expended? What authorizations have been made?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I should much prefer to have the Senator ask the chairman of the Committee on Commerce about that. This part of the bill is chiefly based on laws that have come from that committee. I have, myself, a very vague impression of the flood control act. If the Senator will postpone that question, I will try to get him the answer.

Mr. KING. The inquiry was directed, rather, toward the various items which undoubtedly make up the $50,000,000 appropriation.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Oh, I beg the Senator's pardon. As to that, the Senator will find the rivers and harbors figures given completely. There is an entire volume of the House hearings devoted almost exclusively to that subject. In that is a tabulation showing the apportionment of the $50,000,000. It begins on page 116 of the House hearings and ends on page 122. Does the Senator wish me to give the recapitulation?

Mr. KING. I would be glad to have the Senator do that.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I will hand the figures to the clerk to read, if the Senator does not object.

Mr. KING. I have no objection to that. May I say to the Senator that he will understand that those who are not members of the committee did not have the advantage of contact with the witnesses who have testified and have no opportunity to become acquainted with these large appropriations. I have been curious to ascertain just how that $50,000,000 is to be allocated, upon whom the responsibility is to rest, and whether we may safely commit to their hands the allocation of this large amount.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

	Improvement	Maintenance
Seacoast harbors and channels	$9,009,520	$10,676,860
Mississippi River system	16,509,000	3,524,000
Lake harbors and channels	3,122,000	1,725,500
Internal waterways, exclusive of the Mississippi River system	1,773,000	1,718,500
Surveys (H. Doc. No. 308, 69th Cong., 1st sess.)	1,500,000
Examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors		250,000
Departmental service, allotment roll		191,620
Total	31,913,520	18,086,480
	50,000,000

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I would like to make an inquiry of the Senator from Pennsylvania, who is in charge of this appropriation bill, with reference to the sums of money now incorporated in the bill by amendments for the purpose of reimbursing the States for damage done to roadways, causeways, bridges, or what not. Of course, I am familiar with the amendment on which we voted yesterday, providing an appropriation to the State of California of $4,370,000 to reimburse the State for moneys expended upon the Sacramento River. The RECORD of yesterday shows the approval of an amendment to reimburse four States in the Mississippi Valley in the sum of $3,654,000 for moneys expended in the replacing of bridges, roads, and so on, to which the Federal Government had in the first instance contributed. But there are other like items; that is to say, other amendments of the same general character, as I understand it, which have been accepted to-day, or voted into the bill, and I would like to have some idea of the amount involved.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I know of no other amendment now in the bill that calls for the reimbursement of any State for expenditures of any sort. Two amendments were adopted to-day providing appropriations for certain flood-relief work on the Missouri River.

Mr. GEORGE. Is that for work to be done or for work already done?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is for work to be done.

Mr. GEORGE. Prospective?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Prospective. It is just like the $50,000,000 appropriated for river and harbor work.

Mr. GEORGE. There is no other amendment except the ones indicated?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I know of no other retrospective donations to States.

Mr. SIMMONS. The $50,000,000 appropriation covers appropriations made under authorizations heretofore made by Congress?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes, Mr. President.

Mr. SIMMONS. But as I understand the Senator from Georgia now, he is asking for information as to the sum total of the amounts we have appropriated for rivers and harbors and bridges where there has been no authorization or past action.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. What he asked was the amount reimbursed to States for past expenditures. Was not that the Senator's question?

Mr. GEORGE. I confined my question to that.

Mr. SIMMONS. If the Senator will pardon me, I would like to ask the Senator from Pennsylvania an additional question as to how much the bill will carry under the amendments he has accepted and the Senate has agreed to for future expenditures on works that have not heretofore been authorized, where the appropriation is an entirely new thing?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I am not prepared to answer the Senator. I do not know how much will be required on these two projects on the Missouri River. I am told the work can be done for something under half a million dollars, but I do not recall the amount. In those cases the authority for the appropriation has already passed the Senate, so that we are not acting in the dark and without the advice of our standing committees.

Mr. SIMMONS. How much was appropriated for the California project?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The California project has been authorized, has been approved by the Budget, and is covered by existing law. The amount is $4,360,000, as I recall it, for past work and $1,000,000 for work to be done in the next fiscal year. All that is covered by existing legislation.

Mr. SIMMONS. I happened to be out of the Senate for a few moments. What became of the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL]?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I made a point of order against the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida, and it was sustained.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I do not know that I have ever before said anything with regard to any appropriation bill, except possibly to offer some minor amendment. I have no purpose to criticize the method of procedure now growing up in the Senate at this time, because perhaps I ought to have been more active before; but if the Senate is going to commit itself to the policy of reimbursing the States for expenditures made by the States on the States' own programs, and under the States' own supervision, there will positively be no end to the trouble into which the Congress is bound to run.

I have no particular purpose in saying anything about the appropriation voted yesterday of $3,654,000 for four of the States in the Mississippi Valley, but that appropriation was voted to reimburse the States for moneys already expended by the States in repairing roads upon which the Federal Government had initially or theretofore expended money.

I undertake to say that in my own State, and in very nearly every other State in this Union, a very considerable bill could be presented to the Senate every year for precisely the same character of damages. I am not saying that we should not have voted the amounts in these instances, or in the case of California, because the flood control bill did authorize that particular appropriation, perhaps renewed the authority for it, but there will be no way to distinguish between the claim of one State and the claim of another State, and the size of the flood and the disaster wrought by the flood will have, properly speaking, no material bearing, because where a road is washed away and destroyed, if it had been built in the first instance by Federal money, or in part by Federal funds, the State would have the same moral and legal right to come to Congress and ask that it be reimbursed.

Mr. President, I want to emphasize what I am saying, that the Senate is committing itself to a course that it will undoubtedly have occasion to rue, because we can not keep up expenditures that will grow and constantly grow upon the same account represented by these appropriations.

In the early part of this session the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] introduced a joint resolution providing for an appropriation by Congress, not to be given or donated to anyone, but to be used as a loan fund, not for people who were engaged in an experiment, but for people who had for long, long years, indeed, for generations, been engaged in farming. It was necessary to provide a fund, if possible, by way of a loan to the farmers in two or three of the Southeastern States, in order to enable them to make crops, to make it possible for them to remain upon their farms.

The Senate passed that joint resolution, and in the House it was referred to the President and to the Budget. That kind of legislation is against the financial program and policy of the administration, and the joint resolution had the disapproval of the President and of the Budget. But last year, in an appropriation bill, we appropriated $5,000,000 to reimburse the States of Vermont, New Hampshire, and Kentucky for the repair of roads which had been damaged and destroyed by floods.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The appropriation in that case was not to reimburse those States, but to match dollar for dollar for the purpose of reconstructing the roads, large portions of which were Federal highways.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, if a State has gone ahead and discharged an obligation which ought to rest upon the Government, is it not entitled to have the money returned to it just as much as if it had applied in advance and had the money appropriated?

Mr. GEORGE. I do not think so.

Mr. CARAWAY. For instance, if Kentucky and Vermont are entitled to have paid to them out of the Federal Treasury 50 cents on every dollar spent by them in the repair of roads, and some other State suffering exactly the same injury has gone ahead and repaired similar roads, does not the Senator think it would be entitled to be reimbursed?

Mr. GEORGE. I do not say it is not entitled to be reimbursed, but we are not entitled to vote money to reimburse States when they have undertaken work, under their own programs, under their own supervision, unrestrained, uninfluenced, and uncontrolled by the Congress.

Mr. CARAWAY. There was no restraint and no control over the kind and amount of work to be done in Vermont, except the amount of the Federal appropriation.

Mr. GEORGE. I presume that appropriation came under the general act and was governed by the general law, except that the appropriation itself was made upon this special bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. The appropriation had to be expended under the jurisdiction and control of the Federal highway department, just as all other road funds are now expended.

Mr. CARAWAY. There may be a difference there, but I shall never be able to see it.

Mr. GEORGE. There is this difference. The Congress will be able to see it or else we will be placed in that situation under which no Congress can live. If we are going to appropriate money, as we are now beginning to appropriate it, to reimburse a State where the State has elected to do the improving on its own plan, under its own supervision, at its own will, we virtually give over to the State the power and authority to do the work, and come here and merely collect the funds and reimburse itself for the work it has done.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. KING. My understanding is that Federal highways when completed are to be maintained subsequently by the States—that is to say, the Federal Government under the present plan makes certain appropriations for Federal highways—but after they are completed the maintenance of them devolves upon the States. If the Federal Government is to be called upon to maintain them because of a flood, it would seem to me the Federal Government could be called upon to maintain them when by erosion or use the roads are in a condition to require repair.

Mr. GEORGE. It was not any particular injustice in any particular appropriation made that I was directing to the attention of the Senate. I have no doubt that in the case of the Mississippi Valley States the reimbursement authorized and now to be made was in the first instance a very proper expenditure, very wisely made. That might be true in any particular instance, but it will not be true in all instances; it can not be true in all instances if we adopt the policy of reimbursing for expenditures made by a State upon its program under its supervision and then permitting it to come to the Congress to get its money back.

But beyond that the possibilities are so great for overloading appropriation bills that we have got to think of the problem whether we will or not. Perhaps the largest appropriation bill we have to consider is that for the maintenance of the War Department and for the Army. It is a bill carrying a considerable sum of money. The War Department perhaps more than any other department of the Government is overloaded with nonmilitary matter. It has to carry the burden. That, of course, does not make any difference; that is to say, it makes no particular difference to the people nor any particular difference to the Congress. But if we adopt the policy that is manifest particularly in this Congress and in the Congress preceding it, we will find that the appropriations will grow by leaps and bounds until there will scarcely be any way to put a limitation upon them.

It is not very difficult, perhaps, to get a committee to favorably report a particular bill, even an appropriation bill; because the committee generally assumes that it is coming before the Senate and is going to be pretty fully debated by the Senate, and oftentimes it is not very difficult to have a report made by a committee so that any proposal to attach an appropriation to a general appropriation bill may withstand a mere point of order aimed at it. It will be seen in this particular bill that we are appropriating nearly $10,000,000 to reimburse States for expenditures already made, and then considerable sums for prospective work, on the mere recommendation or favorable report of a committee to the body without much real consideration of the appropriation. I think we can begin to have some appreciation of the evils involved in the policy of appropriating money as we are now doing. It would be much better for every bill to go to its appropriate committee and there have its consideration. It would be much better to make more rigid rules with reference to the addition of sums to an appropriation bill than to take the other course and find an easier way of increasing the appropriations.

I know very well that in the State on the south of my own State, in the State to the north of my own State, in my own State, and no doubt in many other States, we have had on account of flood and storm tremendous damage to the highways, causeways, bridges, and other public improvements to which the Federal Government has in part contributed; and that for those three States alone if a bill were brought to the Congress we would be called upon to appropriate at least a sum of money much in excess of the items which have been incorporated in the bill to-day and yesterday. I have no doubt the same is true of many other States.

I am merely trying to emphasize again that we will be confronted with the precedent we are setting in the Senate yesterday and to-day, and it will be a troublesome precedent. It will be a precedent which, if we yield to it, certainly will carry our appropriations beyond what at least many of us think at this time.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I want to ask the Senator from Georgia if he thinks that action will be taken upon the measure to which he referred a little while ago, providing funds to take care of the sufferers from floods in Georgia and South Carolina and Florida. The Senator will recall that when the matter was first brought up in the Senate by the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL] and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] the Porto Rico matter was pending, and they were urged not to press the claim at that time or to attempt to attach it to the Porto Rico bill, which they had in mind to do, but to postpone it until the Porto Rico matter was out of the way and that their matter would then be certainly taken care of.

I think as a matter of good faith those who engineered and had in charge the Porto Rico matter owe it to the Senator from Georgia and his colleague, and to the South Carolina Senators and to the Florida Senators and the people who represent those States here, and who urged this matter and who presented it and had favorable commendation on it by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to help pass the bill and have it approved by those in authority in the administration. It ought to be enacted into law promptly.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Alabama that the House committee has reported the bill with amendments for approximately one-third of the amount approved in the Senate. I believe that perhaps they will get a rule in the House for consideration of the measure as amended. The Senator from South Carolina would probably be in better position to speak upon that matter. He this morning called on the officers of the House.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield to me?

Mr. HEFLIN. Certainly.

Mr. SMITH. In answer to the inquiry of the Senator from Alabama and the statement of the Senator from Georgia, I will state that Members of the House and Senate from the region affected met the Rules Committee this morning, asking that a special rule, in accordance with the custom of that body, be reported out. I understand that the Committee on Rules unanimously reported a rule to bring out the bill.

If the Senator from Alabama will allow me further, I would like to state in this connection that there has been circulated in my State and elsewhere a statement to the effect that this effort on the part of those who tried to get the relief was a mere gesture, that we had no intent or purpose, perhaps, to push it to an ultimate conclusion.

I hope that that rumor was born of the keen disappointment of those who so sadly needed it and whose disappointment came about because of the seeming delay. The Senate kept the faith to the letter on the tacit understanding that if those of us who had suffered so severely from the same cause as Porto Rico would not insist on the measure introduced by myself being attached to the Porto Rico measure, and assured us that our bill would receive like treatment as the Porto Rico measure, which it did in this body. The Porto Rico measure was reported by the proper committee to the other body. It was passed and brought here, referred to the committee, and reported to the Senate, and passed.

Mr. HEFLIN. For the full amount?

Mr. SMITH. Yes; for the full amount. The bill which I introduced, under the suggestion that we keep our policies intact, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. It was reported by that committee to the Senate, and the Senate kept the faith and passed the bill.

Mr. HEFLIN. What was the amount?

Mr. SMITH. It was $15,000,000 for four States specifically mentioned—North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida—and subsequently it was so worded as to take care of others that had suffered likewise.

Mr. HEFLIN. There was some damage in my State.

Mr. SMITH. Yes. The Porto Rico bill passed and was promptly signed, and the officers who were named in the bill to administer it went to Porto Rico, I understand, and the money is now being used there.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HEFLIN. Certainly.

Mr. BINGHAM. Unfortunately there is not a penny available to be used, because Congress has not yet appropriated any money for that purpose.

Mr. HEFLIN. They know they are going to get it.

Mr. SMITH. My information was to the effect that Mr. Warburton—if I must call names—went to Porto Rico under the authorization of the bill to plan the work for the relief, though perhaps the Senator from Connecticut is right. The money will be available. Anyway, the plan for relief received no setback or hindrance.

Mr. HEFLIN. The fact that it had been enacted into law would assure those people down there that the money would be forthcoming and would enable them to carry on their operations. I ask the Senator from Connecticut if he does not think that is true?

Mr. BINGHAM. They may have hopes, and we all have hopes, that the money will be available some day. I merely wanted to correct the Senator from South Carolina in his statement that the money was being used. Unfortunately, although the bill passed over a month ago, the appropriation bill carrying the money has not yet passed.

Mr. SMITH. The Senator and I know that the appropriating committees of the Senate are not going to deny those suffering people the relief carried in that bill. He knows it and I know it. We would override any appropriating committee if such a thing would become necessary. The Senator knows it and I know it. Those people have come under our jurisdiction and are dependent upon us for relief, and the Senator knows they are going to get it and there is no use attempting to beg the question—and I do not believe the Senator is. So far as the machinery of this body is concerned, there was not a single hitch in the program.

When the relief measure for the section which I have the honor in part to represent went to the House—and I shall not criticize the method there—the Budget Bureau and the President were asked about it, and the reply was that the proposed appropriation was not in accord with the economy program of the administration. For that reason it hung fire. Having discharged my duty, as I thought, in this body, I did not think it incumbent upon me or upon other Senators to assume the burden of its legislative journey through the House. However, we were called upon for our good offices to try to expedite the passage of the proposed legislation, and, as did the Senator from Florida and others, I did what I could to accomplish that result. Several months have elapsed; the planting time has arrived; the farmers of the stricken region had no seed of their own to plant, and the germination of the cottonseed and the corn seed furnished by the Government is so poor as to be practically useless.

The price of fertilizer has advanced while the purchasing power of the people has been destroyed. The matter was gone over and the amount cut down to $6,000,000. That, however, will help some. A special rule was unanimously adopted by the Rules Committee, and the prospects are now that perhaps we shall have the authorization for $6,000,000 for a region three or four times as large as Porto Rico and the suffering in which was equal to that in Porto Rico. I suppose I shall have to be grateful—I will try to be—if we shall finally get the $6,000,000.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

Mr. HEFLIN. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SMITH. I beg pardon of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I want to say to the Senator from Alabama that what some of us have been complaining about to-day was that we were setting a precedent and establishing so far as we could a policy in this bill without anything like mature consideration and by hasty action. That is the gravamen of the complaint that we have been making to-day, or, at least, it was the gravamen of the complaint which I made, and which I think the Senator from Georgia made.

The case to which the Senator from South Carolina refers stands upon an entirely different basis. We were not setting any precedent in that case; we were merely following a well-established precedent in this body. We did not, as we have not done in the past, give the distressed people in the Southern States anything. We simply provided that the Government should loan them its credit and loan it upon good security. The bill requires the same security for amounts advanced by the Government to relieve these distressed farmers that would be required if they were to go to the Federal reserve bank or to the War Finance Corporation, when it was in operation, and apply for a loan. Should they borrow the money, they are required to give good security for it. That is the precedent we are following in the measure in behalf of a distressed people in the southern section of the country; but in the pending bill we have adopted amendments which have never been referred to a committee; which have no precedents to support them; and we are proposing to establish in this hasty way a policy which, as the Senator from Georgia has said and as I said yesterday morning, will lead to consequences that nobody can foresee or foretell.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I have made up my mind that I am going to ask the Committee on Appropriations to instruct the chairman to raise on the floor of the Senate a point of order against every amendment that does not come before that committee regularly and is not otherwise in order. No matter what his embarrassments may be, for he frequently does not make the point because some Senator offers the amendment to whom he is under obligations, the chairman of the committee or the Senator in charge of the bill ought to be instructed by the committee to make such a point of order in order to eliminate appropriations that have never been regularly considered.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I can understand that occasion might arise after a bill is under consideration when a Senator may learn of a situation in his State needing attention which he has no opportunity of presenting to the committee. In such a case he ought not to be deprived of the opportunity of presenting his cause to the Senate; but, as a rule, the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] is right. There ought to be submitted to the committee in advance any proposition which it is desired to present here.

In the Porto Rican measure there were gifts to the people of that island; Porto Rican farmers were allowed to have as much as $25,000 each; while, if I remember correctly, in the bill that I am now discussing and in which the Senators from Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, and North Carolina are interested, it is provided that no farmer shall have over $3,000, though in this instance the farmer is securing the Government and the money is to be returned with the interest upon it. So if we have a Budget Bureau that has rules that can not be bent or broken to meet emergencies such as this we ought to break them for them.

It is wrong when farmers in any section of the United States are driven out of their homes and off their farms because the Government refuses to come to their rescue or to help them back on their feet after a flood has destroyed their possessions, for the Government to go outside of the country, into foreign possessions, establish a different order of things, and become very charitable. It ought to let its charity begin at home; it ought to extend it to the citizens who support the Government in time of peace and fight for it in time of war.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

Mr. HEFLIN. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SIMMONS. I should like to say to the Senator that when I said a while ago that we were following a well-established precedent I meant that we were following a well-established precedent in dealing with our own people. When we come to deal with foreign people or people who are semiattached to the United States we are very much more liberal than we are when we are dealing with our own people.

Mr. HEFLIN. Certainly; the Senator is right as to that.

Mr. SIMMONS. So far as the granting of the Government's credit to help out the farmers is concerned, I have no apology for my position with reference to that. We were certainly doing what we have done heretofore many times, and I was glad this morning to go before the Rules Committee and to urge that committee to facilitate action upon that bill.

Mr. HEFLIN. The Senator means the Rules Committee of the House?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. HEFLIN. They have cut the amount down from about $15,000,000 to $6,000,000, while Porto Rico will get $8,000,000.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President——

Mr. HEFLIN. I yield to the Senator from Florida, who is the first Senator who ever mentioned the flood destruction in the southern section of the country.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I think Porto Rico will get $15,000,000 instead of $8,000,000.

Mr. HEFLIN. Perhaps the Senator is correct.

Mr. BINGHAM. Oh, no; the Senator is quite mistaken.

Mr. TRAMMELL. What is the amount?

Mr. BINGHAM. The total amount is about $7,000,000, if they get it; they have not gotten it as yet.

While I am on my feet may I take exception to what the Senator from Alabama said a few moments ago in his implication that the people of Porto Rico are foreigners and do not help us in time of war? The people of Porto Rico are American citizens; they raised their full quota and would have done more if we had allowed them to do so during the recent war. They are not foreigners; they are American citizens. They served under the colors, and there are about 15,000 there to-day who served during the war.

Mr. HEFLIN. I did not mean the remark in the sense that the Senator understood it.

Mr. BINGHAM. I am very glad to hear the Senator say so.

Mr. HEFLIN. I meant, now that we have taken Porto Rico under the flag, that we should not show more consideration for Porto Rico, for those who have been recently brought under our wing, than we do to those who live in some of the States which were the original Colonies, and neglect them.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HEFLIN. I yield.

Mr. TRAMMELL. The point I wanted to make inquiry about was whether or not the Director of the Budget has even approved an appropriation of $6,000,000 for the relief of our home people. The Director of the Budget has not even approved of that, has he?

Mr. HEFLIN. I do not know.

Mr. TRAMMELL. It is my understanding that the Director of the Budget has withheld his approval even of an appropriation of $6,000,000 to be loaned to our own home people.

So far as the Director of the Budget working under any fixed rules is concerned, from my experience and observation I have found that he has worked under no fixed rules whatever. He works under a rule of discrimination and prejudice, showing a friendly attitude to certain requests and an unfriendly attitude to others, regardless of the merits of the proposition. That is the action of the Director of the Budget, as I have observed it.

Mr. HEFLIN. There has been a good deal of complaint along that line.

I wish to say before I take my seat that if we can not get some action in this matter now, if we can not get the Budget Bureau to approve a meritorious measure such as this, the Senate, representing the sovereign States of this Union, ought to assert itself and speak for the people. This Government is being cursed to-day with bureaucracy; it is top-heavy with bureaucracy. A few highbrow individuals get into positions of power and arrogate to themselves the right to O. K. some and disapprove other measures that do not exactly appeal to them. As the Senator from Florida has said, we know that some can get their measures approved; they are smiled upon, while others are frowned upon and their measures are disapproved. I want everybody treated alike, and that is what Congress ought to see is done, and that is what the Government ought to do. It ought to be just to everybody in the country, to high and low alike; and whenever an unfortunate situation arises, whether it be in the South or in the North, it ought to receive the consideration of every Senator in this body, and there ought not to be any favoritism shown. We ought to do the fair and just thing in it all.

Mr. KING obtained the floor.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President——

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I merely wish to make a brief observation, and I thank the Senator from Utah for giving me the opportunity of doing so. Since the question of the Budget has arisen I myself have in times past criticized what we call the Budget system, and I do not know but that, if the opportunity ever offers, I shall vote to repeal the law providing for such, in my opinion, undemocratic institution; but in justice to the Director of the Budget let me say that, as I understand, his duties are, in cooperation with the President, to ascertain what amount of money is available for the different departments of the Government, and then to apportion the total sum in accordance with the various needs.

The Budget Bureau, of course, has no power to enforce its findings or decrees; its power is more suggestive than anything else. So it is up to Congress to decide what are the impelling, necessary things that may not be contemplated by the Budget. The responsibility for settling these questions rests upon us in the last analysis.

We are not sent here by the people of the United States to be governed by any kind of a body that we have created. They hold us responsible for economy and expedition of business. I presume we established the Budget Bureau so that they might investigate the conditions of the different departments of the Government and make recommendations as to what appropriations would meet the absolute necessities of the different cases and to hold them within economic lines. Being devoted to that duty, they would be better advised than Congress. But when it comes to these questions that are imperative, that arise outside of and are not dependent upon the investigations of the Budget, the responsibility is on us; and no Member of this body or any other body has the moral right to shirk a responsibility simply because some appointee of the Government, appointed at our will and subject to our action, says it is not in accord with the program that has been outlined. It is up to us to say whether it is in accord with the intent and purpose of the governing body in the United States.

I, for one, think it is our duty not to place upon the Director of the Budget or upon the officers of the Budget responsibilities such as this. In my opinion, we ought never to have gone to him. Congress knew the crying necessity of these cases. It should have passed this legislation without regard to the Budget or anybody else, and have given the relief regardless of who might say anything to the contrary.

So the responsibility is on us; and I am sure that both the other body and this body will grant this relief, as they ought to do.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] has made what I regard as an accurate statement of the functions of the Budget and the Director of the Budget, and the responsibility which rests upon Congress in dealing with public questions.

With all due respect to the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN], I want to say that, in my opinion, General Lord has discharged the duties of his important office with fidelity and without regard to section or party. He has not always agreed with my views, or rather I have not always agreed with his views. Perhaps he was right. I am not here to criticize or condemn him. Perhaps I should modify that statement by saying that I have sometimes believed that the Budget Bureau has been too liberal and generous in making recommendations to the President, which the President, in turn, has submitted to Congress.

I am greatly interested in the law creating the Bureau of the Budget. I had some part in drafting the Budget bill. I was a member of the special committee which prepared that legislation. In my opinion this law has accomplished a great deal of good, and has proven of the highest importance to the Government. Without it Congress would have been deluged with demands from executive departments that would have proven irresistible.

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. REED] referred to the tendency of departments, when they get hold of a subject, never to release their control or their grip; they seek to aggrandize their authority and expand their jurisdiction. It is a well-known fact that the executive departments and bureaus and instrumentalities of the Government, in preparing their estimates of expenses, swell the amounts far beyond all reasonable bounds. There is something in bureaucracies referred to by the Senator from Alabama which justifies criticism.

Bureaucrats do not have to raise the money. They belong to spending organizations; they are there to spend and to find methods of spending.

The Budget Bureau has done much to curb some of the mad and extravagant ambitions of various Federal agencies and departments. I only wish that General Lord and the Budget had resisted to a greater degree than they have resisted the claims and demands of some executive departments; but I pay tribute to General Lord, to his fidelity and courage, and to the splendid service which he has rendered.

Mr. President, the Budget—that is, the executive department operating under the Budget law—is required to submit estimates in the form of a budget to Congress. It is the duty of the President, through the Budget, to inform himself as to the needs of the Government, and then to present to Congress, in the form of the Budget, the requirements for the coming fiscal year. The Budget submitted at the opening of Congress in December last shows that there would be a surplus of $37,000,000 after all appropriations for the next fiscal year had been made.

Mr. President, this session is not yet ended. Already, according to my information, there is a deficit of $37,000,000 plus. Before Congress adjourns, unless there shall be a remarkable change in the attitude of Congress, the deficit will be between one and three hundred million dollars.

To meet this deficit, the Government may be required to become a borrower. We are not in a position to increase taxes at present. Indeed, there is no chance to pass a revenue bill this session.

The Republican Party came into power claiming that it would reorganize the departments and effect economies and reforms that would challenge the admiration of the world. It effected no reforms; it has brought about no reorganization, but has multiplied executive agencies and increased the expenses of the Government. For the next fiscal year it is certain that the appropriations will exceed those of the present fiscal year.

Mr. President, we seem to be oblivious to the fact that we are appropriating nearly $5,000,000,000 to meet the expenditures of the Government for the coming year. The bill before us calls for more than $446,000,000. The Navy bill, as I said a few moments ago, will call for nearly $400,000,000. There will be between seven and eight hundred million dollars for our military and naval expenses for the coming year. Then we are appropriating over five hundred, perhaps six hundred millions plus for the Veterans' Bureau, two hundred millions plus for pensions, eight hundred millions for interest, and a stupendous amount for other expenses of the Government, so that when the entire appropriations shall have been tabulated, I think it will be shown that our Budget calls for nearly five billions of dollars to meet the expenses of the Government for the next fiscal year.

Mr. President, there seems to be no spirit of economy in the administration, and I regret to say a similar spirit is manifested in this Chamber. There should be no politics in the consideration of appropriation bills or, for that matter, in the consideration of the overwhelming majority of questions that come before Congress. Democrats and Republicans alike should be interested in reducing the burdens of taxation and limiting expenditures of the Government to the lowest possible point. There is no warrant for the claim made that this administration has been economical. I submit that the proof is indisputable that there have been appropriations made justifying the criticism that recklessness and extravagance have too often been manifested.

The Democratic Party which, when in power, has stood for economy, could have made a more appealing record to the people if it had vigorously opposed the extravagance of the administration and attacked the stupendous appropriations which have been made since the Republican Party came into power. I have criticized my own party because of its failure in this respect. It has often voted against unjust and improper appropriation, but in my opinion we have not been as earnest and vigorous as we might have been in challenging appropriation measures which have been brought before us for consideration.

Mr. President. I shall, when the debate is concluded, submit a motion to recommit the bill with instruction to reduce the aggregate amount carried in the bill $50,000,000, twenty million of which to be taken from the item dealing with rivers and harbors.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, the Bureau of the Budget seems to be under consideration. Opposing views have been expressed. I think the system is a good one. Allowing for all of its mistakes and shortcomings, it is my belief that it has made a substantial contribution to a well-balanced system of the fiscal affairs of the Government.

The matter to which I desire to address myself briefly is the policy, upon which we are now embarking, of reimbursing States for damages caused to highways by floods or otherwise.

It is my understanding that under the Federal-aid highway law the Federal Government pays 63 per cent of the cost of constructing all Federal-aid highways and the State pays the remaining 37 per cent of the cost. When a road is completed its maintenance thereafter is a burden to be borne by the State. The Government has discharged its full duty when it pays its share of the original cost. But now, if I understand the situation correctly, we are establishing a precedent of reimbursing the States for financial burdens occasioned by damages to highways previously constructed under the Federal-aid highway system.

Mr. President, it is my belief that the policy is a dangerous one. I doubt if any Member of the Senate can visualize the enormous expenditures it will necessitate in the future.

I voted against the contentions made by the two Senators from California so ably and so effectively yesterday because I felt that the principle and the policy upon which we were asked to embark was unsound and wrong. In this one bill we are appropriating approximately $7,000,000 for this class of relief. Perhaps the Federal Treasury can stand that without any undue strain, but it merely paves the way for the presentation of other claims in the future, bottomed upon just as much merit as are these items. It may be that we shall be committed in the future. Perhaps no distinction can be drawn between the cases with which we deal in this bill and those that will be presented to the Senate in the future.

I do not want to be bound by the policy, at least through quiescence. I protest against it now, because I think it is laden with trouble that will cause us to rue in the future the precedent we are establishing now.

Every State in the Union, perhaps, can present a claim or a series of claims just as meritorious as any one of these. They will command a sympathetic consideration of the Senate just as much as any one of these.

It is not my desire to detain the Senate longer. The vote was taken yesterday after prolonged discussion. I simply desire to voice my disapproval of the course we have taken, and to express what I believe to be the troubled avenues into which it will lead us in the future.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will not the Senator join me in attempting to have this bill passed now, so that it may go to conference? Of course the Senator knows, as we all do, that we are pressed hard here sometimes to take up matters which may or may not be of proper concern to the conferees, but certainly the matters to which the Senator alludes must be settled in conference. The Senate has no more power over them than has the House.

Mr. BRATTON. No, Mr. President; the two items with regard to California will not be in conference, because the Senate has accepted the House provision.

Mr. WARREN. In that case, of course, the Senate followed the law implicitly.

Mr. BRATTON. That may be true as to the California cases, but it is not true as to the amendment adopted yesterday.

Mr. WARREN. I grant that. Will not the Senator now permit me to ask the presiding officer to put the question leading to the passage of this bill?

Mr. BRATTON. Yes, Mr. President; I will do that for the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate but a moment. I hope the motion of the Senator from Utah to strike out of this bill the $20,000,000 item intended to aid the river and harbor projects of the country will not prevail. I think we need to have more money appropriated for our rivers and harbors instead of the small amount that is now appropriated.

The Senator from New Mexico has referred to the Budget Bureau. I think that bureau has done some good, but I want the Budget Bureau to understand that the Congress makes the appropriations for projects which Congress thinks should be looked after, and we intend to continue to do that. We would like to have the advice of the Director of the Budget, and would like to have him look into matters and give us the benefit of any suggestion he may have to make; but if we reach the time when the Congress, representing 120,000,000 people, must bow down before one man at the head of a Budget Bureau, we will have surrendered to him the functions and powers of the Congress. The people at home will not stand for it, and they should not. As one of their representatives I am not going to submit to it, and I shall prevent it if possible.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I do not like to delay a final vote on the bill, but a question has arisen in regard to the policy of making appropriations for assistance where Federal-aid roads have suffered damage on account of floods or hurricanes, and that subject appeals to me very powerfully on account of the fact that I am confident that in the hurricane and flood of last year the highways in my State that are Federal-aid highways suffered damage to the extent of not less than $5,000,000.

If it is the policy of Congress to assist in other localities similarly suffering, I think it is but right that there should be contributions to the State of Florida and to other States where there was a visitation of a similar disaster to assist in the rebuilding and repairing of their roads and of their bridges.

I know that in my State we suffered, as I have said, an enormous loss. I want to offer an amendment, to be inserted at the appropriate place in the bill, for an appropriation of $1,000,000 to assist in the repair and the rebuilding of Federal-aid highways in the storm area of Florida which suffered as the result of the hurricane and flood of 1928.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I make a point of order against that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I expected the Senator from Pennsylvania to do that. I regret very much to say that he uses this prerogative when it suits his good pleasure to deprive one State of its justice and of its rights; and, on the other hand, he waives that prerogative and graciously accepts amendments in behalf of some other territory. That has been my experience here to-day in offering these amendments.

If it was right to accept the amendments providing for the three million and odd dollars of appropriations yesterday to repair Federal-aid roads in certain other States, it is right to accept a similar amendment to-day as to Florida. If it is wrong and should be rejected to-day, it should have been rejected yesterday by the distinguished chairman of the committee through a point of order.

That is a character of public service that meets with my displeasure, and that was the reason I criticized the Director of the Budget. The Director of the Budget, when he passed upon the question of the relief of Porto Rico, knew that Florida and certain other Southeastern Atlantic States were in a similar situation, and that they were equally deserving of contribution or assistance on the part of the Federal Government. Yet he very graciously approved the appropriation of the sum which was requested for Porto Rican relief. Then, when we asked for relief in the Southeastern Atlantic States, he said, "It does not come within the financial policy of the administration." I dare say that the next day the Director of the Budget approved some item of more than $15,000,000 for some enterprise of less merit than that which he disapproved providing a loan fund, and a loan fund only, for the farmers in the southeastern territory.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, will the Senator permit a question?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Certainly.

Mr. WARREN. The Porto Rican case was somewhat different, of course. The appropriation was for a loan to Porto Rico, and I think whenever Florida has asked for an appropriation for the purchase of seeds, and like matters, it has been readily furnished.

Mr. TRAMMELL. That is all we are asking now. All we ask is a loan to us for the purpose of purchasing seeds and fertilizer and stock feed. Porto Rico was given $2,000,000 as a donation for the restoration of their highways and the rebuilding of their public schools. In Florida there was scarcely a public-school building in the storm area that was not laid low or seriously damaged. But we did not ask for any help toward rebuilding our schoolhouses.

Mr. WARREN. I hardly think one pulls himself over the wall by pulling some one else down. I do not think that gets one anywhere. As far as the Budget is concerned, the President is the real head of the Budget, and he has control, for he has the last say as to every bill.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I do not think anybody pulls himself over the wall by discrimination and partiality in behalf of one particular class of citizens or one particular enterprise to the detriment of another. That is the policy I am criticizing here. The Director of the Budget knew the situation in the southeastern Atlantic States, and particularly in Florida. He had no regard for it. He cared nothing about the suffering there, and about the disaster which visited us, with the loss of more than 2,000 lives, with homes and farms laid low and agricultural interests destroyed in all that territory. He was very sympathetic in the matter of Porto Rican relief.

I was favorable to giving relief to Porto Rico, but I dare say had there not been a large financial American interest operating in Porto Rico, a financial interest of America that desired to rebuild their citrus groves and to rehabilitate and restore their farms, there never would have been any such generous act approved by the Budget Bureau, which provided that one operator of one farm could borrow as much as $25,000. Yet a farmer in this country, with good security, has been begging and pleading for the privilege of borrowing some money, not over $3,000, and so far, at least, that privilege has been denied.

As to the particular matter in question, yesterday more than $3,000,000 was appropriated to assist in the restoration of Federal-aid highways in certain States, and to-day when a request is made for a million dollars for the restoration of highways in Florida which are similarly damaged, which does not cover over one-fifth of the damage experienced, the assistance is withheld and denied.

I think we should adopt the policy of dealing with all alike, not discriminating between the different localities of the country. I do not think we should make fish of one and flesh of the other. Yet that seems to be the ruling and the governing policy, if we are to judge by the incidents of yesterday and the incidents of to-day.

Mr. President, I shall pursue this matter of asking for an appropriation to assist in the restoration of the highways in the State of Florida which suffered damage similar to that caused in the other States for which appropriations have been made, and I shall do so feeling that it is my duty, that I am clearly within my rights, the policy having been established, and knowing that I am asking and pleading with the Senate and with the Congress in behalf of a very meritorious contention under the circumstances.

We did not ask for it before, but the precedent was established here yesterday, and the precedent was established by the accepting of an amendment. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee if this $3,000,000 amendment put on the bill yesterday was approved by the Director of the Budget?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Is the Senator asking that question of me?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Yes; was that approved by the Director of the Budget?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It was represented to us that it was part of the Mississippi flood-relief project, and a necessary part of it.

Mr. TRAMMELL. That does not answer the question.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I do not know whether it has been approved by the Budget or not, but we will know before the bill reaches the President.

Mr. TRAMMELL. The approval of the Director of the Budget did not seem to be necessary yesterday. It seems that certain items can get into these bills without the approval of the Director of the Budget, and, as a matter of fact, I think they should, when the Director of the Budget is partial in his approval or withholds his approval of just and meritorious items.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Certainly.

Mr. OVERMAN. I tried to warn the Senate yesterday where we were headed. The Senator would not have introduced his amendment except for the fact that the amendments were agreed to on yesterday.

Mr. TRAMMELL. Certainly not.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think the Senator's amendment ought to be adopted, although it is out of order, because of the others having been adopted. But I am in hopes, when the President looks over the bill and sees that we are reimbursing States for money spent in this way, that he will veto the bill. I submit to the President that it opens a veritable Pandora's box to the country to come to Congress year after year for the reimbursement of money expended, and I hope that he will veto it. He ought to do it and I am going to endeavor to persuade him to do it; and it will be seen if I have any influence with him.

Mr. TRAMMELL. In answer to that suggestion I will state that of course I did not offer the amendment until the precedent had been established. We were going ahead in Florida carrying our burden, restoring our highways, rebuilding our schools. All we asked of the Government was to establish a fund from which our farmers in the storm-stricken district could borrow for the purpose of buying fertilizer and stock feed that they might again restore their farming activities. That is all we asked.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator in charge of the bill—and I do not want to embarrass him or be impertinent—if he accepted the amendment which was offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] yesterday and did not raise the point of order against it?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas was in substance exactly the same as Senate bill 5201, which had been affirmatively reported by our Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. In view of the action of that committee I did not feel that it was incumbent upon me, knowing the importance of the subject, to raise the point of order. Every other Senator has the same power and the same right to make the point of order that I have. I simply remained silent.

Mr. KING. I regret exceedingly that I was not here. I was called out of the Chamber for the moment. If I had been here, I should have raised the point of order against my own leader, because I think the amendment was improper. I agree absolutely with the distinguished Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN]. I think the President of the United States should veto the bill if it passes the Congress with the two items in it—the one relative to California and the other covered by the amendment offered by the senior Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, may I inquire if that amendment is not still subject to a point of order, as the bill has not passed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment has already been acted on, and has been agreed to.

Mr. GLASS. I understand the point of order lies against it at any stage of the proceedings until the bill has been passed.

Mr. KING. If it does, I desire to raise the point of order against it.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, let me suggest to the Senator that the author of the amendment, the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], is absent from the city, and I suggest that he defer that action. The Senator from Arkansas is not in the city at this time.

Mr. KING. Of course, I do not want to take advantage of his absence.

Mr. BRATTON. The matter must go to conference. Let me appeal to the Senator from Utah to withhold making the point of order under the circumstances.

Mr. KING. Under the circumstances I shall, of course not raise the point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order would not lie at this time against the amendment, but the Senator can ask for a separate vote on it when the bill reaches the Senate.

Mr. KING. Before the bill is passed I want to register my protest against the provisions to which I have referred and against other provisions. I think that we can not defend ourselves in the high court of conscience for carrying in the bill approximately $450,000,000. It is obvious that we shall have a deficit. I think we are engaging in an orgy of extravagance in these appropriation bills that may not be defended. At the proper time I shall move to recommit the bill to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to reduce the aggregate appropriation by $50,000,000.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I am a member of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. I saw there the moving pictures of the roads down in Louisiana, Arkansas, and Mississippi. I saw the terrible destruction that had been wrought by the floods. The roads were completely destroyed in many places, undermined in other places, and broken to pieces in other places. The damage had been done by the flood. I think it is the business of the Federal Government to take care of such a situation.

I do not believe the people in the States who live along the Mississippi River and the other interstate water courses should bear this burden by themselves. The people of the States constructed those roads with the aid of the Federal Government, and then came a flood, something over which they had no control whatever. The people can not prevent a flood from coming, but when the flood does come and destroys the roads in the States along interstate waterways it is too much to ask the people of those States to go in debt again to reconstruct the roads in which the Federal Government is interested and which comprise a part of the post-road system of the Nation.

Of course, we regret that it is necessary to have to spend money to meet projects of any kind that take money out of the Federal Treasury. It is not pleasant. But, Senators, these matters occur and they have to be looked after. The people in the locality are sorry that they did occur. They are sorry the roads have been destroyed. But I do not think we are going to find that the people of the country anywhere, especially those who live along the interstate water courses, are going to appreciate the suggestion that we should put this burden on them and leave them in the lurch when a flood comes and destroys the highways along the water courses where they live.

I think it is right that the Government should go to their rescue and help them when they have been stricken as those people have been stricken by a terrible flood. I do not believe there is a Senator here who, if he could have seen the moving pictures shown to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, would oppose such a proposition. Hundreds of thousands of people were shown at work endeavoring to save their homes in the flooded areas, the roads entirely out of sight, broken to pieces, and bridges washed away. It was a terrible thing and it was a terrible loss that those people suffered.

I have seen Senators rise here and vote for an appropriation of $100,000,000 without the slightest hesitation. These big items of $50,000,000 or more are swallowed as a sweet morsel by Senators, but when we come to appropriate two or three or four million dollars to relieve the people of a sovereign State who have suffered an affliction under a great flood, they turn red in the face and want to break up the whole machinery of Government.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there are no further amendments to be submitted as in Committee of the Whole, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. At what stage of the proceedings will a motion to recommit be permitted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. When the bill is in the Senate. The question is, Shall the bill be reported to the Senate as amended?

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Utah that his motion will be in order at this time.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I move that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to reduce the aggregate appropriation carried in the bill $50,000,000, including the item found on page 81 of the bill providing for flood control of the Sacramento River, Calif., and the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr ROBINSON] to page 81, after line 22, carrying the sum of $3,654,000—for the relief of the States of Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas in the matter of roads and bridges damaged or destroyed by the floods of 1927—

And so forth. And to report the bill back to the Senate after such reduction thereto has been made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Utah to recommit the bill.

The motion was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the amendments be engrossed and the bill be read a third time?

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill was read the third time and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Haltigan, one of its clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 349) to supplement the naturalization laws, and for other purposes; requested a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. JOHNSON of Washington, Mr. VINCENT of Michigan, Mr. SCHNEIDER, Mr. SABATH, and Mr. BOX were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 2366) to amend subchapter 1 of chapter 18 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia relating to degree-conferring institutions, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference requested by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. ZIHLMAN, Mr. UNDERHILL, and Mr. BLANTON were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message further announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 3848) creating the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission and defining its purposes and powers, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference requested by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. LUCE, Mr. HOOPER, and Mr. BULWINKLE were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

THE NATURALIZATION LAWS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FESS in the chair) laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 349) to supplement the naturalization laws, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. JOHNSON. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment, agree to the conference asked by the House, and that the Chair appoint three conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. REED of Pennsylvania, and Mr. COPELAND conferees on the part of the Senate.

YORKTOWN SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION

Mr. GLASS. I ask unanimous consent to take from the table the House concurrent resolution prolonging the time when the report of the Yorktown celebration may be made to Congress. It does not involve any expenditure at all.

Mr. JONES. Is there a similar Senate resolution on the calendar?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is.

Mr. JONES. If there is a similar Senate resolution, I have no objection.

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 46) was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That section 6 of the House concurrent resolution establishing the United States Yorktown Sesquicentennial Commission be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. That the commission shall on or before the 15th day of December, 1929, make a report to the Congress in order that enabling legislation may be enacted."

OHIO RIVER BRIDGE AT MAYSVILLE, KY.

Mr. BARKLEY. From the Committee on Commerce I report back without amendment the bill (H. R. 14479) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Ohio River at or near Maysville, Ky., and Aberdeen, Ohio, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

Mr. CARAWAY. If the bill will require any discussion, I hope the Senator will not press it now.

Mr. BARKLEY. It will require no discussion. It simply extends the time for the building of a bridge.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read for the information of the Senate.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of the bridge across the Ohio River at or near Maysville, Ky., and Aberdeen, Ohio, authorized to be built by Dwight P. Robinson & Co. (Inc.), its successors and assigns, by the act of Congress approved March 12, 1928, are hereby extended one and three years, respectively, from the date of approval hereof.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is Senate bill No. 1093.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H. R. 16422, the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I do not want to object, because, of course, the appropriation bills have the right of way; but I want to ask how long the Senator thinks it would take to complete the consideration of the bill?

Mr. BINGHAM. There are very few amendments. I do not think there will be any debate of any consequence. I have not heard of any prolonged debate that is contemplated.

Mr. CARAWAY. I am asking because there is a bill which is the unfinished business that ought to be disposed of one way or the other, so that other business may be taken up by the Senate. I understand this is the only appropriation bill that is now ready for the consideration of the Senate?

Mr. BINGHAM. It is the only appropriation bill now awaiting consideration.

Mr. CARAWAY. Does the Senator think it can be disposed of this evening or early to-morrow?

Mr. BINGHAM. I hope so.

Mr. CARAWAY. I am not going to object, but I sincerely hope that I may be able to get some action to-morrow on the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 16422) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such district for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. BINGHAM. I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that the bill be read for amendment, and that the committee amendments be first considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Senator does not intend to proceed to-night with the bill?

Mr. BINGHAM. It will not take very long. I hope we can proceed with it for a while. The unfinished business has been waiting for several days for consideration.

Mr. KING. I think the Senator will gain nothing by continuing to-night.

Mr. CARAWAY. I hope the Senator from Utah will not object to our going on with the District appropriation bill to-night because the unfinished business has been pending several days, and I am becoming exceedingly anxious to have some action taken on it.

Mr. BINGHAM. Will not the Senator let us proceed with the amendments which may not be objected to? I am anxious, out of a sense of fairness to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY], whose bill has been the unfinished business now for several days without being considered, that we may take up the measure at the present time. It will not take long.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. KING. I hope the Senator will let us take a recess at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

SALES OF GOVERNMENT SHIPS

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a memorandum sent to me by the secretary of the local shipping board at Mobile, Ala., with reference to the policy of the Shipping Board in disposing of ships.

There being no objection, the memorandum was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Memorandum

Section 7 of the merchant marine act, 1920, provides that in sales of Shipping Board lines preference shall be given to the companies having the support, financial and otherwise, of the domestic communities primarily interested.

It has always seemed logical that the companies operating the lines for the board should be given every possible opportunity to purchase their lines; they have been developing the lines and in turn are being developed to become the owners. Most people feel the board has the right to give these operators an absolute preference in sales.

Recent indications that interests outside of the Gulf are seeking to purchase some of our Gulf lines make this question of preference a vital issue. Ownership of any of our Gulf lines by interests in the north Atlantic, for instance, with the resultant control of rates and traffic, would be most disastrous to the Gulf and to the Middle West that is now so largely using the Gulf ports, as well as a violation of section 7 of the merchant marine act, 1920. Some of the outside interests seeking Gulf lines have stated the companies formed to purchase the lines would have "local representation," but, of course, this does not enable them to qualify under the preference provision of the law.

In order to protect the local communities and carry out the law it has been suggested the Shipping Board carry in its sales specifications a provision that the present operator, the local company, shall be given an absolute preference, or that the present operator shall be permitted to take the line at the highest bid submitted. Unquestionably it was the intent of the preference provision to ultimately transfer a line to the company acting as the board's operator and which company had been so acting with the support of the local communities. The line should be sold to the operator at a price satisfactory to the board, regardless of any bid submitted by a company whose control and principal interests are lodged outside of the geographical region from which the line is operated.

SPECULATIVE ACTIVITIES—WARNING OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD an editorial published in to-day's New York Times relative to the recent admonition from the Federal Reserve Board against speculative activity.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE RESERVE BOARD'S WARNING

It has long been evident that renewed intervention by the Federal reserve in the increasingly abnormal credit situation would become unavoidable. To that extent, the reserve board's emphatic announcement of its ideas and purposes in the matter should have caused no surprise. Although its views on the enormous absorption of credit into speculation were well known, the board had neither made nor threatened any restrictive action since the rediscount rate was raised from 3½ per cent in January of last year to 5 in July. This had created a mistaken notion that the Federal reserve had concluded that there was nothing more which could be done. It was forgotten that drastic action in the money market, which might seriousy have embarrassed trade if taken in the busy autumn season, is now more feasible. Undoubtedly, the reserve board had also waited—as last October's bankers' convention did, when it adopted its noncommital resolutions on the credit situation—to see if the fury of speculation would not, as the bankers put it, "burn itself out."

That has not happened. Briefly stated, what has occurred is that borrowings by stock brokers, which had been enlarged by $1,330,000,000 in the 12 months before last July, were further increased $1,541,000,000 in the rest of 1928 and $295,000,000 more last month. Even with such evidence of an immense accessible supply of credit, the demand for speculative uses was so insatiable that the rate for such borrowings, which a year ago stood at 4 per cent, has lately reached 9 and 12, and that six months' loans on stock and bond collateral now bring 7½ per cent, a rate never approached at this time of year, except for 1920, in the past half century.

A month ago private banks which were heavy lenders on the stock exchange were themselves borrowing from the Federal reserve $630,000,000 more than a year ago. When some of these banks began to curtail their "brokers' loans" their place was taken by rich corporations, which withdrew their deposits from the banks to lend for their own account on the stock exchange.

One result of this process was that, even with the 626 "member banks" reporting to the Federal Reserve Board, loanable deposits had decreased $150,000,000 in the 12 months ending with January, whereas they had increased $1,500,000,000 in the same 12 months a year before and $400,000,000 two years ago. Clearly this meant progressive reduction of the banking fund available for financing the country's trade. It foreshadowed inability of the reserve banks or the private banks to keep the rate for merchants' borrowings from rising to the height prevailing for loans on stock and bond collateral.

The reserve board speaks gravely of this disturbing aspect of the matter. Its declaration points out with unusual frankness that continuance of these tendencies may be expected to "impair the future" of legitimate trade. It scrupulously disavows any right or purpose of passing judgment on the merits of stock-market valuations. But it firmly asserts that its duty and its right are to "take such measures as may be deemed suitable and effective" for correcting a situation which directly or indirectly diverts reserve bank credit into speculative uses, which obstructs the Federal reserve in its function of "accommodating commerce and business," and which threatens to create influences distinctly "adverse to the trade and industries of the country."

The language of the board is temperate, but the fact that so plain a statement had become necessary shows of itself the gravity of the situation. What action the board and the Federal banks will take if their hand is forced we do not profess to know. At least a beginning has been made by the formal warning, simultaneously issued by the board to the reserve banks, that "rediscounting" facilities should be denied to member banks which are borrowing from the Federal reserve "for the purpose of maintaining speculative loans."

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. JONES. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

RECESS

Mr. JONES. I move that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow at 12 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Saturday, February 9, 1929, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 8 (legislative day of February 7), 1929

POSTMASTERS

ALABAMA

Madison D. Majors to be postmaster at Georgiana, Ala., in place of M. D. Majors. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1929.

William H. McCalman to be postmaster at Vinemont, Ala. Office became presidential July 1, 1928.

CALIFORNIA

Robert C. Ross to be postmaster at Cotati, Calif., in place of R. C. Ross. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

COLORADO

Patrick H. Gallagher to be postmaster at Windsor, Colo., in place of P. H. Gallagher. Incumbent's commission expires February 18, 1929.

ILLINOIS

Edwin A. Mead to be postmaster at Hebron, Ill., in place of E. A. Mead. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1929.

Lucy H. Renich to be postmaster at Woodstock, Ill., in place of L. H. Renich. Incumbent's commission expired January 3, 1929.

William W. Harmon to be postmaster at Xenia, Ill., in place of W. W. Harmon. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1929.

IOWA

Samuel A. McCreery to be postmaster at Clarion, Iowa, in place of S. A. McCreery. Incumbent's commission expires February 16, 1929.

Clara Bentzinger to be postmaster at Donnellson, Iowa, in place of Clara Bentzinger. Incumbent's commission expires February 16, 1929.

Martin T. Jensen to be postmaster at Grandmound, Iowa, in place of M. T. Jensen. Incumbent's commission expires February 16, 1929.

John R. Irwin to be postmaster at Keokuk, Iowa, in place of W. C. Howell, deceased.

MISSISSIPPI

Albert S. Johnston, jr., to be postmaster at Carthage, Miss., in place of A. S. Johnston, jr. Incumbent's commission expires February 16, 1929.

NEBRASKA

Dorothy Keefer to be postmaster at Johnstown, Nebr., in place of T. E. Valentine, removed.

Cyril Svoboda to be postmaster at Prague, Nebr., in place of Cyril Svoboda. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

John R. Bolte to be postmaster at Snyder, Nebr., in place of J. R. Bolte. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

NEVADA

Julia G. Pangburn to be postmaster at Jarbidge, Nev., in place of J. G. Pangburn. Incumbent's commission expired January 17, 1929.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Blanche W. Drew to be postmaster at Intervale, N. H., in place of B. W. Drew. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

KANSAS

Clyde O. Brown, jr., to be postmaster at Centralia, Kans., in place of C. O. Brown, jr. Incumbent's commission expires February 18, 1929.

William L. Petitjohn to be postmaster at Hoyt, Kans. Office became presidential July 1, 1926.

KENTUCKY

John E. Skaggs to be postmaster at Neon, Ky., in place of W. M. Quillen, removed.

MASSACHUSETTS

Charles W. Cole to be postmaster at Dighton, Mass., in place of C. W. Cole. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

Edmund V. O'Brien to be postmaster at North Brookfield, Mass., in place of John Howe. Incumbent's commission expired March 17, 1926.

Clarance J. Conyers to be postmaster at Seekonk, Mass., in place of C. J. Conyers. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

MICHIGAN

Fred G. Scott to be postmaster at Bergland, Mich., in place of F. G. Scott. Incumbent's commission expired January 3, 1928.

MINNESOTA

George H. Hopkins to be postmaster at Battle Lake, Minn., in place of G. H. Hopkins. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

Thomas Clarkson to be postmaster at Bethel, Minn., in place of Thomas Clarkson. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1928.

Mary Zakula to be postmaster at Kinney, Minn., in place of C. C. Barker, resigned.

Edith Steinbring to be postmaster at Markville, Minn. Office became presidential July 1, 1927.

Albert Groenke to be postmaster at New Germany, Minn., in place of Albert Groenke. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1929.

Bennie H. Holte to be postmaster at Starbuck, Minn., in place of B. H. Holte. Incumbent's commission expired December 9, 1928.

NEW JERSEY

Clair MacFarland to be postmaster at Monroeville, N. J., in place of Clair MacFarland. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1928.

Everton A. Corson to be postmaster at Ocean City, N. J., in place of E. M. Sutton, deceased.

NEW YORK

Carl H. Hamlin to be postmaster at Brushton, N. Y., in place of S. E. G. Harris. Incumbent's commission expired June 5, 1928.

Byron W. Cornwell to be postmaster at Clark Mills, N. Y., in place of F. J. Manchester, deceased.

Victor Demars to be postmaster at Faust, N. Y., in place of Victor Demars. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1928.

Morgan C. Harris to be postmaster at Newport, N. Y., in place of M. C. Harris. Incumbent's commission expires February 18, 1929.

Harry S. Bowers to be postmaster at Wayland, N. Y., in place of H. S. Bowers. Incumbent's commission expired January 13, 1929.

OHIO

Harriett E. Craig to be postmaster at Neffs, Ohio, in place of H. E. Craig. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1928.

PENNSYLVANIA

Charles J. Williamson to be postmaster at Greensboro, Pa., in place of D. C. Mapel, resigned.

Charles S. Mayhugh to be postmaster at South Mountain, Pa., in place of C. S. Mayhugh. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1928.

Hulett M. Turner to be postmaster at Towanda, Pa., in place of H. M. Turner. Incumbent's commission expired January 8, 1928.

SOUTH CAROLINA

James M. Byrd to be postmaster at Branchville, S. C., in place of J. M. Byrd. Incumbent's commission expires February 16, 1929.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Levi J. Thomas to be postmaster at Ipswich, S. Dak., in place of L. J. Thomas. Incumbent's commission expired January 2, 1929.

TENNESSEE

Homer W. Black to be postmaster at Bolivar, Tenn., in place of H. W. Black. Incumbent's commission expires February 18, 1929.

TEXAS

Maurine Folbre to be postmaster at Wickett, Tex. Office became presidential July 1, 1928.

WEST VIRGINIA

Ernest L. Head to be postmaster at Jenkinjones, W. Va., in place of C. A. Murphy, resigned.

Leslie F. Fagert to be postmaster at Paden City, W. Va., in place of J. E. McCaskey, removed.

WISCONSIN

Leroy G. Waite to be postmaster at Dousman, Wis., in place of L. G. Waite. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

Hugh S. Caldwell to be postmaster at Lodi, Wis., in place of H. S. Caldwell. Incumbent's commission expires February 18, 1929.

John J. Kocian to be postmaster at Milladore, Wis., in place of J. J. Kocian. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

Libbie M. Bennett to be postmaster at Pewaukee, Wis., in place of L. M. Bennett. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

Grace R. Morgan to be postmaster at Spring Green, Wis., in place of G. R. Morgan. Incumbent's commission expires February 18, 1929.

James E. Robar to be postmaster at Walworth, Wis., in place of J. E. Robar. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

Albert J. Topp to be postmaster at Waterford, Wis., in place of A. J. Topp. Incumbent's commission expires February 17, 1929.

WYOMING

Elsie C. Mann to be postmaster at Yoder, Wyo., in place of A. N. Johnson, removed.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate February 8 (legislative day of February 7), 1929

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY

Howard D. Stabler to be United States attorney, district of Alaska, division No. 1.

POSTMASTERS

ILLINOIS

Eva B. Perryman, Cowden.
Nathan T. Lawrence, Dongola.

INDIANA

Fred Rohrer, Berne.
Floyd Coomler, Lagro.

IOWA

Matt Olson, Clear Lake.
Finley E. Dutton, Manchester.
Guy C. Wilhelm, Modale.
Ren S. Bosley, Newhall.

NEW JERSEY

Charles Carter, Mount Ephraim.

NEW YORK

Bertha Howland, Lisle.

NORTH CAROLINA

Russell Best, Calypso.
Miles S. Elliott, Edenton.
A. Irvin Jolley, Mooresboro.

OKLAHOMA

Jacob B. Sample, Bixby.
Bernard H. Buchanan, Collinsville.
Joseph T. Dillard, Waurika.

PENNSYLVANIA

Charles O. Smith, Black Lick.
Lucy A. Truax, Robertsdale.

TEXAS

Connie Stewart, New Waverley.
Olive L. Adams, Olden.
Ruth M. Fuqua, Pelly.

VIRGINIA

Charles E. Bevins, Coeburn.
Samuel W. Collie, Danville.
James T. Reely, Middletown.

WASHINGTON

James B. Robertson, Kettle Falls.

WISCONSIN

James A. Watson, Chippewa Falls.
Lawrence A. Fjelsted, Colfax.
George F. Kimball, Janesville.
Helen L. Menzner, Marathon.
Katherine B. Shier, Winegar.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, February 8, 1929

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O God, Thou art our Father, the lowly Nazarene is our Savior, and the Holy Spirit is our guide and comforter. Thus life is made too sacred for any wavering of affection and too spiritual for any unrighteous moods. As we bow at the altars of our hearts, make this moment very precious to us. Hear us once more. Subdue us, pity us, and make us tender. May we all with common eagerness seek Thee and feel the pressure of Thy holy arms. Great God, bring into our lives such delights and music that it shall be springtime in all our hearts. Qualify us for excellency of service and in no way may we frustrate the divine will. Through Christ our Savior. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved:

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Craven, its principal clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 13502. An act authorizing the State of Minnesota and the State of Wisconsin to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the St. Croix River at or near Stillwater, Minn.;

H. R. 14146. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Monongahela River, in the city of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 14164. An act granting the consent of Congress to the city of Knoxville, Tenn., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Henley Street in Knoxville, Knox County, Tenn.;

H. R. 14451. An act to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near McKees Rocks Borough, in the county of Allegheny, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania;

H. R. 14460. An act authorizing the Iowa-Nebraska Amortized Free Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa;

H. R. 14469. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct a bridge across the Youghiogheny River between the borough of Versailles and the village of Boston, in the township of Elizabeth, Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 14481. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Chicago South Shore & South Bend Railroad to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Grand Calumet River at East Chicago, Ind.;

H. R. 14919. An act granting the consent of Congress to the commissioners of Mahoning County, Ohio, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Mahoning River at or near Cedar Street, Youngstown, Mahoning County, Ohio;

H. R. 15072. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the reconstruction of the bridge across the Grand Calumet River at Burnham Avenue, in Cook County, Ill.;

H. R. 15084. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near Reedsdale Street, in the city of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 15269. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Red River at or near Coushatta, La.;

H. R. 15427. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to lend to the Governor of North Carolina 300 pyramidal tents, complete; 9,000 blankets, olive drab, No. 4; 5,000 pillowcases; 5,000 canvas cots; 5,000 cotton pillows; 5,000 bed sacks; and 9,000 bed sheets to be used at the encampment of the United Confederate Veterans to be held at Charlotte, N. C., in June, 1929; and

H. R. 15470. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Highway Department of the State of Tennessee to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Cumberland River in the vicinity of Harts Ferry, Trousdale County, Tenn.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 349. An act to supplement the naturalization laws, and for other purposes;

H. R. 12032. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to readjust the pay and allowances of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service," approved June 10, 1922, as amended; and

H. R. 13882. An act to extend the benefits of the Hatch Act and the Smith-Lever Act to the Territory of Alaska.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills and a joint resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

S. 2206. An act to amend section 260 of the Judicial Code, as amended;

S. 3001. An act to revise the north, northeast, and east boundaries of the Yellowstone National Park in the States of Montana and Wyoming, and for other purposes;

S. 3100. An act to facilitate and simplify the work of the Department of Agriculture in certain cases;

S. 3233. An act for the relief of Harry E. Good, administrator de bonis non of the estate of Ephraim N. Good, deceased;

S. 4710. An act authorizing the sale of surplus power developed under the Grand Valley reclamation project, Colorado;

S. 4811. An act for the relief of C. J. Colville;

S. 5058. An act for the relief of George A. Hormel & Co.;

S. 5066. An act extending the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the St. Francis River at or near St. Francis, Ark.;

S. 5165. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near St. Paul and Minneapolis, in Ramsey and Hennepin Counties, Minn.;

S. 5194. An act authorizing Richard H. Klein, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Susquehanna River at or near the borough of Liverpool, Perry County, Pa.;

S. 5301. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Highway Department of the State of Tennessee to construct a bridge across the French Broad River on Tennessee Highway No. 9, in Cocke County, Tenn.;

S. 5377. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Pittsburgh & West Virginia Railway Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Monongahela River;

S. 5378. An act authorizing the Fayette City Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Monongahela River at or near Fayette City, Fayette County, Pa.;

S. 5543. An act to establish the Grand Teton National Park in the State of Wyoming, and for other purposes; and

S. J. Res. 196. Joint resolution authorizing and requesting the President of the United States to take steps in an effort to protect citizens of the United States in their equitable titles to land embraced in territory to be transferred from the State of Oklahoma to the State of Texas and from the State of Texas to the State of Oklahoma as per decree of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Oklahoma v. Texas (1926, 272 U. S. 21, p. 38), and to give the consent of Congress to said States to enter into a compact with each other and with the United States relating to such subject matter.

The message also announced that pursuant to Senate Concurrent Resolution 28, the Vice President had appointed Mr. SHORTRIDGE and Mr. KING as tellers on the part of the Senate to ascertain and count the electoral votes for President and Vice President at the joint session of the two Houses to be held on February 13, 1929.

MOUNT RUSHMORE NATIONAL MEMORIAL COMMISSION

Mr. LUCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 3848) creating the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission, and defining its purposes and powers, insist on the House amendments, and agree to the conference asked for.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 3848, insist on the House amendment, and agree to the conference asked for.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER appointed the following conferees on the part of the House: Mr. LUCE, Mr. HOOPER, and Mr. BULWINKLE.

DEGREE-CONFERRING INSTITUTIONS

Mr. ZIHLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 2366, insist on House amendment, and agree to the conference asked for.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 2366, insist on the House amendment, and agree to the conference asked for. The Clerk will read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 2366) to amend subchapter 1 of chapter 18 of the Code of Laws for the District of Columbia relating to degree-conferring institutions.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. ZIHLMAN, Mr. UNDERHILL, and Mr. BLANTON.

NATURALIZATION LAWS

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 349, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Washington asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 349, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference. The Clerk will read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (H. R. 349) to supplement the naturalization laws, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SABATH. Reserving the right to object, what bill is this?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. It is the bill designed to regulate the time of the residence of witnesses to naturalization. The Senate has added certain naturalization features.

Mr. SABATH. Is there any objection to agreeing to the Senate amendments?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I think it would be better to have the committee look into it.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. I assume that this is agreeable to the ranking minority member of the committee?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BOX] will be on the conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. JOHNSON of Washington, Mr. VINCENT of Michigan, Mr. SCHNEIDER, Mr. SABATH, and Mr. BOX.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 16714, the naval appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. LUCE in the chair.

The Clerk read as follows:

NAVAL ESTABLISHMENT

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

PAY, MISCELLANEOUS

For commissions and interest; transportation of funds, including the cost of insurance on shipments of money by registered mail when necessary; exchange; for traveling expenses of civilian employees; and not to exceed $5,000 for the expenses of attendance, at home and abroad, upon meetings of technical, professional, scientific, and other similar organizations when, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy, such attendance would be of benefit in the conduct of the work of the Navy Department; not to exceed $2,000 for the part time or intermittent employment in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of such experts and at such rates of compensation as may be contracted for by and in the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy; actual expenses of officers and midshipmen while on shore patrol duty, including the hire of automobiles when necessary for the use of shore patrol detachments; hire of launches or other small boats in Asiatic waters; for rent of buildings and offices not in navy yards; expenses of courts-martial, including law and reference books, prisoners and prisons, and courts of inquiry, boards of inspection, examining boards, with clerks, and witnesses' fees, and traveling expenses and costs; expenses of naval defense districts; stationery and recording; religious books; newspapers and periodicals for the naval service; all advertising for the Navy Department and its bureaus (except advertising for recruits for the Bureau of Navigation); copying, ferriage; tolls; costs of suits; relief of vessels in distress; recovery of valuables from shipwrecks; quarantine expenses; reports; professional investigation; cost of special instruction at home and abroad, including maintenance of students and attachés; information from abroad and at home, and the collection and classification thereof; all charges pertaining to the Navy Department and its bureaus for ice for the cooling of drinking water on shore (except at naval hospitals), and not to exceed $170,000 for telephone rentals and tolls, telegrams and cablegrams; postage, foreign and domestic, and post-office box rentals; for necessary expenses for interned persons and prisoners of war under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department, including funeral expenses for such interned persons or prisoners of war as may die while under such jurisdiction, and for payment of claims for damages as provided in the act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year 1920, approved July 11, 1919 (U. S. C. p. 1127, sec. 600); and other necessary and incidental expenses; in all, $1,500,000: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be available for the expense of any naval district unless the commandant thereof shall be also the commandant of a navy yard, naval training station, or naval operating base: Provided further, That the sum to be paid out of this appropriation, under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, for clerical, inspection, and messenger service in navy yards and naval stations, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, shall not exceed $517,000.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order to the paragraph.

Mr. BLANTON. I, too, reserve a point of order.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend by striking out on page 4, line 6, the word "for."

Mr. BLANTON. But the reservation of the point of order ought to be disposed of before any amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Georgia state his point of order?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. I make the point of order to the language in line 7, after the semicolon, down to line 12, after the words "Navy Department," page 2—that it is legislation on an appropriation bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, the burden is not upon me; it is upon the Chairman of the committee to show that there is some legislative authority for this expenditure, so I submit that the Chairman should advise his inquiry for information as to authority to the chairman of the subcommittee.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman will permit, the gentleman from Georgia had not stated his point of order; having stated his point of order, the Chair now directs the inquiry to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I concede the point of order in the present form of the language. The members of the committee thought that the language should be briefer and simpler and cover that which we have been covering in the past when we have appropriated money for attendance upon such meetings as conferences of hydrographers, astronomers, and so forth, and we have grouped these items here and by fixing a limited amount we thought we could effect economy. However, I concede the point of order.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. I desire to ask the gentleman from Idaho this: The gentleman made a statement here the other day that there was no legislation in this bill. In reading the bill I regretted very much to find myself at variance with the gentleman from Idaho, because I think there is a great deal of legislation in the bill.

I have no complaint about the merits of the items set forth in the bill, but I do think that the Committee on Appropriations should literally follow the rule. The Appropriations Committee from year to year is trespassing upon the prerogatives of these other committees. Now, of course, this item to which I have made the point of order has been carried repeatedly in appropriation bills, but if we are going to have a strict observance of the rule then the Committee on Appropriations should not come in here from year to year and take control over that which belongs to the legislative committees. I want to state to the gentleman I have no complaint about the subject the item deals with, but I am opposed as one member of the Naval Affairs Committee to the Committee on Appropriations usurping our jurisdictional authority.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. I have not the floor except by courtesy.

Mr. BLANTON. The rule adopted that was offered by Mr. RAMSEYER hereafter is going to compel the appropriations subcommittees to point out every single change in the law, and every piece of legislation that is contained in appropriation bills, and that is the best rule that the House has adopted that I know of since I have been here 12 years, because it is going to keep the Appropriations Committee hereafter from hiding these items of legislation in their bills. Whenever they want legislation to go in a bill they so hide it that it takes sometimes several hours to find it. Now, hereafter we are going to be able to identify legislation by reading the report.

Mr. FRENCH. May I say in response to the gentleman that the committee undertook in its supplementary report to point out specifically just what has been placed in the bill under that rule?

Mr. BLANTON. If the gentleman will permit, there is another part of this paragraph that is legislation, but it is such good legislation and it so safeguards the Public Treasury that I do not care to make the point of order against it. It is for the benefit of the people.

Mr. FRENCH. Does it change fundamental law?

Mr. BLANTON. Oh, yes; it is legislation, because it is not authorized by law.

Mr. FRENCH. May I ask the gentleman if it has been carried in the appropriation bills heretofore?

Mr. BLANTON. Yes.

Mr. FRENCH. Then the rule that was adopted a few days ago does not apply to it, as members of our committee understand the rule.

Mr. BLANTON. A point of order would knock it out, but it is such good legislation that I want it in.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. The gentleman has further legislation in this paragraph on line 18.

Mr. FRENCH. Will the gentleman object to disposing of his first point of order before we go on to that? I concede the point of order.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. I am willing to withdraw my point of order, now that the chairman of the committee has come in and confessed that there is legislation in the bill, when the other day he said there was no legislation.

Mr. FRENCH. I am glad to have added that modicum of comfort to the gentleman's soul.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. On line 18 of the bill we find the following language:

including the hire of automobiles when necessary for the use of shore-patrol detachments; hire of launches or other small boats in Asiatic waters.

That is subject to the point of order.

Mr. FRENCH. I assume this discussion is going on under the gentleman's reservation of the point of order. I do not think that the language to which the gentleman draws attention is subject to the point of order. I think that the particular line to which he is now drawing attention would be abundantly within the rules under which we may carry money for a definite object, although all of the details prescribed to be carried out under the object are not set out in detail. The amount carried in that item will probably not equal $200. It means efficiency in the shore-patrol establishments and is limited to an exceedingly small amount.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. If the gentleman will permit, the gentleman's bill further authorizes the Secretary, without any authority of law, to pay for rent of buildings and offices not in the navy yard. Surely the gentleman would not say that that is a public work and that he has the right to authorize an appropriation of that kind without authority of law.

Mr. FRENCH. The members of the committee think there is no question as to that language being wholly within the authorization of existing law, and would so maintain. I do not understand that the gentleman is making the point of order against this language?

Mr. CLARKE. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. Would it speed up legislation if I were to demand the regular order and cut off this debate?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Oh, I trust the gentleman from New York will let us clear this matter up, because in that way we will expedite the passage of the bill.

Mr. FRENCH. Has the gentleman from Georgia withdrawn his first point of order?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. I am willing to withdraw that, Mr. Chairman, since the chairman of the subcommittee recognizes the fact that it is legislation. We at least want the chairman of the subcommittee to know that the House is aware of the fact that he has trespassed upon the legislative authority of these other committees.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia withdraws the point of order.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I make the further point of order upon the language in line 19, after the semicolon, as follows:

for rent of buildings and offices not in navy yards.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that that is legislation on an appropriation bill and not authorized by law.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, the items to which the gentleman has been directing attention are just such items as are incident to the carrying forward of the responsibilities of the Navy in connection with the different stations throughout the United States and the world wherever they may be. I submit that the very items to which the gentleman is now directing attention are items that are purely incidental to the carrying forward of large work.

One item to which he referred will cost in money not more than possibly $200. The other item, in the matter of hiring patrol boats, is an item that in the same or somewhat similar language has been carried heretofore. More than that, these items have been before the House, and the question has been directed to the attention of the Chair and they have been ruled in order. For instance, on February 11, 1921, when the Navy bill was under consideration, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN], the present chairman of the committee of which my colleague from Georgia [Mr. VINSON] is a member, made the point of order against somewhat similar language. In fact, if you will check it up, it will be found to be exact language. Mr. BRITTEN said this—

Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the Chair to the language in line 19, page 2—

Curiously enough, the language to which objection is now made is in line 19, page 2, of the present bill. I call the attention to the same words used in a former bill:

hire of launches or other small boats in Asiatic waters.

Mr. BRITTEN said:

That language was added to the appropriation bill in 1883 and is subject to a point of order, and I make the point of order at this time.

The then chairman, Mr. CHINDBLOM, after a somewhat interesting discussion of the question, in which the late Mr. Mann participated, came to the conclusion that the language was in order and so ruled, as the Chair will find on page 3145 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of February 11, 1921. The Chair wound up the decision by saying:

The Chair, for the reason at that time expressed, will overrule the point of order.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. In a moment. The second proposition to which the gentleman from Georgia referred in his point of order was also made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN] at the same time. The language then in the bill was as follows:

For rent of buildings and offices not in navy yards.

That is the language carried in the pending bill. Upon that the Chairman, Mr. CHINDBLOM, I believe at that moment in the chair, said:

The gentleman from Illinois makes a point of order against the language, "For rent of buildings and offices not in navy yards."

Under the decision cited by the gentleman from Michigan, the Chair there held that appropriations for repair of buildings were appropriations for the continuation of a public work, and the Chair held that that language is in order, and therefore overruled the point of order. The ruling I refer to now had relation to the two points referred to by the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. In answer to that I recognize the fact that an appropriation for continuation of a public work is not subject to a point of order, but I contend that the rent of buildings outside of navy yards is not the kind of public work that is contemplated in legislation of this kind and which is held as in order. Now at the present time the Secretary of the Navy has the right, if he sees fit, to go outside the boundaries of the navy yards and contract for rent of any others; that is an obligation that he is imposing upon the Government.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is of opinion that by an attempt to put into the law minute provision for all possible manner of expenditure the size of the statute book would be largely increased, and that by reason of the impossibility of foresight in matter of detail more harm than good would result. It has been the uniform ruling of preceding Chairmen, so far as the Chair can ascertain, that these minor and incidental objects of expenditures are natural to the conduct of the business establishment concerned.

Furthermore, the Chair is supported in his conviction by the fact that these items have passed under the scrutiny of repeated Congresses, and therefore might be assumed to have in this particular received at least the tacit approval of preceding Congresses as matters incident to the conduct of the business establishment. While, of course, such approval, if it be assumed, is never conclusive, yet when the question is one of the interpretation of existing law the construction accepted by previous Congresses may be somewhat persuasive.

For these reasons the Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. FRENCH. Then, Mr. Chairman, I move to amend line 6, page 4, by striking out the word "for," the first word in the line, it being a repetition.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho moves to strike out on line 6, page 4, the word "for." The Chair has already said, "Without objection, the change will be made," and no objection was made. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

STATE MARINE SCHOOL, ACT MARCH 4, 1911

To reimburse the State of New York, $25,000; the State of Massachusetts, $25,000; and the State of Pennsylvania, $25,000, for expenses incurred in the maintenance and support of marine schools in such States as provided in the act authorizing the establishment of marine schools, etc., approved March 4, 1911 (U. S. C. 1150, sec. 1121); in all, $75,000.

Mr. BRIGGS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. BRIGGS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the chairman of the subcommittee a question with reference to these marine schools. Is the Government carrying these schools mentioned on page 5 of the bill?

Mr. FRENCH. I will say that the Government does not carry on these schools.

Mr. BRIGGS. I knew the Government was not carrying on these schools; but I was going to ask if the Government in providing ships was making this contribution under the act approved March 4, 1911, whereby the States contribute a part and the Government a part?

Mr. FRENCH. That is true. The law provides that these schools may be maintained, and the States referred to are already maintaining the schools—Massachusetts, New York, and Pennsylvania. Those States are required to contribute as much as the Federal Government is contributing; and I will say, from the inquiry we have made, the amounts contributed by the States are far in excess of the amounts contributed by the Federal Government. The gentleman may be interested in knowing that the object of the schools is for the purpose of furnishing practical information along navigational and nautical lines. Referring to the report of the Massachusetts Nautical School, I find this language:

This school offers practical and theoretical instruction in navigation, seamanship, marine engineering, and electricity to prepare young men for service as officers in the merchant marine. The course of study extends over two years.

I will say that these schools are functioning in a most creditable manner, and are carrying a rather large number of men upon their rolls. For instance, Massachusetts graduated in 1927, 40 men. New York had enrolled on December 31, 1927, 83 men. Pennsylvania in February, 1928, had enrolled 80 members. The appropriations from the several States are considerably larger than the funds necessary to match the Federal appropriations. Massachusetts expended in 1928, $92,250; New York, the same year, $98,687; and Pennsylvania in the fiscal year 1928 and 1929, $70,885.

Mr. BRIGGS. I was wondering also in this connection why these items are indicated as reimbursable items. Do they represent advances made by the States in question to cover the Government's portion?

Mr. FRENCH. That is correct. The law provides that these States may be reimbursed to this extent, provided the States have already expended in addition thereto as much or more.

Mr. BRIGGS. That is what I thought. Now, it is the purpose of the department to encourage the establishment of these schools wherever they can be established under the law—is not that true?

Mr. FRENCH. I would say to the gentleman that under the present law only these three schools are now being conducted.

Mr. BRIGGS. My impression is that there is a provision in the act for the extension of this privilege to other States upon compliance with certain provisions as indicated in the act.

Mr. FRENCH. But other States have not passed the necessary cooperative laws and have taken no steps, so far as we are aware, to avail themselves of the general law.

Mr. BRIGGS. I am inclined to think the gentleman is correct about that, but I am talking about the general law providing for their doing so if they so desire.

Mr. FRENCH. I understand that whenever other States comply with the general law they may avail themselves of the same privilege.

Mr. BRIGGS. And the purpose of the Federal Government would be to cooperate in the same way it cooperates with these States.

Mr. FRENCH. I so understand.

Mr. BRIGGS. And that the Navy Department would be willing to assign ships of appropriate type for that purpose; is that correct?

Mr. FRENCH. I understand that is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

In all, Naval Home, $207,000, which sum shall be paid out of the income from the naval pension fund.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the gentleman from Idaho whether the language carried in the item for the Naval Home at Philadelphia includes the transfer of patients from one Government hospital to another or is it restricted to the Naval Home. The language is somewhat ambiguous, because it provides for the transportation of employees from other Government hospitals. Now, does that mean that the Government pays the expenses of transportation from one Government hospital to another of those who are not eligible for hospital treatment at the Naval Home?

Mr. FRENCH. In the first place, I would say that those in the Naval Home would need to be beneficiaries entitled to the privileges of the home. Starting from that basis, the law itself carries a provision for the bearing of the expense, when necessary, of transporting patients from the home to other hospitals or from other hospitals to the home.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Then under a strict interpretation it only applies to patients at the Naval Home and not to patients in other Government hospitals?

Mr. FRENCH. The appropriation has to do with moneys pertaining to patients only who are related to the home and not to patients of other hospitals who may be transferred from one hospital to another.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

BUREAU OF ENGINEERING

ENGINEERING

For repairs, preservation, and renewal of machinery, auxiliary machinery, and boilers of naval vessels, yard craft, and ships' boats, distilling and refrigerating apparatus; repairs, preservation, and renewals of electric interior and exterior signal communications and all electrical appliances of whatsoever nature on board naval vessels, except range finders, battle order and range transmitters and indicators, and motors and their controlling apparatus used to operate machinery belonging to other bureaus; searchlights and fire-control equipments for antiaircraft defense at shore stations; maintenance and operation of coast signal service; equipage, supplies, and materials under the cognizance of the bureau required for the maintenance and operation of naval vessels, yard craft, and ships' boats; care, custody, and operation of the naval petroleum reserves; purchase, installation, repair, and preservation of machinery, tools, and appliances in navy yards and stations, pay of classified field force under the bureau; incidental expenses for naval vessels, navy yards, and stations, inspectors' offices, the engineering experiment station, such as photographing, technical books and periodicals, stationery, and instruments; services, instruments and apparatus, supplies, and technical books and periodicals necessary to carry on experimental and research work; payment of part time or intermittent employment in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of such scientists and technicists as may be contracted for by the Secretary of the Navy, in his discretion, at a rate of pay not exceeding $20 per diem for any person so employed; in all, $19,686,300, and, in addition, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed, upon the request of the Secretary of the Navy, to make transfers during the fiscal years 1929 and 1930 from the naval supply account fund to the appropriations "Engineering, Bureau of Engineering, fiscal years 1929 and 1930," of sums not to exceed in the aggregate $1,500,000, to be available exclusively for the procurement of new tools and machinery for shops under the cognizance of the Bureaus of Engineering and Construction and Repair: Provided, That the sum to be paid out of this appropriation, under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, for clerical, drafting, inspection, and messenger service in navy yards, naval stations, and offices of United States inspectors of machinery and naval material for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, shall not exceed $1,715,000.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FRENCH: Page 16, line 11, before the word "of," insert "and construction and repair, Bureau of Construction and Repair, fiscal years 1929 and 1930."

On the same page, line 12, after the word "procurement," insert "and installation."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Transportation and recruiting of naval personnel: For mileage and actual and necessary expenses and per diem in lieu of subsistence as authorized by law to officers of the Navy while traveling under orders; for mileage, at 5 cents per mile, to midshipmen entering the Naval Academy while proceeding from their homes to the Naval Academy for examination and appointment as midshipmen, and not more than $2,500 shall be available for transportation of midshipmen, including reimbursement of traveling expenses while traveling under orders after appointment as midshipmen; for actual traveling expenses of female nurses; for travel allowance or for transportation and subsistence as authorized by law of enlisted men upon discharge; transportation of enlisted men and apprentice seamen and applicants for enlistment at home and abroad, with subsistence and transfers en route, or cash in lieu thereof; transportation to their homes, if residents of the United States, of enlisted men and apprentice seamen discharged on medical survey, with subsistence and transfers en route, or cash in lieu thereof; transportation of sick or insane enlisted men and apprentice seamen and insane supernumerary patients to hospitals, with subsistence and transfers en route, or cash in lieu thereof; apprehension and delivery of deserters and stragglers, and for railway guides and other expenses incident to transportation; expenses of recruiting for the naval service; rent of rendezvous and expenses of maintaining the same; advertising for and obtaining men and apprentice seamen; actual and necessary expenses in lieu of mileage to officers on duty with traveling recruiting parties; transportation of dependents of officers and enlisted men; expenses of funeral escorts of naval personnel; in all, $4,525,500.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LAGUARDIA: Page 24, line 21, at the end of the line insert the following: "Provided, That not more than $25 shall be paid as a reward for the apprehension and delivery of a deserter."

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to make the reward the same as the House made it in the military appropriation bill for the year 1930. I desire to try this out for a year and see whether or not it will correct some of the abuses now existing, especially in the large cities. I stated at the time the military appropriation bill was under consideration that in New York in one month, I was informed, that one agency delivered no less than 80 prisoners to the naval district in Brooklyn. At that time I cited a specific case where the same agency enticed a boy to desert. They got him a job as an usher in a theater, and after he had stayed away the required length of time to make him a deserter he was apprehended by the same people and delivered to the authorities, and they received the reward.

I believe that if we reduce the reward it will cut off that source of income from these disreputable agencies, which make it a business of enticing boys to desert only to deliver them and obtain the reward. I think it is well worth trying.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA] was good enough to call the subject of the amendment to the attention of the chairman of the committee several days ago, and I have taken occasion to check up on this question as it pertains to the Navy.

In the first place, it would seem that if a person is engaged in aiding or promoting desertion, he himself would be a violator of law and ought to be prosecuted, and the question ought to be called to the attention of the proper law-enforcement officers, the United States attorneys, or the law officers of the Navy Department. Certainly, if any such practice as this is being indulged in by anybody, it is most reprehensible and the Government ought not to stop short of enforcing the law to the limit against any one guilty of such practice.

However, going back to the merits of the amendment, may I say that under the present law we are following as pertains to the enlisted men of the Navy and the Marine Corps the practice of offering rewards of $50 for the apprehension and delivery of a deserter. We are carrying in the bill only $3,000 for this purpose and other expenditures must also be met under the item.

I think the Members of the House would be interested in knowing that we do not have a large number of desertions in the Navy and in the Marine Corps. In 1928, the last fiscal year, we had only 794 gross desertions in the Navy. I say gross desertions because there were 2,906 men who had absented themselves and then after they had discovered that they had overstayed their leave or in some way were technically deserters, immediately reported and surrendered and the charge of desertion was accordingly wiped out. So we have net desertions amounting to 794.

I do not believe it would be a practicable thing to hold out a reward of $25 with the expectation that that amount would encourage police officers or others to assist the Navy Department in apprehending deserters.

It is not a wholesome thing for the country to have desertion going on in the Naval Establishment. It is a bad thing. It is a bad thing for the persons who desert; it is a bad thing for the ones with whom they associate. It tends to put the group——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Idaho has expired.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Idaho?

There was no objection.

Mr. FRENCH. It is a bad thing for the deserters themselves from the standpoint of their contact with society to feel that, after all, they are criminals and therefore that it matters little if they commit some crime that is even more serious than the one of which they are guilty.

It seems to me if we are going to have the law enforced, we can not afford to offer a less amount than $50.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Let me follow that up with this statement: The gentleman's amendment was accepted as it pertained to the Army bill, but we have a different situation in the Navy, and I want the Members of the House, and especially the gentleman from New York, who offers this amendment, to realize that, and I think when he does realize it he will withdraw his amendment.

We have a different situation touching the enlisted personnel of the Naval Establishment. When these men come in they are taken to the different training stations. They are held there for something like three months and it is usually a longer time than that before these men are really inducted into the service and capable of any great work. If a boy deserts at the end of his first year of enlistment it will be after it has cost the Government $350 for his training, exclusive of the pay of the personnel engaged in recruiting and training. If he has a longer service the cost is considerably greater. If the deserter is not apprehended the cost to which I have referred is doubled because you must find a new man to take his place and train him for some period of time after you have trained the first man who has deserted, and, therefore, you have doubled the expense. You do not find this situation, measured in money, obtaining in the Army to the extent it obtains in the Navy; in fact, the expense is much smaller.

Therefore, I would hope that the gentleman would not insist upon his amendment and that the House would not concur in it if he does.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. I shall be pleased to yield.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. If a deserter is apprehended the Navy gets no further service from him, because he goes in the brig for six months and then is dishonorably discharged. So there is nothing in that argument.

What I would like to ask the gentleman is this: Is the $50 reward fixed by law?

Mr. FRENCH. It is not fixed by law; it is fixed as a result of a regulation under the law. In further reference to the statement touching the deserter and his status after desertion, at first the result is as indicated, but many of these men have the charge of desertion removed and again enter the service. They are trained men and efficient men. They are sorry for what they have done and go back into the service.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman stated that $3,000 is set aside for the purpose of rewards, but that is only in the hearings or in the estimates. There is nothing in the law that would limit it to that amount. Would the gentleman accept an amendment providing that not more than $3,000 of this amount shall be used for payment of rewards?

Mr. FRENCH. I think it would not be a wholesome thing to put in a restriction. I would say that in practice the amount expended is considerably less than $3,000.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. What I am trying to do is to abolish a condition which is very unwholesome right in New York City. I can not do any more——

Mr. FRENCH. I do not think the second proposed amendment would have that effect at all.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I can not do any more than bring the matter to the attention of the committee and to the attention of the House.

Mr. FRENCH. I will say to the gentleman he has directed the attention of the committee and the House to the subject and has done so since the hearings closed. I am going to let the suggestion of the gentleman flag the committee as we conduct our hearings next year, and we shall go into this question further. Certainly, the House and the members of the committee do not want to condone the practices on the part of any persons who are imposing upon the Government and upon the enlisted personnel.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. And in the meantime we will give another year of lucrative business to these disreputable detective agencies and other parties who thrive on this business.

Mr. FRENCH. This should be brought to the attention of the proper law-enforcement officers.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Idaho has again expired.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. DOWELL). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

In all, for pay, subsistence, and transportation of naval personnel, $154,934,282, and, in addition, $578,500 of the unexpended balance of the appropriation "Pay, subsistence, and transportation, Navy, 1928," is hereby made available for such purposes; and the money herein specifically appropriated and made available for "Pay, subsistence, and transportation of naval personnel," shall be disbursed and accounted for in accordance with existing law and shall constitute one fund: Provided, That additional commissioned, warranted, appointed, enlisted, and civilian personnel of the Medical Department of the Navy, required for the care of patients of the United States Veterans' Bureau in naval hospitals, may be employed in addition to the numbers appropriated for in this act: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be available for the pay of any midshipmen whose admission subsequent to January 30, 1929, would result in exceeding at any time an allowance of four midshipmen for each Senator, Representative, and Delegate in Congress; of one midshipman for Porto Rico, a native of the island, appointed on nomination of the governor, and of four midshipmen from Porto Rico, appointed on nomination of the Resident Commissioner; and of two midshipmen for the District of Columbia: Provided further, That nothing herein shall be construed to repeal or modify in any way existing laws relative to the appointment of midshipmen at large, from the enlisted personnel of the naval service, or from the Naval Reserve.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 24, line 23, after the comma following the word "personnel," strike out all matter down to the word "purpose," in line 2, page 25, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "$154,512,782, of which sum $578,500 shall be charged to the unexpended balance of appropriations, pay, subsistence, transportation, Navy, 1928."

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, that amendment is to correct the matter of totals and refers to one item which should have been included in the totals, but through inadvertence was included in addition thereto.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word for the purpose of getting some information. This item of $154,000,000, plus, is an increase over the appropriation made for the same purpose last year?

Mr. FRENCH. Somewhat. It includes money for additional enlisted personnel, to the extent of 500 men. A part of the increase also will be used in connection with the increase of other items in connection with change of ratings, longevity, and submarine work.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. You leave the expenditure and the number of enlisted men at the discretion of the Navy Department?

Mr. FRENCH. We have appropriated on the basis of 84,500 enlisted men.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. What is the total of the personnel now?

Mr. FRENCH. A little under 84,000. The enlisted personnel for which appropriation was made for the current year was on the basis of 84,000 men.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. And this is an increase of 500?

Mr. FRENCH. They would be enlisted during the fiscal year beginning July 1, next. I might say to the gentleman that it is not the thought of the committee, and I think it is not the thought of Congress, to permit the number of enlisted men to run down to, say, 80,000, during the first half of the year, and then in order that the department may come within the total money available increase the number of personnel four or five thousand beyond the number we have estimated for. Such a thing would be possible, but we think there is no question as to the department's administering the law in the good faith in which Congress will pass it. We may rely upon the department administering the law in such a way as to provide for approximately 84,500 men throughout the year.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. This increase is about $4,000,000 over last year, and as I understand part is for the additional personnel?

Mr. FRENCH. There are several factors that enter into this item of increase; in part the 500 additional enlisted men, higher ratings for some of the men now enlisted, additional compensation to men who are engaged in submarine work and in diving, and longevity pay, which some men in the service have accumulated. I think I have included the essential items covering the increase.

Mr. COLE of Iowa. I think that sufficiently answers my inquiry.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee what thought has been given with reference to increasing the number of appointments of midshipmen to the academy, on account of the cruiser program which we have passed? From my observation it will be necessary in the near future to provide for another midshipman at the academy. In other words, to-day there is a maximum of five under the law, but you have limited the appointments to four. What have we done to accommodate the increase necessary?

Mr. FRENCH. It would take about $500,000 annually to accommodate an additional midshipman at the academy for each Member of the Senate and the House. I think we would not need to increase the facilities at the academy, although we would need to maintain a larger instructional force, both of officers and civilian instructors.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. It is not necessary to add to the building to the academy, but only necessary to carry more money for maintenance of the midshipmen?

Mr. FRENCH. We so understand. We did maintain five at the academy at one time and have not been short of facilities.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. What is the gentleman's thought for next year—to withdraw this limitation and permit five to be appointed?

Mr. FRENCH. No; the members of the committee could hardly anticipate the action that we would take in a year from now. We felt that it would not be a wise thing to do at this time. In the first place, the gentleman will recall that last year we added certain additional midshipmen to the academy, one for each Member of the Senate and House. We permitted the amendment to become operative for the fiscal year. The effect was to increase the number of midshipmen at the academy by 160. That means that the privilege that was granted last year, because of the lateness of the session in which the bill was passed, was successful in adding to the academy a very small proportion of the number that could have been added. The vacancies thus created will pile up against the succeeding year, and so the approaching entering class will be exceedingly large, and it would be very unwise to provide an additional midshipman at this time.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. But the gentleman recognizes the fact that in view of the 16 ships that must be finished within three years it will be necessary within the three years to increase the number at the academy.

Mr. FRENCH. No; I do not recognize that. When the last graduating class was graduated from the academy we were within one of the number of naval officers provided for in the general law upon the basis of the authorized enlisted personnel. We are below at this time to the extent of about 121. We will be quite up to the total authorized officer strength upon the graduation of the present class from the Naval Academy. I have no doubt at all that the addition of one midshipman to the academy for every Senator and Representative would give the Navy Department a great deal more latitude in permitting officers to serve on who had graduated from the academy and to weed out others who are not the best type or who do not desire to serve on. A very liberal course in retirement could be followed.

Mr. UPDIKE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. UPDIKE. Does not the gentleman think that it would be a good policy to do that?

Mr. FRENCH. It would mean a good training, but it would be an expensive proposition to the Federal Government.

Mr. UPDIKE. But it would be a good thing in case we have a large merchant marine for these men to be trained, so that they could operate these ships.

Mr. FRENCH. It would be an expensive means of training men efficiently for that work. We think that they could be trained for that work quite efficiently at much less expense.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. NEWTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. What is the reason for the proviso on page 25, lines 11 to 20? It is my understanding that before the appropriation a year ago every Member had three appointees every four years. Then we passed a provision in the appropriation act of last year creating another vacancy. That meant four. It was not permanent, as I understand it, but it created another one.

Mr. FRENCH. That is true.

Mr. NEWTON. What is the reason for restricting it to four in this proviso?

Mr. FRENCH. Because the general law authorizes the appointment of five, and we have provided money in the bill for four only, just as the authorized enlisted personnel of the Navy is 137,000 plus, and yet we are carrying money in the bill for only 84,500.

Mr. NEWTON. Is this the usual provision except that it is changed to four instead of three?

Mr. FRENCH. That is correct.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

RESERVE FUEL OIL

For the procurement and transportation of petroleum products to be placed in reserve storage tanks, $450,000, to be available immediately, and, in addition, the unobligated balance on January 30, 1929, of the continuing appropriation "Reserve material, Navy," is hereby made available for such purpose. Fuel acquired hereunder shall not be issued without the approval of the President.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FRENCH: Page 28, line 1, strike out the word "is" and insert the following: "and such sum or sums as may accrue from time to time within the total of the appropriation 'Fuel and transportation, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, 1930,' from the purchase of fuel oil at an average rate lower than 97.22 cents per barrel are."

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, let me say a word as to the effect of the amendment. It is to authorize the department to buy additional fuel oil out of moneys carried in the annual appropriation bill that we are considering, for fuel oil, if there shall be funds available for that purpose for storage purposes. Since our hearings closed it appears that the price of fuel oil has fallen 25 cents per barrel under what the Budget estimates were when they came to the committee. We think that for next year we ought not to let the steaming be based on the additional amount of fuel oil which might be purchased with the same money, 25 per cent more almost when measured by barrels, than it was thought could be bought with the money recommended. We think we ought to hold to the steaming that the number of barrels of oil we attempted to provide for will furnish the Navy. If the Navy Department can, through the lower price of oil that is now prevailing, purchase additional storage oil and continue the program of filling the storage tanks in Hawaii, we think it would be a desirable thing for the department to do. This language will enable the department to do that specific thing.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Idaho.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend page 29, line 17, by inserting a comma after the word "school." It seems to have been inadvertently omitted.

The CHAIRMAN. If there is no objection, the correction will be made.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Navy yard, Charleston, S. C.: Dredging, to continue, $36,000.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 32, line 23, after the figures "$36,000," insert the following: "extension of dry dock, $300,000; in all, $336,000."

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, a few days ago I took occasion under general debate to call attention of the House to the amendment which I am now offering. This amendment, gentlemen of the committee, is to provide for the extension of the dry dock at Charleston for approximately 60 feet. I told the House the other day that the dry dock at Charleston is the only dry dock we have from Cape Hatteras on the Atlantic coast all the way to the Mexican border. That, my friends, is a distance of some 3,000 miles. The other day I also took occasion to call to the attention of the committee the importance of this dry dock. I repeat, that is the only dry dock we have in the entire South Atlantic and Gulf coast to Mexico.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McMILLAN. I will.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. A few days ago on one of the bills we authorized the leasing of a dry dock at New Orleans. How would that affect the gentleman's proposition?

Mr. McMILLAN. That is only a floating dry dock, 525 feet in length.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. That would take in a cruiser?

Mr. McMILLAN. Absolutely not. The purpose of this extension, I may say to the gentleman, is to provide for the accommodation of the cruisers we are about to build and those contemplated to be built according to the building program which passed yesterday.

Mr. GREEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McMILLAN. I will.

Mr. GREEN. I would like to know if the gentleman has ascertained what per cent of the moneys are expended between Hampton Roads and the Rio Grande River. That is, what percentage of the moneys for dry docks and for other naval purposes as compared with the rest of the Atlantic coast?

Mr. McMILLAN. I will say in reply to the gentleman's inquiry that since the war approximately 98 per cent of all the moneys appropriated by this Government for the expenditures of the Naval Department for shore purposes has been spent from Norfolk to Portsmouth, N. H., a distance of 530 miles, and about 2 per cent of those funds have been expended for such purposes from Cape Hatteras to the Mexican border, a distance of 3,000 miles.

Mr. BEEDY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McMILLAN. I will.

Mr. BEEDY. I would like to ask the gentleman if the committee was informed of this situation when this bill was reported out?

Mr. McMILLAN. In reply to the gentleman I will say that the committee was evidently not informed. I took the matter up with the Navy Department and with the White House prior to the Christmas holidays, but, unfortunately, during the holiday period I went home, as all Members did, perhaps, and there I was confronted with a serious illness in my family. The result was that I could not return here until the committee had closed its hearings, and this is the only opportunity I have had of presenting this very important matter to the House.

Mr. BEEDY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McMILLAN. Certainly.

Mr. BEEDY. I was astounded when this matter was brought to my attention and I found that on that tremendous stretch of coast line we had no dry dock to which we could send one of our big ships in case of distress. It seems to me obviously the grossest kind of negligence in connection with our naval policy.

Mr. McMILLAN. I thank the gentleman for his contribution to my argument.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Carolina has expired.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. McMILLAN. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. What is the length of this dock and what is the length of the other docks?

Mr. McMILLAN. The length of the dry dock in Charleston is 566 feet. We need an extension of about 60 feet in order to accommodate the cruisers we are now building and those Congress just yesterday authorized to be built. We have now $1,250,000 invested in the Charleston dry dock. We have a yard down there now equipped with facilities and capable of accommodating and serving any of these ships in case of an emergency, with the exception of the size of the dry dock. We have there a harbor that has a depth of from 32 feet to 37 feet, and we can accommodate a ship over the sill of our dry dock now that provides for a depth of 34 feet. These dry docks north of Cape Hatteras vary from 400 feet to 1,100.

Mr. UPDIKE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McMILLAN. Yes.

Mr. UPDIKE. Can the gentleman tell us whether or not the navy yard at Charleston is equipped to construct cruisers? Have they the necessary tools and equipment there?

Mr. McMILLAN. I will say in answer to the gentleman's inquiry that the Charleston Navy Yard is well equipped. It is a modern yard. It is in such a position that if we can get this extension there that is so necessary we can take care of and construct the cruisers now building and those contemplated under the new cruiser program.

Mr. HUDSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. McMILLAN. Certainly.

Mr. HUDSON. When was the present dry dock constructed?

Mr. McMILLAN. In 1908, at a cost of $1,250,000.

Mr. HUDSON. Is it in such condition now that the addition can readily be built?

Mr. McMILLAN. Yes. We have the land there necessary, the available space, without the removal of any tracks or buildings or anything. It is an open space. There is nothing to do but go out there and extend this dock 60 feet.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. That is the estimate that has been made?

Mr. McMILLAN. Yes. That is the estimate already made by the Navy Department. They have prepared blue prints and plats and have the whole necessary layout. The only reason why the committee was not advised of the project is because of the fact that I was delayed at home for reasons beyond my control during the committee's hearing.

Mr. VINSON of Kentucky. What do the naval authorities say about it?

Mr. McMILLAN. Practically every naval authority who knows anything about the condition backs up the project to the limit.

We have an extension of trade and commerce that is being rapidly expanded to the south of us. Our ships will go south with this progress and increase in trade and expansion of commerce. I submit it is only reasonable for us as Representatives in this Congress to come and vote for this project at this time.

Gentlemen, I appeal to you. As I said the other day, this is not a question of a sectional appeal; but I ask you as Members of the House, representing here a great section of our southern coast, 3,000 miles in length, supplied with only one dry dock. I appeal to the membership of this House to support me in this proposition here to-day and help put across a project that means so much to the entire country. [Applause.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition.

This is an item that has not been presented by the Navy Department to the Budget. It is an item which is so far down the list of the improvements that the Navy would like to have considered that there are $7,000,000 of other projects under the Bureau of Yards and Docks which the Navy Department considers to be more important and more desirable than this.

The fleet is not based on Charleston. It is based either off Hampton Roads, or up farther north, or down near the Canal Zone. At the Canal Zone we have already a thousand-foot dock. At Hampton Roads we have a thousand-foot dock which would take in any ship.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. In the case of a disabled ship in the Atlantic it would have to pass through a 100-foot lock to get to the dock. Of course, if the ship is disabled in the Atlantic, there would be grave doubt about its ever getting over to the Pacific to dock.

Mr. TABER. There would be grave doubt about its getting to Charleston.

Mr. McMILLAN. Charleston for several years has been the base in the South Atlantic for about five months in the year.

Mr. TABER. And that has furnished very considerable use for the dock, I assume.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. The gentleman stated that this item had not been submitted to the Budget. Is it not a fact that your committee does not pay much attention to the estimates of the Budget anyhow, because the Budget has asked for $1,000,000 more for the Navy than the committee has given?

Mr. TABER. The committee is reappropriating, so that with the reappropriations and all, our appropriations are considerably beyond the Budget estimate.

Mr. GREEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. GREEN. Does not the gentleman believe it would be economy in the long run to establish this dock in that vicinity?

Mr. TABER. I believe it would be a waste of money to spend this money at this time because the repairs of all of the fleet are well taken care of at the present time.

Mr. GREEN. But they are taken care of at Norfolk?

Mr. TABER. Well, Norfolk is only 300 or 400 miles away.

Mr. GREEN. Well, 300 or 400 miles is quite a distance.

Mr. EDWARDS. It is approximately 600 miles from Charleston by way of the coast to Norfolk.

Mr. TABER. Five hundred miles would be the maximum.

Mr. EDWARDS. Well, let us say it is 500 miles. How many docks are in New York?

Mr. TABER. There are three or four, but only two that would be suitable to take care of these big ships.

Mr. EDWARDS. Assuming there is none within this 3,000-mile stretch from Norfolk south, how are they going to be taken care of unless they are towed to Norfolk or New York?

Mr. TABER. Of the light cruisers that are under construction there would not be many based around that part of the sea.

Mr. EDWARDS. The sea is just as salty and just as big down there as it is around New York.

Mr. TABER. They would be based in the Pacific a good deal of the time.

Mr. NEWTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. NEWTON. How many docks are there on the Atlantic of substantial size?

Mr. TABER. There is a dock at Boston of 1,000 feet; two in New York that would take in these cruisers; there is one in Philadelphia and there is one at Norfolk, which makes four.

On the Pacific coast we only have the Mare Island and Puget Sound docks, besides the Canal Zone dock. This item was never even heard of by this committee until we came on the floor. It never has been presented to us and we have never had an opportunity to investigate the merits or demerits of it.

Mr. NEWTON. The gentleman from South Carolina has explained that.

Mr. McMILLAN. I think I have explained to the committee why I was unable to present this matter to the gentleman's committee.

Mr. NEWTON. To me the point seems to be this: Is the Navy, as it is now constituted, in a situation so that it could use to advantage additional dry-dock facilities of substantial size?

Mr. TABER. The dry-dock facilities we already have are not more than half taken up. On the Atlantic coast last year they were not more than 20 per cent used.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. In response to the gentleman's inquiry let me say that the dry-dock situation is such that the bill carries an item providing for the leasing of a dry dock in San Francisco Bay, because we have not a dry dock suitable, except at the Bremerton yard, to care for conditions on the Pacific side, and the same condition exists on the Atlantic side.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. LUCE). The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. NEWTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York may proceed for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. NEWTON. What is the situation on the Atlantic coast? Does the gentleman agree with the gentleman from New York on that statement?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. My position is that it would be quite advantageous to extend this dock at Charleston for this reason: All naval experts state that if you have an engagement in the Atlantic it is bound to occur in the vicinity of the Bahama Islands, and if a ship is disabled there in naval battle it would have to be towed to the Norfolk Navy Yard, and in towing it there, in all probability the ship would be injured and probably destroyed. So Charleston is in a logical and strategic situation and should have a dry dock that will take all of the large naval vessels.

Mr. NEWTON. I know; but does the gentleman agree with the gentleman from New York that at the present time there are fairly ample dry-dock facilities on the Atlantic coast?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. I do not.

Mr. NEWTON. What authority can the gentleman give to bear out that statement?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. What I have just said; that in an emergency or as the result of a battle we would need a dry dock in that vicinity.

Mr. TABER. Is there any question but what we have four 1,000-foot docks on the Atlantic side?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Of course we have, but they are not located at the right place. From the Panama Canal up to Hampton Roads there is not a dock suitable in size to take care of one of the 15 cruisers you have just authorized, and what we are trying to do is to provide a dock at the proper place, which is Charleston, and that dock should be large enough to take care of a cruiser in the event it is disabled in battle.

Mr. TABER. If that is the situation, why was not the matter presented to the committee so that we could secure statements from the responsible officers of the Navy upon the subject? Why, if they are so interested in this kind of a proposition, have they not presented the proposition to us and to the Budget so that it could be properly, fairly, and honestly considered? Why should we run wild in making appropriations to put in big dry docks or to extend them wherever some individual locally wants them, when the Navy Department has not felt the matter important enough to present it to Congress and to the Budget?

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The gentleman who has just concluded asks the question, "Why?" Evidently the gentleman has not investigated the matter very carefully, even though he is on the Appropriating Committee.

The arguments presented by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. MCMILLAN] and by other gentlemen who really understand this situation, make out a fair, strong case for this extension. We can visualize it. We have dry docks on the Atlantic, but where are they? They are up in the gentleman's State of New York, four or five of them, and elsewhere north of Norfolk.

Here is a stretch of coast of approximately only 500 miles from Norfolk on north, with some 17 dry docks, and here is a stretch of approximately 3,000 miles, or more, stretching south of Norfolk all the way down the Atlantic, where the water is just as deep, just as briny, and the ocean just as big as it is around New York, and there is but one dry dock on that long stretch of coast, and that dry dock is too short to take care of the cruisers that this committee is appropriating to construct and operate.

We have storms down in the South Atlantic, around Cuba and in that entire section, and yet the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] would force the Government to the great expense and to the extravagance of towing a crippled ship from the South Atlantic clear up to Norfolk or to New York or to the Massachusetts coast to get it repaired, when with only $300,000 we can modernize and vitalize and make useful the dry dock that we already have down there by simply extending it.

This is in the interest of economy. It is good sense, and, my friends, you can vote to-day to refuse this appropriation if you want to, but you will do an injury to the Navy and you do an injury to the Government itself. I hope, gentlemen, this case having been presented for the South Atlantic coast, you will see fit to do the right thing, the just thing, and the needed thing—you know it is needed—and extend this dry dock at Charleston.

Mr. BEEDY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EDWARDS. I will be pleased to yield.

Mr. BEEDY. The statement has been made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] that the naval authorities have never presented this case to the committee.

Mr. TABER. Or to the Budget.

Mr. BEEDY. Or to the Budget, and that is an important statement, and yet the statement is also made by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. MCMILLAN] that this project has been called to the attention of the naval authorities and every one of them, without a dissenting voice, has approved of it. Now, what is the fact?

Mr. MCMILLAN. If the gentleman will permit, that refers to the officers, the permanent officers, such as the captains and the admirals of the Navy, not to the administrative heads, so to speak.

Mr. EDWARDS. I will say, furthermore, in that connection, whether it has been called directly to the attention of the Navy Department or the Budget, this matter has been presented on the floor of the House ever since the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. MCMILLAN] has been in Congress. It bobs up every time we have an opportunity to bring it up, and we have begged and we have pleaded and we have argued for it, and I beg to-day that you do the just and the right thing, because it is needed. It is a shame on this country that we leave the shipping on the South Atlantic coast unprotected for 3,000 miles, when we have 17 dry docks north of Norfolk and only the one at Charleston on the coast south of Norfolk.

Now you have the case; let us do the right thing. [Applause.]

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, this amendment ought not to pass.

In the first place, it carries a very sizable amount of money. The last gentleman who has spoken has referred to our distinguished and amiable friend from South Carolina, and I must confess, if the amiableness and graciousness of a gentleman of the House were to be thrown into the balances in determining the wisdom of an appropriation, long ago I would have surrendered upon this item to my friend from South Carolina. [Laughter and applause.]

The gentleman has importuned, he has presented every argument that it seems could be presented, but we, as Members of the House, have a serious responsibility here. We can not look lightly upon the expenditure of $300,000 from the Treasury for a purpose that even is so desirable as the gentleman from South Carolina and the gentleman from Georgia indicate this to be. Now, what are the facts?

Mr. EDWARDS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Let me just follow up this statement and then I shall be pleased to yield.

The dry dock at Charleston lacks only about 8 feet of being able to accommodate several of the cruisers that we have in the Navy to-day. This accommodation could be extended, as I am advised by the Navy Department, for the small sum of $800 that would be used for the purpose of cutting out a niche on the land end of the dock.

The ships that we are providing for in the bill that passed the House yesterday will not be completed for a period of three years. It would not require more than a fraction of a year to extend the length of this dock so that it would accommodate the larger cruisers, and therefore there is no need of considering the item at this particular moment.

Mr. MCMILLAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. All right.

Mr. MCMILLAN. The gentleman a moment ago made the statement that $300,000 is quite a substantial amount. In part that is correct, but is it not true that in the extension of any dock, whether it be this dock of mine or any other dock, you are going to have to use money and it is going to cost money because it is a good project, and I want to say further that the cruisers that we have just authorized to be built will cost $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 each, and $300,000 for the protection and maintenance of these cruisers will be a mere bagatelle, and, of course, nobody knows when or where they are going to go out of commission.

Mr. EDWARDS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. I yield now to the gentleman.

Mr. EDWARDS. The gentleman stated that the dock at Charleston, which is 566 feet long, just lacks 8 feet of being long enough. Adding 8 feet to 566 feet will make 574 feet, and the cruisers we have at present are 610 feet long.

Mr. FRENCH. Some of them.

Mr. EDWARDS. I want to ask the gentleman how much has the Government invested in the dry dock at Charleston?

Mr. FRENCH. We have the data right here.

Mr. EDWARDS. It is considerably over $1,000,000, and it is now obsolete for the cruisers we have and it will be entirely obsolete for the cruisers that are to be built. So this $300,000 will really vitalize and make modern the investment that we already have and will save the Government a vast sum of money in the long run.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, this question must, of course, be taken into consideration in connection with the development of the cruiser program during the next few years. When Admiral Gregory, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, was before our committee he spoke about the Charleston yard and said that the only class of naval vessels regularly using the Charleston dock was the mine sweeper Falcon class—180 feet long.

I want to say further that during the entire fiscal year of 1928 no large vessels were docked in the Dry Dock No. 1. He indicated that during the last six or seven months only some six small vessels of the Navy have docked in that dock.

We are trying to conserve the moneys of our Government in handling the naval appropriation bill. In connection with the extension of the dry dock you will in all probability have to provide cranes, machinery, facilities generally for doing work on larger ships that might be brought in and for which no adequate facilities now exist. More than that, this item is not one that the Navy Department regarded as of sufficient importance to bring to our attention during the hearings.

After the gentleman from South Carolina brought the matter to my attention I was so interested in seeing what the attitude of the department would be that I took up the question with the Chief of the Bureau of Naval Operations, Admiral Hughes, and he told me that as desirable as the dock might be, it was low down in the priority list of expenditures needed for the Navy.

I took the matter up with Admiral Gregory, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks. I do not doubt that some naval officers have expressed their approval of the facilities, but the admiral said there are four or five million dollars of improvement work that ought to be made before this project should be undertaken. I submit, then, to Members of the House, that we ought not on the basis of any showing that has been made, when most of the very ships for which the dock extension is proposed, will not be coming into commission for several years, make such an appropriation at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. MCMILLAN].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. FRENCH) there were 81 ayes and 45 noes.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I am going to ask for tellers.

Tellers were refused.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment as a new section.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 33, in line 2, after the figures "$300,000," insert the following as a new paragraph:

"Puget Sound Navy Yard, Washington: For extension of Dry Dock No. 2, $400,000. Limit of cost, $700,000."

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, here is an item that is strongly recommended by the Navy Department and approved by the Director of the Budget [applause] and still it is eliminated from the bill. That is the condition that confronts the House on this amendment. It is recommended by the Director of the Budget. The Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks was before the committee at the hearing; that department is of the opinion that this is the most important item in the pending budget, in so far as satisfying the need of the fleet is concerned. It is extremely desirous of having the item made available. In fact, at one time it was strongly recommended to make the appropriation immediately available.

Here is the situation: There are seven navy yards on the Atlantic coast. There are two on the Pacific coast. There is the Mare Island Navy Yard and the Puget Sound Navy Yard. The Puget Sound Navy Yard is the only one capable of accommodating major ships in the Navy. The Puget Sound Navy Yard is the home of the Pacific Battleship Fleet. There is a dry dock there—Dock No. 2, 800 feet and 8 inches long. We have as a part of the Pacific Fleet two airplane carriers, the Lexington and the Saratoga, each 888 feet long, which can not now be accommodated at the Puget Sound Navy Yard.

There is a dock at Balboa, 6,000 miles south of the home of the Pacific Fleet, that will accommodate the Saratoga and the Lexington. There is a dock at Pearl Harbor, 2,800 miles west of the home of the Pacific Fleet, that will accommodate the two airplane carriers. There is a private dock owned by the Bethlehem Ship Corporation at Hunters Point, San Francisco, that will accommodate these two vessels, but no navy yard dry dock in continental America. Here is where the difficulty lies. We pay 8 cents a ton per day for docking ships at the Hunters Point dry dock. These two airplane carriers are of 30,000 tons each and cost nearly $43,000,000 each. They could be docked at the Hunters Point dry dock at a cost of $2,400 a day. It takes 10 days to dock one of these ships, and there we have $24,000 to dock each one of these ships once a year, and there are no repair facilities at the Hunters Point dry dock whatever. There is no electricity, no water, no heat, no crane service, nothing that can be used in the repair of these ships. This amendment provides that the only dock at a Pacific coast navy yard, Dock No. 2 at Puget Sound Navy Yard, be made available. We ask that this dry dock be extended 90 feet. The dock is already 800 feet 8 inches long and the ships are 888 feet long. We are working on a pretty small margin, but that will accommodate these two ships. The interest on $700,000, the estimated cost, at 5 per cent, will be $35,000 a year. To dock the two ships, the Lexington and the Saratoga, once a year at Hunters Point dry dock will cost $48,000. This is the economy of the situation, and it must appeal to every Member.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Washington has expired.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to continue for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER. Everywhere, in every department of the Navy, they have been looking forward to this development at Puget Sound Navy Yard to accommodate these ships. There are repair facilities there of every character. We could build the Saratoga and the Lexington at the Puget Sound Navy Yard. At the Balboa dock, at the entrance to the Panama Canal, there are no facilities for the permanent repair of war vessels. All of the repairs there are for the temporary repairs of merchant ships, in order that they may make their home ports. There are no repair facilities at Pearl Harbor Navy Yard.

Mr. ABERNETHY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. ABERNETHY. How much is involved in this expenditure?

Mr. MILLER. The estimated cost is $700,000, to extend the dry dock 90 feet, of which $400,000 is covered in my amendment to make it available for next year.

Mr. ABERNETHY. Does the Budget approve of this?

Mr. MILLER. Yes; it does.

Mr. ABERNETHY. Why did not the committee put it in?

Mr. MILLER. The committee can explain that. I suppose they left it out on the ground of economy.

Mr. EDWARDS. How much is now invested in the dry dock proposed to be extended?

Mr. MILLER. About $2,500,000; and there are two other docks there.

Mr. EDWARDS. And we can bring this dock up to date and make it serviceable for this expenditure of money.

Mr. MILLER. Absolutely. If it strikes the House that the economies of the situation are in favor of my amendment, then I ask the House to support the amendment. I think it ought to be included in the bill in accordance with the desire of the Navy Department and the Director of the Budget. It was arbitrarily excluded from the bill.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Is there one dock on the Pacific side now where the Saratoga and Lexington, the two large airplane carriers can be repaired, that belongs to the Government?

Mr. MILLER. There is not. None.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. The nearest Government dock is at Pearl Harbor, is it not?

Mr. MILLER. Yes; and that is 2,700 miles away.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. And the gentleman's amendment merely provides that the dock at Puget Sound be enlarged sufficiently to care for the two airplane carriers?

Mr. MILLER. Yes; and such other uses as the dock may be put to.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. And it is recommended by the Budget and approved by the department.

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. ABERNETHY. There is sufficient water there for these ships to get into this dock, is there?

Mr. MILLER. Oh, yes.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to permit me to ask a question of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. FRENCH. I desire to ask the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON] a question. Since this amendment is subject to the point of order, being legislation, has the gentleman's committee given any consideration to it?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. We try to consider everything that the Navy Department sends to us. If this has not been considered I am at a loss to understand why it has not been sent up, but I am under the impression that we have had some hearings on this subject.

Mr. FRENCH. But the gentleman would not support it under any consideration, unless it had been reported out by his committee, would he?

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Oh, in a matter of this importance where we have two ships costing $80,000,000 to build, and they can not be accommodated at a dry dock there, it ought to be considered and approved the first time we get a chance to do it. [Applause.]

Mr. MILLER. And another thing. This is simply a continuation of a work heretofore authorized. For that reason I do not believe it is subject to the point of order. The Navy Department and everyone connected with that department wants to see this extension, so that these big ships that we have constructed may have a home along with the other vessels of the Pacific Fleet at the Puget Sound Navy Yard.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I shall withdraw the reservation of the point of order that I made and discuss the proposition as it has been proposed. If the proposition shall go through, I think it ought to carry the limitation that would have made it subject to the point of order. The reason I withdraw my reservation of the point is because of my judgment in that regard. However, in my judgment, the amendment ought not to be approved. I think the Members of the House who have listened to the economies that can be brought about through the amendment of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. MCMILLAN], as presented by him, and the economies that will be obtained if the amendment of the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MILLER] shall prevail, must realize that they are of such magnitude that if these gentlemen could get together and work out a scheme of expenditures for the Navy Department, the economies would be such that soon we would be able to have revenue sufficient to run the Naval Establishment.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. FRENCH. If the gentleman is serious in his argument in reference to such economies, I will yield and let him spring it on the House.

Mr. MILLER. I desire to say to the gentleman I am sincerely in earnest in this matter and that the Navy approves and the Budget recommends it. I have nothing whatever to "spring." Here is the question: Speaking of economies, it will cost $24,000 for each of these vessels to dry dock at Hunters Point and 5 per cent interest on the amount covered by this item is $35,000 a year and——

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. The gentleman a moment ago used the Budget's failure to approve the South Carolina item as a reason why the House should reject it. The Budget approves this, and, if you apply the same logic the gentleman was applying, why should not the committee accept this item?

Mr. FRENCH. That argument, of course, is worked both ways by the gentlemen on the other side. Let me continue with my observation on the merits of the proposition itself. We have at Bremerton a dry dock capable of accommodating every ship of the American Navy almost except the two carriers, Lexington and Saratoga. Those ships ordinarily will not be there. We carried in the bill that passed the House yesterday provision for authorizing an airplane carrier of a type that we suppose will be similar to five carriers that Congress will build as the years go along. Everyone knows that those two ships, the Lexington and the Saratoga, are money consumers; money consumers when in operation or when they are idle. They have cost, as has been said, upwards of $40,000,000 each. They cost for maintenance more than any other ships of the American Navy for fuel. The amounts that are involved in just the keeping of those ships are so stupendous that we think the Government will consider, and members of our committee will consider, that they ought to be withdrawn from commission just as soon as their places can be taken by other airplane carriers of a type that will be capable of caring for our needs more economically.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I desire to state to the gentleman that I pointed out these defects five or six years ago and I was kicked all over this floor and called a pacifist.

Mr. FRENCH. Let me continue my statement. These airplane carriers will need to go into dry dock possibly every year. We expect to accommodate them in the naval dry docks, if they should be in the Panama region, as they are apt to be during the year, or in the dry dock at Pearl Harbor, if they should be in Hawaiian waters, as they are apt to be during the year. Or again we could rent accommodations for them in a private dry dock at Hunters Point, San Francisco, when they go to that region. The gentleman from Washington has suggested that a long trip would need to be made to take these ships from San Francisco Bay to the Hawaiian Islands——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FRENCH. I ask for five additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. FRENCH. It is a long trip. The gentleman has also told the House that it is 800 miles from San Francisco to Bremerton. I wonder if the gentleman has not convinced the House that it is such a distance from San Francisco Bay to Bremerton that the department has been justified in the use of the Hunters Point dry dock to the extent it has been used during the last year.

We could have taken the New Mexico to Bremerton, but we did not. We entered it at the dry dock at Hunters Point. The Tennessee, the California, the West Virginia, the Idaho, all of those capital ships, were put into dry dock at Hunters Point. The Government paid rent for accommodations at that dry dock, and the ships were not taken up to Bremerton. Why? Because of the item of cost involved in taking a great ship up there, I have no doubt, 800 miles up and 800 miles back, requiring all that steaming, chargeable to the Navy. I suspect if we were to approve of the amendment and increase the length of the dry dock at Bremerton, the Saratoga and the Lexington would be handled at Hunters Point rather than be sent on up to Bremerton for a few days in dry dock.

Now, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MILLER] has figured in these several estimates of his and has pointed out to the House the profits that soon will be flowing into the Treasury from the investment. He has pointed out that it will probably require 10 days each for these ships to be in dry dock. Let me refer to the record touching capital ships at Hunters Point. The Tennessee was there 3 days, the Pennsylvania was there 5 days, the California 3 days, the Idaho 3 days, the West Virginia 2 days, the Texas 3 days, the Lexington 7 days, and the Saratoga 5 days. In other words, the time consumed by those capital ships, exclusive of the airplane carriers, at Hunters Point is on an average something like 3 days, or one-third of the time now estimated by the gentleman for the Lexington and the Saratoga. The gentleman proposes an investment of $700,000 for a purpose that we hope will not need to be drawn upon only until one or a few airplane carriers of a smaller type may be built. With the needs of the Naval Establishment as they are, this House is not justified in adding willy-nilly another $700,000, even though it be approved by the gentleman who has proposed the amendment.

Mr. MILLER. And by the Budget Bureau.

I desire to say further that it is not a "willy-nilly" matter. I have never before heard recommendations of the Budget termed "willy-nilly."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MILLER].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. MILLER. A division, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. A division is demanded.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 43, noes 52.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. Tellers are demanded. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Twenty-four gentlemen have arisen, a sufficient number. Tellers are ordered. The Chair appoints the gentleman from Idaho [Mr. FRENCH] and the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MILLER] to act as tellers. All those favoring the amendment will pass between the tellers and be counted.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 52, noes 67.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Naval ammunition depot, Lake Denmark, N. J.: Replacement of certain public works destroyed by explosion, $100,000.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I made a point of order against the Lake Denmark item on the ground that it is legislation on an appropriation bill.

Let me make this statement: Of course, I recognize the fact that if this were a continuous public work this appropriation would be in order. But I call the Chair's attention to the fact that this property was destroyed by the great explosion at Lake Denmark when the munitions depot blew up. The purpose is to rebuild. Therefore it is a new item and not a continuation of a public work, falling in a different class from the other items enumerated in this bill concerning continuous public works.

The item says, "Replacement of certain works destroyed by explosion." I submit when it uses the words "destroyed by explosion" it means the rebuilding of these buildings that were destroyed. Therefore it is not in the category of a public work in process of being developed. It has got to start from the very beginning to be developed, and for that reason it must be authorized. And it is not authorized.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I had hoped that the gentleman would not insist upon his point of order, even though it were sound. However, I do not think that the point of order is sound. When it comes to buildings and replacement of buildings that have been authorized by law we do not have authority in our committee to bring in money for new building construction, and even if a building were destroyed we would not have authority to bring in money to replace the building. It would have to be done following authorization.

However, in caring for explosives we have a different proposition entirely. We all recall the disaster at Lake Denmark, the destruction of much property, and the apprehension that was caused in the minds of people living in the vicinity of Lake Denmark and other cities in neighboring parts of New Jersey. As the result of that disaster last year the Congress in this very bill carried under this heading money for the construction of two magazine buildings, $66,000.

I think the work is a work that is in progress. The storage of munitions is a different proposition from the storage of grain or the storage of automobiles or machinery. You do not ordinarily build many separate buildings for ordinary storage purposes. For powder and other explosives you must provide for safety by separating the contents through building numerous units. You think of storage space and not separate buildings as such. For instance, at Yorktown we are building a series of explosive containers that are of the igloo type. They would look like mounds to anyone who would be passing by. Are they separate houses? Are they separate institutions and works in the degree that we are required to come in and obtain an authorization for each one of them from the legislative committee? Or is it a part of a continuing program for the care of a very hazardous type of material, which ought to be cared for if human life and if property values are to be conserved? Now, the same principle, although a different type of container for the explosives, is applicable to the case of Lake Denmark.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Do I understand the gentleman, then, to contend that where any Government building has been destroyed and it becomes necessary to replace it that the committee has the jurisdiction to replace it on the general idea that it is a continuation of public works, or does he contend that it is necessary to get legislative authority before he can make the appropriation?

Mr. FRENCH. Oh, no. I would like to say that I anticipated the gentleman's question by answering it before he asked it. In other words, I said a moment ago that, generally speaking, I did not think it was within our jurisdiction, in the absence of authorization, to report out money for new buildings or even for the replacement of buildings that had been totally destroyed. Here, however, is an emergency and here is a program that is under way for which money was carried in the bill last year to the extent of $66,000.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, in view of the gentleman's statement as to what policy the committee will pursue when emergencies of this kind arise and when property is destroyed, I withdraw the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Naval air station, San Diego, Calif.: Extension of erection shop, $150,000; improvement of steam distribution, $19,500; shell house and bomb magazine, $9,000; extension of building No. 4, $30,000; dredging and extension of seaplane runway, $60,000; improvement of flying field, $25,000; in all, $293,500.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that line 14, shell house and bomb magazine, $9,000, is legislation on an appropriation bill. Let me ask the chairman of the subcommittee whether any authority for this building has been granted?

Mr. FRENCH. If the gentleman makes the point of order, I shall be compelled to concede it.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. What are the facts with reference to this? The gentleman may have good reasons for it, and so I ask him why it is necessary. Of course, it is legislation.

Mr. FRENCH. I would say that the accommodations contemplated are for the purpose of housing shells and bombs taken from aircraft or other ships that are for the time being at San Diego undergoing repairs, possibly, or based for the time being at San Diego. There ought to be facilities for caring for the shells and bombs during such periods.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Was this approved by the Navy Department?

Mr. FRENCH. It is approved by the department and comes to the committee in the regular order.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Naval air station, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii: Refrigerating plant for crews' galley, $15,000; extension of motor test stands, $25,000; in all, $40,000.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I had seriously thought of offering an amendment to this bill on page 32, the navy yard at Boston, Mass., for the construction of a marine railway and for the purchase of new machinery and tools, but I realize the hopelessness of securing the adoption of such an amendment. So I will not take up the time of the committee by offering the amendment. However, I do want to emphasize a little further what I had to say the other day about the situation as it exists on the east coast.

The Navy Department has apparently adopted the policy of keeping a large proportion of the fleet on the west coast. This was justified sometime ago, but there is no necessity at present for such an inequitable division of the fleet. If more vessels could be allocated to the east coast, or the Atlantic Fleet, undoubtedly considerable of the work load at the various yards could be stabilized. I confess that I am not as well informed on the necessities of the fleet as would lead me to utter any criticism whatever of the department's policy, but I am interested not only from a local but from a humanitarian view of the situation. To have some 600 men thrown out of employment in the middle of the winter seems almost criminal. I realize that money must be appropriated, and work allocated, or this undesirable condition is bound to occur. It occurred to me that these amendments might provide work at the present time, and take care, in a small degree, of the discharge of these expert mechanics in the Government yards. In other words, it is right along the lines as recommended by Mr. Hoover in one of his speeches.

Mr. FRENCH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERHILL. I yield.

Mr. FRENCH. I would say that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. UNDERHILL] has been very earnest and diligent in presenting the needs of this naval station to the committee and in urging the amendment to which he is referring now and to which he referred the other day in his general discussion. However, as it appeared to the committee, we could not approve of the particular item. It did not have the support of the Navy Department before the committee; or, in other words, it did not come to the committee as a Budget recommendation.

More than this, I want to say—and I think it will interest the gentleman from Massachusetts—that when our hearings were on we discovered that there was an attrition going on in connection with the machinery and tools of the different navy yards that was far beyond the moneys for their upkeep and replacement, and, accordingly, we carry in this present bill $1,500,000 as the first half of a program of $3,000,000, which we hope to carry through in two years for the replacement of tools and machinery and facilities at the different navy yards. I think this will go a long way toward improving the situation in the navy yard in Massachusetts in which the gentleman is so much interested.

I doubt if it will touch the question of the marine railway, but I think it will give other facilities, and at another time we shall be able to consider the question still further.

Mr. UNDERHILL. May I ask the gentleman if the necessity, the crying necessity, for the replacement of equipment in the Boston yard was presented to his committee, and if a part of this $1,500,000 will probably go to replacement of the equipment of that yard up to the point where it ought to be as a first-class navy yard.

Mr. FRENCH. It was presented as part of the deficiency that exists in all the yards. I would say that the question of administration we have not attempted to direct. We are leaving that with the department. I have no doubt, however, that the navy yard at Boston will need to be brought up in tools and facilities, just as the other yards, where properties have been deteriorating, will need to be replaced in order that a better working condition may be brought about.

Mr. UNDERHILL. I thank the gentleman for his assurance, and I am satisfied with that for the present.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. UNDERHILL] made a very earnest plea for the benefit and the employment of the Naval Establishment in his district.

Mr. UNDERHILL. May I interrupt the gentleman to say that most of my remarks have been for the whole east coast and all the yards?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. For the whole east coast; I thank the gentleman. Therefore other Members will join the gentleman in making that plea.

Just a few moments ago the gentleman from South Caroline [Mr. MCMILLAN], predicting a battle some time in the near future in the immediate vicinity of his State, prevailed upon this House to adopt a motion for the establishment of a navy yard at Charleston. Then the gentleman from Washington [Mr. MILLER] complained a few moments ago, in accordance with the exact statement made by the gentleman from Massachusetts, that the fleet had been transferred mostly to the Pacific and therefore they required another dry dock in the vicinity of his district located on the Pacific.

Yesterday we provided for 15 more cruisers and an additional airplane carrier. To-day we are providing for additional dry docks because of these additional cruisers. By the time the next appropriation bill comes out, perhaps, we will find we have too many dry docks and therefore we will require more cruisers to occupy the unemployed dry docks. And now, Mr. Chairman, for the sake of brevity, instead of having these amendments offered piecemeal, one at a time, I believe we ought to adopt an amendment providing for a dry dock and navy yard in every congressional district and send them down to the document room for distribution. [Laughter.]

The pro forma amendments were withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

BUREAU OF AERONAUTICS

AVIATION, NAVY

For aviation, as follows: For navigational, photographic, aerological, radio, and miscellaneous equipment, including repairs thereto, for use with aircraft built or building on June 30, 1929, $1,155,000; for maintenance, repair, and operation of aircraft factory, air stations, fleet, and all other aviation activities, testing laboratories, for overhauling of planes, and for the purchase for aviation purposes only of special clothing, wearing apparel, and special equipment, $12,170,000, including $230,000 for the equipment of vessels with catapults and including not to exceed $160,000 for the proceurement of helium of which such amounts as may be required may be transferred in advance to the Bureau of Mines; for continuing experiments and development work on all types of aircraft, including the payment of part-time or intermittent employment in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of such scientists and technicists as may be contracted for by the Secretary of the Navy, in his discretion, at a rate of pay not exceeding $20 per diem for any person so employed, $2,000,000; for drafting, clerical, inspection, and messenger service, $820,000; for new construction and procurement of aircraft and equipment, including not to exceed $774,000 for the Naval Reserve, $14,215,000, of which amount not to exceed $10,000,000 shall be available for the payment of obligations incurred under the contract authorization for these purposes carried in the Navy appropriation act for the fiscal year 1929, approved May 21, 1928 (45 Stat. 637); toward the construction of one of the rigid airships as provided in the act authorizing construction of aircraft, etc., approved June 24, 1926 (U. S. C., Supp. I, p. 223, sec. 749a), $1,000,000; in all, $31,360,000, of which $248,000 shall be available immediately; and the money herein specifically appropriated for "Aviation" shall be disbursed and accounted for in accordance with existing law and shall constitute one fund: Provided, That in addition to the amount herein appropriated and specified for expenditure for new construction and procurement of aircraft and equipment, the Secretary of the Navy may, prior to July 1, 1931, enter into contracts for the production and purchase of new airplanes and their equipment, spare parts and accessories, to an amount not in excess of $10,000,000: Provided further, That not to exceed $150,000 of the appropriation "Aviation, Navy, 1927," shall remain available until June 30, 1930: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for maintenance of more than six heavier-than-air stations on the coasts of the continental United States: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for the construction of a factory for the manufacture of airplanes: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to consider, ascertain, adjust, determine, and pay out of this appropriation the amounts due on claims for damages, which have occurred or may occur to private property growing out of the operations of naval aircraft, where such claim does not exceed the sum of $250.

Mr. FRENCH and Mr. MCKEOWN rose.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the word "procurement," on page 35, line 13, may be properly spelled.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the spelling of the word "procurement," on page 35, line 13, will be corrected.

There was no objection.

Mr. MCKEOWN. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the language on page 35, line 14, after the word "helium," "of which such amounts as may be required may be transferred in advance to the Bureau of Mines."

The CHAIRMAN. On what ground, may the Chair inquire?

Mr. MCKEOWN. That it is not authorized by law.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Idaho desire to be heard?

Mr. FRENCH. The language to which the point of order is directed is the language that provides that moneys may be transferred in advance to the Bureau of Mines for the purchase of helium.

Mr. MCKEOWN. But the language is—of which such amount as may be required may be transferred in advance to the Bureau of Mines—

And I say that is not authorized by law.

Mr. FRENCH. I think the point of order is not sound for the reason that the Bureau of Mines has been authorized to construct a helium-producing plant, and such plant is now completed or practically completed, at an expenditure of something like $1,600,000 or $1,700,000, including money that has been paid for leases.

The plant is in such shape that in a very short time, possibly 30 days, certainly not more than 90 or 120 days, it can be in operation. The general law provides for the transfer of money from one department to another. I now direct the attention of the Chairman to Forty-first Statutes at Large, page 613, chapter 194, wherein we find the following language:

SEC. 7. That whenever any Government bureau or department procures, by purchase or manufacture, stores or materials of any kind, or performs any service for another bureau or department, the funds of the bureau or department for which the stores or materials are to be procured or the service performed may be placed subject to the requisitions of the bureau or department making the procurement or performing the service for direct expenditure: Provided, That funds so placed with the procuring bureau shall remain available for a period of two years for the purposes for which the allocation was made unless sooner expended.

It seems that there is no question that authority exists for precisely what we have provided for in the bill.

Mr. MCKEOWN. Does the gentleman recollect that we recently passed a bill setting out that the department should buy helium from private individuals if they sold it cheaper than the bureau of the Government? This is in contravention of that statute.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman's point of order is not based on that.

Mr. MCKEOWN. The provision in the bill is in contravention of the law. The statute says that they shall buy from private individuals if the private individuals sell it cheaper.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Idaho give the Chair the citation again?

Mr. FRENCH. It is Forty-first Statutes at Large, page 613, chapter 194. It is also in the volume of the Navy Laws, which I shall send to the desk.

Mr. MCKEOWN. I want to call attention to the Chair the fact that we passed a bill relative to the production of helium in the Sixty-eighth Congress, and in that it provided that the United States should buy from private parties wherever and whenever they could buy it cheaper than they could from the Government. In other words, they gave the private individual some opportunity if he could sell it cheaper than the Government.

Mr. FRENCH. I think the gentleman from Oklahoma is under a misapprehension. There is nothing in the language that requires the Government to buy from the Bureau of Mines. We used the word "may."

Mr. McKEOWN. There is nothing here giving private parties the opportunity to sell if they can sell cheaper to the Government.

Mr. ARENTZ. The language in the bill is clear:

Where the procurement of helium, of which such amounts as may be required may be transferred in advance to the Bureau of Mines.

If that does not mean purchase from the Bureau of Mines, what does it mean?

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Oklahoma cite the Chair to the statute that he alludes to?

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Chairman, I have not the statute here, but I think I can give the language.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks it is necessary for him to have the statute before him.

Mr. JONES. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that in the act to which the gentleman refers there was a provision that the Bureau of Mines should furnish the Army and the Navy such amounts as they required, and this is in strict accord with both the naval law and the helium law. I think the gentleman's point of order is not well taken.

Mr. McKEOWN. The act was passed in the Sixty-eighth Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. Unless the gentleman from Oklahoma can give the Chair a definite citation of the statute, the Chair is obliged to overrule the point of order. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Gentlemen, you talk about the Government in business and keeping the Government out of business. What are you doing? It depends upon whose business it is that you are going to keep the Government out of it. Private operators expend their money to produce helium gas. The Government undertakes through its departments to horn everybody out of the business. After a private party goes in, manufactures it, then comes along the Bureau of Mines and tells the Navy Department and the War Department that they can let them have helium for $20 a thousand; but they do not count in the overhead, the cost of the buildings erected by the Government, and so forth. They do not figure that overhead in, and they do not figure the cost. They then come up here and say that they can make it for less money.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. PERKINS. It seems to me that if you read carefully this appropriation it means that there is appropriated $160,000, part of which may be transferred to the Bureau of Mines to purchase helium, but it does not provide for the transfer of helium. It simply provides that they can purchase helium out of the $160,000.

Mr. McKEOWN. Here is what is taking place, and it does not make any difference whether you call it a transfer to buy helium or not. The Bureau of Mines has gone into the helium business. The Congress put a provision in the helium bill regulating the sale of helium that they should buy from private individuals, if they could buy it cheaper.

I have no objection to the Government having supervision or the right to go in at any time its necessities require and acquire all of the helium it wants, but let me show you what they do to that business. Suppose you are in the helium business. You figure your cost on the amount of overhead and the amount of your capital that you have invested, but here comes the Government and puts in this money and they want to sell it back to the Government at just what it cost to put it in, not counting in the operating cost or the capital invested.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. I understand that the helium plant at Fort Worth cost $4,000,000.

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. I doubt if they produced that much helium throughout the entire operation of the plant. I understand that it has been discontinued and is to be turned into a fish hatchery. I am wondering how it may be used for that purpose.

Mr. McKEOWN. I was here on the floor opposing the construction of the plant at Fort Worth because I took the position at that time that the helium territory at that time was not adjacent to Fort Worth, but on account of more powerful influences it went to Texas and left the helium country in Oklahoma and Kansas without any plant, but as the gentleman says, we invested our money, and you are doing it again through the Bureau of Mines. You are giving them thousands and thousands of dollars to go out there and put out of business the private people who have invested their capital in good faith, wanting to sell to the Government.

Mr. HOWARD of Oklahoma. Is it not a fact that the policy of the Government in the handling of helium is throttling private enterprise and permitting daily millions of feet of gas to be consumed in which there is helium, which can not find a market, and which consequently is not expected?

Mr. PERKINS. Can the gentleman inform us when the plant at Fort Worth was constructed?

Mr. McKEOWN. It was constructed some time prior to 1920.

Mr. PERKINS. About 10 or 11 years ago?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes. I have no objection, be it understood, to the Bureau of Mines going out and investigate to find out how cheaply helium can be produced. I have no objection to the Bureau of Mines selling it, if the Government wants to go into the business, to the different departments of the Government, but I do object to the Bureau of Mines selling it for just what it costs them to produce, without counting in the overhead and the investment of the United States Government.

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER. The Democratic Party put the Government into this helium business in 1918, did it not?

Mr. McKEOWN. I suppose that all of us put it in; the Republicans voted for it, just as the Democrats did.

Mr. UNDERHILL. What is the gentleman's attitude on Muscle Shoals?

Mr. McKEOWN. I will tell the gentleman exactly. There is no use of expressing your opinion on a matter that for the present is dead, but I will give you my opinion about it. I have been of the opinion all of the time that it should be so run as to yield a fair return to the people of the country, who put their money in it—that is, the people of the United States—and so that the most good can be obtained from it at reasonable rates to the people. That is what I think about it. If the Government intruded in the gentleman's business, I am sure that he would join with me in saying that he wanted the Government out of it.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I think that I should make a short statement to the House upon the helium question. What the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McKEOWN] has said touching the investment of the United States in Texas at Fort Worth, is generally correct. I am not commenting on the details. The helium bearing gas from which we have been extracting helium at the Fort Worth plant has become so nearly exhausted that it is not profitable to operate the plant any more. With that thought a new plant under the Bureau of Mines was provided for less than two years ago, to be constructed at some other place. The place chosen is Amarillo, Tex. That plant, together with the pipe line, has cost $775,000. The Government has made an investment of $855,800 in gas fields, largely in leases, as I understand it, making a total investment in the new Amarillo plant of $1,620,800. The committee has estimates from the Bureau of Mines that the helium from that plant can be produced if we will give the Bureau of Mines the opportunity of producing as much as 675,000 cubic feet per month, at $20 per thousand cubic feet, and at a less cost for increased production. There is a private plant at Dexter, Kans., which has been operating for less than a year and a half. That plant cost about one-half million dollars. From that plant we can purchase helium at about $35 per thousand cubic feet. The gentleman from Oklahoma says that the overhead of the Government plant in Texas ought to be figured in as part of the cost to the Government of helium from the plant, if we are going to compare the cost of the Government's production of helium with the cost of procuring it from a private plant. That may be true from the standpoint of economic comparisons, but is it true from the standpoint of cost to the Treasury?

The investment of the Government has been made. Rightfully or wrongfully we own the plant. We thus have this plant investment whether we purchase from a private institution or take the helium from the plant owned by the Government. You can not get away from it. You must keep the plant in some sort of repair whether operated or idle. You must take into account the interest upon the investment. In other words, by purchasing helium from a private plant you do not stop the overhead expense at the Government plant. You must add it in to the cost of the helium whether you purchase helium from the Government or from the private plant. If that is true, we must approach this question upon the basis of where we shall be able to procure helium the cheapest. We found we could procure helium from the Government plant at a cost not greater than $20 per 1,000 cubic feet, exclusive of the investment cost, as against about $35 per 1,000 cubic feet from a private plant. However, we do not undertake to require that the Government purchase from the Government plant. We have left it clearly optional with the department. We have used the word "may" so that if a private plant may produce helium at an attractive price, or if the Bureau of Mines can not meet the situation, the Navy Department may have an opportunity to purchase wherever it may do so.

Mr. McKEOWN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. I will.

Mr. McKEOWN. Will the gentleman tell us how much it cost the Government per 1,000 cubic feet of helium when you take into consideration the total amount of investment that is put into the proposition?

Mr. FRENCH. Oh, the gentleman would have to include in that the whole investment, cost of experimental work, cost of experimentation, and so forth. Surely that would not be fair. Now, with reference to the Fort Worth plant——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. McKEOWN. I ask that the gentleman may have two minutes more in order that I may ask him a question.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. McKEOWN. Suppose the United States Government should go into the gentleman's district and take some of the fine, rich potato land out in the State of Idaho and go into the potato business. Would the gentleman say that the Government of the United States should just measure the price they could purchase at without computing the cost to private people?

Mr. FRENCH. The gentleman's illustration is not apt. The Government does not want to go into private business and it is not seeking to do so. We are told by the experts from the Bureau of Mines that it is estimated that we have enough helium in the United States to last our country 700 years upon the basis of the use of 10,000,000 cubic feet per year. But no one knows and no one knows the waste that will go on.

Mr. McKEOWN. I just wanted to say we have some figures on Fort Worth.

Mr. FRENCH. Yes; and I am glad the gentleman interjected that observation for the reason that we do not know. We can not tell how much helium there may be in the earth in the United States. So far as we know the world's great store of helium is within the United States. No other country has helium to any great extent. The scientists in Japan are trying to extract helium from the gases of volcanos.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. FRENCH. I ask for three additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. FRENCH. The scientists in Germany and other countries are working to see if they can not extract helium from the air, from other gases, or if they may not discover a gas which is not inflammable.

Helium is so valuable that under the law it may not be exported from the United States except upon permission from the President.

Now, that leads me to a point that is pertinent right here. The Dexter Field, in Kansas, where the private plant is located, is a field that contains gases that are not used commercially, in addition to gases from other wells of commercial value. The gases from which the helium is being extracted in that field to-day are gases which do not have commercial value. Helium ought to be conserved in a field like that.

In the Texas field helium is infused with a gas that is being used for industry as it is flowing from the well. As it goes into industry, unless the helium shall be extracted at the time, it passes on as waste product, without anybody receiving any profit from it whatever. In the interest of conservation we ought to have regard for what seems to be natural storage.

We ought to purchase it and extract it from fields where gas is being used for commercial purposes, and not go to the fields where the helium would not be withdrawn with gasses for commercial use.

Mr. McKEOWN. Has the gentleman any information about the helium gas that is being extracted from the northern and northwestern parts of the State of Oklahoma? Is any effort being made to obtain that helium?

Mr. FRENCH. My idea is that we ought to obtain helium from the place where it is or may be taken from the earth as a by-product of another gas, and where it otherwise would go to waste.

Mr. McKEOWN. The gentleman knows that on the lands where gas of no commercial value is produced you find more and better helium?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes; and that gas ought to stay in the ground last of all. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FRENCH: Page 35, line 14, after the word "such" insert the word "sum."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. UNDERHILL: Page 37, line 7, strike out "$250" and insert "$500."

Mr. UNDERHILL. Mr. Chairman, it is ridiculous to make a limitation of $250 in case of airplane accidents which may be settled directly by the department. The Committee on Claims has within two weeks considered one of these accidents, which damaged four different owners of property, and every case in excess of $300. In each instance it has been necessary to bring before Congress a special bill, to take up the time of the committee and of the House and of the Senate, in order to settle a just debt owed by the Government to one of its citizens—a debt which could have been settled in five minutes by the department without anybody losing anything or the Government being in any way mulcted of anything. There should be no limit on the departments. Honest and immediate settlement is the only law.

I recognize that that is too revolutionary and too arbitrary to effect any such amendment as that to prevail; I offer an amendment increasing the amount to $500, and, if I am here when another such bill is considered, I may offer an amendment for $1,000, and so on, until Congress is educated to the policy of referring these matters to the department where they belong, where they can be settled without delay, without suit, without the intervention of a lawyer, and without economic waste.

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERHILL. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER. That would not preclude a claimant from bringing a claim to Congress if the Navy Department were arbitrary. They are very arbitrary in many cases in order to cover up the negligence of some member of their establishment.

Mr. UNDERHILL. Congress has been very liberal with the public.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERHILL. Yes.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. My recollection is that we have a general law that does permit the Secretary of the Navy in these cases to settle a claim of not more than $250. I did not make a point of order because I think the limit of $500 is a reasonable one. But the Congress has heretofore refused to adopt a law making a claim payable by the department in too large amount.

Mr. UNDERHILL. The department has a law to enable them to settle damage claims caused by United States vessels up to $1,000.

Mr. BLACK of Texas. That does not apply to aircraft, as I recollect it. My recollection as to the paragraph relating to aircraft is that the limitation is $250.

Mr. UNDERHILL. My recollection is that the Army already has the privilege of settling claims up to $500. I think this amendment will surely do no harm. I hope the chairman of the committee will accept the amendment.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I am advised that the provision in the Army bill is $250. On the other hand, it seems to me the amendment is in line with good business and good sense. If in a businesslike way, when an airplane is required to make a forced landing and plow through a garden or through a field of grain, an adjustment could be made within 30 days after the accident may have occurred, the Government would be advantaged and so would the individual who has suffered the loss. On behalf of the committee, I am glad to accept the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

For miscellaneous supplies, material, equipment, personal and other services, and for other incidental expenses for the Marine Corps not otherwise provided for; purchase, repair, and exchange of typewriters and calculating machines; purchase and repair of furniture and fixtures; purchase, exchange, and repair of motor-propelled and horse-drawn passenger-carrying and other vehicles, including parts; veterinary services and medicines for public animals and the authorized number of officers' horses; purchase of mounts and horse equipment for all officers below the grade of major required to be mounted; shoeing for public animals and the authorized number of officers' horses; books, newspapers, and periodicals; printing and binding; packing and crating of officers' allowance of baggage; funeral expenses of officers and enlisted men and accepted applicants for enlistment and retired officers on active duty and retired enlisted men of the Marine Corps, including the transportation of their bodies, arms, and wearing apparel from the place of demise to the homes of the deceased in the United States; construction, operation, and maintenance of laundries; and for all emergencies and extraordinary expenses, $2,028,159: Provided, That there may be expended out of this appropriation not to exceed $23,100 (including the exchange value of any vehicles which may be used as part payment) for the purchase of 17 motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles, the gross cost of any one vehicle not to be in excess of the respective amounts which follow: Three, $2,000 each; four, $1,300 each; ten, $650 each; also 20 motor cycles, cost not to exceed $270 each: Provided further, That the sum to be paid out of this appropriation under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy for clerical, drafting, inspection, watchman, interpreter, and messenger service in the classified field service of the Marine Corps, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, shall not exceed $90,000.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 42, which is less than two pages back, for the purpose of correcting the typographical structure of the sentence. One line seems to have been dropped and reinserted in the wrong place. The amendment which I desire to offer will correct that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho asks unanimous consent to return to page 42 for the purpose indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FRENCH: On page 42, line 14, strike out all the matter in line 14 and insert in lieu thereof the following: "ment, including cash in lieu of ferriage and transfers en-."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

INCREASE OF THE NAVY

Construction and machinery: On account of hulls and outfits of vessels and machinery of vessels heretofore authorized, $22,750,000, and in addition the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to make transfers during the fiscal year 1930 from the naval supply account fund to this appropriation of sum aggregating $2,000,000, and the total sum hereby made available shall remain available until expended.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, on page 45, line 9, I move to strike out the word "sum" and insert the word "sums."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Idaho offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FRENCH: Page 45, line 9, strike out the word "sum" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sums."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Armor, armament, and ammunition: Toward the armor, armament, and ammunition for vessels heretofore authorized, to remain available until expended, $12,000,000.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FISH: Page 45, line 14, after "$12,000,000," add the following: "Provided, That any contract for naval construction may be canceled in whole or in part by the President at his discretion which is inconsistent with the terms of any treaty hereafter ratified to further limit naval armament."

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that that is legislation upon an appropriation bill.

Mr. FISH. Will the gentleman reserve his point of order?

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. I will reserve the point of order so that the gentleman may make a statement.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, of course, the amendment is subject to a point of order; but the amendment I propose, if my colleague from New York will study it, does not interfere or limit the naval appropriations except after a treaty has been ratified by the Senate of the United States. Then it gives the President power immediately to curtail, cut down, or cancel the appropriations for the construction of ships in the event a treaty to limit armament is ratified. It does not simply require an agreement to be reached, but actually requires a treaty to be ratified. I am sure that if the gentleman understands the exact situation he would not care to tie the hands of the President of the United States to cancel contracts for naval construction after a treaty has been ratified to limit naval armament. It is an entirely different proposition than that of entering into an agreement for naval limitation which has no legal standing until it is ratified by treaty. A provision already exists under the bill that was passed yesterday empowering the President to suspend all construction in case an agreement is reached to limit naval armament, and this gives him power to cancel naval contracts in case a treaty is ratified. Certainly the gentleman can not find any objection to a proposition of that kind.

Mr. SCHAFER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER. I think the incorporation of the gentleman's amendment in this bill would have a tendency to increase the cost of these repairs and alterations, because it would be necessary to have a cancellation clause in the contract; and with that cancellation clause in the contract the bids would necessarily be higher.

Mr. FISH. No. The purpose of the amendment is to save money to the Government. The main purpose of the amendment is to free the hands of the President when he goes into a conference to limit naval armament; and, secondly, to save money to the Government, because if you ratify a treaty it may be months before the President can be empowered to cancel existing contracts.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Of course, I am sympathetic toward what the gentleman is trying to do, but with respect to strengthening the hands of the President, we strengthened them with 15 cruisers, and then had the inconsistency to say that we were looking to a disarmament conference.

Mr. FISH. I am very strongly for the 15 cruisers.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Then the gentleman is inconsistent, too.

Mr. FISH. No; because I am in favor of parity or equality with Great Britain, but I believe that Great Britain and Japan are ready to agree to a limitation upon light cruisers such as we authorized yesterday. I voted with an overwhelming majority of the House in favor of the 15 cruisers, but believe provocative competition can only be prevented by calling a conference in the near future to extend the 5-5-3 ratio to light cruisers.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I think we can face the situation contemplated by this amendment when it arises.

No such situation can arise until a future Congress, and I believe it can then be met. I feel, though, that the conditions and the mandatory provision relating to the construction of these cruisers as contained in the bill which has now passed both Houses and which either has been or we hope will be signed shortly, should not in any way be qualified or subjected to any further conditions. I must insist upon my point of order.

Mr. FISH. Does not the gentleman know that the President already has the power to suspend all construction under the bill that passed yesterday? This is to give him the right and the power after a treaty is ratified to cancel all appropriations, in whole or in part, to conform with any limitation of armament treaty hereafter ratified.

Mr. TEMPLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes; I yield.

Mr. TEMPLE. Is it not true that a treaty when it is ratified becomes a law and supersedes any statute of earlier date?

Mr. FISH. That is a question for the courts to decide.

Mr. TEMPLE. Have they not already decided it?

Mr. FISH. I think they have uniformly held that a treaty and a law of Congress are of equal force.

Mr. TEMPLE. Of equal power, and the one of later date is the one that is to be enforced.

Mr. FISH. That is a question for the courts.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT. Mr. Chairman, I insist upon my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. BLACK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, and ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLACK of New York. Mr. Chairman, President Coolidge in his Armistice Day speech has brought to the forefront the question of our naval inadequacy. Now that America has become the leading economic unit of the world it is well that we take a reckoning of our power on the seas.

In 1916 President Wilson, conscious of our advancing economic status, inaugurated a great naval program as a guaranty for our commercial security. The main feature of the program was the large battleship of great speed, range, and tonnage. This plan was interrupted by the war. Ship workers were required to build merchantmen and destroyers as a protection for the merchant ships. In 1919 the Wilson program was renewed, and we were well on our way to having the leading navy of the world when British statesmen became alarmed at our naval and economic expansion.

The first sea lord, Admiral Wemyss, insisted that we abandon our naval and commercial maritime program. Pacifists in America followed the British Admiralty, and after British propaganda had steamed up the disarmament cult, President Harding called the Washington conference. Uniform disarmament may make for peace, but unilateral disarmament, such as America disarming while Britain arms, has a quite different effect.

The American proposals at the Washington disarmament conference were fair enough, but the other powers considered the conference a maneuver in the naval war game, and we were defeated.

We proposed under our main plan—the use of capital-ship tonnage as the measurement for strength for navies and a proportionate allowance of auxiliary combatant craft prescribed.

By this we intended that there be a reduction by all powers in battleship tonnage and a reduction in proportion of light cruisers, destroyers, and submarines.

The conference proceeded to work on this basis—naturally the first unit to be considered was the capital ship, the ship of over 10,000 tons. We agreed on a ratio of capital ships to Britain and Japan known as the 5–5–3. For every 5 tons of capital-ship construction we were to have, Great Britain was to have 5 tons and Japan 3 tons. No new construction, except specified replacements, were to be built which were over 10,000 tons or to carry over 8-inch guns. Great Britain and the United States were each allowed to have 135,000 tons of aircraft carriers.

We scrapped 11 ships out of 15, 40 per cent completed, on which we had spent four hundred millions. We scrapped 32 ships of a total tonnage of 842,380 tons, 552,800 of which was new construction. Great Britain scrapped 447,750 of old tonnage. Great Britain scrapped 22 ships, 18 of which were obsolete. We further agreed not to fortify naval bases in the Pacific. Japan and Great Britain were free to strengthen theirs.

Moreover, as the relative capital-ship power worked out Great Britain has 558,950 tons of capital ships, while we have 525,850 tons. Britain's ships are faster and of greater ranges. The British compute normal displacement with a light load, while we compute it with a maximum load. So the actual British tonnage approaches 600,000 tons. The British list the Renown at 26,500 tons, but when she passed through the Panama Canal with a light load she weighed 33,379 tons. Our Mississippi and Idaho, listed at 32,000 tons, went through the canal the same year, but in actual displacement were far less than the Renown.

The broadside fire of our three largest ships is 16,800 pounds, while that of the three largest British vessels is 21,060 pounds.

We in 1922 were in a better financial position to proceed with capital-ship construction than the other powers. Our wealth amounted to $320,803,862,000, Great Britain's to $120,000,000,000, Japan's to $22,500,000,000.

It is quite apparent, then, that at the Washington conference the United States made a most substantial contribution for peace through disarmament. But Great Britain and Japan did not see the conference in that light. Instead, they applied the money saved through curtailed battleship construction to large cruisers and submarines, throwing out of balance the 5–5–3 formula.

Since the conference Great Britain has provided for the construction of 28 cruisers in excess of 7,500 tons each. We have been forced by Great Britain's building plans to provide for 18 in excess of 7,500 tons. Considering all modern cruisers provided for, the British have 67 of a tonnage of 386,636, Japan 33 of a tonnage of 206,415, and the United States 18 of a tonnage of 146,000. This makes the tonnage ratio: British Empire, 5.0; Japan, 2.7; United States, 1.4. In 1931, when there may be another conference should the powers party to the Washington conference agree to call one, the British will have 30 cruisers carrying 8-inch guns with a range of 7 miles and we will have 8. Even if the President signs the 15 cruiser bill, we will be far behind Great Britain in 1931. Moreover, the British have 888,000 tons of fast merchant ships that could be converted into 6-inch-gun cruisers, while we have only 188,000 tons.

The British have in light cruisers of 20 years of age or less and a speed of over 27 knots, known as first-line cruisers, 58 of a tonnage of 362,596. We have 13 of a tonnage of 155,000. Japan has 18 of a tonnage of 196,000.

In cruisers 20 years or less of age and a speed of less than 27 knots, known as second-line cruisers, the British have 9 ships of 5 to 16 years of age of a tonnage of 48,380. We have 6 ships of from 19 to 20 years of age of a tonnage of 53,930. Of cruisers past the effective age of 20 years we have 16 ships, while the British have none.

All the naval experts of all the powers agree on the tremendous value of cruisers, so that when we consented to a disarmament of capital ships and left the field for building cruisers open, and the British and the Japanese took advantage of the letter of the treaty and constructed modern cruisers, the Washington conference worked to the decided disadvantage of the United States.

When the Geneva conference was called it was for the purpose of bringing about a disarmament of auxiliary craft, particularly cruisers. The position of the United States and Great Britain at the Washington conference was reversed at the Geneva conference. At the Washington conference we had the strength and sacrificed it. At the Geneva conference Great Britain had the strength and refused to sacrifice it. Instead of agreeing to cut down her cruiser strength at Geneva, the British insisted that their minimum need was 70 cruisers, asking in all for a 600,000-ton cruiser construction. We suggested a maximum of 300,000 tons of cruiser tonnage.

Great Britain further wanted to divide the cruisers into two classes, the 10,000-ton 8-inch-gun cruisers and the 6,000-ton 6-inch-gun cruisers. If an agreement had been worked out on that basis, we could have had an equal number of 10,000-ton cruisers with Great Britain and an equal number of the 6,000-ton cruisers, but this would not be a parity in cruiser strength, because Great Britain has four bases in the Atlantic—one at Bermuda, one at Halifax, one at Trinidad, and one at St. Lucia. Our 6,000-ton cruisers would be comparatively useless to us because of our lack of bases, whereas the 6,000-ton cruisers of the British could be put to the utmost utility because of these accessible bases. This proposal of Great Britain was fraught with trickery and it is to the credit of the American delegation that they did not subscribe to it. Great Britain does not want to give us parity in naval strength, although Great Britain has always proclaimed her right to rule the seas based on her economic position. That economic position has been changed in favor of us since the war. Accepting the British precedent, we have a right to rule the seas. However, we have not insisted on that, and at the Washington conference agreed upon a parity of naval strength. But the British position on this some time after the disarmament conference was stated by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Winston Churchill, when he said:

Therefore we are not able now, and I hope at no future time, to embody in a solemn international agreement any conditions which would bind us to the principle of mathematical parity in our naval strength.

Parity in naval strength to the British means the surrender of their age-long claim to the rule of the seas, and no British political party will be at any time ready to acquiesce in parity. Indeed, it was the Labor Party, through Mr. Ramsey MacDonald, that departed from the spirit of the Washington conference and started the erection of modern cruisers in 1924. I have always believed that we would not be in the naval snarl we now find ourselves had our State Department protested against the building of these modern cruisers by Great Britain as a violation of the spirit of the Washington conference. The great naval issue to-day is cruiser strength. Japan, after the disarmament conference, fostered a plan for the construction of 22 cruising submarines, hiring the best German submarine experts to supervise the construction. We have a large number of old and small submarines, and their use was restricted to our disadvantage by the rules laid down at the Washington conference.

The British since the disarmament conference have 16 fleet submarines built or in building and 12 more authorized. The Japanese have 25. We have 6 built or building, and at the last Congress we appropriated a small sum for plans for 3 more, so that on fleet submarines, which are the submarines capable of operating with the fleet, we are far below the 5–5–3 ratio; and this is another item that has unbalanced the 5–5–3 ratio. We have no destroyer leaders. These are a slightly larger type of destroyer, with greater speed, and are necessary to direct the movement of a destroyer squadron, and there should be 1 destroyer leader for each group of 18 destroyers.

Great Britain has 18 destroyer leaders, while Japan has 24. We outrank Great Britain in the number of destroyers, having 262 to Great Britain's 156; but about 164 of our destroyers are out of commission, but the Navy Department states that they are constantly being oiled and kept in trim. However, by 1936 all of them will have reached the age limit for destroyers of 16 years. Those who oppose our building cruisers state that our destroyer strength offsets the British cruiser strength. That is not so, for the light cruisers of Great Britain, with a greater gun range and greater speed and accessible bases, according to Admiral Hughes, could with impunity destroy our destroyers.

Some opponents of increased naval strength in the United States set forth that the British require a greater navy because of their so-called isolation and their need of keeping the lanes of the sea open for food supplies. As a matter of fact, it will be quite easy for the British to assure their food supply from continental Europe by the use of mines and submarines. The British bill for imported foods yearly is $2,500,000,000, while the United States imports food of the value of $1,160,000,000. The British actually want the cruisers for the purpose of maintaining a blockade in case of war, so that neutral commerce can not make contact with the British foe. The British are more concerned with power to starve a hostile nation than they are with their own food supply, which can be guaranteed safe passage from nearly any port of continental Europe to Great Britain.

We have reached a point of economic rivalry with Great Britain that can only be protected by an adequate navy. In 1926 we led Great Britain in the ratio of 91 to 85 in the relative value of our foreign trade; and despite this, even though we adopted the 71-ship program suggested by the General Board of the Navy at the last session of Congress, the British would have 400,000 tons of cruisers to protect their trade five years before we had. We have a world trade of $10,000,000,000 that we must protect. We have such focal positions to be guarded as the principal points of the Atlantic, the Pacific, and the Gulf coast, the Panama Canal Zone, and the Hawaiian zone.

We have the liberties of approximately 120,000,000 people to safeguard. It is a strange thing that Great Britain, with a lesser stake in the world than we, and a member of the League of Nations, insists on a fleet greater than ours. Surely, if the League of Nations means anything, there is no possibility of a British conflict with any member of the league, so that the only reason for the intensive British naval construction is the possibility of trouble with the United States. There should be disarmament in the world and particularly should the members of the League of Nations, in view of this cooperative agreement, be ready and willing to lead in disarmament. The recent Franco-British naval agreement, by which the cards were to be stacked against us at any future disarmament conference, shows a bias on the part of European nations against us, because by this secret accord the French were to agree with the British that the British design for light-cruiser strength was to be the paramount consideration of a future naval conference.

If the League of Nations does not warrant disarmament of its members, surely it does not relieve us of the duty to maintain a navy. The thesis of the league on disarmament is an incentive to naval construction. The league proposes at some future time to pass a disarmament resolution to the effect that the member nations shall not arm beyond their then strength. This naturally makes for extensive construction in the meanwhile, as each nation will want to approximate maximum power at the time of the resolution.

By the Kellogg treaties the abstraction, war, is renounced as an instrument of national policy, but, so far, none of the subscribing powers have destroyed a ton of steel naval vessels as an instrument of national policy.

After much shifting the administration seems to have found its bearings on the naval question and insists on building up the Navy to the 5–5–3 ratio. This is a simple duty under the preamble to the Constitution. When the 71 ship bill was offered public opinion reacted against it because it was felt that three-quarters of a billion dollars would be spent immediately on the Navy. That was due to a misunderstanding of congressional procedure. In Congress we can not appropriate for one single naval vessel unless the law provides, prior to the appropriation, that that vessel may be built. In other words, if the 71 ship bill were passed, then Congress could appropriate, from time to time, for the units provided for in the 71 ship legislation.

In 1916 Congress passed a bill for nine fleet submarines, and it was not until the last Congress that money was appropriated for plans for the last three of these, and we have not appropriated money for the destroyer leaders that were provided for by the 1916 act. If the naval appropriation bill is before the House, and a Member offers an amendment to add moneys for the construction of one ship, and that one ship is not authorized by law, the amendment will be thrown out by the House on a point of order. I believe that the Senate should add to the 16-ship bill that is now pending before it an amendment to cover the 71 ships originally asked for by the Navy Department. That would give us a well-balanced program calling for an expenditure, over a period of years, within our means, for the building up of the Navy.

Such a policy would have a powerful effect on disarmament throughout the world. No nation is in a position to compete with us in the building of naval vessels. We are spending about $6 per year on the national defense, while Great Britain is spending about $16 a year and can not go much further. Lord Nelson said that—there is no more powerful negotiator in the councils of Europe than a fleet of British war vessels.

There would be no more powerful negotiator toward real disarmament than the expressed determination of this country to build a large Navy.

A navy, though not fighting, is not wasted. As a matter of fact, our Navy does not cost us, per annum, 1 per cent of our Navy-protected trade. Building a navy is of great benefit to the industry of the country. We have fallen behind considerably in the construction of merchant ships. Since the Washington conference we have built 18 merchant ships of a total tonnage of 195,000 while Great Britain has built 882 approximating in tonnage 5,000,000 tons. As a result the shipbuilding industry is in a deplorable condition. Out of 60 shipways in five East coast yards, 50 were vacant until recently. Our navy yards are considerably undermanned due to lack of work. The material for ship construction is gathered from all over the United States, and so money appropriated for the Navy vessels goes to all parts of the country and helps to vitalize all industry. In case of emergency it would not be an easy thing to assemble the mechanical personnel needed to build ships, and those who believe that we could create a Navy in five days to meet an advancing British fleet have little insight into shipbuilding conditions. There are 61,600,000 tons of merchant tonnage in the world as a whole. Of this the United States has only 4,000,000 of tons suitable for competitive trade.

Over 46 per cent of the world's total new tonnage is British owned, and so a large part of our trade is carried in British ships, much to the hindrance of American industry. The building of a navy and a merchant marine under the Jones-White bill as part of the naval reserve will help to restore the shipbuilding industry. It has been testified to by naval authorities before congressional committees that we have not a first-class Navy. They have presented facts, as I have, to substantiate this conclusion. There is no use drawing on the imagination to bestir the American people to regain power on the seas. Those who believe we are living in an ideal world are relying too much on the imagination. In view of the world's history of 13 years of war to 1 year of peace, it is far easier to imagine war than peace. Armament does not mean war, unless it is inferior armament. As Frederick the Great said, "God fights on the side of the heaviest artillery." The Naval War College has demonstrated by six problems the inferiority of the American Battle Fleet. In three problems all our 18 ships were destroyed in a space of time running from 21 minutes to 45 minutes, while the British fleet was damaged at the highest point at 58 per cent and at the lowest point at 18 per cent. The result of these war games have been known to the administration for some time, and it is regrettable that the administration has waited until this late day to live up to its constitutional obligation in regard to he Navy. However, I believe that Congress should get back of the President and support the plan of the General Board of the Navy for the 71 ships. There is no reason why we should have a sea inferiority complex to Great Britain. Great Britain has built up its tremendous power due to its naval foresight. There was every reason in the world why we should perpetuate our great economic power by the same means. Our people want this Nation to have the dignity so markedly expressed by power on the sea. It gives us authority abroad and has a psychological reaction favorable to authority within our borders. May America be of maritime competency and let us so hope that politics does not assume the bridge and economy haul down the flag.

The Clerk read as follows:

No part of the appropriations made in this act shall be available for the salary or pay of any officer, manager, superintendent, foreman, or other person having charge of the work of any employees of the United States Government while making or causing to be made with a stop watch or other time-measuring device a time study of any job of any such employee between the starting and completion thereof, or of the movements of any such employee while engaged upon such work, nor shall any part of the appropriations made in this act be available to pay any premiums or bonus or cash reward to any employee in addition to his regular wages, except for suggestions resulting in improvements or economy in the operation of any Government plant; and that no part of the moneys appropriated and/or made available for the Naval Establishment for the fiscal year 1930 shall be used or expended under contracts hereafter made for the repair, purchase, or acquirement, by or from any private contractor, of any naval vessel, machinery, article, or articles that at the time of the proposed repair, purchase, or acquirement can be repaired, manufactured, or produced in each or any of the Government navy yards or arsenals of the United States, when time and facilities permit, and when, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy, such repair, purchase, acquirement, or production would not involve an appreciable increase in cost to the Government.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the paragraph on the ground that it is legislation on an appropriation bill, and I call attention to the last part of the paragraph and to the decision of Chairman CHINDBLOM in 1926, at page 3283 of the RECORD, where the precise language in question was held to be legislation on an appropriation bill.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Does the gentleman make the point of order on the first part of the paragraph only?

Mr. TABER. I make it on the whole paragraph. Part of the paragraph being out of order, the whole paragraph is not in order.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman would not press it on the whole paragraph?

Mr. TABER. I would.

Mr. MILLER. Commencing at line 8?

Mr. TABER. Yes; commencing at line 8.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Idaho desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I rather think the point of order is well taken. We carried this language, as I have indicated, for the purposes set forth in my general remarks, and I would say further that it is language that has been put into the bill substantially in the same language for many years. However, I think it is subject to a point of order.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard for the purpose of not having the RECORD show that the entire paragraph is out of order. The stop-watch provision has been held to be in order.

Mr. TABER. It has been held in order and out of order.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Yes; but the last decision reversed the ruling which held it out of order, and it has been put in appropriation bills repeatedly for years; and the rulings of the various chairmen are overwhelmingly in favor of declaring it in order.

Mr. TABER. But there is not any question about the last part of the paragraph being out of order.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Well, I will not discuss that with the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. LUCE). It is not necessary for the Chair to dwell upon the provision in the first part of the paragraph, inasmuch as the last part of the paragraph is clearly out of order, and therefore, the Chair sustains the point of order to the entire paragraph.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment. On page 46, after line 7, I offer the following as a new paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. LAGUARDIA: Page 46, after line 7, insert as a new paragraph the following:

"No part of the appropriations made in this act shall be available for the salary or pay of any officer, manager, superintendent, foreman, or other person having charge of the work of any employee of the United States Government while making or causing to be made with a stop watch or other time-measuring device a time study of any job of any such employee between the starting and completion thereof, or of the movements of any such employee while engaged upon such work; nor shall any part of the appropriations made in this act be available to pay any premiums or bonus or cash reward to any employee in addition to his regular wages, except for suggestions resulting in improvements or economy in the operation of any Government plant."

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, this provision has been in the appropriation bill in the past and inasmuch as the gentleman from New York can not now make a point of order, I submit it to the committee.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard in opposition to the amendment.

This is an amendment to promote inefficiency in our navy yards. This committee has shown its friendliness to the navy yards. It desires to put new machinery and new tools in the factories of the navy yards and give the workers in the navy yards a chance to be efficient and to produce work properly and to make the repairs upon Government ships in a proper way.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Not at this time.

This amendment is designed to prevent the full efficiency that might be realized under the guise of pretending to do something for the workers of the navy yards by putting in an amendment, which creates and promotes inefficiency.

The workers in the navy yards and their friends and their alleged friends should be in favor of every method which will produce efficiency and produce good results.

Any business establishment in the world would insist upon having the methods of efficiency that are maintained generally in the efficient plants throughout the country. We as managers, or those who legislate for the management of navy yards, ought to be in favor of efficiency in navy yards and give the workmen a chance to put the navy yards and the arsenals of the country on an efficient basis. We ought to provide all that sort of thing that promotes the welfare and opportunity of the workmen, and this amendment is against their interest.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, this provision is nothing new. It has been in the appropriation bills for the Army and the Navy as long as I have been in Congress.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. TABER. This amendment, notwithstanding it has been in the appropriation bill so long, has worked very much to the detriment and efficiency of the workmen.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I heard the gentleman a few days ago take the floor and talk about the efficiency of the navy yards.

Mr. TABER. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Does the gentleman say that the navy yards of the country are inefficient?

Mr. TABER. That is my understanding.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. You are making a very generous appropriation for inefficient navy yards. I say that our navy yards are efficient, so efficient that they have the private yards worried a great deal. They fear that the navy yards will take the business away from them. I do not see any reason for my colleagues getting unduly excited about the amendment. It is nothing new. It has been in these appropriation bills as long as I can remember. I do not believe that the chairman of the subcommittee will take the floor in opposition to it. I will not take any more of the time of the committee, because it has been passed upon so many times.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA].

The question was taken; and on a division there were 27 ayes and 40 noes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I ask for tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York demands tellers. All in favor of taking the vote by tellers will rise. [After counting.] Fourteen Members have arisen; not a sufficient number.

Mr. LETTS. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that no quorum is present.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa makes the point of order that no quorum is present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and four Members present, a quorum.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I paid particular attention to the very able address of the gentleman from Idaho delivered one week ago to-day in opening out the provisions of this bill. The gentleman always makes a splendid presentation.

I not only heard his address but I have read it and reread it since its publication in order that any points or parts that I may have missed or gotten a wrong interpretation of the language used at the time are either supplied or made clear by the published text.

On Saturday last I heard the address of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH] and likewise I have carefully read and reread the published text as the same appears in the RECORD.

In the discussion of the Government policy to build ships at the navy yard, the matter of the comparative cost of vessels so constructed with the cost of vessels built in private yards has been presented especially by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH]. The gentleman represents the congressional district within which is located the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation. That is his good fortune. The Bethlehem Corporation is a very substantial as well as a very creditable concern. It is striving for business the same as every other private shipbuilding concern.

It depreciates navy yard competition and in this depreciation it undertakes to put the navy yards out of business as construction plants. Its hostility to the Dallinger amendment is prompted by a purely selfish interest. A long, strained, and somewhat overdrawn statement from the National Council of American Shipbuilders is inserted in the RECORD concerning the construction of cruisers in Government navy yards. For one, I do not care to take any figures on comparative costs in Government and private yards from this grossly hostile source. I prefer to at least take my figures from a fair and disinterested source, a source free from any selfish interest.

I am frank to say I represent a district within which is a Government navy yard, construction yard, repair yard, the home yard of the Pacific Battleship Fleet. I am not blind nor deaf to private interests, but I do put the national defense—the public welfare—first and above the interest of any private concern in America.

Of course, I want to see the Puget Sound yard kept in a healthy condition. I want to see it kept as a going concern, as a factor in the national defense just the same as I want to see every other Government yard kept in good condition as a similar factor. For that matter, I would like most well to see all the private shipbuilding yards in a prosperous condition, but, unfortunately, there is not enough Government and private construction to supply the necessary work. The Washington conference for the reduction of naval armaments had the definite and only purpose in view reducing the amount of naval construction of major vessels. It did this purposely and deliberately as a matter of national economy. The enormous inflation of commercial construction during the war left not only this country but the entire world with a huge surplus of commercial tonnage. Both of these conditions have operated to reduce new construction, hence the decline of shipbuilding, not only naval but commercial, and not only in our country but throughout the world. Great Britain has suffered far greater than has this country. Establishments on the Clyde, the great world center of ship construction, of all types of vessels, which before and during the war was ablaze with activity are now suffering liquidation and bankruptcy. World conditions have brought this about in Scotland. The same condition prevails here and throughout the world. I appreciate the importance of the private shipbuilding industry the same as do all of us as an auxiliary source to our supply of naval vessels, but notwithstanding this importance it is far more important in my judgment to keep our navy yards in a healthy condition. To keep a navy yard in a healthy condition means constant and continuous work for the men. If a navy yard has to depend exclusively on repair work as it comes in on the schedule when delays and other uncertainties are present, there is a constant laying off and taking on of men. This leads to the better men, the better grade of mechanics, going elsewhere where there is constant employment.

Ship construction at navy yards has for one of its purposes a reservoir, so to speak, for employment during the lean repair periods. By this I do not mean that new construction is considered as an "odd job," but I do mean that the crews on construction work are frequently increased or decreased dependent upon the regular or irregular flow of repair work.

The second principle, and probably as important a factor as the one just suggested which lead the Government to install construction equipment in navy yards, is that they may thus become a competitor and thereby a stabilizing factor in the price to be paid for the construction of vessels of war. This latter is of the utmost importance and it is to get rid of this "stabilizing factor" that private-yard interests are now bending every energy to kill off the Government yards, or at least to minimize their activities. Private yards would then be without competition which we all know, in the light of common experience, would not tend to bring lower cost of production as far as Government work is concerned. Monopoly control does not tend to reduce the cost of production in any line or anywhere.

Viewing the matter, therefore, from the standpoint of selfish interest, I am not surprised at the concerted assault on navy-yard construction, and especially on the Dallinger amendment, by this high-sounding and especially imposing National Council of American Shipbuilders.

Any organization that has for its only purpose the putting of a competitor out of business can not make much of an impression on the American Congress. And think of doing this by law, a law that you and I will have to vote for. The policy of the Government in installing construction equipment in its navy yards was not done without certain purposes in view. It was not done accidentally or incidentally. It was not done from any hostility toward private enterprise. It was done with the definite purposes in view and one of these was to keep private yards within the range of reason in prices. The margin of profit is well illustrated in a comparison of the respective accepted bids of private yards and navy-yard estimates in the case of the six 10,000-ton cruisers allocated June 13, 1927. The following communication from the Secretary of the Navy gives us an insight on this highly interesting phase of the matter:

JANUARY 5, 1929.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN MILLER: Replying to your letter December 31, 1928, the construction periods are, as stated in your letter, 36 months for light cruisers Nos. 26, 27, and 30, and 45 months for Nos. 28, 29, and 31.

The other information requested is contained in the following statement:

Number	Name	Builder	Contract price or estimate	Date of contract or order	Contract dates of completion	Percentage of completion Dec. 1, 1928
26	Northampton	Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation (Fore River plant)	$10,675,000	June 13, 1927	June 13, 1930	39.9
27	Chester	American Brown-Boveri El. Corporation	10,815,000	do	do	39.2
28		Puget Sound Navy Yard	[1] 8,614,250	do.[2]	Mar. 13, 1931	16.0
29	Chicago	Mare Island Navy Yard	[1] 7,759,065	do.[2]	do	12.0
30	Houston	Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co	10,567,000	do	June 13, 1930	36.4
31	Augusta	do	10,567,000	do	Mar. 13, 1931	26.2

[1] Includes cost of plans furnished and not included in yard estimates.
[2] Beginning of construction period.

Respectfully,

CURTIS D. WILBUR.

Hon. JOHN F. MILLER, M. C.,
United States House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

What would have been the figures of the private plants if this competition had not existed; that is, what would have been the figures if navy yards had been silenced? You, my colleagues, can form your own estimate just as well as I can form mine. To put navy yards out of competition is the whole plan and purpose of this National Council of American Shipbuilders. The Dallinger amendment divides the cruiser-construction program into halves, one half going to navy yards and the other half to private interests. To-day there are more navy yards equipped for construction work and competent to handle such work than there are private yards in America equipped for construction and competent to handle such class of work. The navy yards outnumber the private yards 2 to 1 if all the private yards competed on the June 13, 1927, bids. If the private yards did not all compete, one of two conditions must have prevailed, namely, the noncompeting yards either did not want the work or else they stayed out of competition for some reason not disclosed on the face of things; and I can not imagine these private yards not wanting the work in the face of the statement of the National Council of American Shipbuilders.

Either way one looks at the picture he gets the same perspective. It takes a rather bold organization to circularize the American people in favor of a monopoly of which such organization or individual members thereof are to be the beneficiary.

Let us examine the above figures; let us see the results. It will not take us long to see where this selfish interest came in and to see who gets the profit. In the case of the June 3, 1927, bid the six cruisers are exactly alike, as near alike as pins. Only one set of plans were drawn for all six of these vessels, and these plans were drawn by the architects, engineers, statisticians, estimators, actuaries, and draftsmen coming from private yards. My information is that the Government pays this organization of architects, engineers, statisticians, estimators, draftsmen, and so forth, near $400,000 for the two sets of plans—duplicates—one for the Mare Island Navy Yard and one for the Puget Sound yard. Two hundred thousand dollars is thus added to the estimates of each of the navy yards.

Now, as to the figures of the successful bids and estimates, respectively, of the June 13, 1927, six cruisers.

The bid of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Fore River plant, Quincy, Mass., was the sum of $10,675,000 for one vessel, which is $2,061,750 higher than the estimate of the Puget Sound yard and $2,915,935 higher than the estimate of the Mare Island yard. That is a pretty stiff margin to the private yard.

The bid of the American Brown-Boverie Electric Corporation, of Camden, N. J., was the sum of $10,815,000 for a single vessel, which is exactly $3,055,935 higher than the estimate of the Mare Island (Calif.) Navy Yard for the construction of the same identical vessel and is $2,200,750 higher than the estimate of the Puget Sound Navy Yard, another pretty fat margin in favor of the private contractor.

The bid of the Newport News (Va.) Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. was $10,567,000 each for two vessels, which is $2,807,935 higher than the estimate of the Mare Island Navy Yard for one vessel and $1,952,750 higher than the estimate of the Puget Sound yard. Here is still another appetizing margin in favor of private interests, and it is well to keep in mind that this concern received awards for two vessels.

These figures give the average cost of $10,656,000 for private-yard construction as compared with $8,186,657 for navy-yard construction, a difference of $2,469,343 for each vessel in favor of the Government-yard construction. Or, in other words, the Government could add $2,000,000 to each of these vessels allocated to Government yards and then be well under the lowest bid from any private yard. This tells the story, the picture is complete, the motive of the National Council of American Shipbuilding stands out in all its boldness.

Mr. UPDIKE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. UPDIKE. I would like to know if the gentleman has any figures of how many navy yards are equipped to build these vessels?

Mr. MILLER. Five navy yards on the Atlantic and two on the Pacific.

Mr. STOBBS. Is it not true that the prices that the gentleman has quoted of what ships can be built at in Government yards are based entirely upon estimates?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. STOBBS. Whereas the price quoted on the private yards is based on actual bids on contracts?

Mr. MILLER. That is true. In the navy yards the price is based on estimates, and in the private yards it is based on the bids.

Mr. STOBBS. And that is an unfair comparison to make.

Mr. MILLER. The gentleman probably has not fully considered the matter of construction.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. FRENCH. Does the gentleman know the original estimate for the construction of the submarine tender Holland in the Bremerton Navy Yard?

Mr. MILLER. No.

Mr. FRENCH. Let me remind him that it was about $1,900,000, and that it cost the Government around $5,000,000 in that particular yard to construct the ship—nearly three times the original estimates.

Mr. MILLER. And I also know that on seven different occasions the Government changed the plans of that very vessel when it was practically completed, and we had to tear it down and build it up again each time the Navy Department changed its plans. That is the reason for the cost of that vessel. Give us a fair deal and we will show you that the navy yard can produce our war vessels more cheaply than the private yard in America. [Applause.] All we want is a fair deal.

Mr. FRENCH. Does the gentleman also have in mind bills that have been brought in rather regularly for increasing the cost touching various ships that have been constructed in navy yards, submarines and others?

Mr. MILLER. Oh, yes. The gentleman ought not to think that I am deaf to that. I am on the committee that brings those bills in.

Mr. FRENCH. The point is this: That the estimates submitted by the navy yards are estimates that the Navy Department is not bound by, and, according to the gentleman's own admission, they do not prevent the modification and the increase of cost to the extent of millions of dollars, whereas when a private contractor makes the bid he is held under his bond to come within the amount for which he has undertaken to do the work.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Washington has again expired.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I am aware that vessels built in the United States navy yards have run over the estimates. No one can be in Congress two years without knowing that, much less can he be on the Naval Affairs Committee, where I am, which committee brings in bills to increase the cost, but we can bring in a bill to increase the cost of each of these vessels by $1,000,000 and then still be a million and a half dollars below the lowest bid of the private bidder.

Mr. STOBBS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I will.

Mr. STOBBS. The gentleman said that this bunch of New England shipbuilders were the ones behind the movement. Is it not true the United States Shipping Board, in a formal resolution passed in December, recommended these ships to be built in private yards rather than in Government yards?

Mr. MILLER. I do not know what they recommended, but I have a very distinct remembrance of this Congress voting over $4,500,000 for the Shipping Board to build a dry dock at the Norfolk Navy Yard.

Mr. STOBBS. Is it true or not?

Mr. MILLER. I do not know, and I do not care.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. MILLER. Yes.

Mr. PERKINS. I am sure most of us would want to see our navy yards going. But is it true that when overhead is charged the net overhead constitutes a very large percentage of the cost of construction?

Mr. MILLER. I do not know about that, but I do know that the Navy Department has added to these estimates for the navy yards $219,000 each for plans. These are formulated by the private interests of this country.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Washington has expired.

Mr. LETTS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I just want to take time for two or three minutes to direct the attention of the House to the situation involving work done by Government navy yards and by private yards. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. MILLER], when I directed his attention to the construction of the submarine Holland in the Bremerton Navy Yard, indicated that the amazing increase in the cost of construction from $1,900,000, approximately, to around $5,000,000 must have been due to modifications and changes. Surely something must be wrong, if it is true, that in the construction of so simple a vessel as a tender the cost is nearly three times the original estimate of the yard undertaking the construction.

More than that, the gentleman has indicated several comparative figures such as those pertaining to cruisers of more recent date. Take, for instance, the Salt Lake City and the Pensacola. I think he referred to both of them. The Salt Lake City was launched just a few weeks ago. The cost of that ship in the Brown-Bovari yards will be $8,697,004.

Mr. MILLER. No estimate was made.

Mr. FRENCH. That is the trouble with the gentleman's whole statement. He furnishes us figures respecting an uncompleted craft in a Government navy yard, and then gives us figures respecting an uncompleted craft in a private yard, and tries to fit them together.

Mr. MILLER. The gentleman knows that the contract was given to Cramp & Sons for the hull, and that same firm had bid for the engines of the Pensacola and the Salt Lake City. That is not included.

Mr. FRENCH. The figures that I shall use will be comparable figures. The gentleman refers to the cost of the Pensacola in a Government navy yard, and the original figure he gave was $2,000,000 plus under the figure indicated for the Salt Lake City.

Mr. MILLER. Let the gentleman give the figures.

Mr. FRENCH. I will give the figures. The original figures were $7,799,499, but this estimate did not include the main engines and such other parts of the machinery as were being purchased by contract. The revised estimate of the New York Navy Yard was $9,788,462. In other words, in dealing with a question of this kind we as a body are not in a position to pass upon it at all, for we are not in position to study in detail the total costs, including, as they must, a multitude of items. It ought to be turned over to the responsible officers of a great department of our Government, where the very facts that are in conflict can be brought side by side, where the figures touching the different elements can be thrown into contrast, where all the factors may be considered, and where the department can have some discretion in saying whether or not it will avail itself of rightful competition between Government navy yards on the one hand and private industry on the other. For my part I want to say, as I said with regard to the helium plant in Texas, I am for the private navy yards to the extent that it is possible and consistent with Government economy and the Treasury of the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. LETTS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LETTS: Page 46, after line 7, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"No part of the appropriations made in this act shall be available for the salary or pay of any officer, manager, superintendent, foreman, or other person having charge of the work of any employee of the United States Government while making or causing to be made with a stop watch or other time-measuring device a time study of any job of any such employee between the starting and completion thereof, or of the movements of any such employee while engaged upon such work."

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the House has just voted upon that amendment.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Let us have the entire amendment read.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the whole of it be read, so as to determine whether any change has been made or not.

The Clerk resumed the reading of the amendment, as follows:

"nor shall any part of the appropriations made in this act be available to pay any premiums or bonus or cash reward to any employee in addition to his regular wages, except for suggestions resulting in improvements or economy in the operation of any Government plant; and that no part of the moneys herein appropriated shall be used or expended under contracts hereafter made for the repair, purchase, or acquirement, by or from any private contractor, of any naval vessel, machinery, article, or articles that at the time of the proposed repair, purchase, or requirement can be repaired, manufactured, or produced in each or any of the Government navy yards or arsenals of the United States, when time and facilities permit, and when, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy, such repair, purchase, acquirement, or production would not involve an appreciable increase in cost to the Government."

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment. That is the same amendment, with a very small change, against which I made the point of order before, and the change does not affect its character as legislation on an appropriation bill.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman from Iowa has stricken out the objectionable part which made the amendment out of order.

Mr. TABER. Oh, no.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that he had previously ruled that the last part of the paragraph in question was out of order, and that therefore the whole paragraph went out.

The gentleman has submitted the last part of the paragraph once more.

Mr. LETTS. May I call the Chair's attention to the fact that the amendment which I now offer is different than the one which was ruled on?

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment still contains the same obnoxious provision which the Chair called attention to when previously offered.

Mr. LETTS. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LETTS. I did not understand the ground upon which the Chair ruled with respect to the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. In the last few lines of the paragraph appear the words—and when, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy, such repair, purchase, acquirement, or production—

And so forth. That provision, by reason of the words "in the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy," puts a duty upon the Secretary of the Navy. Therefore it is out of order and the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. DALLINGER. Is the Chair aware in making that ruling that there is a general statute which contains this exact language?

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman produce that statute?

Mr. DALLINGER. I have not the statute here, but we passed a general law a number of years ago containing this exact language, and this is simply repeating the language of the general law, which has never been repealed.

Mr. LETTS. And, if I may add, the author of that law was the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. TILSON], and that law requires this precise thing.

The CHAIRMAN. The point now hinges upon the production of the statute. The statute itself must be brought to the attention of the Chair before, under the point of order, he can permit the amendment to be voted upon. Lacking that, the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. On page 46, after line 7, I offer the following as a new paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LAGUARDIA: On page 46, after line 7, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"No part of the appropriations made in this act shall be available for the salary or pay of any officer, manager, superintendent, foreman, or other person or persons having charge of the work of any employee of the United States Government while making or causing to be made with a stop watch or other time-measuring device a time study of any job of any such employee between the starting and completion thereof; nor shall any part of the appropriations made in this act be available to pay any premiums or bonus or cash reward to any employee in addition to his regular wages, except for suggestions resulting in improvements or economy in the operation of any Government plant."

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment. It has already been passed on, and such changes as have been made are only a subterfuge, and that is patent on its face.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I strike out an entire line. I strike out all of line 15 and all of line 16.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Chairman, just a few moments ago the committee, apparently under a misapprehension, voted down an amendment, which was only a proviso, carried in the appropriation bill for the last 15 or 20 years—at least as long as I have been in Congress. Now, the real purpose of this proviso, as well known to the members of the committee, is this: If we are going to establish a racing, slave system in our navy yards, let the gentleman from New York say so, and we will know what we are voting for. Let us be perfectly frank about this. In one way or another some of the members of the Committee on Appropriations are trying, first, to put the navy yards out of business; and second, if they can not put them out of business, then to destroy the morale of the personnel.

Mr. SCHAFER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER. Those who want to sustain the Naval Affairs Appropriation Committee should vote for the gentleman's amendment, because it merely puts into the bill language which was stricken out on a point of order and which language was reported by that committee.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Why, of course. Now, I just say to my friends of the Committee on Appropriations, if you want to get along nicely and finish this bill, be reasonable. If you do not, we are going to invoke all the rules of the House, and you may have tough going. I urge the adoption of my amendment.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the gentleman's amendment. I am surprised, after what has been said here to-day, that the gentleman from New York should suggest that this committee, or that I, in opposing this amendment, are trying to establish a slave system. We are simply trying to give the navy-yard workers a chance to be on the square with the Government and to do a fair, honest day's work.

Mr. SCHAFER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Certainly.

Mr. SCHAFER. Why did the committee, of which the gentleman is a member, report the bill with the identical language contained in the pending amendment?

Mr. TABER. I have always been opposed to that language in the committee and everywhere else, whenever there was a chance to oppose it, because I know that language is against the interests of the men who work in the navy yards. It tends to create inefficiency and it keeps them from getting the work they might get if their work was done right.

Mr. LEAVITT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. LEAVITT. If it is not in the interest of the workers in the navy yards, why are they asking to have it put in the bill?

Mr. TABER. Because there is a certain element of agitators who go around and tell them that if they do not do a fair day's work but loaf on the job their jobs will last longer. That is the meat of it.

If the men who are so eloquent here would urge the workers to produce and to keep the costs of things manufactured in navy yards down where they belong and to do fairly by the Government, then we could have a better spirit in the navy yards and we would not have to contend with such things as this.

Mr. LETTS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. LETTS. The gentleman has expressed his belief that this provision is against the welfare of the men in these shops.

Mr. TABER. Yes; it is an absolute certainty.

Mr. LETTS. Does the gentleman believe we ought to resort to the Taylor system in these places?

Mr. TABER. I do not believe it hurts anybody to have tests made as to how work can be done efficiently. I believe it is in the interest of the workingman. The reason the workingman is better off in this country than he is in the old countries is because we have adopted modern methods of production and we are able to produce more and the workingman has a better chance and gets more pay.

Mr. DALLINGER. Will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. TABER. Certainly.

Mr. DALLINGER. Does the gentleman think he could perform his duties as a Member of Congress if, from the time he started in the morning until he finished at night, he had a man standing over him with a stop watch?

Mr. TABER. Sure; but there is no such thing proposed.

Mr. DALLINGER. The gentleman would not tolerate it for a moment.

Mr. TABER. There is no such proposal in here and the gentleman is rather putting up a straw man to shoot at.

Mr. DALLINGER. Oh, no.

Mr. TABER. Because the gentleman knows there never has been any practice anywhere in a Government factory of holding a stop watch on every workman all day long. That is the most ridiculous thing that could be brought up here.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. The gentleman knows that this same proviso is in the Army appropriation bill and in the Post Office appropriation bill.

Mr. TABER. But it is bad, and when a thing is bad it ought to be thrown out.

Mr. DOWELL. And it has been in this bill at every session and the committee has come in here each time to have us put it in the bill again, just as we are going to put it in the bill to-day. [Applause.]

Mr. TABER. But it is bad just the same and is against the interests of the workingman.

Mr. BLACK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I want to be heard in support of the amendment.

The gentleman from New York——

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Which one?

Mr. BLACK of New York. The "agitated gentleman from New York" [Mr. TABER] has given a splendid example of a worker who does not need an agitator to make him work. I want to say to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] that he is not as well acquainted as he thinks with the work of the men in the navy yards. The commandants of the navy yards have uniformly given credit to the civilian personnel of the navy yards for their splendid and efficient work, and they perform year in and year out without a stop watch, giving this same splendid type of work.

Now, what has happened? The men in the navy yards of this country are men affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. They work under an 8-hour day. They are Americans. The men outside of the navy yards who are getting the work on American ship construction when the work is not awarded to the navy yards are not necessarily Americans. They are not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. They are not working under an 8-hour day. They are not working with all the safeguards that come from membership in the American Federation of Labor.

This proposition of the stop watch is intended to tear down the efficiency of the American workingman. It is a proposition to humiliate the American workingman. It is in the interest of the foreign workingman and I am surprised that the gentleman from New York is back of it.

There has been no complaint about the work of the men in the navy yards by those who know something about it. There has been no upset about it at all.

Mr. MILLER. Will the gentleman yield for a short question?

Mr. BLACK of New York. Surely.

Mr. MILLER. Inefficient and indolent workmen in navy yards are weeded out immediately.

Mr. BLACK of New York. Yes; they are not permitted to last there.

In addition to the inspiration for service that comes from membership in the American Federation of Labor, they have constantly with them the supervisory forces of the Navy Department. One of the difficulties with the navy-yard situation with respect to work is that there has been a tremendous overhead charged to navy-yard work due to the presence of gold braid in the navy yards.

There is no sense in this stop-watch proposition. It is unfair to American labor, and I will tell the gentleman from New York that not only will the men in the navy yards resent this stop-watch proposition but every decent, honorable American workman throughout the country, no matter what his trade or craft may be, will resent it.

If you want to do something for American labor, make the Navy Department pay attention to the statute that requires the Navy Department to give the men in the navy yards the prevailing rate of wages. Year in and year out the men in the yards present to the wage board of the Navy Department data showing the wages that are paid in the vicinity for similar type of work and year in and year out the Navy Department ignores this data just as it ignores the desire of Congress in awarding construction work, and if the gentleman from New York would get agitated and wave his arms in behalf of the American workman on the wage proposition he would accomplish something for American labor and for American industry.

This stop-watch proposition is nonsense. [Applause.]

Mr. LETTS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I wish to call attention to the particular situation that has arisen to-day, and which is somewhat anomalous. Here is language carefully drawn by a powerful committee of this House presented for consideration, and immediately upon being read it is assailed by a member of that committee on a point of order, whereupon the chairman of the committee has admitted that it is subject to a point of order. The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] accuses some one of setting up a straw man and knocking him over. What has this legislative committee done? They bring in this provision and a point of order, a weapon with which to slay it, and the chairman of the committee gracefully assents that there had been an error and that the provision ought to go out. Here is language carried in the law for a number of years. It has been held in order by a great many distinguished chairmen of the House. I know that the distinguished chairman who occupies the chair to-day is familiar with the decisions, and I realize that he has ruled with a full knowledge and understanding of the precedents, but his ruling was not applied to this language, and this House and the Congress of the United States have for a number of years approved the proposition. It is in harmony with economic practice, it is humane in purpose, it is essential to the independent life of the men who work in the Government arsenals and workshops. I feel that the House would take a backward step in not going along with labor in the improvement of working conditions and in the maintenance of all of the rights labor has gained in the past by persistent struggle, step by step, through all the years.

Mr. MILLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LETTS. I yield.

Mr. MILLER. Is it not a fact that a stop watch will destroy the morale of any workman?

Mr. LETTS. That seems to me to be apparent. We must not destroy the souls of men who work; we should not place them in a situation where the hopes and aspirations of life are lessened. We must encourage them as men entitled to equal and full rights with men who occupy other stations in life.

It will be a great mistake if this House refuses to carry in this bill the language which we now ask, and which has been approved by many Congresses before. May I ask the membership of the House to exercise due discretion and a sound judgment in harmony with the heartbeats of those who will benefit, the men who work in the arsenals and workshops of the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. YON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I had intended to make a few remarks in the discussion of this bill, and particularly as it affects the welfare of the Navy Department of the United States. You have observed newspaper accounts of some of the experiments that are being made off Key West in Florida waters with the Navy's submarines in order to demonstrate the possibility of escape from a sunken submarine. This brings to your mind and will remind you that the Gulf coast country, especially the Florida coastal waters, are particularly fitted and particularly adapted to the experiments and the maneuvers that are to be carried on by the Navy Department as to the usefulness of the submarine.

You remember the S–4 and the tragedy that occurred last year, and the pall it cast over the Nation by that accident, and the great effort that was made in trying to save the lives of the men marooned in the icy waters in that submarine, and the many weeks spent in bringing the bodies to the surface and the condition of the bodies when recovered. You remember the experiments later of raising this ill-fated ship with appliances attached for raising submarines.

I expected and really had in mind to introduce an amendment to the bill under consideration making it possible, and which I hope Members of the House will consider in formulating a bill in the future, that they will consider the use of the Gulf waters off Florida, that are the warm waters of the Gulf of Mexico, that great body of water, in making its experiments. The commerce of the United States is fast taking place in these waters now. Remember that our Navy is being maintained to defend our commercial lanes and to carry the flag of this Nation to those lanes most adaptable to the commerce of the world, as it is carried on with the nations of the world by us.

I think, gentleman, that you should consider this in your future deliberations in respect to the requirements of the Navy. We are appropriating millions of dollars every year and we desire to build up a magnificent Navy which will be a credit to a great Nation. In doing so, however, I think we should take into consideration the adaptability of certain waters of the country for naval maneuvers. I am very thankful to the committee for the consideration that has for years been given to a naval establishment in my district at Pensacola. I have been told by the commandant there and officers of the naval air station there that it is one of the finest and best situated from the standpoint of climatic conditions and the hours of sunshine during the year, and landing conditions, of all of the naval air stations in the whole United States, my friends of southern California to the contrary notwithstanding. [Laughter and applause.] If it were not for the wonderful climate that we have in Florida, does anybody think that President-elect Hoover would be there, or that Mr. Ford or Mr. Edison or any of the other great men of America who are there to-day would be there? [Applause.] If it is good for the men and women of America to go there and enjoy the balmy sunshine that God entitles to every free man, will it not also be good for a great establishment of this nation which is being paid for by the taxpayers of America to make use of these natural conditions? [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TABER) there were—ayes 70, noes 9.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ARENTZ. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ARENTZ, as a new paragraph, to follow the amendment offered by Mr. LAGUARDIA:

"The Secretary of the Navy is authorized and directed to have an investigation made of the relative cost of construction of naval vessels in navy yards and in privately owned shipyards, and make a report to Congress by December, 1929, of such ships constructed during the past 10 years."

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the proposed amendment is legislation. That is a matter that ought to be considered by the Committee on Naval Affairs. Since the watchdog of that committee is not present I shall make the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. ARENTZ. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman withhold the point of order for a moment?

Mr. FRENCH. I shall be very glad to withhold my point of order.

Mr. ARENTZ. Mr. Chairman, since I came here in 1921, every year we have had a naval bill under consideration and every year we have had discussion between either two men on this side or men on both sides as to whether or not the navy yards of America can build ships as cheaply as they can be built in privately owned yards. Let us find that out once for all and do away with this discussion every year.

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ARENTZ. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER. Does the gentleman not think that he ought to add to his amendment that the Secretary should also transmit information which would enable Congress to know how many naval officers who have been employed in the navy yards have obtained lucrative positions with private shipbuilding concerns after their retirement?

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ARENTZ. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The matter before the House is the point of order.

Mr. MILLER. I think the gentleman from Nevada has yielded to me.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nevada is addressing the Chair only for the purpose of illuminating the mind of the Chair as to the validity of his amendment. [Laughter.] The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. ARENTZ. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment may be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LUCE, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 16714, the naval appropriation bill, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and all amendments to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment?

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Speaker, I demand a separate vote on the amendment whereby the item for a dock at Charleston, S. C., was put into the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any other amendment?

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present. I withhold it for the present.

The SPEAKER. If there is no other demand for a separate vote, the Chair will put the question on the other amendments in gross.

The question was taken, and the amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment upon which a separate vote was demanded.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 32, line 23, after the figures "$36,000" insert the following: "Extension of dry dock, $300,000; in all, $336,000."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER. In the opinion of the Chair, the noes have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. MCMILLAN) there were—ayes 81, noes 53.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and forty-five Members are present, not a quorum. The Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 155, nays 120, answered "present" 1, not voting 152, as follows:

[Roll No. 23]

YEAS—155

Abernethy	Cox	Hastings	McMillan
Allgood	Crisp	Hill, Ala.	McReynolds
Almon	Dallinger	Hill, Wash.	Major, Ill.
Andresen	Davey	Houston, Del.	Major, Mo.
Arentz	Davis	Howard, Nebr.	Martin, La.
Arnold	Deal	Howard, Okla.	Mead
Aswell	DeRouen	Huddleston	Michener
Auf der Heide	Dickinson, Mo.	Hudspeth	Miller
Bachmann	Dominick	Hull, Morton D.	Milligan
Beedy	Doughton	Irwin	Montague
Bell	Douglass, Mass.	Jeffers	Moore, Ky.
Black, Tex.	Drane	Johnson, Okla.	Morehead
Bland	Drewry	Johnson, Tex.	Morrow
Blanton	Driver	Jones	Nelson, Mo.
Bloom	Edwards	Kelly	Norton, Nebr.
Box	England	Kemp	O'Brien
Brand, Ga.	Eslick	Kendall	O'Connor, La.
Briggs	Fisher	Kent	Oldfield
Britten	Fitzgerald, Roy G.	Kerr	Oliver, Ala.
Browning	Fulmer	Kincheloe	Patterson
Buckbee	Furlow	Langley	Peery
Bulwinkle	Gambrill	Lanham	Quin
Busby	Garber	Lankford	Ragon
Canfield	Gardner, Ind.	Larsen	Rainey
Cannon	Gasque	Lea	Rankin
Carss	Gregory	Leavitt	Romjue
Cartwright	Green	Letts	Rutherford
Chapman	Greenwood	Lindsay	Sabath
Cochran, Mo.	Griffin	Lowrey	Sanders, Tex.
Collier	Guyer	Lyon	Sandlin
Cooper, Wis.	Hare	McDuffie	Schafer
Corning	Harrison	McKeown	Schneider

Sears, Fla.	Sumners, Tex.	Ware	Wilson, La.
Sinclair	Swank	Warren	Wingo
Spearing	Tarver	Watres	Wolfenden
Sproul, Ill.	Thompson	White, Colo.	Wright
Sproul, Kans.	Vincent, Mich.	Whitehead	Wurzbach
Steagall	Vinson, Ga.	Whittington	Yon
Steele	Vinson, Ky.	Williams, Mo.

NAYS—120

Ackerman	Dickinson, Iowa	Ketcham	Reid, Ill.
Adkins	Dowell	Kiess	Robinson, Iowa
Allen	Elliott	Knutson	Rogers
Ayres	Englebright	Korell	Sanders, N. Y.
Bacharach	Fitzgerald, W. T.	LaGuardia	Seger
Barbour	Fort	Lampert	Selvig
Beck, Wis.	Free	Leatherwood	Simmons
Beers	Freeman	Luce	Smith
Berger	French	McCormack	Snell
Black, N. Y.	Gibson	McFadden	Speaks
Bohn	Glynn	McLeod	Stalker
Brigham	Goodwin	Magrady	Stobbs
Browne	Hadley	Mapes	Strong, Kans.
Buchanan	Hale	Menges	Summers, Wash.
Burdick	Hall, Ill.	Merritt	Swick
Burtness	Hall, Ind.	Michaelson	Taber
Chalmers	Hancock	Monast	Taylor, Colo.
Chase	Hardy	Moore, Ohio	Temple
Christopherson	Haugen	Morgan	Thurston
Clague	Hickey	Nelson, Me.	Tilson
Clancy	Hoch	Newton	Timberlake
Cochran, Pa.	Hoffman	Neidringhaus	Wainwright
Cole, Iowa	Holaday	Parker	Wason
Collins	Hooper	Peavey	Watson
Colton	Hope	Perkins	Wigglesworth
Cramton	Hughes	Porter	Williams, Ill.
Crosser	Jenkins	Pratt	Williamson
Crowther	Johnson, Ind.	Purnell	Wolverton
Culkin	Kading	Ramseyer	Woodruff
Darrow	Kahn	Ransley	Wyant

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Garrett, Tenn.

NOT VOTING—152

Aldrich	Doutrich	King	Robsion, Ky.
Andrew	Doyle	Kopp	Rowbottom
Anthony	Dyer	Kunz	Sears, Nebr.
Bacon	Eaton	Kurtz	Shallenberger
Bankhead	Estep	Kvale	Shreve
Beck, Pa.	Evans, Calif.	Leech	Sirovich
Begg	Evans, Mont.	Lehlbach	Somers, N. Y.
Boies	Fenn	Linthicum	Stedman
Bowles	Fish	Lozier	Stevenson
Bowman	Fitzpatrick	McClintic	Strong, Pa.
Boylan	Fletcher	McLaughlin	Strother
Brand, Ohio	Foss	McSwain	Sullivan
Bushong	Frear	McSweeney	Swing
Butler	Fulbright	Maas	Tatgenhorst
Byrns	Garner, Tex.	Manlove	Taylor, Tenn.
Campbell	Garrett, Tex.	Mansfield	Thatcher
Carew	Gifford	Martin, Mass.	Tillman
Carley	Gilbert	Mooney	Tinkham
Carter	Golder	Moore, N. J.	Treadway
Casey	Goldsborough	Moore, Va.	Tucker
Celler	Graham	Moorman	Underhill
Chindblom	Griest	Morin	Underwood
Clarke	Hall, N. Dak.	Murphy	Updike
Cohen	Hammer	Nelson, Wis.	Vestal
Cole, Md.	Hawley	Norton, N. J.	Vincent, Iowa
Combs	Hersey	O'Connell	Weaver
Connally, Tex.	Hogg	O'Connor, N. Y.	Welch, Calif.
Connery	Hudson	Oliver, N. Y.	Weller
Connolly, Pa.	Hull, Wm. E.	Palmer	Welsh, Pa.
Cooper, Ohio	Hull, Tenn.	Palmisano	White, Kans.
Crail	Igoe	Parks	White, Me.
Cullin	Jacobstein	Pou	Williams, Tex.
Curry	James	Prall	Wilson, Miss.
Davenport	Johnson, Ill.	Quayle	Winter
Dempsey	Johnson, S. Dak.	Rayburn	Wood
Denison	Johnson, Wash.	Reece	Woodrum
Dickstein	Kearns	Reed, Ark.	Yates
Douglas, Ariz.	Kindred	Reed, N. Y.	Zihlman

So the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Mr. McClintic (for) with Mr. Martin of Massachusetts (against).
Mr. Stevenson (for) with Mr. Griest (against).
Mr. Tillman (for) with Mr. Kurtz (against).
Mr. Cohen (for) with Mr. Leech (against).
Mr. Wilson of Mississippi (for) with Mr. Chindblom (against).
Mr. Garner (for) with Mr. Aldridge (against).

General pairs:

Mr. Johnson of South Dakota with Mr. Pou.
Mr. Hawley with Mr. Hull of Tennessee.
Mr. Fenn with Mr. Carew.
Mr. Bacon with Mr. Connally of Texas.
Mr. Hudson with Mr. Kindred.
Mr. King with Mr. Moore of Virginia.
Mr. Manlove with Mr. Cullen.
Mr. Evans of California with Mr. Parks.
Mr. Murphy with Mr. Gilbert.
Mr. Denison with Mr. Boylan.
Mr. Connolly of Pennsylvania with Mr. Moorman.
Mr. Begg with Mr. O'Connell.
Mr. Frear with Mr. Fletcher.
Mr. Gifford with Mr. Hammer.
Mr. Beck of Pennsylvania with Mr. Quayle.
Mr. Johnson of Illinois with Mr. Woodrum.
Mr. Graham with Mr. O'Connor of New York.
Mr. Kearns with Mr. Tucker.
Mr. Thatcher with Mr. Mooney.
Mr. Shreve with Mr. Prall.
Mr. Vestal with Mr. Reed of Arkansas.
Mr. Foss with Mr. Byrns.
Mr. Golder with Mr. Connery.
Mr. Hall of North Dakota with Mr. Moore of New Jersey.
Mr. Browning with Mr. Weller.
Mr. Campbell with Mr. Sullivan.
Mr. Cooper of Ohio with Mr. Kunz.
Mr. Johnson of Washington with Mr. Casey.
Mr. Crail with Mr. Bankhead.
Mr. Kopp with Mr. Mansfield.
Mr. Curry with Mr. Douglas of Arizona.
Mr. McLaughlin with Mr. Oliver of New York.
Mr. Dempsey with Mr. Garrett of Texas.
Mr. Swing with Mr. Rayburn.
Mr. Reed of New York with Mr. Stedman.
Mr. Robsion of Kentucky with Mr. Igoe.
Mr. Taylor of Tennessee with Mr. Underwood.
Mr. Welsh of Pennsylvania with Mr. Doyle.
Mr. Treadway with Mr. Weaver.
Mr. Wood with Mr. Linthicum.
Mr. Underhill with Mr. Williams of Texas.
Mr. White of Maine with Mr. Somers of New York.
Mr. Yates with Mr. Fulbright.
Mr. Tinkham with Mr. Evans of Montana.
Mr. Strong of Pennsylvania with Mr. Dickstein.
Mr. Reece with Mr. Carley.
Mr. Nelson of Wisconsin with Mr. Cole of Maryland.
Mr. Dyer with Mr. Lozier.
Mr. Eaton with Mr. McSwain.
Mr. Bowles with Mr. Celler.
Mr. Clarke with Mr. Fitzpatrick.
Mr. Davenport with Mr. Palmisano.
Mr. Lehlbach with Mr. Sirovich.
Mr. James with Mr. Goldsborough.
Mr. Zihlman with Mr. Jacobstein.
Mr. Tatgenhorst with Mr. Shallenberger.
Mr. Rowbottom with Mr. McSwain.
Mr. Estep with Mr. Kvale.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, I have a motion recommit. I move to recommit the bill to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to return it forthwith with the following amendment to be added to the LaGuardia amendment.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. LAGUARDIA. I am.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. LAGUARDIA moves to recommit the bill to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to that committee to report the same forthwith, with the following amendment to be added to the LaGuardia amendment:

"On page 46, 'and that no part of the moneys herein appropriated for the Naval Establishment or herein made available therefor shall be used or expended under contract hereafter made for the repair, purchase, or acquirement, by or from any private contractor, of any naval vessel, machinery, article, or articles that at the time of the proposed repair, purchase, or acquirement can be repaired, manufactured, or produced in each or any of the Government navy yards or arsenals of the United States, when time and facilities permit, and when such repair, purchase, acquirement, or production would result in a saving in cost to the Government.'"

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the motion on the ground that it is legislation, and that it is a matter that has been passed upon twice. It is in almost the identical language that has been read heretofore and ruled out, as I caught the language.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. Mr. Speaker, it is not the same amendment as that which was declared out of order. It is taken from the present law.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make a further point of order, if the Chair will permit me. It interferes with the discretion that is lodged in the officers of the Government.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. It is the existing law.

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I just want to call the Chair's attention to the fact that this is from the law of 1926, and in it the words "in the judgment or discretion of the Secretary of the Navy," which was the ground for ruling it out in the Committee of the Whole, do not occur. They are stricken out.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. And it provides for a saving to the Government, clearly.

Mr. TABER. But the language of the act of 1926 was thrown out.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. That is the law.

Mr. TABER. There is no law for it.

Mr. BLANTON. That was clearly an annual appropriation act.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, may I be heard?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will be glad to hear the gentleman.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, this provision is contrary to every provision of affirmative law in the code. The language itself that is carried in the bill, which was carried in an appropriation bill, applied specifically only to the appropriations carried in that particular bill. So there is no precedent for ruling it in order.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. There is a saving involved. It is purely a limitation.

Mr. BLANTON. That saving would require a computation. It is absolutely indefinite.

Mr. TABER. It imposes additional duties on the part of the department, and you must show a saving.

Mr. LAGUARDIA. It is specifically provided that the saving is shown.

Mr. TABER. It is contrary to the law requiring competition.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. The amendment itself does not show that it will impose any new duty.

Mr. TILSON. It puts it up to an officer of the department to ascertain whether there is a saving or not.

The SPEAKER. The Chair, after reading the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. LAGUARDIA], finds that the only change made in the latter part of the section is that he strikes out the words "in the judgment of the Secretary of the Navy," and the words "not involve an appreciable increase" are stricken out and the words "result in a saving" are inserted. It was ruled out in the committee. Of course, it is conceded that the matter as carried in the bill is subject to a point of order. Now, the Chair is called upon to decide whether striking out of the words "Secretary of the Navy" and the substitution of the words "result in a saving" in lieu of the words "not involve an appreciable increase" do not make any change in the fact that on some official is imposed an additional duty of determining whether or not there is a saving.

The Chair clearly thinks that the striking out of the words "Secretary of the Navy" does not change the situation in that regard. The Chair sustains the point of order.

The question is, Shall the bill pass?

The question was taken, and the bill was passed.

On motion of Mr. FRENCH, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 13484. An act authorizing preliminary examinations of sundry streams with a view to the control of their floods, and for other purposes;

H. R. 13502. An act authorizing the State of Minnesota and the State of Wisconsin to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the St. Croix River at or near Stillwater, Minn.;

H. R. 14146. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Monongahela River in the city of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 14164. An act granting the consent of Congress to the city of Knoxville, Tenn., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Henley Street in Knoxville, Knox County, Tenn.;

H. R. 14451. An act to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near McKees Rocks Borough, in the county of Allegheny, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania";

H. R. 14460. An act authorizing the Iowa-Nebraska Amortized Free Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa;

H. R. 14469. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct a bridge across the Youghiogheny River between the borough of Versailles and the village of Boston, in the township of Elizabeth, Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 14481. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Chicago South Shore & South Bend Railroad to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Grand Calumet River at East Chicago, Ind.;

H. R. 14919. An act granting the consent of Congress to the commissioners of Mahoning County, Ohio, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Mahoning River at or near Cedar Street, Youngstown, Mahoning County, Ohio;

H. R. 15072. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the reconstruction of the bridge across the Grand Calumet River at Burnham Avenue, in Cook County, Ill.;

H. R. 15084. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near Reedsdale Street in the city of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 15269. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Red River at or near Coushatta, La.;

H. R. 15427. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to lend to the Governor of North Carolina 300 pyramidal tents, complete; 9,000 blankets, olive drab, No. 4; 5,000 pillowcases; 5,000 canvas cots; 5,000 cotton pillows; 5,000 bed sacks; and 9,000 bed sheets, to be used at the encampment of the United Confederate Veterans to be held at Charlotte, N. C., in June, 1929; and

H. R. 15470. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Highway Department of the State of Tennessee to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Cumberland River in the vicinity of Harts Ferry, Trousdale County, Tenn.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 3581. An act authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to settle claims and suits against the District of Columbia.

BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. CAMPBELL, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President for his approval bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 11526. An act to authorize the construction of certain naval vessels, and for other purposes;

H. R. 15657. An act to provide for the improvement and preservation of the land and buildings of the Abraham Lincoln National Park or Reservation; and

H. R. 16208. An act authorizing the Cedar Point Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the southeast arm of Sandusky Bay at or near Sandusky, Ohio.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the subject of the Cavalry in the Army by inserting, among other things, an editorial from one of the Washington newspapers.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the subject of the Cavalry by printing an editorial published in one of the Washington papers. Is there objection?

Mr. SPROUL of Illinois. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

DEATH OF FORMER REPRESENTATIVE EDWIN S. UNDERHILL

Mr. STALKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. STALKER. Mr. Speaker, it is my painful duty to announce the sudden death of a former Member of this House, the Hon. Edwin S. Underhill, of New York. Mr. Underhill was for many years an influential and valuable Member of this House.

He had the confidence and friendship of the membership on both sides of the aisle.

In making this sad announcement, I am announcing the death of a very warm personal friend, and my feelings will be shared by many of the older Members of this House.

DEATH OF FORMER REPRESENTATIVE EDWIN DENBY

Mr. CLANCY. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep sorrow that I rise to announce the death this morning of a friend and constituent of mine, a former Member of this House and a former Secretary of the Navy, Hon. Edwin Denby.

By coincidence the death of this man, who enlisted in the Marine Corps as a private in the Great War and who later served as head of the Navy Department, is announced while the House is considering the great Navy appropriation bill to preserve and develop the Navy, which he loved as the apple of his eye.

My statement must be brief, but I believe it proper to note in the RECORD now that Mr. Denby was of a noble cast of mind and that his sufferings as a public servant contributed to his early death. Both as a Congressman and as a Cabinet officer he endured the outrageous flings of political fortune.

But both friend and foe have always given Mr. Denby credit for absolute honesty, unflinching integrity, the highest patriotism, and utterly unselfish ideals of service. Added to this, he had a lovable personality. His geniality and kindliness set off well his huge physical stature.

In Detroit, where the people knew him well and all of his life, both public and private, was known and understood, he was well beloved.

ALCATRAZ SQUARE, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.

Mrs. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting resolutions passed by the board of supervisors of the city and county of San Francisco, which explain a bill which I have introduced.

The SPEAKER. The lady from California asks unanimous consent to extend her remarks in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mrs. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, under leave granted me to extend my remarks in the RECORD I insert the following resolutions passed by the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of San Francisco:

Resolution 30107 (new series)

Whereas the city and county of San Francisco, as the successor of the Mexican pueblo known as Yerba Buena, and afterwards San Francisco, became entitled to the pueblo lands belonging to the said pueblo, and thereafter by ordinance duly and regularly passed (known as the Van Ness ordinance) granted to the respective parties in possession at a given date title to certain portions of said land; and

Whereas a part of said lands so granted consisted of the area of about 100 acres embracing the present site of Fort Mason and lands contiguous thereto west of Van Ness Avenue; and

Whereas thereafter the Supreme Court of the State of California validated the said Van Ness ordinance and confirmed the titles thereunder; and

Whereas the grantees of said city, holding the title of said city to such lands, and their successors in interest, improved many parts of the said property and were in possession thereof in undisputed claim and right; and

Whereas the city of San Francisco reserved two square blocks of said pueblo land for a park, known as Alcatraz Square; and

Whereas, in 1863, the Secretary of War directed the commanding general at San Francisco to take possession of said 100 acres and fortify the same in whole or in part as a war emergency measure in anticipation of privateer attack on San Francisco, and in pursuance of said direction the occupants of said 100 acres of land were dispossessed by the military authorities without compensation and as a war emergency, and referred for relief to Washington; and

Whereas the dispossessed owners, subsequent to the war, appealed to Congress for relief, and thereafter Congress, by an act passed in 1870, restored about 50 acres of said land to the owners thereof, but no relief was given to the other grantees of said city, though entitled thereto; and

Whereas it is to the interest of the city of San Francisco that the areas involved should be restored to the rightful owners to be made the site of homes, and the city should repossess itself of said Alcatraz Square and enlarge its park areas if the city so desires; and

Whereas the State of California did, on February 14, 1901, after a careful investigation of the facts and records, memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact relief legislation for the benefit of Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the city and county of San Francisco, through the board of supervisors thereof, do hereby respectfully memorialize the National Congress to enact the proper legislation like unto that of said act of 1870 restoring the balance of said land to the parties entitled thereto or their successors in interest; and

Resolved further, That the mayor and the clerk of this board send a copy of this resolution to the Hon. HIRAM W. JOHNSON and the Hon. SAMUEL M. SHORTRIDGE, United States Senators from California, and to the respective Congressmen from California, with the request that they cooperate in all proper ways to the securing of such legislation.

Adopted: Board of supervisors, December 17, 1928.

Ayes: Supervisors Andriano, Colman, Havenner, Hayden, Kent, Marks, McGovern, McSheehy, Powers, Roncovieri, Schmidt, Shannon, Stanton, Suhr, Todd, Toner, 16.

Absent: Supervisors Deasy, Gallagher, 2.

J. S. DUNNIGAN, Clerk.

Approved, San Francisco, December 17, 1928.

JAMES ROLPH, Jr., Mayor.

DECEASED MEMBERS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Referring to the announcement of the death of a former Member by the gentleman from New York [Mr. STALKER], I want to suggest that Members in making such announcements will do well to give the date of the death of the persons referred to. I am helping to gather data for the compiling of this new biographical directory of former Members of the House, and I find it is extremely difficult to get information in certain cases on account of the fact that announcements frequently overlook that feature and fail to give the date of death.

Mr. STALKER. Mr. Underhill, of New York, died on February 7.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, Mr. REED of New York (at the request of Mr. TABER) was granted leave of absence, on account of the death of a business associate.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 39 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Saturday, February 9, 1929, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Mr. TILSON submitted the following tentative list of committee hearings scheduled for Saturday, February 9, 1929, as reported to the floor leader by clerks of the several committees:

COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

(10.30 a. m.)

To authorize the establishment of a national hydraulic laboratory in the Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce and the construction of a building therefor (S. 1710).

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

812. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting supplemental estimate of appropriation for the General Accounting Office for the fiscal years 1929 and 1930 in the amount of $10,800 (H. Doc. No. 565); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

813. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting supplemental and deficiency estimates of appropriations for the District of Columbia for 1928 and prior fiscal years, $85,951.26; for the fiscal year 1929, $405,910.89; and for the fiscal year 1930, $16,600, amounting in all to $508,462.15 (H. Doc. No. 566); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

814. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting supplemental estimate of appropriation for the Department of Justice for the fiscal year 1929 amounting to $38,000 (H. Doc. No. 567); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 5181. An act to amend section 4 of the act of June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. p. 224; sec. 241, title 22, U. S. C.); without amendment (Rept. No. 2430). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 11802. A bill establishing under the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice a division of the Bureau of Investigation to be known as the division of identification and information; without amendment (Rept. No. 2431). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 14931. A bill to amend section 93 of the Judicial Code establishing the judicial district of Nebraska; without amendment (Rept. No. 2432). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 16314. A bill to amend section 198 of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. 2433). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. BRITTEN: Committee on Naval Affairs. H. R. 16839. A bill to provide for investigation of sites suitable for the establishment of a naval airship base; without amendment (Rept. No. 2434). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. ZIHLMAN: Committee on the District of Columbia. S. 4125. An act to amend chapter 15 of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 2439). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. ZIHLMAN: Committee on the District of Columbia. S. 4441. An act to amend the laws relating to assessment and collection of taxes in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 2440). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. GRAHAM: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 16394. A bill to authorize the United States to be made a party defendant in any suit or action which may be commenced by the State of Oregon in the United States District Court for the District of Oregon, for the determination of the title to all or any of the lands constituting the beds of Malheur and Harney Lakes in Harney County, Oreg., and lands riparian thereto, and to all or any of the waters of said lakes and their tributaries, together with the right to control the use thereof, authorizing all persons claiming to have an interest in said land, water, or the use thereof to be made parties or to intervene in said suit or action, and conferring jurisdiction on the United States courts over such cause; with amendment (Rept. No. 2441). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. RANSLEY: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 2436. A bill for the relief of Harvey H. Goyer; without amendment (Rept. No. 2422). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. BOYLAN: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 2441. A bill for the relief of William P. Brady; without amendment (Rept. No. 2423). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WAINWRIGHT: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 10824. A bill for the relief of Edward H. Cotcher; without amendment (Rept. No. 2424). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. GARRETT of Texas: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 14767. A bill for the relief of Howard C. Frink; without amendment (Rept. No. 2425). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. McSWAIN: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 15029. A bill for the relief of Edward A. Burkett; without amendment (Rept. No. 2426). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. WARE: Committee on Claims. S. 2291. An act for the relief of certain seamen and any and all persons entitled to receive a part or all of money now held by the Government of the United States on a purchase contract of steamship Orion who are judgment creditors of the Black Star Line (Inc.) for wages earned; without amendment (Rept. No. 2435). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. REECE: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 15449. A bill for the relief of Joel Townsend; with amendment (Rept. No. 2436). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. UNDERHILL: Committee on Claims. H. R. 16837. A bill for the relief of C. J. Colville; without amendment (Rept. No. 2437). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. UNDERHILL: Committee on Claims. H. R. 16958. A bill to provide an appropriation for the payment of claims of persons who suffered damages from deaths, personal injuries, or property loss due to an airplane accident at Langin Field, Moundsville, W. Va., July 10, 1921; without amendment (Rept. No. 2438). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. HUDSPETH: Committee on Claims. H. R. 6939. A bill for the relief of Thomas T. Grimsley; without amendment (Rept. No. 2442). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. IRWIN: Committee on Claims. H. R. 7560. A bill for the relief of James P. Hamill; with amendment (Rept. No. 2443). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. IRWIN: Committee on Claims. H. R. 12782. A bill for the relief of C. L. Beardsley; with amendment (Rept. No. 2444). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. ROY G. FITZGERALD: Committee on Claims. H. R. 15288. A bill for the relief of Angelo Cerri; without amendment (Rept. No. 2445). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

ADVERSE REPORTS

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. SINCLAIR: Committee on War Claims. H. R. 6538. A bill to reimburse Lieut. Col. Charles F. Sargent; adverse (Rept. No. 2427). Laid on the table.

Mr. PEAVEY: Committee on War Claims. H. R. 7987. A bill for the relief of W. H. Fisher; adverse (Rept. No. 2428). Laid on the table.

Mr. SINCLAIR: Committee on War Claims. H. R. 12637. A bill granting jurisdiction to the Court of Claims to hear the case of David A. Wright; adverse (Rept. No. 2429). Laid on the table.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BACHMANN: A bill (H. R. 16981) authorizing the city of Wheeling, W. Va., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Ohio River at or near Wheeling, W. Va.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. McDUFFIE: A bill (H. R. 16982) authorizing J. E. Robinson, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Tombigbee River at or near Coffeeville, Ala.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. VINCENT of Iowa: A bill (H. R. 16983) authorizing the cities of Omaha, Nebr., and Council Bluff, Iowa, either independently or both jointly to purchase, to consider, or to construct, and to reconstruct, extend, enlarge, maintain, and operate one or more toll or free bridges, not exceeding three, across the Missouri River at or near said cities or to assign such rights to others, and providing the conditions to the exercise of such powers; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 16984) providing for the final enrollment of the Indians of the Klamath Indian Reservation in the State of Oregon; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. COLTON: A bill (H. R. 16985) authorizing the Uintah, Uncompahgre, and the White River Bands of the Ute Indians in Utah and Colorado and the Southern Ute and the Ute Mountain Bands of Ute Indians in Utah, Colorado, and New Mexico to sue in the Court of Claims; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. COLLINS: A bill (H. R. 16986) to provide for the establishment of a branch home of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers in the State of Mississippi; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. DRANE: A bill (H. R. 16987) for the control of floods in the Caloosahatchee River and Lake Okeechobee drainage areas, Florida, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Flood Control.

By Mr. ESTEP: A bill (H. R. 16988) to legalize the sewer outlet in the Allegheny River at Thirty-second Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HANCOCK: A bill (H. R. 16989) authorizing the payment of paving assessment in the city of Syracuse, N. Y.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SUTHERLAND: A bill (H. R. 16990) validating certain applications for and entries of public lands; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 16991) to add certain lands to the Holy Cross National Forest, Colo.; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. BLACK of New York: Resolution (H. Res. 310) to investigate warning as to speculative loans issued by Federal Reserve Board; to the Committee on Rules.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ARNOLD: A bill (H. R. 16992) granting an increase of pension to Isabella Shields; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DOUTRICH: A bill (H. R. 16993) granting an increase of pension to Priscilla Pye; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KELLY: A bill (H. R. 16994) granting a pension to Maggie Rachael Wilt; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MORGAN: A bill (H. R. 16995) granting an increase of pension to Sadie J. Daymude; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16996) granting an increase of pension to Emma E. Kerr; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 16997) granting a pension to Sarah A. Welsh; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. O'CONNOR of Louisiana: A bill (H. R. 16998) for the relief of Clayton M. Thomas; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. REED of New York: A bill (H. R. 16999) granting an increase of pension to Agnes A. Tiffin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 17000) granting an increase of pension to Nancy M. Hinkley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WOODRUFF: A bill (H. R. 17001) for the relief of Capt. Walter R. Gherardi, United States Navy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. WYANT: A bill (H. R. 17002) granting a pension to Annie M. Kinsel; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. W. T. FITZGERALD: Resolution (H. Res. 311) that the sum of $1,000 be paid to Margaret Elma Naylor for extra and expert services to the Committee on Invalid Pensions; to the Committee on Accounts.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

9804. Resolution of the Winnebago County Bar Association, urging location of United States district court at Rockford, Ill.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

9805. Petition of Active Republican Club (Inc.), fifth assembly district, New York, urging legislation by the Congress that will eliminate the traffic in narcotics; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9806. By Mr. BLOOM: Petition of the New York State Fish, Game, and Forest League, indorsing the Norbeck game refuge bill (S. 1271); to the Committee on Agriculture.

9807. Also, petition of executive committee of the Garden Club of America, indorsing the Norbeck game refuge bill (S. 2171); to the Committee on Agriculture.

9808. By Mr. BOHN: Petition of 20 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Pickford, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9809. By Mr. BOIES: Petition of the pastor and 300 members of the Presbyterian Church at Battle Creek, Iowa, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9810. By Mr. BOYLAN: Resolution adopted by Active Republican Club of New York City, favoring legislation prohibiting the peddling of narcotics; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9811. By Mr. CULLEN: Petition of the Garden Club of America, indorsing the Norbeck game refuge bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

9812. Also, petition of the members of the General Henry W. Lawton Camp, No. 21, Department of New York United Spanish War Veterans, urging favorable consideration of House bill 14676, granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers, sailors, marines, and nurses of the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection, or the China relief expedition; to the Committee on Pensions.

9813. By Mr. DOUTRICH: Petition of 170 members of Grace Evangelical Church, Millersburg, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9814. Also, petition of 106 citizens of the eighteenth congressional district of the State of Pennsylvania, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9815. By Mr. ESLICK: Petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Columbia, Tenn., membership 85, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9816. By Mr. GARBER: Petition of Albert E. Niehus, in support of the Norbeck game refuge bill (S. 1271); to the Committee on Agriculture.

9817. Also, petition of Mrs. E. H. Peine, Blackwell, Okla., in support of the Norbeck bird conservation bill (S. 1271); to the Committee on Agriculture.

9818. By Mr. GIBSON: Petition of 56 citizens of the second congressional district of the State of Vermont, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9819. By Mr. GREENWOOD: Petition of members of the First Presbyterian Church, Vincennes, Ind., 500 strong, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9820. By Mr. HANCOCK: Petition of 26 citizens of Cortland County, Cincinnatus, N. Y., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9821. By Mr. HOFFMAN: Petition of 36 citizens of third congressional district of New Jersey, urging that no change be made in tariff on hides and leathers; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9822. Also, petition of 14 citizens of Highland, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9823. Also, petition of 40 citizens of Middlesex County, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9824. Also, petition of 27 citizens of Perth Amboy, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9825. Also, petition of 25 citizens of Cranberry, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9826. Also, petition of 60 citizens of Jamesburg and vicinity, in the State of New Jersey, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9827. Also, petition of 53 citizens of Neptune City, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9828. Also, petition of 39 citizens of Long Branch, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9829. By Mr. HUDSON: Petition of 45 citizens of Davisburg, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford Sunday rest bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9830. Also, petition of 63 citizens of Dansville, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9831. Also, petition of 22 members of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, of Flint, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9832. Also, petition of 61 members of the First Evangelical Church of Flint, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9833. Also, petition of 26 members of the First Baptist Church of Holly, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9834. Also, petition of 33 members of the Kearsley Park Evangelical Church, of Flint, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9835. Also, petition of 24 members of the Long Lake Methodist Episcopal Church, of Long Lake, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided by the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9836. Also, petition of nine members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of South Mundy, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9837. Also, petition of 14 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Grand Blanc, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9838. Also, petition of 22 members of the Clyde Methodist Episcopal Church, of Clyde, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9839. Also, petition of 18 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Gaines, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9840. Also, petition of 66 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Linden, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9841. Also, petition of 10 members of the First Baptist Church of Fenton, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9842. Also, petition of 21 members of the First Baptist Church of Rochester, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9843. Also, petition of Mary C. Street and B. T. Street, both of Fenton, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided by the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9844. By Mr. KEARNS: Petition of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, consisting of 42 members, Hillsboro, Ohio, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9845. By Mr. KELLY: Petition of the teacher and 14 members of the Young Ladies' Class of the United Presbyterian Church, Swissvale, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9846. Also, petition of 64 citizens of the thirty-third congressional district of the State of Pennsylvania, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9847. By Mr. KIESS: Petition from citizens of Avie, Pa., favoring the passage of House bill 78, introduced by Representative LANKFORD; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9848. Also, petition of 29 citizens of Emporium, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9849. Also, petition of 24 citizens of Lock Haven, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9850. Also, petition of 102 citizens of Jersey Shore, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9851. Also, petition of 650 members of Lycoming Presbyterian Church, Williamsport, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9852. Also, petition of 94 citizens of Williamsport, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9853. By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of John Earl, John Hynes, and Edward Graham, citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., a committee representing the American Wire Weavers' Protective Association, makers of Fourdrinier wire cloth, representing one of the oldest trades in America, praying that earnest consideration and support be given to recommendations presented by the president of the executive board at hearings on January 16, 1929, before the Ways and Means Committee on metal manufactures, petitioning that adequate protection be given this industry; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9854. By Mr. LINTHICUM: Petition of medical and chirurgical faculty of the State of Maryland, opposing Sheppard-Towner-Newton bill on child welfare; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9855. Also, petition of Peabody Piano Co., Baltimore, Md., opposing House bill 13452, which aims to increase royalties on phonograph records; to the Committee on Patents.

9856. Also, petition of Dr. H. S. Willis, Johns Hopkins Hospital, and Dr. Thomas R. Boggs, Baltimore, Md., urging granting of pension to Mrs. Joseph Goldberger, widow of Doctor Goldberger, late of the Public Health Service; to the Committee on Pensions.

9857. Also, petition of N. S. Kenney, F. J. Le Moyne, U. O. Michaels, Bacharach Rasin Co., M. Champlin Robinson, James Bailey & Son, F. M. MacDonald, Canton National Bank, James Stuart Lowry, R. U. Darby, J. P. Pfeiffer & Son, J. William Middendorf & Sons, B. Howell Griswold, jr., Sherwood Bros., W. W. Seward, M. E. Towner, D. K. Este Fisher, Brinkmann & Co., and William M. Thornton, jr., all of Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. Ellen G. Robinson, Brooklandville, Md.; Elmer Haulenbeck, Oakland, Md.; Josiah A. Beck, Denton, Md.; and Copley Amory, Washington, D. C.; favoring passage of Norbeck game refuge bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

9858. By Mr. LUCE: Petition of John F. Cavanaugh and Michael T. Cavanaugh, Framingham, Mass., protesting change in duty on hides and leather; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9859. By Mr. McCORMACK: Petition of Mrs. Thomas F. Donovan, 764 Columbia Road, Dorchester, Mass., protesting vigorously against the Newton maternity bill and the equal rights amendment; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

9860. By Mr. MEAD: Petition of Buffalo Lumber Exchange; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9861. Also, petition of New York State Fish, Game, and Forest League; to the Committee on Agriculture.

9862. By Mr. MICHENER: Petition of 45 members of the Evangelical Church of St. Rockwood, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9863. Also, petition of 56 members of the First Baptist Church of Milan, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9864. Also, petition of 33 members of the Evangelical Church of Carlton, Mich., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9865. By Mr. MORROW: Petition of the pastor and 78 members of the Presbyterian Church of Alamogordo, N. Mex., urging the enactment of the Sunday observance bill for the District of Columbia, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78); to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9866. By Mr. O'CONNELL: Petition of the Weatherbest Stained Shingle Co. (Inc.), Jackson Heights, Long Island, New York, opposing the lumber, log, and shingle tariff; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9867. Also, petition of Philip A. Meckel, Woodhaven, Long Island, N. Y., favoring an amendment to paragraph 1671, schedule 15; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9868. Also, petition of Mrs. David Holmes Morton, Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the passage of the Norbeck game refuge bill (S. 1271); to the Committee on Agriculture.

9869. Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, favoring the passage of House bill 450; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

9870. Also, petition of Louis Eisman, of New York City; Mrs. L. J. Francke, of New York City; Robert J. Caldwell, New York City; and the Garden Club of America, New York City, favoring the passage of the game refuge bill (S. 1271); to the Committee on Agriculture.

9871. By Mr. PEAVEY: Petition of 150 members of Methodist (German) Church, Merrill, Wis., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9872. Also, petition of 800 members of St. Stephens Episcopal Church, Merrill, Wis., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9873. Also, petition of 42 members of the Emmanuel Scandinavian Congregational Church, Merrill, Wis., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9874. By Mr. PERKINS: Petition of 80 members of Methodist Episcopal Church of Belvidere, N. J., suggesting a change in the preamble to the Constitution of the United States; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9875. Also, petition of 106 members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Washington, N. J., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9876. By Mr. QUAYLE: Petition of C. Bruno & Son (Inc.), of New York City, opposing House bill 13452, to amend the act entitled "An act to amend and consolidate the acts respecting copyright," approved March 4, 1909, as amended, in respect of mechanical reproduction of musical compositions, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Patents.

9877. Also, petition of Weatherbest Stained Shingle Co. (Inc.), of North Tonawanda, N. Y., opposing the lumber, log, and shingle tariff; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9878. Also, petition of Buffalo Lumber Exchange, protesting against the proposal to place a duty on Canadian timber, lumber, lath, and shingles; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9879. Also, petition of the Dana Natural History Society, of Albany, N. Y., favoring the passage of the Norbeck game refuge bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

9880. Also, petition of the Washburn Crosby Co. (Inc.), New York City, N. Y., favoring the passage of the Norbeck game refuge bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

9881. Also, petition of Anchor Cap & Closure Corporation, of Long Island City, N. Y., favoring the passage of House bill 12693, a bill which relates generally to standards for preserves, jellies, and other similar products; to the Committee on Agriculture.

9882. Also, petition of Robert Brautigam Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing the Timberlake resolution, having as its objective the placing of certain restrictions and limitations on the free entry of Philippine sugar into this country; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9883. Also, petition of the Dime Savings Bank of Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring the passage of the Norbeck game refuge bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

9884. Also, petition of I. Rokeach & Sons (Inc.), of Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing any duty which may be proposed on soap-making oils and fats now on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9885. Also, petition of Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America, Washington, D. C., favoring the passage of House bill 450, with authorizes educational or training orders as an essential feature of an effective program of industrial preparedness for national defense; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

9886. Also, petition of Benjul Music House, of Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing House bill 13452, to amend the act entitled "An act to amend and consolidate the acts respecting copyright"; to the Committee on Patents.

9887. Also, petition of Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers of America, Local Union No. 369, Washington, D. C., favoring the passage of Senate bill 4186, a bill to regulate the use of spray painting compressed air machines, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Labor.

9888. By Mr. RAMSEYER: Petition of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Kirkville, Iowa, with a membership of 143 present, unanimously petitioning to enact into a law the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the district of Columbia (H. R. 78) or similar measures; also Sixteen citizens of Kirkville, Iowa, petitioning to enact into law the Lankford Sunday rest bill for the district of Columbia (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9889. By Mr. REED of New York: Petition of 120 members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and 40 members of the Baptist Church, Niobe, N. Y., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9890. By Mr. ROMJUE: Petition of W. W. Sears et al., Palmyra, Mo.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9891. By Mr. ROWBOTTOM: Petition of Indiana Farm Bureau Federation, in opposition to proposed tariff on Canadian lumber, shingles, and logs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

9892. By Mr. SCHNEIDER: Petition of 500 members of First Presbyterian Church, Oconto, Wis., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9893. By Mr. SWICK: Petition of the Mahoningtown Presbyterian Church, 380 members, located at New Castle, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9894. Also, a petition of 71 citizens of the twenty-sixth congressional district of the State of Pennsylvania, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Caiptal in the enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9895. Also, petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Rochester, Beaver County, Pa., with a membership of 140, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9896. Also, petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Beaver, Beaver County, Pa., with a membership of 225, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9897. Also, petition of the Presbyterian Church of Slippery Rock, Pa., with a membership of 461, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9898. Also, petition of the Ladies' Aid Society of Vanport Presbyterian Church, membership of 15, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9899. Also, petition of 59 members of the Twentieth Century Club, Rochester, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9900. Also, petition of members (500 in number) of the Presbyterian Church of Ellwood City, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9901. Also, petition of the Presbyterian Church, 300 members, of Freedom, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9902. Also, petition of the Woman's Club of College Hill, Beaver Falls, Pa., having a membership of 100, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9903. By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: Petition from citizens of Eagle County, Colo., protesting against any legislation to abrogate the Pullman surcharge; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9904. Also, petition from citizens of Rifle, De Beque, and Palisade, Colo., protesting against any legislation to abrogate the Pullman surcharge; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9905. Also, petition from citizens of Aspen, Colo., protesting against any legislation to abrogate the Pullman surcharge; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9906. Also, petition from citizens of Delta, Colo., protesting against any legislation to abrogate the Pullman surcharge; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9907. Also, petition from citizens of Gunnison, Colo., protesting against any legislation to abrogate the Pullman surcharge; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9908. Also, petition from citizens of Glenwood Springs, Colo., protesting against any legislation to abrogate the Pullman surcharge; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9909. Also, petition from citizens of Leadville, Colo., protesting against any legislation to abrogate the Pullman surcharge; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9910. Also, petition from citizens of Delta County, Colo., protesting against legislation to abrogate Pullman surcharge; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9911. Also, petitions from citizens of Rico and Telluride, Colo., protesting against legislation to abrogate Pullman surcharge; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9912. Also, petitions from citizens of Durango, Colo., protesting against any legislation to abrogate the Pullman surcharge; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

9913. By Mr. THOMPSON: Resolution of Cecil Institute, meeting at Cecil, Paulding County, Ohio, pertaining to legislation to remedy farming conditions; to the Committee on Agriculture.

9914. By Mr. WATSON: Petition of the members (90 in number) of the Presbyterian Church, Ivyland, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9915. Also, petition of 26 citizens of Springtown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9916. Also, petition of 150 members of the Presbyterian Church and 13 members of the Woman's Missionary Society, Eddington, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9917. Also, petition of 26 citizens of Greenville, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9918. Also, petition of 36 citizens of Hatboro, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9919. Also, petition of 127 citizens of Quakertown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9920. Also, petition of 53 citizens of Norristown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9921. Also, petition of 68 citizens of Ambler, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9922. Also, petition of 10 citizens of Conshohocken, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9923. Also, petition of 302 citizens of Bucks and Montgomery Counties, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9924. Also, petition of 75 citizens of Souderton, Pa., and vicinity, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9925. Also, petition of 65 citizens of North Wales, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9926. Also, petition of 25 citizens of Rahus and Collegeville, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9927. Also, petition of 22 citizens of Palm, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9928. Also, petition of 49 citizens of Perkasie, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9929. Also, petition of 18 citizens of Mill Hall, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9930. Also, petition of 101 citizens of Lansdale, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9931. Also, petition of 38 citizens of Bucks County, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9932. Also, petition of 30 citizens of Bristol, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9933. Also, petition of 843 members of the Central Presbyterian Church, Norristown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9934. Also, petition of 1,050 members of the First Presbyterian Church, Norristown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9935. Also, petition of 1,108 members of the Calvary Baptist Church, Norristown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9936. Also, petition of 950 members of the Haws Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, of Norristown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9937. Also, petition of 19 citizens of Bristol, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9938. Also, petition of the Young Peoples Branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Yardley, Pa., 37 members, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9939. Also, petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union (55 members), of Yardley, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9940. Also, petition of 35 members of the North Wales Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Mrs. William Craven, president, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9941. Also, petition of the Young Women's Christian Association of Norristown, Pa., with a membership of 22, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford Sunday rest bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9942. Also, petition of the Christ Reformed Church, Norristown, Pa., with a membership of 570, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9943. Also, petition of the Norristown branch of the Christian Endeavor, consisting of 23 societies, with a membership of 523, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9944. Also, petition of the First Baptist Church, of Norristown, Pa., with a membership of 575, and sponsored by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, with a membership of 125, all urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9945. Also, petition of the members of All Saints' Parish, Norristown, Pa., a total of 400, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided by the Lankford bill (H. R. 78), or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9946. Also, petition of 700 members of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Norristown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9947. Also, petition of 375 members of the Bethany Evangelical Church of Norristown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9948. Also, petition of 100 members of the Church of the Brethren of Norristown, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9949. Also, petition of 85 members of the Lansdale Church, of which Rev. C. E. Ryder is the pastor, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9950. Also, petition of 20 members of the Collegeville Branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford rest bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9951. Also, petition of 65 members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Reformed Church, Collegeville, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9952. Also, petition of 63 members of the Women's Missionary Society, Collegeville, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford Sunday bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9953. Also, petition of 47 members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Churchville, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9954. Also, petition of 30 citizens of the ninth district, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9955. Also, petition of 30 members of the Philathea Bible Class of the Reformed Church, Churchville, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9956. Also, petition of 45 members of the Women's Bible Class of the Methodist Church, Lansdale, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided by the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9957. Also, petition of 80 members of the Men's Bible Class of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Lansdale, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9958. Also, petition of 70 members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Bristol, Pa., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9959. Also, petition of 77 citizens of the ninth congressional district of Pennsylvania, urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

9960. By Mr. WILLIAMSON: Petition of the pastor, trustees, and 400 members of the Presbyterian Church, Lemmon, S. Dak., urging the enactment of legislation to protect the people of the Nation's Capital in their enjoyment of Sunday as a day of rest in seven, as provided in the Lankford bill (H. R. 78) or similar measures; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

SENATE

SATURDAY, February 9, 1929

(Legislative day of Thursday, February 7, 1929)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate will receive a message from the House of Representatives.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Farrell, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 16714) making appropriations for the Navy Department and the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 3581. An act authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to settle claims and suits against the District of Columbia;

H. R. 13484. An act authorizing preliminary examinations of sundry streams with a view to the control of their floods, and for other purposes;

H. R. 13502. An act authorizing the State of Minnesota and the State of Wisconsin to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the St. Croix River at or near Stillwater, Minn.;

H. R. 14146. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Monongahela River, in the city of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 14164. An act granting the consent of Congress to the city of Knoxville, Tenn., to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Tennessee River at or near Henley Street, in Knoxville, Knox County, Tenn.;

H. R. 14451. An act to revive and reenact the act entitled "An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near McKees Rocks Borough, in the county of Allegheny, in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania";

H. R. 14460. An act authorizing the Iowa-Nebraska Amortized Free Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Sioux City, Iowa;

H. R. 14469. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct a bridge across the Youghiogheny River between the borough of Versailles and the village of Boston, in the township of Elizabeth, Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 14481. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Chicago South Shore & South Bend Railroad to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge across the Grand Calumet River at East Chicago, Ind.;

H. R. 14919. An act granting the consent of Congress to the commissioners of Mahoning County, Ohio, to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Mahoning River at or near Cedar Street, Youngstown, Mahoning County, Ohio;

H. R. 15072. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the reconstruction of the bridge across the Grand Calumet River at Burnham Avenue, in Cook County, Ill.;

H. R. 15084. An act granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near Reedsdale Street, in the city of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, Pa.;

H. R. 15269. An act to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Red River at or near Coushatta, La.;

H. R. 15427. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of War to lend to the Governor of North Carolina 300 pyramidal tents, complete; 9,000 blankets, olive drab, No. 4; 5,000 pillowcases; 5,000 canvas cots; 5,000 cotton pillows; 5,000 bed sacks; and 9,000 bed sheets to be used at the encampment of the United Confederate Veterans to be held at Charlotte, N. C., in June, 1929; and

H. R. 15470. An act granting the consent of Congress to the Highway Department of the State of Tennessee to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Cumberland River in the vicinity of Harts Ferry, Trousdale County, Tenn.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts presented the following resolutions adopted by the State Senate of Massachusetts, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,
IN THE YEAR 1929.

Senate Resolution 256, requesting Congress to take action for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution, known as the prohibition amendment

Whereas there was placed on the official ballot used in 36 of the 40 senatorial districts of the Commonwealth at the State election in November, 1928, under the provisions of sections 19 to 22, inclusive, of chapter 53 of the General Laws, the following question:

"Shall the senator from this district be instructed to vote for a resolution requesting Congress to take action for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, known as the prohibition amendment?" and

Whereas a plurality of the votes cast in 34 of said 36 districts was in favor of such instruction; and

Whereas the total affirmative vote on said question in said 36 districts was 707,352; the total negative vote on said question in said districts was 422,655; and the total number of persons voting at said election in said districts who did not vote on said question was 310,244: Accordingly be it

Resolved, That the Senate of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in view of the vote taken as aforesaid under the statutes of the Commonwealth, and the results of said vote, respectfully requests Congress to take action for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, known as the prohibition amendment; and be it further

Resolved, That the clerk of the senate be directed to transmit to the Presiding Officers of both branches of the Congress of the United States and to the Massachusetts Members thereof duly certified copies of these resolutions.

WILLIAM H. SANGER, Clerk.

A true copy. Attest:

WILLIAM H. SANGER, Clerk.

Mr. WATSON presented the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Indiana, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

A concurrent resolution requesting the Congress of the United States to appropriate funds for the establishment of a United States Veterans' Bureau general hospital within the State of Indiana for honorably discharged ex-service men of this area

Whereas the World War veterans' act of 1924, as amended, provides that "the Director of the United States Veterans' Bureau is authorized to furnish hospitalization and necessary traveling expenses to veterans of any war, military occupation, or military expedition since 1897, not dishonorably discharged, without regard to the nature or origin of their disabilities: Provided, That preference to admission to any Government hospital for hospitalization under the provisions of this subdivision shall be given to those veterans who are financially unable to pay for hospitalization and their necessary traveling expenses"; and

Whereas as a result of the above enactment of Congress there has been a substantial increase of admissions to hospitals, and as this increase of admissions is expected to continue for years to come; and

Whereas in this area, comprising the States of Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, Michigan, and Illinois, there is at this time an acute and increasing need for general hospital facilities, and as the State of Indiana has not been allowed a United States Veterans' Bureau hospital, while in each of the States bordering Indiana there have been United States Veterans' Bureau hospitals established; and

Whereas, as Indiana is the center of population of the United States, a nucleus of the agricultural and industrial elements, the greatest railroad center of the world, and easily accessible by highways, there is probably no area within the United States comprising States that potentially serve such a large number of ex-service men; and

Whereas a United States Veterans' Bureau general hospital located within the State of Indiana would economically serve approximately 1,000,000 ex-service men who are residents of this area; and

Whereas the savings alone in transportation would be of such stupendous amount, because of the central location and because of serving such a wide area, the institution should be of such proportions as to meet the present acute and increasing needs, so that the large necessary expenditure will be an economic one: Therefore

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of Indiana (the House of Representatives concurring)—

SECTION 1. That the United States Government is hereby respectfully urged and requested to provide the necessary funds for the establishment of a United States Veterans' Bureau general hospital at some convenient place within the State of Indiana, of such capacity as to afford adequate hospital facilities for persons entitled to treatment in such hospitals in the area consisting of the States of Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, Michigan, and Illinois. The United States Senators and Members of Congress from this State are hereby urged to use all honorable means to secure the establishment of such a hospital in the State of Indiana.

SEC. 2. That the secretary of state is hereby directed to send certified copies of this resolution to each of the United States Senators and each Congressman from Indiana.

EDGAR D. BUSH,
President of the Senate.
JAMES M. KNAPP,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
HARRY G. LESLIE,
Governor of the State of Indiana.

Approved January 28, 1929.

Mr. SHEPPARD presented a resolution adopted by the Texas Reclamation and Drainage Association, at Corsicana, Tex., favoring the passage of the bill (S. 4689) to provide for the making of loans to drainage or levee districts, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation.

JUDICIAL PROCEDURE IN EUROPEAN COUNTRIES

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, sometime ago I introduced a bill providing for the establishment of a new court and invited the attention of the Senate to it. I have now an article written by Hon. Edward J. Henning, United States district judge for the southern district of California, a very interesting article which bears rather directly on the subject. In the article he gives his observations as a result of an examination of the courts, particularly of England and Germany. I ask unanimous consent that the article may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

There being no objection, the article was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OBSERVATIONS OF JUDICIAL PROCEDURE IN EUROPEAN COUNTRIES

By Edward J. Henning, United States district judge for the southern district of California

On July 21, 1928, I sailed on the George Washington for Cardiff, Wales, where I landed on July 30. After spending a week in the British Isles, two weeks in Germany and Austria, and a week in Paris, I sailed for home from La Havre, France, on August 29.

The month of August seems to be preeminently a month of court vacations throughout the Temperate Zone. The courts of Great Britain, of Germany, Austria, and France were in vacation as a rule while I was in those respective countries. Minor courts were in session everywhere, and in Frankfort on the Main, Germany, about one-third of the courts of all grades were functioning.

Most American lawyers are fairly familiar with the British judicial system. Four years ago I made a more or less intensive study of the British system in London. American lawyers are accustomed to reading considerable in the literature of their craft about the doings of the courts in the British Isles and on occasion hear a British lawyer or judge deliver an address before some bar association of which they are members. In 1924 the associations of the English-speaking bars of the world met in conference at London. About 2,000 American lawyers attended. Many American lawyers who failed to attend the conference have read the reports thereof.

The procedure of the courts of the different European countries I visited vary greatly from each other. All are in sharp contrast with our own general scheme of procedure. However, I found several things which seem to characterize European procedure of all countries and which are quite distinct from ours.

The most striking thing I observed in all the countries I visited is the commanding position of the judge and the rather unimportant position of the lawyer while a court is in session. Again, while without exception, judges and lawyers of European countries wear gowns and other regalia typical of their position, and while there is much formality in that regard, the proceedings themselves in court are very much more informal in European countries than in America.

Another outstanding feature I noticed in all the countries of Europe which I visited is the fact that judges have an unlimited tenure of office when once permanently placed upon the bench. It is probably because of that feature that there has developed with the passing of the years in European countries the relatively reversed relation to a trial, as compared with our own, of the lawyer and the judge.

The most striking thing that came to my attention was the discovery of the fact that since the establishment of the German Republic there are no jury trials in that country. The jury system, largely founded by the Germanic people, has been abolished lock, stock, and barrel in Germany. There is no exception to that rule.

In the city of Cardiff, Wales, I learned from a judge of a minor court there that the practice of shifting judges in the British Isles from one locality to another is extensively indulged and is a part of the fundamentals of the British system. This particular judge advised me that he expected to sit in London in the fall. His statement to me in substance was that while the power exists in some authority to shift judges of the lower courts and courts of first instance at will, that the wishes of the individual judge are consulted and that the system works without friction or discontent, so far as the bench is concerned. He advised me that the theory of it all is that the judge, holding a position for life, is not interested in anything having to do with litigation except justice and that he can function best to that end when he is a stranger to litigants, jurors, and bar.

While much of American jurisprudence comes to us from England, and while the principles and rules of law of the two countries are very similar, so far as substantive law is concerned, there is really very little similarity in the operation of the courts of the two countries. Generally speaking, such a comparison is to our disadvantage. Most of the rules of practice, the rules governing the operations of the courts, which we imported from England, were based upon conditions existing in that country several centuries ago. They were intended to protect the individual against autocratic and tyrannical governments.

The principal changes of the British system of court procedure have come in the last quarter of a century. These English reforms were the result of more than half a century of agitation and tentative legislation and it is to be noted that the principal reform was brought about by those who were strangers to our craft. The criminal appeals act of England is beyond question the outstanding reform in British legal history and unquestionably the thing which has brought about the greatest distinction between English criminal court procedure and our own. The bar generally opposed this reform. The layman brought it about.

This court of criminal appeals, by virtue of practicing what the statute authorizes it to do, has liberalized and modernized to a great extent criminal trials in the courts of first instance in England. This court is given broad discretion. It rarely sends a case back for a new trial. The criminal appeals court is authorized to make any change in the verdict of the jury and the sentence of the court which, in its opinion, should be made in the interest of justice. It may shorten the sentence; it may lengthen the sentence; it may set it aside entirely. It may hear witnesses and take additional evidence to clarify some point. Because of this broad power of the criminal appeals court appeals have been greatly reduced in number, even though appeal has been made very simple.

Recently considerable comment has been made by writers and speakers regarding the varying sentences imposed by different judges of courts of the same type and jurisdiction, as for example, the United States district courts upon convictions for crime under the same statute. Some judge will impose a small sentence or grant probation under the same statute and under the same circumstances under which another judge will impose the maximum imprisonment sentence. One effect of the English appeals court in criminal cases is to equalize sentences coming from various courts of the same jurisdiction. This makes for a degree of certainty and definiteness as to sentence throughout the British Isles.

I observed in Germany that a rather similar condition exists in criminal matters although under a wholly different system. Criminal cases are tried in Germany in a court of original jurisdiction and a defendant may have an appeal from the trial court of first instance to an intermediate court by simply announcing upon conviction that he desires an appeal. The court to which he appeals tries the case de novo and has a wholly free hand to deal with the matter as though it had never before been in a court. Simple as these appeals are, the fact is that they are not invoked in a large per cent of cases. I was present at a criminal trial in a court of second instance at Frankfort where a case was considered, involving husband and wife, based on a charge of fraudulent practices. They had been sentenced to serve six months in prison. Just before proceeding to trial and after the case had been called defendants' attorney asked for a conference with the prosecutor and the court took a short recess. Upon reconvening defendants' attorney announced to the court that the defendants desired to withdraw their appeal and accept the sentence of the court of first instance. This being a right the court made an order accordingly. Defense counsel explained to me the reasons for this action and mentioned among several that the defendants felt that should they be found guilty in this court the sentence, no doubt, would be made much more severe.

In Austria I was unable to witness any court in operation for the reason that all the courts at Vienna, except petty police courts, were in vacation. I learned there that the jury system is very extensively used and under the Republic every citizen is qualified to serve as a juror, practically speaking. The criticisms I heard in that country with reference to criminal matters were very much like the criticisms we hear in this country. It is said that juries are entirely too much inclined to acquit those charged with crimes and that many guilty people escape punishment.

A trial in the English courts is a much simpler proceeding than in our courts. Objections to the receipt of testimony are rare. The lawyer has performed his labors largely in his office and prior to the trial and has communicated to the court his written memorandum or brief. The English have largely lost the psychology which is so prominent in the mind of the American lawyer, namely, that anything said by anyone in court will prejudice the mind of the juror to the extent that he can not render a fair verdict. The English juror is largely taken into the group who are trying to ascertain the facts and there is no great effort to keep the juror in a glass case. The public prosecutor is regarded as a quasi judicial officer and he conducts himself in that character.

Four years ago I was in London while a very famous murder trial was on. It was the sordid story of a young married man of some standing in the business world who was charged with having killed a mistress in some cottage in the country where they had lived. The evidence was circumstantial. However, after the Government rested the accused took the stand, admitted the death of the woman by virtue of a fight, but claimed that she accidentally stumbled and fell, striking her head on the andirons of the fireplace, which caused her death. The jury found him guilty. Thereupon the prosecutor made public the record of this man, including three prior convictions, two of them under serious charges. The prosecutor explained that these facts were not brought out on cross-examination of the defendant because it was felt that under so serious a charge—murder—the jury should be permitted to decide the facts regardless of the character of the defendant under all the circumstances.

The trial of a civil case in an English court is not unlike the meeting of a board of directors of some successful American corporation, were it not for the formal clothes worn by bench and bar. The judge takes the part of the president and chairman of the board and the whole proceeding is rather informal.

The American visitor, familiar with American court practice, is usually astounded when he observes a jury trial in that country, particularly in the matter of summing up the case to the jury. The English bar has brilliant orators, as has every bar I know anything of. There one hears some brilliant addresses to the jury, but how different these addresses are from the feature orations of American lawyers to a jury in a criminal case. The English lawyer is concise and precise in his argument to the jury and never gets away from the evidence. The outstanding "address" to the jury, however, is made by the judge. He sums up the evidence, suggests helpful details to the jury as to how to go at the consideration of the evidence, and indicates what to him seems the crux of the case and what the evidence seems to indicate in that regard. He carefully advises the jury, however, that they are the sole judges of the facts.

The lawyer is still less prominent at a trial in Germany. I did not witness many trials of an important nature there, but in all of them, with two exceptions, which I attended the lawyers stood at the bar throughout the trial. A table was provided in the courtroom, but practically no chairs inside of the bar or rail. Witnesses and lawyers stood before the bar throughout the proceedings and tables were used only for the accommodation of lawyers' brief cases. As before stated, there are no juries in Germany. Every trial I attended, with one exception, was presided over by a senior judge, accompanied by either one or two junior judges, and in every instance by two lay judges. The exception noted is a special court dealing solely with controversies between landlord and tenants and cotenants in city dwellings. This court was created to furnish relief in connection with a very serious housing shortage. It consists of one judge and two laymen. The laymen for this court, which is also an exception, must be one representative of the landlord class and one representative of the tenant class. In all other instances the laymen are chosen regardless of their occupation and serve only in one case per six months or year. They are drawn in a manner somewhat analogous to our method of selecting jurors. The selections are made by certain authorities of the community and two layment are assigned each day to each court. There are no challenges of laymen provided.

The presiding judge examines the witnesses and invariably asks them to tell their story in their own way. Usually the witness spoke rapidly and wandered far afield, being brought back to his story from time to time by the presiding judge. No record was taken of what the witness said. When the witness had concluded the judge dictated to the reporter in a few well-chosen words the substance of the witness's testimony, which was taken either in shorthand by the reporter or directly on a typewriter. Thereupon the judge would have the testimony read to the witness and the inquiry made whether or not that was his testimony in substance. Sometimes the witness made a correction which sometimes was included in his testimony by the order of the judge and sometimes not. The lawyer for the one or the other of the parties sometimes made a suggestion to the court as to something in the testimony of the witness, either suggesting that the judge had not understood it entirely correctly or suggesting that some further inquiries be made of the witness along certain lines. The judge would acquiesce in the request or deny it, as his judgment dictated.

When the examination of witnesses had been concluded counsel for both sides very briefly and in conversational tone and standing at the bench would briefly call attention to the true meaning of the testimony, and often would suggest that other witnesses should be called who might cover a certain point or that certain of the witnesses had an important interest in the case. I noted that the party to the suit had the right to testify, but not under oath.

In all civil trials which I attended the court would take the matter under advisement or, rather, return to chambers without comment and would render its judgment whenever it was ready. In a majority of cases of a civil nature the trial is had by installments, often involving adjournment of several weeks.

In cases where counsel suggested that additional witnesses should be called the court would determine in chambers whether or not the evidence was sufficient as it stood and call additional witnesses at some future day if it found that the evidence was not sufficient. A three-fourths vote of the members of the court is necessary to find a judgment.

One of the criticisms, made largely by the judges, of the present German system which came to me a number of times was the fact that if the two laymen stood together they could compel the three judges to look at the matter as they did to reach a verdict, and that the laymen frequently so act, and the public, if dissatisfied with a decision, will criticize only the judges, even though the laymen forced the decision and the regular judges sitting alone would have reached a different decision.

The ethics of the German system require that a lawyer have no contact or interview with a witness to be called by either side. He takes the statement of his client as to the probable testimony of given witnesses and prepares his brief of the law and facts in advance on that basis and submits the brief in the record a required number of days after the case is at issue and a required number of days before a possible trial. In his brief he gives the court the names of the witnesses he desires to have present and the court provides for their attendance.

The European lawyer finds it difficult to comprehend the American dual system of courts—Federal and State. The American Constitution, of course, has no parallel in Europe, and that is the reason. They are much confused, when studying our system, to learn that the 48 States each has its independent system and a supreme court, and that over the same territory there is a wholly separate and complete system of courts called the Federal courts without any apparent connection between the two. It is my observation that most European lawyers who have any knowledge of our system consider the Federal system alone and assume that somewhere the State courts fit into it.

No doubt the practice in the Federal courts more nearly resembles the practice in the English courts than does the practice in the courts of any one of our States. The distinction very largely consists in the broader powers in the conduct of a trial exercised by a Federal district judge than by the judge of any court of first instance of any State. It seems to me that the criticism of the American courts by laymen is addressed almost wholly to the State courts, and particularly to the trial of criminal cases.

By way of a general comment I may say that it is my impression that the greatest outstanding phase in which English courts are more efficient and more effective than the American is in the field of criminal jury trials and in the matter of reviewing criminal jury trials by courts of appeals. In substantially all other respects the American system compares very favorably with that of any other country and has many outstanding phases of superiority as compared with the system of all the rest of the world. After spending 30 years in the courts of the United States, both State and Federal, as a trial lawyer, as prosecuting attorney for the United States, and as a United States district judge, I feel that the American jury system is the outstanding feature of American jurisprudence. The longer I deal with courts and juries the higher I respect the verdict of a jury. The outstanding flaws in our jury system, or rather the outstanding phases which bring about criticism, are not the fault of the jury system itself. The fault lies in the first instance with the judges and in the second instance with the statutes and rules governing the operation of courts, particularly in the States. The remedy lies not in doing away with the jury system but in getting at the faults.

In the 60 years last past the United States was metamorphosed from an agricultural country into the most marvelous industrial people of all time. American labor receives the highest wages of any country in the world, and yet American business successfully competes with any of them. The reason is that we have thrown away old standards of business, old conceptions of industrial relations, old interpretations of economic laws, and have builded anew so successfully that the rest of the world stands, contemplates, and is astounded.

And while this marvelous progress has been made in manufacture, in trade, in industry, in commerce, in every material line, our courts operate to-day substantially under the same rules and the same statutes as to practice that they did a century ago. They need to get into step with the rest of American civilization. If the lawyers are unable to do this, the American business man will.

The other day in perusing one of the "century" numbers of the Spectator, that old English weekly, I found in it a clipping which was taken from the number of the Spectator of November 15, 1828—a century ago. It is a discussion in a few words of the workings of the courts in India where native jurors were being employed in the courts and commenting upon the rapid progress made by the natives in adopting the English judicial system. The following words are as true to-day as they were a century ago and are as applicable in the United States of America as anywhere else in the world. We read:

"Whatever in a well-regulated commonwealth may be the value of the institution of juries as compared with that of sole, responsible judges, there can be no doubt that, in the case of India, as in that of every country which want to be civilized, the first is much to be preferred. It diffuses a knowledge of the principles of justice, and accustoms the people to interest themselves in the administration of it, and to look upon themselves in some measure as its guardians. The purposes of justice might have been secured perhaps as well by judges without juries; but the purposes of civilization would not have been so well answered."

SELFRIDGE AVIATION FIELD

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, there have been some disagreements in connection with the War Department housing bill, H. R. 13825, regarding the expansion and development of Selfridge Field, the great Federal air field in southwestern Michigan. I understand the argument has now been settled in favor of Selfridge Field and that the Committee on Military Affairs is now prepared to restore authorizations heretofore stricken from the bill. I have various documents here from the War Department and others bearing upon the utility and the importance of Selfridge Field, which should be permanently preserved and which I ask may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FORT BENNING, GA., February 3, 1929.

Senator ARTHUR VANDENBERG,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Development of Selfridge Field in accordance with present plans is of utmost importance. It affords immediate aerial defense for great industrial district and permits reenforcement to either coast within 24 hours. It also affords valuable training facilities for operations in low temperatures.

F. TRUBEE DAVISON,
Assistant Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF THE AIR CORPS,
Washington, February 4, 1929.

Hon. ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: In reply to your question reference to the reasons why the Air Corps has developed Selfridge Field as a station for the First Pursuit Group, the following is submitted:

This pursuit group is the only independent pursuit group in the Air Corps and has station at Selfridge Field. This location is very excellent from a tactical and strategical point of view for the reason that these air troops are within easy flying distance from all three coasts; that is, they are approximately 4½ hours from New York and about 9 hours from Florida, 12 hours from the Gulf and Mexican borders, and 24 hours of flying time from the Pacific coast. This enables these troops, in case of emergency, to be moved to the necessary front in the minimum amount of time.

The field is also excellently located from a technical point of view, as it is the only station where we are able to carry on training of pilots in cold weather, and, in addition, special developments of motors, landing equipment, and other particular equipment required by very cold climates.

Selfridge Field is an excellent station for aerial gunnery and bombing training, inasmuch as it is closely located to the range at Oscoda, Mich., where this work can be carried on any time of the year. Most of the other Air Corps stations are located in close proximity to denser populated areas and it is exceedingly difficult to provide bombing and machine-gun ranges without the troops flying a long distance to a point where such a range is available. At Selfridge Field this training can be carried on without difficulty.

Selfridge Field is located in the vicinity of one of our most highly developed industrial areas, and in case of war with a particular country this location would be of exceptional advantage. There is no question but what during a war a large amount of aircraft material would be fabricated in this district, and the First Pursuit Group with such other air troops as would be stationed there in time of war would form a nucleus for the defense of this area.

The Government has already invested a large amount of money in the procurement of the property and for temporary construction. It has recently completed 5 large permanent barracks and 30 noncommissioned officers' quarters at a cost of approximately $760,000. If this field is abandoned this investment will be completely lost.

The selection of Selfridge Field as a permanent home for the First Pursuit Group was made after detailed study and investigation, and it is believed to be an ideal location for these units of the Air Corps, and should be retained by all means.

In case appropriations were not available to complete Selfridge Field and it is necessary to abandon this station, I would recommend the procurement of another station in the immediate vicinity of this locality.

Very truly yours,

J. E. FECHET,
Major General, Air Corps, Chief of the Air Corps.

DETROIT, MICH., February 5, 1929.

Senator ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG:

Deeply regret the attempt of certain interests to eliminate or take away pursuit aviation from Selfridge Field and State of Michigan. Climatic conditions and location plus geographical advantages of Selfridge demand wholehearted support of both Congress and Senate in not only maintaining present status but improving pursuit aviation, which in time of hostilities will always be scouting and fighting branch of our service.

E. V. RICKENBACKER.

DAYTON, OHIO, February 4, 1929.

Senator ARTHUR VANDENBERG,
Senate Office Building:

Understand effort is being made to abandon Selfridge Field. It is my firm conviction that Selfridge Field, due to its extreme changes in weather conditions, its location on Lake St. Clair, which affords a gunnery range at the field, its proximity to Oscoda, an excellent field gunnery range, and to Detroit, the leading city in the production of aircraft, is the best location in the United States for an active and ambitious tactical unit of the Air Corps. Too much stress can not be placed upon the great advantage for training under real service conditions afforded by the cold and variable weather at Selfridge. Furthermore, it is one of the finest airdromes in the country. With best personal regards.

MAJOR LAMPHIER.

(Quotations from memorandum to the Chief of the Air Service, dated November 25, 1924, from Maj. F. G. Lamphier, on the subject of the retention of Selfridge Field)

Selfridge Field to-day is the best airdrome in the United States. This landing field has been used almost daily for two years, and there never has been a time when it was not possible to take off and land at Selfridge Field, a record which few, if any, of the airdromes in the United States can duplicate.

Selfridge Field presents the best opportunities for daily gunnery practice of any field in the United States. This gives us an opportunity to test our machine guns, to conduct preliminary target practice, and to keep our armament personnel familiar with the upkeep and maintenance of our armament.

The proximity of the field to Lake St. Clair is another big advantage during peace time as well as during time of war, as it affords an opportunity to combine seaplane activities with land planes at this field.

REFUNDS OF INTERNAL-REVENUE TAXES

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, there have been several suggestions about the proposed tax-refund amendment on the deficiency appropriation bill. I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD at this point another proposal which may be of benefit to the conferees.

There being no objection, the proposed amendment was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Provided, That no part of funds herein or hereafter provided for tax refunds where the claim is in excess of $10,000 shall be paid out until the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation shall, after holding public hearing, at which both the taxpayer and the Government shall be represented personally or by counsel, approve the payment of such claim or claims. The said Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation is hereby invested with full power to examine into, pass upon, approve, in whole or in part, reject, in whole or in part, such claim or claims. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall furnish in the case of every claim a full statement of facts as found by him concerning such claim, and the said Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation shall have access to all papers, affidavits, and other instruments in the files regarding such claims. Said Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, or their duly authorized representative or representatives, shall examine into such records, is authorized to hear additional proof, if deemed to be necessary in the fair and just settlement of such claims, shall file a succinct statement of the facts, together with their conclusions on the law and facts, which findings of fact and opinion shall be a public document.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. BINGHAM, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 100) to provide for appropriate military records for persons who, pursuant to orders, reported for military duty, but whose induction or commission into the service was not, through no fault of their own, formally completed on or prior to November 11, 1918, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1685) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 4708) to amend the act of May 24, 1928, entitled "An act making eligible for retirement, under certain conditions, officers and former officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps of the United States, other than officers of the Regular Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, who incurred physical disability in line of duty while in the service of the United States during the World War, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1698) thereon.

Mr. BROOKHART, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 14153) to authorize an additional appropriation of $150,000 for construction of a hospital annex at Marion Branch, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1686) thereon.

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 11722) to establish a national military park at the battle field of Monocacy, Md., reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1695) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 264) for the relief of Margaret I. Varnum (Rept. No. 1696); and

A bill (S. 4274) for the relief of James Evans (Rept. No. 1697).

Mr. DALE, from the Committee on Commerce, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally with amendments and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (S. 5511) granting the consent of Congress to the Hawesville & Cannelton Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River (Rept. No. 1687);

A bill (S. 5548) to extend the time for commencing and the time for completing the construction of a bridge across the Potomac River (Rept. No. 1688);

A bill (S. 5554) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Allegheny River at or near Oil City, Venango County, Pa. (Rept. No. 1689); and

A bill (H. R. 13593) granting the consent of Congress to the villages of East Dundee and West Dundee, State of Illinois, to construct, maintain, and operate a footbridge across the Fox River between East Dundee and West Dundee, Ill. (Rept. No. 1690).

He also, from the Committee on Commerce, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted a report, as indicated:

A bill (H. R. 14479) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Ohio River at or near Maysville, Ky., and Aberdeen, Ohio;

A bill (H. R. 15382) to legalize a trestle, log dump, and booming ground in Henderson Inlet near Chapman Bay, about 7 miles northeast of Olympia, Wash. (Rept. No. 1691); and

A bill (H. R. 16162) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near New Orleans and Gretna, La.

Mr. ODDIE, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 12390) for the relief of Frank C. Messenger (Rept. No. 1692);

A bill (H. R. 12666) for the relief of William S. Shacklette (Rept. No. 1693); and

A bill (H. R. 15577) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to dispose of material to the sea scout department of the Boy Scouts of America (Rept. No. 1694).

Mr. McMASTER, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 9285) to provide for the settlement of claims against the United States on account of property damage, personal injury, or death, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1699) thereon.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED

Mr. GREENE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on this calendar day that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 3581) authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to settle claims and suits against the District of Columbia.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. NORRIS:

A bill (S. 5750) to amend section 649 of the Revised Statutes, as amended; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. THOMAS of Idaho:

A bill (S. 5751) granting a pension to Thomey J. Willis; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KING:

A bill (S. 5752) authorizing the Uintah, Uncompahgre, and the White River Bands of the Ute Indians in Utah and Colorado and the Southern Ute and the Ute Mountain Bands of Ute Indians in Utah, Colorado, and New Mexico to sue in the Court of Claims; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. McNARY:

A bill (S. 5753) for the incorporation of the Klamath Tribe of Indians, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. HALE:

A bill (S. 5754) to amend the merchant marine act of 1928; to the Committee on Commerce.

A bill (S. 5755) granting an increase of pension to Nancy M. Bearce (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 5756) granting an increase of pension to Lillian H. Durgin (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A bill (S. 5757) to amend paragraphs (c) and (d) of section 9 and paragraphs (a) and (b) of section 10 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the regulation of motor-vehicle traffic in the District of Columbia, increase the number of judges of the police court, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1925; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

A bill (S. 5758) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River at or near Kansas City, Kans.; to the Committee on Commerce.

A bill (S. 5759) granting a pension to Anna Wynn (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WHEELER:

A bill (S. 5760) for the relief of E. M. Davis; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HAYDEN:

A bill (S. 5761) for the relief of John W. Adair; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WAGNER:

A bill (S. 5762) for the relief of George B. Marx; to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (S. 5763) granting an increase of pension to John Hutcheson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SACKETT:

A bill (S. 5764) granting the consent of Congress to E. T. Franks, his successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River approximately midway between the cities of Owensboro, Ky., and Rockport, Ind.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. DALE:

A bill (S. 5765) granting an increase of pension to Emma S. Stevens (with accompanying paper); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 5766) for the relief of Andrew T. Bailey; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BLAINE:

A bill (S. 5767) to amend the act entitled "An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and enter judgment in any claims which the Seminole Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes," approved May 20, 1924, as amended; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BARKLEY:

A bill (S. 5768) authorizing the Secretary of War to award the Congressional Medal of Honor to Elmer C. Roberts, Julian I. Hickson, Kelley Ballard, Martin L. Gore, Thomas E. Carroll, Chester A. Hewitt, Richard Shinners, Norman C. Oleson, and David P. Hart; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PROPOSED PENSION TO MARY VON EZDORF

Mr. OVERMAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 16878, granting pensions and increase of pensions, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Pensions and ordered to be printed.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 16714) making appropriations for the Navy Department and the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

On motion of Mr. SHEPPARD, the Committee on Military Affairs was discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 4756) for the relief of Capt. William Cassidy, and it was referred to the Committee on Claims.

THE SENATE MANUAL

Mr. CURTIS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 324), which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules be instructed to prepare a new edition of the Senate manual, and that there be printed 2,500 copies of the same for the use of the committee, of which 300 copies shall be bound in full morocco and tagged as to contents.

THE LEGAL BUSINESS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I have an address delivered by the Hon. William D. Mitchell, Solicitor General of the United States, on The Legal Business of the Federal Government, which I ask unanimous consent may be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The article is as follows:

THE LEGAL BUSINESS OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

(An address by the Hon. William D. Mitchell, Solicitor General of the United States, broadcast by radio, under the auspices of the American Bar Association, January 15, 1929, by the National Broadcasting Co.)

The National Broadcasting Co. and associated radio stations have extended their facilities to the American Bar Association for a series of short addresses on the administration of justice in the United States, so that the public may be better informed on the subject and of the work that is being done by the bench and bar of America toward the solution of the problems in this field. The purpose of the association is to stir a greater interest among the people generally on this important subject. It is easy to interest you in legislative and executive matters, but not so easy to hold your attention in matters dealing with the administration of justice. This is because that subject is more technical and you are prone to be content to leave the solution of its problems to lawyers and judges. Our purpose is to bring home to you in this series of short addresses how closely the administration of justice affects the lives and happiness of all the people and to enlist your support for all means to improve it.

As this is the first of the series, a word about the American Bar Association will not be out of place. That is an association of lawyers and judges from all the States, Territories, and insular possessions organized about 50 years ago, with a present membership of nearly 30,000. Glancing over the list of former presidents of the association these names stand out among that distinguished group of great lawyers: Joseph H. Choate, Frank B. Kellogg, William Howard Taft, Elihu Root, George Sutherland, John W. Davis, and Charles Evans Hughes.

And there is a long list of other distinguished lawyers whose names are familiar to us all. The president of the association for this year is the Hon. Guerney Newlin, a distinguished lawyer of California, and the secretary of the association is the Hon. William P. MacCracken, of Illinois, better known to you, no doubt, as our active and efficient Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of commercial aviation.

The purpose of the Bar Association is disinterested. Its constitution states that its principal object shall be to advance the science of jurisprudence and to promote the administration of justice and uniformity of legislation. The association meets annually, but continuously throughout each year its committees work actively and without financial reward to better our legal system, improve our laws, and make this a better country for us to live in.

To-night, I have been asked to speak about the legal business of the Federal Government, how it is conducted by the Department of Justice of the United States, and how it touches closely the affairs of all the people. This may seem like a dry subject, but it is worth your while to know something about it. Who knows how soon you may be involved in a legal controversy with the Government, if you are not so involved already?

If you are a taxpayer, or an importer, or engaged in interstate commerce, or performing Government contracts, or selling the Government merchandise, or you have a policy of war-risk insurance, or are interested in public lands, or in being naturalized as a citizen, or in immigration matters, you may have legal business or litigation with the Government and come in contact with the lawyers of the Department of Justice, and, of course, if you are considering using the mails to sell blue-sky securities, or defrauding the Government, or dealing illegally in narcotics, or robbing a national bank, or smuggling, or transporting stolen motor cars in interstate commerce, or are a bootlegger you may well expect to, and we sincerely hope you shall, come in contact with the Department of Justice and have, I trust, an interesting and lively experience.

We have, as you know, a dual system of laws, those enacted by the States and those enacted by Congress. To-night we are considering only the administration of justice in the Federal courts and the enforcement and application of the laws of the United States.

The Department of Justice is not all in the city of Washington. Here are its headquarters and its chief officers, but it has officials and agents throughout the United States. All United States attorneys and their assistants throughout the United States are in this department, discharging their duties under the direction of the Attorney General of the United States.

At the head of the Department of Justice is the Attorney General, now Hon. John Garibaldi Sargent, of Vermont. Next to him comes the Solicitor General of the United States, whose functions I will speak of in a moment. The work of the Department of Justice is placed in various divisions, each headed by an Assistant Attorney General.

There is the division known as the antitrust division, having charge of antitrust and commerce act cases and various other related matters, now headed by the Hon. William J. Donovan, Assistant to the Attorney General, of whom you have all heard, an able lawyer and a distinguished veteran of the World War, and who has enforced the antitrust laws in a constructive way. There is the administrative division, headed by Assistant Attorney General John Marshall, of West Virginia, who has been the Attorney General's right-hand man in all administrative matters. There is the division of taxes and prohibition, headed by the Assistant Attorney General, Mrs. Willebrandt, a sound lawyer and a woman of good judgment. There is the division in charge of defense of suits against the United States in the Court of Claims, headed by Assistant Attorney General Galloway; the division in charge of public lands and Indian affairs, headed by Assistant Attorney General Parmenter; the division in charge of criminal prosecutions, headed by Assistant Attorney General Luhring; the division in charge of admiralty, shipping litigation, war-risk insurance, and many other related matters, headed by Assistant Attorney General Farnum; the division in charge of customs cases, with headquarters at New York City, headed by Assistant Attorney General Lawrence; the division dealing with pardons and paroles and all applications for Executive clemency, and there is a bureau of investigation, whose duty it is to investigate and collect evidence of alleged offenses against the laws of the United States. These Assistant Attorneys General have general supervision over the conduct of the Government's legal business, civil and criminal, in the lower Federal courts, subject, of course, to the general direction of the Attorney General.

The policy of the department during the administration of Attorney General Sargent has been toward what may be called home rule; that is, allowing the United States attorneys in each State and Territory, and who are familiar with local conditions, to be responsible for and have control of the Government's business in their respective districts with as little interference from Washington as possible.

The Attorney General is a member of the President's Cabinet, and his legal adviser, and because of his vast administrative duties has not time to conduct cases in court. He supervises the vast administrative machinery of the department, renders opinions to the President and to the heads of executive departments, makes recommendations to the President on the appointment of judges of the Federal courts and other officials of the Department of Justice. In my judgment, the Executive has no more important single function than that of appointing judges of the Supreme Court and of the inferior courts of the United States, and the Attorney General has a grave responsibility in assisting the President in that matter.

The Solicitor General is by statute made Acting Attorney General in case of the absence or disability of the Attorney General. His principal function, however, is supervision over the civil and criminal litigation of the Government in the appellate courts and particularly in the Supreme Court of the United States. He has charge of all the Government business in that court, which constitutes from 25 to 35 per cent of all the business before it.

Now, just how do Government cases arise in the courts? If it is a criminal matter, it may come to the attention of the United States attorney from some local source and he initiates the prosecution. The offense may be discovered by one of the executive departments of the Government, such as the Treasury Department, and it is then reported to the Attorney General and the Assistant Attorney General in charge of that branch of the work forwards the matter to the United States attorney of the proper district for action. In very important cases or in those in which special knowledge may be required special assistants are sometimes sent to the United States attorneys to aid them. Civil cases arise in many ways. If you think you have overpaid your taxes, or the Government owes you money, you bring a suit against the United States in a United States district court or in the Court of Claims, and lawyers from this department defend it. We may think you owe the United States money and the Attorney General then directs that suit be brought against you in the district in which you reside.

The vast scope of the criminal and civil matters that may arise in the courts under acts of Congress and take the form of litigated cases may only be touched upon here.

We have to deal with the acts to regulate commerce, the Sherman Antitrust Act and its amendments, with the Federal Trade Commission act, with the packers and stockyards act, and with a large mass of legislation dealing with interstate and foreign commerce.

There is the national prohibition act, the complicated system of income tax and other internal revenue laws, the tariff acts, law relating to admiralty and shipping matters, bankruptcy matters and crimes against the bankruptcy laws, civil-service matters, war-risk insurance held by veterans of the World War, cases arising under the national banking acts, the Federal reserve act, the Federal farm loan act, matters connected with insular and territorial affairs, minor regulations of commerce, such as the hours of service act, the 28-hour act, the safety appliance act, the quarantine acts, pure food acts, migratory bird treaty act, the acts relating to the public lands, forest reserves, Indian affairs, reclamation projects, and a vast amount of other legislation which brings the Government into contact with citizens and gives rise to litigation civil and criminal.

An enormous number of cases, civil and criminal, to which the United States is a party is always pending in the Federal courts. Your liberty or your property may at any time be involved in such litigation. The purpose of the United States and of the attorneys from the Department of Justice representing it in such cases is not merely to win. In that respect the Government differs from other litigants. It is usually litigating with its own people. It is inevitable that it should have a little advantage over its adversaries. Because it litigates with its own people, it has a responsibility which does not rest upon the average litigant. It can not afford to win at the expense of justice. There has long been a maxim here in the Department of Justice, attributed to one of my distinguished predecessors, Hon. Frederick W. Lehman, of Missouri, himself a former president of the American Bar Association, that the Government wins a lawsuit whenever justice is done to one of its citizens.

During the last three years, thirty-four times have we gone before the Supreme Court of the United States and expressed the opinion that a lower court was wrong in deciding some question in favor of the Government. In 33 of those cases the Supreme Court agreed with us. Fortunately, in the other, we had sense enough to submit the question to the judgment of the court. This does not mean that we in the department are easy adversaries. If we think the Government is right, and that you are seeking something you are not entitled to, the lawyers for the United States will contest your claim tooth and nail.

In another respect litigation with the Government is unique. A Government may not be sued without its consent. No claim against the United States, however just, may be asserted against it in its courts unless there is an act of Congress permitting such suits to be brought. In times long past that consent has been given grudgingly. In recent years there has been a tendency to let down the bars and to allow citizens to assert in the courts of the United States claims against their Government, and to have them judged by the same rules of law and equity that govern citizens in their business transactions with each other. That is as it should be, and as experience discloses defects in that system amendments to the laws are necessary to be made from time to time, to enable you to obtain complete and speedy justice in the courts in cases arising out of your dealings with your Government. Governments should be held to the same rules of business honesty as are citizens. In the end, Government operations will cost less if it is known that those doing business with it will receive their just dues on an ordinary business basis. The fear that such treatment will not be accorded tends to raise the prices to the Government for all that it requires.

Even if you have no Government litigation of your own, you are interested as a citizen and taxpayer in the proper administration of justice in litigation in which others are involved. You are entitled to the protection afforded by proper enforcement of the criminal laws, and you are interested in seeing that your fellow citizens pay their just dues into the common Treasury and do not extract from it something to which they are not entitled. For example, some two or three years ago there was a group of six tax cases in the Supreme Court of the United States on the outcome of which there depended some $320,000,000 of Treasury funds. The outcome of litigation like that means something to the people of the country generally.

I think it may safely be said that there is no one executive department in the Federal Government that has more influence on governmental operations than has the Department of Justice. This is because that department, by the legal opinions it gives to the President and to the other executive departments, and by the position it takes in the courts on questions of law affecting governmental matters, has an enormous influence in guiding the operations of Government in all the departments and in establishing rules, by judicial decisions, which have a lasting effect upon the course of Government action. The people realize this. They seem to be more sensitive about conditions in this department than about those in some of the others. The administration of justice is not a partisan matter. I am glad to be able to say that during my more than three years of service as Solicitor General not once has any public official, Republican or Democrat, asked me to guide my action as Solicitor General by any political consideration.

Now, what does all this lead to? The point I have been trying to make is that the administration of justice in the Federal courts, in the application and enforcement of that vast system of laws enacted by Congress under the Constitution of the United States is a matter vitally affecting the interests of every citizen, and anything which tends to improve conditions operates to the common benefit.

There are two main factors in the proper administration of justice—one is the personnel and the other is the system. If your judges are able and upright men and the attorneys for the United States are competent and skillful, good results may be obtained from almost any system of practice and procedure. On the other hand, however good the system may be, if the men selected to administer it are not of the right quality, the result is unsatisfactory. These two things you are interested in: First, that the men selected to fill positions in the Federal judiciary and in the Department of Justice throughout the United States are qualified for the places; and, second, that all possible improvements be made in the practice and procedure and in the system of laws under which these tribunals operate. It is in these matters that the American Bar Association is active. Its attention is continuously and persistently directed toward bringing about improvement in our laws and in the administration of justice.

There is always room for improvement. Not a session of Congress passes without committees of the bar association appearing before committees of Congress in support of legislative measures intended to improve the administration of justice, to reduce the expense of litigation, to save time in litigation, and to add to the facilities with which justice may be done. Only yesterday a committee of the association called at the Department of Justice in connection with proposed legislation to divide and reorganize the great eighth judicial circuit of the United States, with a view to expediting the disposition of cases in the Federal courts of that circuit and saving expense to litigants. We want you to take a greater interest in these things, to realize how intimately these matters affect the welfare of our country and the happiness of our people, and how much the stability of our institutions and the preservation of our liberties depend upon our courts and upon the proper administration of justice in them. With your greater interest aroused, we may then expect that whenever you have an opportunity at the polls, or in any other way to exert your influence, you will stand back of any effort by the American Bar Association, or by any disinterested and intelligent group of men directed toward the improvement of our laws and our methods for the administration of justice, and toward helping to preserve our liberties and institutions for our posterity.

THE CENSUS AND THE CIVIL SERVICE

Mr. BRUCE. Mr. President, I desire, if there is no objection, to have inserted in the RECORD an editorial from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch urging the adoption of the amendment which I offered to the census bill with a view to having the entire field force of the Census Bureau brought within the provisions of the Federal merit system of appointment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The editorial is as follows:

CENSUS AND CIVIL SERVICE

Senator BRUCE, of Maryland, has offered an amendment to the census bill, now before Congress, providing for the appointment of special agents, supervisors, supervisors' clerks, enumerators, and interpreters subject to the civil service law. Its purpose is to remove the 1930 census from partisan politics and to insure an accurate count.

In its present form the census bill makes possible an orgy of patronage dispensing. Approximately 100,000 workers are needed in the field force and, unless some safeguard is placed in the law, the Director of the Census and his aides may make appointments for political purposes without any regard for qualifications for the work.

According to the National Civil Service Reform League, a reliable census was obtained in 1920 when, at the request of the Director of the Census, supervisors of the census were selected through the machinery of the United States Civil Service Commission. For the law to give the director such wide discretion might have less happy results next time.

Previous census takings, notably that of 1899, have been scandalously conducted. In 1890 Republican Members of Congress were permitted to choose the field force. A check of its work showed that in New York City large numbers of residents, often entire houses, had been omitted. The inference was that Republican census takers had deliberately underestimated the population of a Democratic city to reduce its membership in Congress. In 1900 in Maryland graveyards were canvassed to obtain additional representation in the house of delegates for the party in power.

Past experience has abundantly proved the desirability of Senator BRUCE'S amendement, not only to assure an honest and reliable count, but to prevent the wasteful use of census funds.

DIVERSION OF COMMERCE FROM AMERICAN PORTS

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, in view of the recent reports submitted to the Senate in response to Senate Resolution 220, and the importance of the subject dealt with in such reports—the diversion of shipping from American to Canadian ports—I ask that an editorial entitled "Canadian Discrimination," printed in the Washington Post Wednesday, February 6, may be inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The editorial is as follows:

CANADIAN DISCRIMINATION

A well-defined difference of opinion between the Shipping Board and the Departments of State and Agriculture is expressed in a joint report submitted to the Senate Tuesday on the subject of diversion of shipping from American to Canadian ports. The Shipping Board and the two departments were joined in a study of conditions by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which functioned more or less as a neutral in furnishing statistical data, and which sides with the departments. All agree that there is diversion of shipping from American to Canadian ports, but the departments assert that its volume is not such as to warrant the Government in offending Canada by attempting retaliatory measures. The Shipping Board, however, takes the position that no matter what the volume of diversion may be it is up to the United States to protect its own shipping by modifying American rules to conform with Canadian practice.

In some respects the report loses force because of the division of opinion. The study was undertaken at the request of the Senate, according to a resolution passed last May, and while no action is anticipated during the present session in view of the imminence of adjournment, the matter may come up for discussion in connection with the tariff bill now being formulated by the House Ways and Means Committee. If the report had been positive in its recommendations, one way or the other, action in the matter might more readily have been obtained. Under the circumstances both those who believe that the United States should adopt retaliatory measures against Canada and those who believe otherwise will find comfort.

The report concedes the inequality of the arrangement by which Canadian ports are favored in the matter of mail rates, grain inspection, preferential customs regulations, and preferential schedules dealing with other parts of the British Empire. Against this situation, however, it is pointed out that a far greater volume of Canadian products is shipped through American ports, largely offsetting any disadvantages which American rail lines and shipping companies may suffer by reason of British imperial preference. In its minority report, however, the Shipping Board asserts that "the right to remedy rests on basic principles which justify their application and enforcement irrespective of statistical information concerning the extent of the consequences resulting from their violation."

A way has been opened for further debate on and consideration of the subject of diversion of shipping from American to Canadian ports. The friendship that exists between the United States and Canada should not be endangered by hasty or ill-conceived action, but, on the other hand, the shipping industry is entitled to every protection with which the Government can surround it. Congress must be the final judge of whether action is advisable or necessary.

LANDS FOR ADDITION TO BEAL NURSERY, EAST TAWAS, MICH.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10374) for the acquisition of lands for an addition to the Beal Nursery at East Tawas, Mich., and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. McNARY. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. McNARY, Mr. CAPPER, and Mr. SMITH conferees on the part of the Senate.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I ask that the District of Columbia appropriation bill be laid before the Senate and proceeded with.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 16422) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, repeating my request of last evening, I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that the bill be read for amendment, and that the committee amendments may be first considered.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, there are very few committee amendments, are there not?

Mr. BINGHAM. Not a great many.

Mr. HARRISON. I make no objection to the request of the Senator, but I do feel that bills of this nature ought to be read, at least a little, so that we may know something about them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Dill	Kendrick	Shipstead
Barkley	Edge	Keyes	Simmons
Bayard	Fess	King	Smith
Bingham	Frazier	McKellar	Steck
Black	George	McMaster	Steiwer
Blaine	Gerry	McNary	Stephens
Blease	Gillett	Moses	Swanson
Borah	Glass	Neely	Thomas, Idaho
Bratton	Glenn	Norbeck	Thomas, Okla.
Brookhart	Goff	Norris	Trammell
Broussard	Greene	Oddie	Tydings
Bruce	Hale	Overman	Tyson
Burton	Harris	Phipps	Vandenberg
Capper	Harrison	Pine	Wagner
Caraway	Hastings	Pittman	Walsh, Mass.
Copeland	Hawes	Ransdell	Walsh, Mont.
Couzens	Hayden	Reed, Pa.	Warren
Curtis	Heflin	Robinson, Ind.	Waterman
Dale	Johnson	Sackett	Watson
Deneen	Jones	Sheppard	Wheeler

Mr. JONES. I desire to announce that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. METCALF] is absent on account of illness.

Mr. NORRIS. I wish to announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HOWELL] is detained from the Senate on account of illness. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. FRAZIER. My colleague the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] is still detained from the Senate on account of illness. This announcement may stand for the day.

Mr. BLAINE. I desire to announce that my colleague the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is unavoidably absent. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

Mr. TRAMMELL. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. FLETCHER] is unavoidably detained from the Senate. I ask that this announcement may stand for the day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

WAR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, on yesterday, in the consideration of the War Department appropriation bill, I offered an amendment appropriating $250,000 relating to the protection of the banks of the Missouri River at or near Niobrara, Nebr. I am informed by the Chief Clerk that the amendment which I sent to the desk, and which technically went into the bill when the amendment was agreed to, omitted to state the amount, $250,000. In order to correct the omission I ask unanimous consent that the votes by which the amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill was ordered to a third reading and passed may be reconsidered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the votes are reconsidered.

Mr. NORRIS. I now ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment was agreed to may be reconsidered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. NORRIS. I now ask that perfected amendment, with the numerals "$250,000,' be considered and agreed to, as I supposed had been done yesterday.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment as perfected will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 79, after line 24, insert:

For bank protection for the control of floods and the prevention of erosion of the Missouri River at and near the town of Niobrara in the State of Nebraska, there is hereby appropriated the sum of $250,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary; said work to be carried on under the control and supervision of the Chief of Engineers of the War Department: Provided, That the local interests shall contribute one-third of the cost of said work.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD FUND

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, on yesterday I submitted the resolution (S. Res. 323) relating to funds of the Federal Reserve Board, and it went over at the request of the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS]. I hope there will be no objection to the consideration of my resolution this morning.

Mr. CURTIS. If there is to be no debate, I shall have no objection.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I would like to inquire of the Senator from Alabama to what particular action of the Federal Reserve Board his resolution would apply? I wonder if the Senator from Alabama knows that there has been no change in the rediscount rate of the Federal reserve bank since July of last year, now nearly eight months ago.

Mr. HEFLIN. I was under the impression that it was more recent, but I learned yesterday that the date was July, 1928.

Mr. GLASS. I wonder also if the Senator from Alabama is aware of the fact that there is on the calendar, and high up on the calendar, Senate Resolution 113, offered by the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], of which the Senator's resolution is a paraphrase, and which was reported as long ago as last May from the Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate. I ask whether the Senator thinks, in the absence of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], that his resolution should take precedence?

Mr. HEFLIN. Certainly, Mr. President, the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin was reported last May; but my resolution deals with the worst gambling scheme that has been inaugurated in this country in half a century. It is such a notorious situation that the Federal Reserve Board has felt called upon to issue a statement to stop this thing and to call on bankers to aid in doing so. My resolution merely asks the Federal Reserve Board to give the Senate any suggestions they have to make, or any information, in order that the Senate may know what it can do, if anything. I am not suggesting what should be done.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, I desire to say that what I am suggesting is that, in my view, it would be discourtesy to the Senator from Wisconsin, in his absence, to give precedence to a resolution that is a mere paraphrase of his resolution, which has already been favorably reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency, and is now on the calendar. If the Senator from Alabama will ask unanimous consent to consider and have passed the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin, I shall have no objection.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I did not know the Senator from Wisconsin had introduced a resolution of this kind.

Mr. GLASS. The resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin is almost textually in the words of the resolution of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I introduced my resolution because of what I have been reading in the press, and because of the impression that I have that something is radically wrong in the gambling now going on that is draining the money out of the channels of legitimate business in every State in the Union.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I quite agree with the Senator from Alabama that there is something going on which is wrong, and it has persistently gone on for the past two years. The resolution offered by the Senator from Wisconsin suggests that the Federal Reserve Board do just exactly what it has now belatedly done. Furthermore, it requests information from the Federal Reserve Board almost textually in the very language the Senator from Alabama now proposes to ask it.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama pardon me a moment?

Mr. HEFLIN. I will.

Mr. SIMMONS. Let me suggest to the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] that if the situation which the Senator from Wisconsin had in view when he offered his resolution has reached an acute climax in his absence, why not offer that resolution as a substitute for the resolution of the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. GLASS. Why should the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin be offered as a substitute, when that resolution has been favorably reported by the Banking and Currency Committee, is now on the calendar, and will accomplish precisely the object that is proposed to be accomplished by the resolution of the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. SIMMONS. I agree with the Senator from Virginia, if we could now consider the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. GLASS. We can consider it just as easily as we can the resolution of the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SIMMONS. I would assist the Senator in trying to have it considered, but if we can not do that, and the resolution of the Senator from Alabama shall be taken up, then I would suggest that the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin, being of the same text and purpose, be offered as a substitute for the resolution of the Senator from Alabama. It is certainly necessary that we should take some action in reference to the matter.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, if in order, in lieu of the proposition of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1164, being Senate Resolution 113, submitted by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], favorably reported by the Banking and Currency Committee, and now standing high up on the calendar.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I want to read the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin. Nearly all of his resolution was stricken out, I presume, by the Banking and Currency Committee.

Mr. GLASS. No; none of the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin was stricken out, but the preamble to the resolution was stricken out.

Mr. HEFLIN. Yes. The resolution—what little of it is left—now reads:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that the Federal Reserve Board should admonish all Federal reserve banks to take steps to advise against further expansion of loans by member banks for purely speculative purposes.

Then there were stricken out three more lines, going down to the second resolving clause of the resolution, which reads:

Resolved, That the Federal Reserve Board be directed to report to the Congress what legislation, if any, is required to prevent the future excessive use of the funds and credit of the Federal reserve system for speculative purposes.

The resolution offered by me reads in this way:

Whereas in press dispatches recently, the Federal Reserve Board has complained that money is being drawn from the channels of business and used for speculative purposes, and that some of said speculation is illegitimate and harmful; and

Whereas said Federal Reserve Board, in its efforts to correct what it regards as an evil in this matter, has increased the rediscount rate: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Federal Reserve Board is hereby requested to give to the Senate its reason for increasing the rediscount rate and to give any other information and suggestions that it feels would be helpful in securing legislation necessary to correct the evil complained of and prevent illegitimate and harmful speculation.

The resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin undertakes to have the Senate advise the Federal Reserve Board what it should do with this fund while my resolution simply calls on the board to tell the Senate what it is that is going on to which it objects and to make any suggestion that it wishes to make that would be helpful to us in handling the matter. That is all. They are two different resolutions.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HEFLIN. I yield.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, we expect to adjourn to-night; and in that event, the resolution of the Senator from Alabama will come up in regular order on Monday. Will not the Senator allow it to go over until then? A recess having been taken last night, the resolution would properly go over until Monday, under the rules.

Mr. HEFLIN. I think it is a matter that ought to be acted on as early as possible.

Mr. CURTIS. One day's delay will not be harmful, and Monday morning the resolution of the Senator will come up in the regular order, and will be before the Senate in the regular way.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I think the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin ought to have been acted on in May of last year when the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin was favorably reported by the Banking and Currency Committee.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, as a matter of fact, if I may interrupt the Senator from Virginia or the Senator from Alabama, if he has the floor, the so-called La Follette resolution provides that the Federal Reserve Board shall report to Congress—in fact, it directs them to do so—what legislation, if any, would be helpful in this situation. So, after all is said and done, that is all that could now be done, namely, obtain recommendations as to the desirability of possible legislation.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Alabama will allow the resolution to go over until Monday. It will not properly be before the Senate until that time, and we should like to go on with the appropriation bill.

Mr. HEFLIN. I allowed the resolution to go over on yesterday with the understanding that we would take it up this morning. I do not quite understand why the Senator from Virginia is so opposed to my resolution being acted upon.

Mr. GLASS. I am not opposed to the Senator's resolution being acted on, but I think it would be a distinct discourtesy to the Senator from Wisconsin to have another Senator's resolution take precedence of his resolution, which is now on the calendar with a favorable report and relates to exactly the same subject.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I should like to amend the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin by incorporating in it the first part of my resolution and ask that it be adopted. They cover different subjects.

Mr. CURTIS. I have no objection, if it can be done without debate; but I do think we ought to go on with the appropriation bill. The resolution can be considered on Monday.

Mr. HEFLIN. I offer my resolution as an amendment to the resolution of the Senator from Wisconsin.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

Mr. GLASS. Let it go over until Monday. I will confer with the Senator from Alabama and see if we can arrive at a satisfactory arrangement.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made. The resolution will go over.

Mr. HEFLIN subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the La Follette resolution which was referred to this morning in connection with my resolution relating to the Federal Reserve Board, which I endeavored to have considered. I ask to have the part which was stricken out printed as well as the amendments made by the committee.

There being no objection, the resolution as submitted by Mr. LA FOLLETTE May 12, 1928, was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[Omit the part in black brackets and insert the part printed in italic]

[Whereas the total loans secured by stocks and bonds of the 51 member banks in the New York Federal reserve district on January 11, 1928, reached the unprecedented total of $3,819,573,000; and

Whereas the largest part of this sum is used for speculation on the New York Stock Exchange, as stated by the Federal Reserve Board in its annual report for 1926 as follows:

"The largest growth, both absolutely and relatively, was in security loans, which increased by about 66 per cent during the period. That to this growth in loans on securities represents to a considerable extent an increased volume of credit used in financing transactions in securities at the New York Stock Exchange is indicated by the rapid growth during the period of loans to brokers and dealers in securities in the New York market."

and

Whereas during the past year such speculative loans made through the Federal reserve system have increased more than a billion dollars, and during the past seven years more than $3,000,000,000; and

Whereas the reports of the New York Federal Reserve Bank reveal that $1,502,580,000 of these loans on stocks and bonds is for the account of out-of-town banks, representing credit transferred from other parts of the country to be used in New York for speculative purposes; and

Whereas the inevitable result of the utilization of the funds of the Federal reserve system for speculative purposes is to restrict the amount of credit available for legitimate commercial purposes, as is indicated by the fact that the amount of commercial paper outstanding as reported to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York actually decreased from a total of $925,379,000 in October, 1924, to $610,945,000 in October, 1927; and

Whereas the intent of the Congress in the creation of the Federal reserve system was to prevent its use for the encouragement of support of purely speculative operations, as is evidenced by the following paragraph of section 13 of the Federal reserve act:

"Upon the indorsement of any of its member banks, which shall be deemed a waiver of demand, notice and protest by such bank as to its own indorsement exclusively, any Federal reserve bank may discount notes, drafts, and bills of exchange arising out of actual commercial transactions; that is, notes, drafts, and bills of exchange issued or drawn for agricultural, industrial, or commercial purposes, or the proceeds of which have been used, or are to be used, for such purposes, the Federal Reserve Board to have the right to determine or define the character of the paper thus eligible for discount, within the meaning of this act. Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to prohibit such notes, drafts, and bills of exchange, secured by staple agricultural products, or other goods, wares, or merchandise from being eligible for such discount, and the notes, drafts, and bills of exchange of factors issued as such making advances exclusively to producers of staple agricultural products in their raw state shall be eligible for such discount; but such definition shall not include notes, drafts, or bills covering merely investments or issued or drawn for the purpose of carrying or trading in stocks, bonds, or other investment securities, except bonds and notes of the Government of the United States": Now, therefore, be it]

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that the Federal Reserve Board should [immediately] admonish all Federal reserve banks to take steps to [restrict the] advise against further expansion of loans by member banks for purely speculative purposes. [and as rapidly as is compatible with the financial stability of the Nation require the contraction of such loans to the lowest possible amount; and be it further]

Resolved, That the Federal Reserve Board be directed to report to the Congress what legislation, if any, is required to prevent the future excessive use of the funds and credit of the Federal reserve system for speculative purposes.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 16422) making an appropriation for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, under the order heretofore agreed to, the formal reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. DILL. I thought I objected to that request before the roll was called. I tried to do so.

Mr. BINGHAM. The order was entered yesterday evening. If the Senator will look at the RECORD, he will find that to be the case.

Mr. DILL. The Senator asked for such an order this morning.

Mr. BINGHAM. If the Senator will look at the RECORD, he will find the request was made yesterday, and it was so ordered.

Mr. DILL. I was acting on the Senator's request made this morning.

Mr. BINGHAM. It was my mistake, Mr. President.

Mr. DILL. I think the bill ought to be read. It is a very important measure and contains large appropriations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FESS in the chair). The first amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 2, line 7, after the words "in addition," to strike out "$9,000,000" and insert "$10,000,000," so as to read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to defray the expenses of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, any revenue (not including the proportionate share of the United States in any revenue arising as the result of the expenditure of appropriations made for the fiscal year 1924 and prior fiscal years) now required by law to be credited to the District of Columbia and the United States in the same proportion that each contributed to the activity or source from whence such revenue was derived shall be credited wholly to the District of Columbia, and, in addition, $10,000,000 is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be advanced July 1, 1929, and all the remainder out of the combined revenues of the District of Columbia, and the tax rate in effect in the fiscal year 1929 on real estate and tangible personal property subject to taxation in the District of Columbia shall be continued for the fiscal year 1930, namely:

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I ask for an explanation from the Senator having the bill in charge as to the reason for this increase. Senators who are interested in this matter may have read the very able and convincing speech of Representative SIMMONS in the House of Representatives in regard to this item. I should like to know the reason why the Senate Committee on Appropriations changed the amount from $9,000,000 to $10,000,000, thus imposing an additional $1,000,000 burden upon the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I shall be very glad to tell the Senator why the committee so acted. The Senator will recall that, under the suggestion of the late Representative Madden, the United States Bureau of Efficiency was requested to transmit to the Committee on Appropriations a report on the fiscal relations between the Government of the United States and the District of Columbia. On page 5 of the report of the Bureau of Efficiency the following comment is made:

We will say, however, that in our opinion the solution of the problem of fiscal relations lies in determining the Federal Government's liability toward the cost of operation and maintenance of the city of Washington, D. C., along two lines, namely, (1) its tax liability as a municipal taxpayer of Washington in connection with the ordinary costs of government of the municipality, and (2) its liability on account of the loss of revenue and on account of extraordinary expenditures occasioned by the fact that Washington is the National Capital.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, right there I want to ask the Senator a question. The Senator does not agree with either one of those statements, does he? He does not agree, in the first place, that the Government has a liability as a taxpayer, because it has no such liability; it does not pay taxes anywhere; and next as to the withdrawal of its property from the tax list. The Senator would not indorse either of those statements, would he? I am not now objecting to the $10,000,000 appropriation, but I want to ask if the Senator would indorse either of those statements?

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator from Connecticut thinks that the language employed was unfortunate, but he does agree with the idea underlying the language.

Mr. CARAWAY. The theory upon which the Government pays is simply one of donating to the District of Columbia as it might donate to any other cause, is it not? There is no other liability. The word "liability" means some legal obligation on the part of the Government.

Mr. BINGHAM. The committee believes that there is a certain liability on the part of the Federal Government to pay toward the cost of operating and maintaining the National Capital.

Mr. CARAWAY. I mean a legal obligation. Does the Senator think there is a legal obligation?

Mr. BINGHAM. Toward maintaining the expenses of the National Capital; yes.

Mr. CARAWAY. That is a legal liability, is it?

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator is a lawyer and I am not, and I fear he is likely to get me into deep water.

Mr. CARAWAY. Very well; I will not ask the question. I was just trying to get the theory behind it. I beg the Senator's pardon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection——

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I am not sure what the Chair means when he says "without objection." There is objection; we are discussing this amendment. The Chair is a little too premature, if the Chair will pardon me for so saying.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator from Connecticut desires to read a little further from the report of the Bureau of Efficiency, although he hesitates to do so in view of the objection just raised by the Senator from Arkansas. The report goes on to say:

The liability of the Federal Government as a municipal taxpayer——

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SIMMONS. I desire to say that I am entirely in sympathy with the liberality of the committee. I agree with the Senator from Arkansas that there is not any legal liability in a purely technical sense, but I think there is a moral liability which is just as strong as, if not stronger than, a legal liability.

Mr. BINGHAM. I agree with the Senator. There is no legal liability whatsoever.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield.

Mr. KING. In view of the statement made by the Senator from North Carolina, I do not quite understand what he means by the phrase "moral obligation." There is a legal and a moral obligation upon the property owners of the District of Columbia to pay a reasonable tax for the expenses of maintenance of the District of Columbia. When they pay a tax comparable to that paid by citizens of the United States generally, and there is a deficit left, then, in my opinion, the Federal Government should meet that deficit. I have always taken the position, however—and I think it is the sound and the just position—that the owners of property in the District of Columbia—and they are profiting enormously from the Federal expenditures here; more than $150,000,000 is expended in the District annually—should pay a reasonable tax upon their property, tangible and intangible; and then, after that tax has been paid, if there were $50,000,000 deficit—of course, I am just illustrating my point; there could not be that amount, of course—the Federal Government should pay it. But to say that there is any moral obligation upon the part of the Government to pay until the taxpayers, who are the beneficiaries of the generosity and the contributions and the expenditures of the Government, have paid the reasonable tax of which I have spoken, is something as to which I can not agree with the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, the Senator has said that if there is a deficit after the District has imposed reasonable taxation upon the property of its citizens, however large that deficit may be—nine millions, ten millions, or fifty millions—the Government should assume the balance. He admits some sort of an obligation, either a legal obligation or a moral obligation, of the Government; in the case he puts, an obligation to pay a much larger sum than is provided in the report of the committee.

I said there was a moral obligation. I base that statement upon broad principles, the first being that this is the Capital of the Nation, and all the people of the United States are interested in its government, in its progress, in its development. The Government has located here in the District property of enormous value that is not subject to direct taxation on the part of the people of the District of Columbia; and while the District of Columbia may receive some benefit by reason of the Government's activities here, so the people of every other section of this country receive benefits from the activities of the Government, wherever those activities may take place.

It makes no difference, however, whether the obligation be legal or moral; the Senator from Utah admits that the Government is liable for whatever amount is necessary properly to conduct the government of the District of Columbia after the people of this District have paid upon their property a reasonable amount of taxation.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me, I made no such admission. I said I should favor it as an act of generosity.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, in connection with what has just been said, I desire to call the attention of Senators to Table 5 of the document entitled "Fiscal Relations Between the Government of the United States and the District of Columbia," as prepared by the Bureau of Efficiency, in which the situation in Washington is contrasted with the situation in other cities of similar size. They have taken some 12 or 15 American cities approximating Washington in size to show what the citizens of those cities have to pay in the way of taxation, and what they are confronted with in the way of exempt property.

It is pointed out in Table 5 that while the average ratio of exempt to taxable real property for all cities in the United States of this size, not including Washington, is 17.35 per cent, and while cities almost equal in size, like the city of Pittsburgh, which is a little bit larger, have a ratio of exempt-tax property of 17.26 per cent, and Buffalo, which is very nearly the same size, has a ratio of 17.33 per cent, and Newark, which is a little bit smaller, has a ratio of 15.29 per cent, and Minneapolis, which is about the same size as Newark, has a ratio of 15.06 per cent, if we count all Government property in Washington that is legally exempt the ratio is 54.09 per cent, or three times as much as in any other city of similar size.

Mr. CARAWAY. The Senator realizes that in that they take into consideration the streets and parks.

Mr. BINGHAM. Not the streets, Mr. President.

Mr. CARAWAY. I used to be on the town council, and that was the process then of reaching it; and I rather imagine they have not changed it.

Mr. BINGHAM. No, Mr. President; this is the report of the Bureau of Efficiency.

Mr. CARAWAY. I know; I read it. I think I know what is in it.

Mr. BINGHAM. If one takes away from the amount of exempt property that which is used by the Federal Government alone, and leaves merely that which is used by the District, and the parks but not the streets, one finds the proportion to be still 19.74 per cent, or a very considerable amount over that of the average city of this size.

Now, let us take these figures in a little bit different way.

The city of Buffalo has a population of 553,000. The city of Washington has a population estimated at 525,000; so that they are very closely related in size of population. In the city of Buffalo the total amount of exempt real property is $178,000,000, in round numbers. In the city of Washington the total amount of exempt property is $604,000,000. If we do not consider the amount used by the National Government itself, the amount still remains at $283,000,000, or nearly $110,000,000 more exempt property in Washington than in the city of Buffalo.

A similar comparison may be made with the city of Newark, which is a little bit smaller than Washington, where the amount of exempt property is only $104,000,000.

It is for these reasons, Mr. President, that the committee believes that it is proper that the Federal Government should make a gift to the city of Washington, in lieu of any taxation—for which it may not be legally liable, but for which I entirely agree with the Senator from North Carolina it is morally liable—of an amount of money corresponding to the difference between what the citizens of any city in the United States of similar size have to pay and what the citizens of Washington have to pay.

The amount of $1,000,000, I may say, is made up in this way: According to the statement of the Bureau of Efficiency——

Mr. COUZENS. What page is the Senator reading from?

Mr. BINGHAM. Page 5, at the present moment, of the pamphlet on the fiscal relations between the Government of the United States and the District of Columbia. On page 5 it is shown that if the Federal Government paid the local taxes on its real property, they would amount to $5,452,767. If it paid such taxes on its tangible personal property, they would amount to $1,536,315. Of course, to pay on all its intangible personal property would be a ridiculous thing, because of the enormous amount of that in the vaults of the Treasury; so the Bureau of Efficiency took a figure equal to that of the tangible personal property, because of the fact that in most business concerns it has been found that the tangible personal property is about equal to the intangible personal property; and the taxation on that would amount to $451,857, or a total of $7,440,939.

That may be said to be the amount with which the United States Government might be properly charged as a taxpayer if it were a taxpayer. As a matter of fact, in the bill as it came from the House, and in the appropriation act under which we are operating for the present fiscal year, there is a lump-sum contribution of $9,000,000. This leaves an amount of $1,559,061 to be applied against other charges, not legal but moral or ethical, which may be made against the Federal Government.

The two principal items which may be considered in this connection are the loss of tax revenue on account of excess ordinary real property exemptions and, second, the cost of excess park acquisitions and maintenance.

The first of these items, the account of excess ordinary real property exemptions, I have briefly referred to; and it may be seen that over a city of similar size the city of Washington has an excess of something over $110,000,000 worth of exempt property, apart from that owned and used by the United States Government, more than exists in similar cities. It seemed reasonable to the committee that a rate should be charged against this exemption which would amount, at the rate of 17 mills, to something like $1,700,000, which more than uses up the difference in the lump-sum contribution between the $9,000,000 and the $7,440,000 which are held to be due as municipal taxes. Supposing that that cancels the one against the other, we then have the other item, the cost of excess park acquisitions and maintenance.

The Bureau of Efficiency have provided, on page 7, Table 1, of the document on Fiscal Relations, a statement with regard to park area and its relation to the population in regard to these cities of similar size, which seems to me to be very illuminating.

The cities nearest to Washington in size are the cities of Buffalo, Milwaukee, and Newark. In Buffalo, with a population of 553,000, there are 24,000 acres of land in the parks, or 1 acre of park to 332 of population. In Milwaukee the figure is 1 acre of park to 433 of population. In Newark it is 1 acre of park to 596 of population. Please bear those figures in mind and notice the difference. In Washington it is 1 acre of park to 140 of population. In other words, the park area in Washington is twice as large as that in cities of similar size. That is because this is the National Capital, and the parks here in a way are national parks. All the national parks are paid for by the Federal Government, without regard to taxation on the States in which they are located, or on the neighboring communities, and by looking over the appropriation bills and ascertaining the amount appropriated for the acquisition of parks and their maintenance, and deducting therefrom an amount which a city of similar size might properly be charged with, the committee finds the difference to be about $1,000,000. That accounts for the $1,000,000 which the committee added to the bill.

I hope that the Senate will agree with the committee that that is a fair allotment from the Federal Government to assist the city of Washington in maintaining the extraordinary burden of exempt property, the park property which is now maintained here because this is the National Capital.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield a moment before he takes his seat?

Mr. BINGHAM. Certainly.

Mr. TYDINGS. I would like to call to the attention of the Senate, and get a word from the Senator in reply, to a situation which exists between Maryland and the District government.

Some time ago Congress passed an act creating a National Park and Planning Commission, and over in Maryland we were requested to create a similar commission, so that the two commissions could work together. I believe it is perfectly obvious that the time is near at hand when there will not be sufficient land in the District of Columbia of the kind we would like to have for parks in this vicinity. The suburbs are building up very rapidly. With that in mind the Maryland Park and Planning Commission extended theoretically Rock Creek Park, the addition consisting of 700 acres of ground, all in Maryland, and that property was offered to the District of Columbia without a cent of cost, with no charge whatsoever, dedicated and handed on a silver platter to the District of Columbia. Of course, the land is in Maryland, but it is an extension of Rock Creek Park.

The people of Maryland having given that land, which has an appraised value of a million dollars, to the District government for nothing, they felt that they had a right to ask the District government to build roads through it, not just to take it and do nothing with it at all. If they are going to do nothing with it, if they are not going to utilize it as a park, it is obviously unfair to ask or expect the people of Maryland to part with the land.

The amendment covering that matter which I submitted to the Appropriations Committee for some reason or other did not receive favorable action at this session of Congress. I do not believe there is a section of land around Washington that is as desirable as an extension of the present Rock Creek Park. If it is not gotten in hand before it is developed, or built up or sold to some one who does not care anything about the park, and it is wanted later, it will be practically impossible to acquire it.

Had the people of the State of Maryland interested come before the Senate and asked that Washington pay for this land, our case would probably have been very weak; but when they come before the Senate and say, "We give you this land, which your own commission, created by act of Congress, thinks you ought to have as a proper extension of the parks of the city of Washington, and all we ask you to do is to utilize it as a park, to build a road or two through the property, that is all," I think we were deserving of better treatment than we received, with all due respect to the committee.

Colonel Grant, the chairman of the Park and Planning Commission of the District, has strongly recommended that this gift be accepted by the Congress on behalf of the Federal Government. It will be too late, perhaps, two or three or four or five years from now, to acquire that land. The people of Maryland are still ready to tender it to the Federal Government free of any cost whatever. They do not ask the Government to spend a cent for it, although it will be a continuation of the present Rock Creek Park.

The property was surveyed by the Washington Park and Planning Commission. They defined what they thought should be the proper boundaries of that park. Our own local commission has approved it. The land has all been acquired. It is ready to be dedicated. I am only rising now to obtain, if possible, an expression from the Senator from Connecticut as to what may be the committee's attitude, in order that those interested may know how to proceed at the next session of Congress in the event they want to renew the offer at that time.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, in reply to the Senator from Maryland, I should like to state that the committee was informed by Mr. Warner, who appeared in behalf of the Senator's amendment, that in order for the Government to secure this additional land for Rock Creek Park, the Maryland Legislature, now in session, would have to repeal certain legislation which it passed in 1927, to the effect that the title to no land used for park purposes could be in the United States. Therefore it would seem that the first thing necessary to be done would be for the Maryland Legislature to repeal that act and make it possible for the United States to hold that land.

Mr. TYDINGS. May I interrupt the Senator right on that point?

Mr. BINGHAM. Certainly.

Mr. TYDINGS. My amendment was so worded that not a thing would be done until that action was taken; but the Senator can not expect the people to give the land and go through all this process without some acceptance on the part of the Federal Government.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Federal Government, in my opinion, should not put any pressure on a State to change its laws.

Mr. TYDINGS. No pressure is being put on the State.

Mr. BINGHAM. I believe in the rights of the States, and I believe the Senator from Maryland also does. If we were to bribe the State of Maryland to change its laws, I think it would be a very bad precedent. Furthermore, the committee felt that this was a matter which should be brought before the proper standing committees of the Congress and that a bill should be reported, either from the District Committee or from the committee which deals with the national parks, authorizing an appropriation, before any would be made. If that were done, and the authorization were made, so far as I am able to speak for myself, I should be very glad, indeed, to see Rock Creek Park extended, and to take advantage of the very generous offer of the people who hold the land in that vicinity. I should hope, however, that the strip to be acquired might be wide enough so that the roads to be built might run through the park and not merely on the edge of the park.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am glad the Senator has made that statement, because I think it will facilitate the solution of this matter. Aside from the fact that Maryland is my State, and I am very anxious to further its beauty in any way I possibly can, I do feel that, regardless of that fact, every Senator realizes that the time will come when parks will be of great value to Washington, and that the time to acquire the land for them is now, not after the outlying sections are built up and the land becomes expensive and there are other encumbrances in the way.

I feel that the action of the people of Maryland in giving to the District this plot of ground without any charge whatsoever makes the case pretty strong. When I see laws enacted by overwhelming majorities refunding money which States have expended without any authority from the Federal Government whatsoever, the amounts running into the millions of dollars, I do feel that I am well within the spirit of the Senate at this session when I come in and say, "Here is a park that will cost nothing, and all we ask you to do is not to take it and do nothing with it. If you really want it, develop it."

Mr. BINGHAM. In the first place, it would cost $400,000 for roads. In the second place, it does not seem quite fair to me, speaking for myself alone, that this should be charged up against the District of Columbia. I believe absolutely in having a national park in the vicinity referred to by the Senator from Maryland, but I think that the amount should be appropriated by the Federal Government as part of its normal appropriations for the upkeep of and roads in national parks.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think the Senator's point is very well taken. However, it is worthy of this observation, that the people of the District of Columbia would, more than any other people, enjoy the park if it were built, and it would not in any sense be a national park as Glacier Park or Yellowstone Park or any of the other larger parks happen to be. It would be a park for the city of Washington and for its people; and I do hope that at the next session of Congress the Senate will remember this brief explanation, and that the committee will cooperate with those people who are trying to extend this beautiful park, the finest park in this city, particularly when it can be acquired at no expense whatsoever to the Federal Government.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TYDINGS. I am glad to yield.

Mr. KING. I was wondering whether this matter had been brought to the attention of the District Committee of either the House or the Senate. I am a member of the District Committee of the Senate, and I confess that this is the first time the matter has been brought to my attention.

Mr. TYDINGS. It was not brought directly to the attention of those committees, I will say to the Senator from Utah; but Congress passed an act creating a National Park and Planning Commission, and in that act, which came before the Committee on the District of Columbia, that commission was charged with looking about and making recommendations for carrying out a general scheme for beautifying Washington. That commission, in order that the people of Maryland might cooperate with them, requested that we in Maryland have a commission also. We have appointed the commission, and the two commissions have met and looked over all the environment of Washington, and out of the total survey they said that this extension of Rock Creek Park would be the most desirable of any that had been brought before them. Whereupon a movement was launched by our citizens to acquire that land and to have it all dedicated to the Federal Government, and in the amendment which I submitted it was made a condition precedent that the Legislature of Maryland should give the District the right to own that land.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator?

Mr. TYDINGS. Certainly.

Mr. NORRIS. I am very much interested in the explanation the Senator has given, but I would like to suggest to the Senator from Maryland that, at least as I understand it, the Appropriations Committee of the Senate would not properly have jurisdiction of the matter.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think that is right.

Mr. NORRIS. Instead of presenting the matter to the Committee on Appropriations, it seems to me the Senator ought to take it up with the District Committee of the Senate.

Mr. TYDINGS. I think the Senator is perfectly correct in that suggestion, and I thank him for it. I did not want to let this opportunity go by, there not being time now, perhaps, to get a bill through, without letting the Maryland people know why it had not been acted upon, so that they would be in a position to proceed with more promise of success at the next session.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, has the Senator from Connecticut concluded what he desired to say upon this question?

Mr. BINGHAM. Yes, Mr. President.

Mr. NORRIS. Before the Senator from Utah proceeds, would he have any objection if I submitted a question to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. KING. Certainly not.

Mr. NORRIS. I am very much interested in the figures the Senator has given, but it seems to me the proper test in deciding a question of taxation is a comparison of the amount of taxes, or the rate of taxation, in the District of Columbia, with the amount paid on the same valuation in cities of similar size outside. If the Senator has given that information, it was when I was not in the Chamber.

Mr. BINGHAM. I am very glad to give the Senator the information. It is found in Table 3, on page 9, in the document relating to the fiscal relations between the Government and the District of Columbia.

In cities of a similar size the average adjusted tax rate for all cities, not including Washington, is 17.29. The rate for Washington is 17. In other words, the Washington rate is a little bit below that of the average city. There are some cities, like the city of Milwaukee, for instance, which has very nearly the same population, where the rate is 15.67.

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, to give that rate is just to give the rate itself, but that is not sufficient, because the valuation must be taken into consideration. We ought to know about the valuation.

Mr. BINGHAM. I will say to the Senator that it is my understanding that the Bureau of Efficiency attempted to make an adjusted valuation in order to be as fair as possible.

Mr. BLAINE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BINGHAM. I yield.

Mr. BLAINE. I think that there is a grievous error made in the calculations referred to by the Senator. For instance, as to the city of Milwaukee, if I am correctly informed, the bureau has used the taxes for city purposes only. But it must be remembered that in all those instances there should be added the county tax, the State tax, and in some cases in our State the school-district tax. I am quite certain as to Milwaukee that if all those various items were taken into account the rate would exceed 15 mills.

Mr. KING. Of course, there would be the income tax and special assessments as well.

Mr. BLAINE. I do not believe the income tax enters into the situation unless we take the total of the income tax paid into the State treasury and then apportion it upon the basis of the total assessed valuation of all property within the State.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me, there are many persons in the city of Milwaukee, because it is a wealthy city, who pay an income tax to the State. The State of Wisconsin also has an inheritance tax. These taxes are properly chargeable against the inhabitants of the city when a comparison is instituted.

Mr. BLAINE. Only in the proportion that the assessed valuation bears to the total State valuation.

Mr. KING. I would like to say to the Senator from Kentucky that the rate of taxes in many of the cities of the United States is from 35 to 45 mills. This includes municipal, county, State, and district school taxes. In the city in which I live my recollection is the total tax amounts to more than 4 per cent. Other cities in the United States pay as large a tax as that. And I believe that the valuation of property in such cities is as high or higher than that in the District of Columbia.

Mr. BINGHAM. I am sorry that I did not emphasize the adjusted figures. I was desirous of saving time. The actual tax rate for the city of Milwaukee, including county and State levies, is 29 mills, but the Bureau of Efficiency, if the Senator will do me the courtesy to study their tables, has endeavored to compare things as nearly as possible in a fair light with their adjusted valuation, bearing in mind the fact of the assessed value of property in some of the cities being only 50 per cent of its fair value, and so on. It is rather too complicated to go into at the present time and I merely tried to give the general result, which is that the citizens of Washington are paying a tax slightly less than in other cities of the same size, but they are paying a fair tax in view of all the adjustments which have been made by the accountants of the Bureau of Efficiency.

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, the Senator in his discussion with respect to other cities compared Washington with Buffalo and Newark. Looking at the table from which he quoted, if he will take the same cities, he will find that Buffalo, even after using the adjusted valuation, pays $23.46 per $1,000 of valuation and that Newark pays $20.10 per $1,000 of valuation.

Mr. KING. That is purely for municipal purposes.

Mr. COUZENS. And it has been adjusted on that basis. I will say that with a limit of $9,000,000 as the contribution by the Federal Government we are still paying, in the District of Columbia, less per $1,000 than other cities pay on the average. The committee wants to raise the amount of the Federal contribution and still reduce the average that the property owners in the District of Columbia pay below what it already is.

Mr. BINGHAM. No; there is no reduction in the tax rate at all.

Mr. COUZENS. I understand that; but if the Government contributed an additional amount it would certainly not raise the District rate, but if anything it would leave it the same, and it is already lower than in other cities.

Mr. BINGHAM. Not lower than any other city.

Mr. COUZENS. Lower than the average, but the Senator picked out in this case, perhaps, the two lowest of any of the cities in the table, instead of picking out the same cities used in his previous comparison.

Mr. BINGHAM. Indianapolis has a levy of 11 mills, Cincinnati 11 mills, St. Louis 11 mills, Baltimore 11 mills. The Senator does me an injustice.

Mr. COUZENS. But those are not comparable in the matter of population. The Senator emphasized in his last statement the fact that Buffalo and Newark are comparable in the matter of population. Cincinnati and the other cities he now mentions are not comparable in population.

Mr. BINGHAM. St. Louis has a population nearly twice that of Washington.

Mr. COUZENS. But the Senator did not mention St. Louis.

Mr. BINGHAM. I think the Senator will find upon looking at the reporter's notes that I did mention St. Louis and also mentioned Baltimore. The average is what really is effective. I tried to take cities closest to Washington. There are three cities like Cleveland, St. Louis, and Baltimore that have a lower rate and a smaller valuation.

Mr. COUZENS. But the Senator did not use the same cities that he used before.

Mr. BINGHAM. I am sorry the Senator does not like the way I am handling the matter. I would be very glad to turn it over to him.

Mr. COUZENS. I want a fair proposition because I think the District property owners are not paying sufficient taxes in comparison to property owners in other cities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FESS in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee on page 2, line 7.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "License bureau," on page 4, line 24, after the numerals "$19,820," to strike out the colon and the following proviso:

Provided, That hereafter the superintendent of licenses of the District of Columbia shall not issue a registration certificate or identification tags for any motor vehicle upon which any personal taxes are due and unpaid to the said District.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator in charge of the bill a question?

Mr. BINGHAM. Certainly.

Mr. KING. I should like to ask the Senator if ample provision has been made in this bill for school facilities and for the school program for the next two years?

I will say frankly that I have been very greatly interested in the development of the public schools. A number of years ago, at my request, an investigation was conducted which went quite fully into the question of schools, not only the mechanics of the schools, if I may use that expression, but the buildings and in regard to the scholastic requirements, and the curriculum. I am wondering whether the program which we then outlined is being carried out, and whether there are sufficient appropriations provided in this bill to build the needed schoolhouses as rapidly as possible.

Mr. BINGHAM. Yes; the program is being carried out. I regret that the bill does not carry a larger amount for schools, but the committee has added something for schools, and the House committee added very materially to the amount as proposed originally by the Budget and by the commissioners.

Mr. KING. I have such confidence in the committee that I do not want to challenge its report in the matter to which I am referring, but I will be very glad if the committee would add to the appropriations a considerable sum to push forward to speedy completion the needed school buildings in the District.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator from Connecticut regrets that the Senator from Utah, who feels so strongly about the matter, did not present his opinion to the subcommittee having the bill in charge in order that it might be presented to the full committee and might come up in the Senate without leading to a point being made that it was out of order.

Mr. KING. As the Senator knows, I was engaged in other committee work at the time, but I did mention the matter to one or two members of the committee. I am wondering if the Senator thinks if such an amendment were added in the Senate it would meet with opposition in the House.

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator from Connecticut feels sure that it would meet with opposition, as the House have gone as far as they believe they ought to go at the present time in the general matter of expenses for the District.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I shall not offer the amendment, because I should not want to do anything that would delay the passage of this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will continue the reading of the bill.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the subhead "Highways department," on page 6, line 16, after the word "construction," to strike out "act" and insert "on parcel 108/3 immediately east of"; in line 18, after the word "and," to insert "at," and in the same line, after the word "repair," to strike out "shop" and insert "shops,"; so as to read:

For such additional construction on parcel 108/3 immediately east of the Bryant Street pumping station and at the District automobile repair shop, as may be necessary to house the shops of the highways department, including the laboratory of the inspector of asphalts and cements, and for repairing, servicing, and housing the motor vehicles of the highways department, the trees and parking department, and of such other departments as may be economically served at this location, $205,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Municipal architect's office," on page 7, line 12, to reduce the appropriation for personal services, from $63,700 to $59,900.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator in charge of the bill a question.

This amendment deals with the municipal architect and the force under him. There have been constantly disasters here in the District of Columbia, like the Knickerbocker Theater disaster, where the faulty construction resulted in the death of a hundred and odd people. Recently some workingmen were killed by reason of faulty construction, and the coroner's jury held the building inspectors responsible; and some feebleminded man associated with the District government in some way gave out a report that they were under no obligation to supervise the manner of construction. Is that true under the District law?

Mr. BINGHAM. I shall have to ask some member of the District Committee. I am not familiar with the District law on that point; but the Senate committee is proposing to add, a little bit later, an item to provide for the payment of a per diem to members of boards of survey engaged in surveys on buildings that are unsafe and dangerous. That matter will come up a little later.

Mr. CARAWAY. Are you trying to relieve these people of any responsibility and employing new people to do what they are supposed to do?

Mr. BINGHAM. Under the District law a board has to be employed to survey buildings that are unsafe or dangerous; but under the law as it at present exists, and under the appropriation bill as it came over from the House, there is no provision made to pay those who serve on that board. The amendment to be proposed later proposes a per diem of $10, which used to be the law but was inadvertently stricken out.

Mr. CARAWAY. I think we need a new force more than we do new pay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 20, before the words "per cent," to strike out "2½" and insert "2¾," so as to read:

All apportionments of appropriations for the use of the municipal architect in payment for the services of draftsmen, assistant engineers, clerks, copyists, and inspectors, employed on construction work provided for by said appropriations, shall be based on an amount not exceeding 3 per cent of a total of not more than $2,000,000 of appropriations made for such construction projects and not exceeding 2¾ per cent of a total of the appropriations in excess of $2,000,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator a question in regard to that item.

I am not quite clear that that is a wise provision—to pay the architects of the District, where they are employed and receive compensation, and where their help comes under the classified service generally, a commission; or, rather, to base the compensation paid them upon the amount of money which is expended in the construction of public buildings. The bill provides, as I recall, that the amount to be paid for architectural and other services in connection with buildings shall be 2½ or 2¾ per cent, or not to exceed that, of the total cost of the building.

I know that in private life the architects and builders charge a certain per cent for their services in preparing the plans and supervising the construction, which is added to the cost of the building; but I am not quite satisfied that we ought to determine the compensation of employees of the District by the cost of buildings which may be constructed by the Government.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, the item on page 12 for personal services covers the items of those employed continuously. The Senator will realize that when new buildings are being built, and new construction is being attended to, it is necessary to employ additional draftsmen, and so forth. In order to provide for that the law has been that an amount not exceeding 3 per cent of a total of not more than $2,000,000 shall be paid for such construction projects. That is chiefly for the employment of people who are not employed regularly. The item we are changing is to pay from 2½ per cent to 2¾ per cent of the total of the appropriation in excess of $2,000,000 in case that becomes necessary, the total amount involved being about $1,950, it being shown to the committee by the municipal architect's office that it will be necessary for them to have this additional amount if they do the large amount of work which is contemplated. The reason for the percentage is so as to make it flexible in connection with the amount of work done. If the work is not done, then they do not have to pay it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 15, after the word "department" to strike out "two at $500 each" and insert "one at $500 and one at $765," and at the end of line 16, after the words "in all," to strike out "$95,135" and insert "$95,400," so as to read:

For maintenance, care, repair, and operation of passenger-carrying automobiles owned by the District of Columbia, $77,525; for exchange of such passenger-carrying automobiles now owned by the District of Columbia as, in the judgment of the commissioners of said District, have or shall become unserviceable, $16,110; and for the purchase of passenger-carrying automobiles as follows: Highways department, one at $500 and one at $765, Public Library, one at $500; in all, $95,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 15, at the end of line 14, to increase the appropriation for postage for strictly official mail matter from $22,000 to $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Gasoline tax road and street fund," on page 19, after line 16, to strike out:

Northwest: Upton Street, Thirty-eighth Street to Wisconsin Avenue, $3,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, after line 2, to strike out:

Northwest: Forty-second Street, Jenifer Street to Military Road, $9,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, after line 4, to insert:

Northwest: Western Avenue, Forty-first Street to Chevy Chase Circle, $21,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 20, line 12, after the word "east," to strike out "to" and insert "of," so as to read:

Northwest: Tilden Street from end of asphalt block pavement east of Connecticut Avenue to Rock Creek Park, $49,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, after line 2, to strike out:

Northwest: Eighteenth Street, Allison Street to Webster Street, $4,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 2, to insert:

Northwest: Tunlaw Road, Thirty-seventh Street to Beecher Street, $10,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 4, to insert:

Northwest: Benton Street, Tunlaw Road to Huiderkoper Place, $7,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 6, to insert:

Northwest: Observatory Place, Benton Street northward to concrete, $1,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 8, to insert:

Northwest: Eighth Street, Tuckerman Street to Underwood Street, $6,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 10, to insert:

Northwest: Tewkesberry Street, Seventh Street to Eighth Street, $5,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 12, to insert:

Northeast: Neal Street, Bladensburg Road to Holbrook Street, $6,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 14, to insert:

Northeast: Newton Street, Rhode Island Avenue to Eastern Avenue, $14,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 16, to insert:

Northeast: Myrtle Avenue, Central Avenue to Walnut Street, $12,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 18, to insert:

Northeast: Evarts Street, Twentieth Street to Twenty-second Street, $8,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 20, to insert:

Northeast: Summit Place, T Street to Todd Place, $2,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, line 17, after the name "Douglass Street," to strike out "Twenty-second Street to Twenty-fourth Street, $7,300" and insert "Queens Chapel Road to Twenty-fourth Street, $12,300," so as to read:

Northeast: Douglass Street, Queens Chapel Road to Twenty-fourth Street, $12,300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 27, to insert:

Southeast: Twenty-third Street, Minnesota Avenue to Q Street, $6,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 5, before the name "Michigan Avenue," to strike out "Northwest" and insert "Northeast," so as to read:

Northeast: Michigan Avenue, North Capitol Street to Monroe Street, $81,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, line 19, after the words "in all," to strike out "$1,565,600" and insert "$1,655,800," so as to read:

In all, $1,655,800; to be disbursed and accounted for as "Gasoline tax road and street improvements," and for that purpose shall constitute one fund and be available immediately.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Sewers," on page 33, line 2, to strike out "$600,000" and insert "$612,000," so as to read:

For suburban sewers, including the replacement of four motor trucks at not to exceed $925 each, the purchase of one motor tractor at not to exceed $975, and the maintenance of nonpassenger-carrying motor vehicles used in this work, $612,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Public schools," on page 38, line 17, after the numerals "$36,900," to strike out the colon and the following proviso:

Provided, That beginning July 1, 1931, and thereafter, section 3 of the act of the Legislative Assembly of the District of Columbia, approved June 23, 1873, entitled "An act to establish a normal school for the city of Washington" (sec. 42, ch. 57, of the Compiled Statutes in force in the District of Columbia), shall apply only to those graduates of the normal schools of the District of Columbia who shall at the time of their graduation rank within the first 25 per cent of their respective classes, arranged in order of their ratings received for their entire normal-school course.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Teachers," on page 39, at the end of line 6, to strike out "$5,966,000" and insert "$6,000,000" so as to read:

Salaries: For personal services of teachers and librarians in accordance with the act approved June 4, 1924 (43 Stat. 367–375), $6,000,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Furniture," on page 43, at the end of line 9, to strike out "1930" and insert "1931," so as to read:

For completely furnishing and equipping buildings and additions to buildings, as follows: E. A. Paul Junior High School, $48,000; 24-room building, including combination assembly hall and gymnasium, at Nineteenth Street and Columbia Road, $31,000; 8-room building, including combination assembly hall and gymnasium, on Grant Road, $13,500; 8-room building, including combination assembly hall and gymnasium, at Fourteenth and Upshur Streets, $13,500; 8-room addition, including combination assembly hall and gymnasium, Raymond School, $13,500; 18-room building, including combination assembly hall and gymnasium, Langdon School, $19,000; 8-room addition, including combination assembly hall and gymnasium, Burrville School, $10,500; 8-room building, including combination assembly hall and gymnasium, to replace the old Bell and Cardozo Schools, $13,500; Francis Junior High School, $20,000; health school for colored pupils, $12,000; in all, $194,500, to be immediately available and to continue available until June 30, 1931.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Buildings and grounds," on page 46, line 22, after the word "site," to strike out "to be" and insert "being," so as to read:

For the erection of a junior high school building on a site being purchased for that purpose in the Reno section, in accordance with the plans of Macfarland Junior High School, $200,000, and the commissioners are authorized to enter into contract or contracts as in this act provided for such building, at a cost not to exceed $500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 47, line 17, after the word "school," to insert "and sanatorium," so as to read:

For the erection of a new health school and sanatorium for colored pupils, $150,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 47, line 22, after the name "Macfarland Junior High School," to insert "including necessary remodeling and enlargement of the heating plant at the Macfarland Junior High School to provide heat for the Business High School," and on page 48, line 1, after the word "building," to insert "exclusive of the treatment of grounds," so as to read:

For the construction of a new school building for the Business High School on a site now owned by the District of Columbia adjoining the Macfarland Junior High School, including the necessary remodeling and enlargement of the heating plant at the Macfarland Junior High School to provide heat for the Business High School, $300,000, and the commissioners are authorized to enter into contract or contracts as in this act provided for such building, exclusive of the treatment of grounds, at a cost not to exceed $1,500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 48, line 3, after the numerals "$1,500,000," to strike out the colon and the following proviso:

Provided, That upon completion of such building, the building now occupied by the Business High School shall be used as an elementary school for colored pupils.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 48, line 6, after the word "addition," to insert "or additions," so as to read:

For the construction of an addition or additions to the Park View School, including the necessary remodeling of the present building, $265,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, line 19, after the word "building," to insert a comma and "a new platoon school building, and a colored health school and sanatorium," so as to read:

For the purchase of a site on which to locate a new junior high-school building, a new platoon school building, and a colored health school and sanatorium in northeast Washington.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, after line 23, to strike out:

For the purchase of a site for a colored health school.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 50, line 8, to increase the appropriation for the purchase of sites for school buildings from $407,000 to $517,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Metropolitan police—Salaries," on page 52, line 17, after the numerals "$2,722,110," to strike out the colon and the following proviso:

Provided, That hereafter no more than $360 per annum shall be paid as extra compensation to members of said force who may be mounted on horses, furnished and maintained by themselves, no more than $50 per annum as extra compensation to members mounted on bicycles, and no more than $312 per annum to members who may be called upon to use motor vehicles furnished and maintained by themselves.

Mr. DILL. Mr. President, I understand that the purpose of this amendment is to restore to these officers the rates of pay they are now receiving for caring for their horses and their motor cycles?

Mr. BINGHAM. That is correct.

Mr. DILL. I think it is a very desirable amendment.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, like every one else, I have been interested in the controversy now raging down at police headquarters. I am confident that there is something very wrong with the police force. Whether it is with the individual men or whether it is with the major in charge, I do not know. I have no doubt about one thing, however—that Mr. Dougherty, who is the president of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, is utterly unsuited to have charge of the police force. He may not be in sympathy with lawlessness; I do not know—I never heard of him until he was appointed, and I have not found anybody else who ever had—but he is in sympathy with most of the abuses that are taking place in the police force, I am sure, from his attitude toward some things that have been attempted.

Here is Captain Burlingame, who stands convicted in the minds of everybody who has half sense. Everybody knows there is something wrong with him and his connection with this palmist, his extortion of money from her, his unwillingness to explain to the District Commissioners, or any one else, his relations with this palmist; and in that he is upheld by the District Commissioners, notwithstanding the fact that the House committee investigating the affairs of the District has requested them to suspend him.

Yesterday a policeman who pleaded guilty to intoxication was fined $100 and restored to duty. Anybody knows that a man on the police force who gets drunk is protecting somebody who is selling whisky; and if he will protect a bootlegger he will protect a burglar, or a murderer, or any one else for a consideration, because men are not honest and dishonest in spots. They are either honest or they are dishonest.

The man who protects somebody in the commission of a crime is dishonest. Whether he is in sympathy with the law or not, he is an undesirable man to be put in charge of law enforcement, because he is corrupted already. We can not reach all such men. I was intending to offer an amendment, to be inserted on page 52, after the numerals "$2,722,110," to read as follows:

Provided, That no part of the sum herein appropriated shall be used to pay the salary of Captain Burlingame until he shall be vindicated from the charges now pending against him.

I want a vote on that amendment.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, will not the Senator wait until the committee amendments shall be disposed of?

Mr. CARAWAY. If the Senator wants to make that objection to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This is in the nature of an amendment to the committee amendment.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, then, of course, I have no objection to it being acted on now.

Mr. CARAWAY. The security of property and life in the District of Columbia, as in every city, depends on the police force. When some man who is corrupt is still retained on the force, and in a position of authority, and that is generally known, that example tends to break down the morale of the whole police force. If it were just a matter of dealing with Captain Burlingame alone, it would be different. He has been on the force, he has been crooked for years, we now know, but the public did not know it. The public does know it now. Every policeman in the department knows it now, and they know that for some reason not given the commissioners are protecting Burlingame in his position. They know there is something wrong with those higher in command, and therefore their attitude is an invitation for every policeman to find the weak spot in the police department and take advantage of it. I hope, therefore, that the amendment may be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the committee amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 52, beginning with line 17, the committee proposes to strike out down to line 24, inclusive, as follows:

Provided, That hereafter no more than $360 per annum shall be paid as extra compensation to members of said force who may be mounted on horses, furnished and maintained by themselves, no more than $50 per annum as extra compensation to members mounted on bicycles, and no more than $312 per annum to members who may be called upon to use motor vehicles, furnished and maintained by themselves.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Arkansas will now be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 52, line 17, after the numerals "$2,722,110," to insert a colon and the following:

Provided, That no part of the sum herein appropriated shall be used to pay the salary of Captain Burlingame until he shall be vindicated from the charges now pending against him.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his inquiry.

Mr. BINGHAM. That being in the nature of a limitation, would a point of order lie against it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would not.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let the amendment be read again.

The amendment was again read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will call the attention of the Senator from Connecticut to page 60, line 6, where the word "women" occurs. That should be "woman."

Mr. BINGHAM. I move that the word be changed to "woman."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that amendment will be made.

The next amendment of the committee was, under the subhead "Supreme Court, District of Columbia," on page 64, line 22, before the word "stenographers," to strike out "six" and insert "seven"; and in line 23, after the word "justice," to strike out "$15,600; in all, $86,100" and insert "$18,200; in all, $88,700," so as to read:

Salaries: Chief justice, $10,500; 6 associate justices, at $10,000 each; 7 stenographers, 1 for the chief justice and 1 for each associate justice, $18,200; in all, $88,700.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Medical charities," on page 75, line 11, to increase the appropriation for care and treatment of indigent patients at the Children's Hospital from $18,000 to $22,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Public buildings and public parks—General expenses, public parks," on page 86, line 11, after the word "exceeding," to strike out "$90,000" and insert "$122,000," so as to read:

General expenses: For general expenses in connection with the maintenance, care, improvement, furnishing of heat, light, and power of public parks, grounds, fountains, and reservations, propagating gardens and greenhouses under the jurisdiction of the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks of the National Capital, including $5,000 for the maintenance of the tourists' camp on its present site in East Potomac Park, and including personal services of seasonal or intermittent employees at per diem rates of pay approved by the director, not exceeding current rates of pay for similar employment in the District of Columbia; the hire of draft animals with or without drivers at local rates approved by the director; the purchase and maintenance of draft animals, harness, and wagons; contingent expenses; city directories; communication service; car fare; traveling expenses; professional, scientific, technical, and law books; periodicals and reference books; blank books and forms; photographs; dictionaries and maps; leather and rubber articles for the protection of employees and property; the maintenance, repair, exchange, and operation of not to exceed four motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles and all necessary bicycles, motor cycles, and self-propelled machinery; the purchase, maintenance, and repair of equipment and fixtures, etc., $570,000: Provided, That not exceeding $35,000 of the amount herein appropriated may be expended for placing and maintaining portions of the parks in condition for outdoor sports and for expenses incident to the conducting of band concerts in the parks; not exceeding $25,000 for the improvement and maintenance as recreation parks of Sections C and D, Anacostia Park; not exceeding $122,000 for the improvement of the Rock Creek and Potomac connecting parkway and the continuation of construction of sea wall.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "National Capital Park and Planning Commission," on page 87, line 18, after the word "amended," to insert "and the act approved December 22, 1928 (Public, No. 646, 70th Cong.)," so as to read:

For each and every purpose requisite for and incident to the work of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission as authorized by the act entitled "An act providing for a comprehensive development of the park and playground system of the National Capital," approved June 6, 1924 (43 Stat. 463–464), as amended, and the act approved December 22, 1928 (Public, No. 646, 70th Cong.), including not to exceed $100 for technical books and periodicals, not to exceed $50,000 for personal services in the District of Columbia, and not to exceed $3,500 for printing and binding, $1,000,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BINGHAM. There are several other committee amendments which I am authorized by the committe to offer, and I shall ask the clerk to read the one I now send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 12, line 24, after the syllable "ings," insert a comma and the following: "including payment of a fee of $10 per diem to each member of the board of survey, other than the inspector of buildings, while actually employed on surveys of dangerous or unsafe buildings."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BINGHAM. I offer another amendment authorized by the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the committee amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 31, line 24, after the numerals "$120,000," insert a colon and the following:

Provided, That so much of cost of this work as relates to the paving between and 2 feet exterior to the outer rails of the street-car tracks, and to the reconstruction of the street-railway track system, shall be paid by the street-railway company using the bridge.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BINGHAM. I offer another amendment authorized by the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 39, line 2, after the word "course," insert a colon and the following:

Provided, That the Board of Education is hereby authorized, under appropriations hereafter to be made, to expand the two existing normal schools into teachers' colleges, and at the end of the fourth year thereof to award appropriate degrees.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BINGHAM. I am authorized to offer another amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the committee amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 76, after line 5, insert as a separate paragraph the following:

For the erection and equipment, including furniture and other accessories, of a hospital building for the care and treatment of tubercular children, $150,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, that completes the committee amendments, but since the committee met there has been received from the Budget an estimate for the transportation of crippled children attending schools, of $12,000, and I ask leave to offer an amendment covering that matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 42, after line 8, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

For transportation for pupils attending schools for crippled pupils, $12,000: Provided, That expenditures for street car and bus fares from this fund shall not be subject to the general limitations on the use of street car and bus fares covered in this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, in this connection the committee has received, since it met, a recommendation from the Bureau of the Budget with regard to the employment of two physiotherapeutists to aid these crippled children in connection with the transportation item just passed, and I ask that the amendment I send to the desk may be read and agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 60, in line 5, strike out "$74,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$78,600."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BINGHAM. That concludes all the committee amendments.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I have the impression that the amendment in line 5, page 28, was overlooked. In order to be sure, I am calling it to the attention of the chairman of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PHIPPS. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 28, line 8, strike out "$75,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$80,000."

Mr. PHIPPS. Mr. President, that would have the effect of adding $5,000 to the allowance for grading property, opening up new streets, to take care of new enterprise, a large tract of property being developed in the southeast section, which would give to the District, by dedication, a large circle somewhat like Chevy Chase Circle, only larger in area. It is necessary to have the grading performed in order to get the property dedicated.

Mr. McKELLAR. Where is it located?

Mr. PHIPPS. In the southeastern section. It would be beyond the Washington University, a little to the south and east of the university. In the development of that tract of land the owners propose to dedicate to the District a suitable tract of land for the purpose of a public school, which is the first time we have been able to secure an offer of that kind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, in view of the very wide public interest in the matter, I wish the Senator in charge of the bill would state why the amendment was not inserted which he had anticipated offering, to provide for an airport survey in the city of Washington.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, at one time I had hoped to present and had intended to present to the committee a proposal for an amount of money sufficient to provide for a complete survey to be made of the airport situation, in order that we might have the facts before us. I learned that quite an extensive survey had been made, and therefore that this was not needed. I therefore did not propose the amendment.

May I take this opportunity of saying that I hope very much that the District Committee, and particularly the subcommittee of which the Senator from Michigan is chairman, will promptly take into consideration the bills now pending in regard to the authorization of an appropriation for an airport in Washington. Nearly all the other great capitals of the world either have or are building suitable and adequate airports. Even Rome, the capital of Italy, where to-day there are very few lines of airplanes coming in, has about completed the construction of a magnificent airport. The capitals of Germany, France, England, Holland, and other countries have provided fine and adequate airports. We alone have not yet made any such provision, and I hope that within the near future the committee over which the Senator from Michigan presides will arrive at a conclusion as to where is the best place for authorizing such an airport.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I should like to inquire further of the Senator from Connecticut, who is familiar with the District program as well as the air program, whether he thinks there is any development in governmental air facilities contemplated in the District which would recommend, perhaps, very careful inquiry and some delay before an independent munpicipal project at Gravelly Point was undertaken?

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I have been giving some consideration to the fact that the War Department is asking for a very considerable increase in the size of Bolling Field, a field which is at present used by both the War Department and the Navy Department. I submitted informally and tentatively, to the Assistant Secretary of War for Aeronautics, a question as to whether, in case the size of that field were increased, it might not be possible to use a part of the field for commercial purposes. I received a lengthy report from him only this morning in which he stated that, after looking into the matter quite fully, he believes it would be the great disadvantage of both the military and naval services if that suggestion were followed, and that the interests of Washington, from the point of view of commercial aeronautics, would not be well served by such an arrangement.

On the other hand, after having conversed with several experts who have looked into the matter quite fully, I hope very much that the Department of Agriculture may be led to take the view that their experimental work now being carried on at the flats opposite Potomac Park, near the end of the Highway Bridge and the new Memorial Bridge, might be equally well carried on at some other place in the vicinity of Washington, and that that land, which is adjacent to one of the two fields now used for commercial purposes—one of which I think bears the name of Hoover Field—might be combined with land now occupied by the Department of Agriculture to make an adequate airport for the city of Washington at a much earlier date than would be the case if we were obliged to use the project known as the Gravelly Point project.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Just one more question, if the Senator will permit. Has he any conviction as to the proper division of cost in the development of a municipal airport in Washington?

Mr. BINGHAM. The question brings up a matter on which the two Houses are continually at variance, and it is rather a difficult one for me to answer. My own personal feelings in the matter are these: The persons who would use such an airport to its fullest extent would be in nearly all cases persons coming to Washington for the sake of having to do business with the Federal Government and not with the citizens and business houses of Washington. They would be persons in large measure coming to appear before the committees of Congress and to attend to matters in which their States and communities were interested and with respect to which they desire to communicate with their Senators and Congressmen. In view of that fact, it seems to me that the Federal Government ought to bear the expense of constructing an adequate municipal airport, or at least a very large share of that expense.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I thank the Senator for his testimony.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is still in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment. If there are no further amendments to be proposed as in Committee of the Whole, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the clerks be given authority to change any totals which may be required to be changed and which may have been overlooked in the course of the amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The question is, Shall the amendments be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time?

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Edge	Keyes	Smith
Barkley	Fess	King	Smoot
Bayard	Frazier	McKellar	Steck
Bingham	George	McMaster	Steiwer
Black	Gerry	McNary	Stephens
Blaine	Gillett	Moses	Swanson
Blease	Glass	Neely	Thomas, Idaho
Borah	Glenn	Norbeck	Thomas, Okla.
Bratton	Goff	Norris	Trammell
Brookhart	Gould	Oddie	Tydings
Broussard	Greene	Overman	Tyson
Bruce	Hale	Phipps	Vandenberg
Burton	Harris	Pittman	Wagner
Capper	Harrison	Ransdell	Walsh, Mass.
Caraway	Hastings	Reed, Pa.	Walsh, Mont.
Copeland	Hawes	Robinson, Ind.	Warren
Couzens	Hayden	Sackett	Waterman
Curtis	Heflin	Sheppard	Watson
Dale	Johnson	Shipstead	Wheeler
Deneen	Jones	Shortridge
Dill	Kendrick	Simmons

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-two Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

AMENDMENT OF SECTION 1233, REVISED STATUTES

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, in January, 1928, at the request of the State Department, I introduced two bills intended to make eligible for appointment in the Diplomatic Service officers of the Navy and of the Army who were on the retired list and who, by a construction of an old statute, had recently been held to be ineligible under a provision preventing officers on the active list from taking such appointments. It never was intended by the Congress that retired officers should be made ineligible to serve their country in any other capacity.

The Committee on Naval Affairs promptly reported out a bill with reference to naval officers and it passed the Senate. I am now authorized by the Committee on Military Affairs to report back favorably, without amendment, the bill (S. 2409) to amend section 1223 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and I submit a report (No. 1682) thereon. Inasmuch as the bill involves no other question than that which has already been decided by the Senate, I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Pennsylvania?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2409) to amend section

1223 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and it was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1223 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Provided, however, That the foregoing provision shall not apply to any officer of the Army on the retired list."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR AERONAUTICS

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, from the Committee on Military Affairs I report back favorably without amendment the bill (S. 5544) to increase the membership of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and I submit a report (No. 1683) thereon. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill. It is a unanimous report from the committee; it will not cost anything, and if the purpose is to be accomplished at this session we must get the bill through the Senate and over to the House as soon as possible.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Connecticut?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 5544) to increase the membership of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and it was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the membership of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics is hereby increased from 12 members to 15 members: Provided, That the three additional members to be appointed by the President shall be acquainted with the needs of aeronautical science, either civil or military, or skilled in aeronautical engineering or its allied sciences, and shall serve as such without compensation.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS TO CERTAIN NAVAL VESSELS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is Senate bill 1093.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar 1356, the bill (S. 4570) to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maine?

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, let me inquire what is the bill to which the Senator refers?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report the bill for the information of the Senate.

Mr. HALE. May I say before that is done, Mr. President, that it is a bill which has to do with the modernization of two of our battleships, the Arizona and the Pennsylvania. The bill should be passed by the Senate to-day if it is possible to have it done. The Navy Department appropriation bill has just come to the Senate from the House and we are to hold hearings on that bill commencing next Monday.

This is an item that should be considered in that bill. The detailing of the men for the coming year has been arranged with the understanding that the men who are on the Arizona and the Pennsylvania will be available for use on the Oklahoma and the Nevada, which have just been modernized and reconditioned. Unless action shall be taken to-day, we shall have no authorization to consider this matter in proceeding with the appropriation bill. The whole question is simply one of following out the plan that was adopted four years ago of modernizing each year two ships of the Navy. This bill merely proposes to follow out the plan.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, will he let me inquire why it is necessary that action be taken to-day?

Mr. HALE. Because we are going to hold hearings on Monday on the naval appropriation bill, and in that appropriation bill there should be an item to take care of these ships.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. CARAWAY. I yield.

Mr. BLEASE. I do not like to object to this particular bill, but I do think this manner of legislating is hardly proper.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from South Carolina will not object. The consideration of this bill will not require any discussion. The Appropriations Committee meets on Monday. These ships ought to be modernized and repaired. The Senator will remember that I did not vote for the cruiser bill, and I am not especially a "big Navy" man, but this is a matter that ought to be attended to and ought to be attended to immediately. I therefore hope the Senator from South Carolina will not object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, I am different from the Senator from Virginia in that respect. I voted for a large Navy; I believe in a large Army; I believe in a big airplane service, if that is what it may properly be called; I believe in anything to fight with; but I do not believe in fighting with it. However, I believe in being ready to fight, so that if the other fellow jumps on you you can take care of yourself.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, that is the object of this bill, to put these ships in condition so that they can be on equal terms with the modern ships of other navies. I hope the Senator from South Carolina will not object to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BLEASE. If the Senate will pass my judgeship bill right after it shall pass this bill, then I shall not object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. SWANSON. I hope the Senator from South Carolina will not object.

Mr. GLASS. I did not object to the bill of the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BLEASE. I object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. SWANSON. I hope the Senator from South Carolina will not persist in his objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Carolina objects. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CARAWAY] has the floor.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. CARAWAY. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I should like to submit and have considered this afternoon the conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill. The speech of the Senator from Arkansas will be just as effective after the conference report shall have been considered. I am going to submit a conference report and ask unanimous consent for its consideration.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, just a moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Temporarily laying aside the unfinished business?

Mr. CARAWAY. Just a moment. I will ask the Senator from Oregon how long the consideration of the conference report will take?

Mr. McNARY. I think it will take but a brief moment.

Mr. CARAWAY. I want to oblige the Senator from Oregon, but if I shall yield to him it will probably be absolutely impossible to complete the unfinished business this evening. I hope that on Monday I may be permitted to proceed with it to a final conclusion.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, if I may intervene, I desire to suggest that the Senate proceed with the consideration of the conference report, and then, if there be no objection, I will ask unanimous consent to proceed with unobjected bills on the calendar, beginning where we left off the last time the calendar was under consideration. We could put in the afternoon very nicely in that way, and let the Senator from Arkansas proceed with his bill on Monday.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. CARAWAY. I yield.

Mr. SMITH. What was the request which the Senator from Oregon made?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The request was that he might present a conference report, which is a privileged matter and may be presented at any time, and he also asked unanimous consent for the present consideration of the conference report.

Mr. SMITH. It is a conference report on what bill?

Mr. McNARY. On the agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. CARAWAY. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I wish to announce that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BLEASE] is prepared to withdraw his objection to the bill consideration of which was asked for by the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], on the ground that employees of the navy yards are being discharged for lack of favorable action on this measure. I understand on that representation the Senator from South Carolina will withdraw his objection.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I should like to add my own entreaty to that just voiced by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the objection to the bill is withdrawn.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4570) to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of modernizing the U. S. S. Pennsylvania and Arizona, alterations and repairs to such vessels are hereby authorized at a total cost not to exceed the sum of $14,800,000 in all. The alterations to the capital ships herein authorized shall be subject to the limitations prescribed in the treaty limiting naval armaments, ratified August 17, 1923.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now recurs on the unanimous-consent proposal made by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY].

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the bill just passed was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, in order that a similar bill which has been passed by the House may be substituted for the Senate bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the votes are reconsidered.

Mr. HALE. I now move that the Committee on Naval Affairs be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 11616) to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I ask unanimous consent that the House bill 11616 be substituted for Senate bill 4570, and that the Senate proceed to its consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11616) to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of modernizing the U. S. S. Pennsylvania and Arizona, alterations and repairs to such vessels are hereby authorized at a total cost not to exceed the sum of $14,800,000 in all. The alterations to the capital ships herein authorized shall be subject to the limitations prescribed in the treaty limiting naval armaments, ratified August 17, 1923.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the bill (S. 4570) to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels is indefinitely postponed.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. McNARY. I now submit the conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. What is the request?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon submits a conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill, and asks unanimous consent for its present consideration. It will not displace the unfinished business.

Mr. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I am going to make no objection, but I am going to ask that we be permitted on Monday to consider the unfinished business. I hope that all Senators will remember that I am yielding to oblige the Members of the Senate, but on Monday I hope that I shall be permitted to proceed with the unfinished business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oregon?

There being no objection, the report was read, and the Senate proceeded to its consideration, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15386) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 19, 21, 22, 24, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 35, 40, 44, 47, 48, 52, 57, 66, and 68.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 32, 37, 39, 43, 46, 54, 55, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 65, 69, and 70, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 13 of the bill, in line 25, strike out "$11,728,390" and insert "$12,008,390"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 12: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$2,120,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 13: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$3,153,400"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 14: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$353,780"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 16: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$9,533,070"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 17: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 17, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$12,133,070"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 18: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$831,200"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 20: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 20, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$810,920"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 23: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,234,731"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 25: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 25, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$4,960,343"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 26: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 26, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,646,200"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 33: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 33, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$9,541,280"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 34: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 34, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$2,000,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 36: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 36, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$13,024,280"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 38: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$32,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 41: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 41, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,630,075"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 42: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 42, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,089,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 45: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 45, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$204,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 49: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 49, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,882,670"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 50: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 50, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$396,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 51: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$633,273"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 53: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 53, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,163,566"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 56: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 56, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,429,166"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 64: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$2,325,800"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 67: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 67, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$2,633,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 71: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$144,511,554"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference have not agreed on amendment numbered 15.

CHAS. L. MCNARY,
W. L. JONES,
HENRY W. KEYES,
LEE S. OVERMAN,
WM. J. HARRIS,
JOHN B. KENDRICK,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

L. J. DICKINSON,
E. H. WASON,
JOHN W. SUMMERS,
J. P. BUCHANAN,
JOHN N. SANDLIN,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the report.

The report was agreed to.

INSPECTION OF BATTLE FIELDS IN MISSISSIPPI

Mr. SHEPPARD. From the Committee on Military Affairs I report back favorably with an amendment the bill (H. R. 8736) to provide for the inspection of the battle field of Brices Cross Roads, Miss., and the battle field of Tupelo, or Harrisburg, Miss., and I submit a report (No. 1684) thereon. I direct the attention of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] to the bill.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. The amendment of the Committee on Military Affairs was to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That for the purpose of commemorating the battles of Brices Cross Roads, Miss., and Tupelo, Miss., the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to (1) acquire not to exceed 1 acre of land, free of cost to the United States, at each of the above-named battle fields, (2) fence each parcel of land so acquired, (3) build an approach to each such parcel of land, and (4) erect a suitable marker on each such parcel of land.

SEC. 2. There is authorized to be appropriated $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of section 1 of this act.

SEC. 3. Each parcel of land acquired under section 1 of this act shall be under the jurisdiction and control of the Secretary of War, and there is authorized to be appropriated for the maintenance of each such parcel of land, fence, approach, and marker a sum not to exceed $250 per annum.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to provide for the commemoration of the Battles of Brices Cross Roads, Miss., and Tupelo, Miss."

THE CALENDAR

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar, beginning with the number where we left off when the calendar was last under consideration.

Mr. MCKELLAR. Do I understand the Senator to ask that the consideration of the calendar be begun where it was left off when last under consideration?

Mr. CURTIS. Yes; and that unobjected bills only be considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the call of the calendar will proceed.

BOISE RECLAMATION PROJECT

The bill (H. R. 11360) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey or transfer certain water rights in connection with the Boise reclamation project was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation with amendments, on page 1, beginning in line 4, to strike out "convey upon such terms and conditions as he may see fit, either at public auction to the best bidder or at private sale at such prices as he may fix" and to insert "relinquish to the board of control of the Arrowrock division, Boise irrigation project," and on page 2, line 2, after the word "reservoir," to strike out "The proceeds received by the United States from the sale of such rights shall be used toward or credited to part payment on that part of the cost of the construction of the Arrowrock division, Boise project, chargeable to the board of control of the said Arrowrock division," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to relinquish to the board of control of the Arrowrock division, Boise irrigation project, all the right, title, and interest of the United States in or to certain Ridenbaugh or Nampa and Meridian irrigation district water rights, not heretofore disposed of, obtained when land with appurtenant water rights was purchased by the United States for the Deer Flat Reservoir.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to permit the water to which the United States is entitled under the said Ridenbaugh rights to be taken into and distributed through the canal system of the Arrowrock division of the Boise project by the board of control and used or disposed of by the said board of control for the benefit of the said Arrowrock division.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

COLLECTION OF COTTON STATISTICS

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 5474) authorizing the Director of the Census to collect and publish certain additional cotton statistics, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter in collecting and publishing statistics of cotton on hand in warehouses and other storage establishments, and of cotton known as the "carry-over" in the United States, the Director of the Census is hereby directed to ascertain and publish as a separate item in the report of cotton statistics the number of bales of linters as distinguished from the number of bales of cotton.

Mr. HARRISON. Does that bill provide for the census?

Mr. HEFLIN. No; it is a bill introduced by me, and merely provides for the collection and publication of certain additional cotton statistics.

Mr. HARRISON. I have no objection to the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HERMAN C. DAVIS

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 9737) for the relief of Herman C. Davis, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, in line 4, after the word "pay," to insert "out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Herman C. Davis, of Camp Knox, Hardin County, Ky., the sum of $2,500 in full settlement of all claims against the United States for injuries arising out of a gunshot wound inflicted by a member of the provost guard doing duty at Camp Knox on March 17, 1919.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

F. STANLEY MILLICHAMP

The bill (H. R. 11064) for the relief of F. Stanley Millichamp was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I should like an explanation of that bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator who reported the bill is not in the Chamber.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

WILLIAM A. SCHOENFELD

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8968) to allow credit in the accounts of William A. Schoenfeld, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States is hereby authorized and directed in the settlement of the accounts of William A. Schoenfeld, a special temporary disbursing agent of the Department of Agriculture, to allow the sum of $80 now standing as a disallowance in the accounts of said William A. Schoenfeld, being the difference between $110 each paid for two typewriting machines purchased in Vienna, Austria, and the limiting price for such machines, $70 each, fixed by act of April 4, 1924 (43 Stat. p. 67).

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 4819) for the relief of Roy M. Lisso, liquidating trustee of the Pelican Laundry (Ltd.), was announced as next in order.

Mr. BLEASE. Over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 135) for the relief of special disbursing agents of the Alaska Railroad was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I should like an explanation of that measure.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Mississippi, who reported the joint resolution, is not in the Chamber.

Mr. KING. Let it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be passed over.

C. TISDALL CO. AND OTHERS

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3955) for the relief of the C. Tisdall Co., Herbert W. Smith, Newman Bros., Thomas J. Murphy Co., formerly Edward A. Brown Co., and Giles P. Dunn, jr., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 4, after the word "pay," to insert "out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the C. Tisdall Co., of Newport, R. I., the sum of $1,037.65; Herbert W. Smith, of Newport, R. I., the sum of $146.15; Newman Bros., of Bristol, R. I., the sum of $114.25; Thomas J. Murphy Co., formerly Edward A. Brown Co., of Newport, R. I., the sum of $151.85; and Giles P. Dunn, jr., of Block Island, R. I., the sum of $619.54, all of said sums being due said individuals and companies for merchandise furnished crews of certain naval vessels of the United States during the late war.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

CACHE NATIONAL FOREST

The bill (H. R. 310) authorizing an addition to the Cache National Forest, Idaho, was announced as next in order.

Mr. THOMAS of Idaho. I should like to have that bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

TITLE TO LANDS IN MICHIGAN

The bill (H. R. 13899) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue patents for land held under color of title was announced as next in order.

Mr. ODDIE. I ask that that bill go over.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection for just a moment?

Mr. ODDIE. I withhold the objection.

Mr. VANDENBERG. This bill applies solely to farm lands on the Raisin River, in Monroe County, Mich., and straightens out difficulties inherited from the old French titles 150 years ago. That is the sole purpose of the bill.

Mr. ODDIE. I have not had an opportunity to look into it. It does not, then, refer to mining locations?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Not at all.

Mr. ODDIE. I withdraw my objection to the bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That if, within five years after the passage of this act, it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior that a tract or tracts of public land in the State of Michigan, not exceeding in the aggregate of 160 acres, has or have been held in good faith and in peaceable, adverse possession by a citizen of the United States, his ancestors or grantors, for more than 20 years prior to the approval of this act under claim or color of title, and that valuable improvements have been placed on such land or some part thereof has been reduced to cultivation, the Secretary may, in his discretion, upon the payment of $1.25 per acre, cause a patent or patents to issue for such land to any such citizen: Provided, That the term "citizen," as used herein, shall be held to include a corporation organized under the laws of the United States or any State or Territory thereof.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHOPTANK RIVER BRIDGE, MARYLAND

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 5465) authorizing V. Calvin Trice, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Choptank River at a point at or near Cambridge, Md., suitable to the interest of navigation, between Dorchester County, Md., and a point opposite thereto in Talbot County, Md., which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, page 2, line 2, after the word "the," to strike out "interest" and insert "interests"; in the same line, after the word "navigation," to strike out "between Dorchester County, Md., and a point opposite thereto in Talbot County, Md.," so as to make the section read:

That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, V. Calvin Trice, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Choptank River at or near Cambridge, Md., at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, page 4, line 15, after the word "filed," to strike out "and shall make a finding of the actual and reasonable costs so filed," so as to make the section read:

SEC. 4. V. Calvin Trice, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, shall, within 90 days after the completion of such bridge, file with the Secretary of War, and with the Highway Department of the State of Maryland, a sworn itemized statement showing the actual original cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches, the actual cost of acquiring any interest in real property necessary therefor, and the actual financing and promotion costs. The Secretary of War may, and at the request of the Highway Department of the State of Maryland shall, at any time within three years after the completion of such bridge, investigate such costs and determine the accuracy and the reasonableness of the costs alleged in the statement of costs so filed, and shall make a finding of the actual and reasonable costs of construction, financing, and promoting such bridge; for the purpose of such investigation the said V. Calvin Trice, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns shall make available all records in connection with the construction, financing, and promotion thereof. The findings of the Secretary of War as to the reasonable costs of the construction, financing, and promotion of the bridge shall be conclusive for the purposes mentioned in section 2 of this act, subject only to review in a court of equity for fraud or gross mistake.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill authorizing V. Calvin Trice, his heirs, legal representatives, and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Choptank River at a point at or near Cambridge, Md."

RIO GRANDE BRIDGES AND MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE AT ST. PAUL

The following bridge bills reached upon the calendar were severally considered as in Committee of the Whole, reported to the Senate without amendment, read the third time, and passed:

A bill (H. R. 14458) authorizing the Rio Grande del Norte Investment Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Rio Grande at or near San Benito, Tex.;

A bill (H. R. 15005) authorizing the Donna Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Rio Grande at or near Donna, Tex.;

A bill (H. R. 15006) authorizing the Los Indios Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Rio Grande at or near Los Indios, Tex.;

A bill (H. R. 15069) authorizing the Rio Grande City-Camargo Bridge Co., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Rio Grande at or near Rio Grande City, Tex.; and

A bill (H. R. 15968) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn.

DAVID E. JONES

The bill (S. 4250) for the relief of David E. Jones was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the requirements of sections 17 to 20, inclusive, of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, as amended, are hereby waived in favor of David E. Jones, formerly a laborer, Ordnance Department, Fort Sill, Okla., and the United States Employees' Compensation Commission is authorized and directed to consider and act upon his claim for compensation for injury suffered in the performance of his duties as such laborer, under the other provisions of such act as amended.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM D. GHRIST

The bill (H. R. 14572) for the relief of William D. Ghrist was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General is authorized and directed to credit the account of William D. Ghrist, postmaster at Uniontown, Pa., in the sum of $2,875, being an amount charged in the postal account due to the cashing of war-savings stamps in the year 1924, which were found by the Treasury Department to be counterfeit and charged back to the postmaster's account, for which amount the postmaster was in no way responsible, the loss having occurred without negligence on his part.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WINSTON W. DAVIS

The bill (H. R. 15039) for the relief of Winston W. Davis was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit the account of Winston W. Davis, former postmaster at Johnstown, Pa., in the sum of $13,100, being an amount charged in the postal account due to the cashing of war-savings stamps in the year 1924, which were found by the Treasury Department to be counterfeit and charged back to the postmaster's account, for which amount the postmaster was in no way responsible, the loss having occurred without negligence on his part.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FLORENCE P. HAMPTON

The bill (H. R. 15004) for the relief of Florence P. Hampton was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and in full settlement against the Government, the sum of $5,000 to Florence P. Hampton, on account of the death of her husband, Henry Alfred Hampton, who was killed in Calhoun County, Fla., September 6, 1928, while deputized as a prohibition enforcement officer.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HIRING OF VEHICLES FROM LETTER CARRIERS

The bill (H. R. 13451) to authorize the Postmaster General to hire vehicles from letter carriers for use in service was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3850 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 39, sec. 52) be amended by the addition of the following:

"Provided, That beginning with the fiscal year 1928, and thereafter, the Postmaster General may hire vehicles from letter carriers for use in the city delivery and collection service, either under an allowance or on a contract basis."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROMOTIONS IN POST-OFFICE MOTOR-VEHICLE SERVICE

The bill (H. R. 13449) to provide for the promotion of clerks and general mechanics in the motor-vehicle service was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that that bill go over, and I also ask that the bill following it on the calendar may go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. May the Chair be permitted to call the attention of the Senator from Utah to the fact that the two measures referred to by him are merely designed to provide for uniform promotion in all grades of the Postal Service?

Mr. KING. I received an inquiry as to whether or not there was any discrimination under the bills.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On the contrary, the bills are designed to obviate the discrimination that now exists.

Mr. KING. Then I have no objection. My informant was one who claimed that he should be benefited by the proposed legislation, but he was apprehensive that it would not benefit him.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The opinion of the present occupant of the chair, as chairman of the committee which heard and considered the measures, is that both House bill 13449 and House bill 13450 provide uniform methods of promotion in the Postal Service which were not provided in the earlier legislation, so that all discriminations which now exist will hereafter be obviated.

Mr. KING. I will ask the chairman of the committee, who now honors the chair, if complaints were made before the committee upon the ground that there was discrimination now, and were those who made complaints satisfied with the provisions of these measures?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes.

Mr. KING. Then I have no objection.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 13449) to provide for the promotion of clerks and general mechanics in the motor-vehicle service, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 6 of the act of February 28, 1925 (43 Stat. 1060, 1061, U. S. C., title 39, sec. 116), is amended by adding the following:

"Clerks and general mechanics in the motor-vehicle service shall be promoted successively after one year's satisfactory service in each grade, to the next higher grade, until they receive the maximum pay prescribed for clerks and general mechanics in the reclassification act of February 28, 1925. In computing one year's satisfactory service, employees shall receive credit for time served in the grades established by the Postmaster General prior to January 1, 1925, as well as the grades created by the act of February 28, 1925, and the compensation of employees in the motor-vehicle service on January 1, 1925, shall be adjusted accordingly."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The bill (H. R. 13450) to provide for the promotion of clerks, general mechanics, driver mechanics, and garage men drivers in the motor-vehicle service was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 6 of the act of February 28, 1925 (43 Stat. 1060, 1061, U. S. C., title 39, sec. 116), is amended by adding the following:

"In making promotions after one year's satisfactory service since the last promotion, clerks, general mechanics, driver mechanics, and garage men drivers in the motor-vehicle service, who have been transferred from one post office to another and who have not reached the maximum grade to which they are entitled to progress automatically, shall be given credit for previous service in the same capacity at other post offices, the same as if all service had been performed at one post office. This provision of law shall be effective as of January 1, 1925, and thereafter."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RECEIPTS FOR ORDINARY MAIL

The bill (H. R. 56) to authorize the Postmaster General to issue receipts to senders for ordinary mail of any character and to fix the fees chargeable therefor was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TRANSPORTATION OF FOREIGN MAILS

The bill (H. R. 6865) to prescribe more definitely the rates of compensation payable to steamships of United States registry for transportation of foreign mails was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RECIPROCAL FREE POSTAGE FOR DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENCE

The bill (H. R. 12415) to grant freedom of postage in the United States domestic service to the correspondence of the members of the diplomatic corps and consuls of the countries of the Pan American Postal Union stationed in the United States was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SUBSTITUTE CLERKS SERVING AS SPECIAL-DELIVERY MESSENGERS

The bill (S. 4981) to include in the credit for time served allowed substitute clerks in first and second class post offices and letter carriers in the City Delivery Service time served as special-delivery messengers was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the second proviso of section 4 of the act entitled "An act reclassifying salaries of postmasters and employees of the Postal Service, readjusting their salaries and compensations on an equitable basis, increasing postal rates to provide for such readjustment, and for other purposes," approved February 28, 1925 (43 Stat. 1059; U. S. C., title 39, sec. 108), is amended to read as follows:

"That hereafter substitute clerks in first and second class post offices and substitute letters carriers in the City Delivery Service when appointed regular clerks or carriers shall have credit for actual time served, including time served as special-delivery messengers, on a basis of one year for each 306 days of eight hours served as substitute or messenger, and shall be appointed to the grade to which such clerk or carrier would have progressed had his original appointment as substitute been to grade 1."

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RELIEF OF POSTMASTERS

The bill (S. 5255) for the relief of present and former postmasters and acting postmasters, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That on and after July 1, 1929, the provisions of section 6 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes," approved May 10, 1916, as amended by the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, and for other purposes," approved August 29, 1916, shall not be construed to apply where the total amount of the salaries actually paid to postal employees does not exceed $2,000 per annum, and such employees shall be paid for services notwithstanding sections 1764 and 1765 of the Revised Statutes: Provided, That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit the accounts of present and former postmasters and acting postmasters with payments made by them to postal employees, mail messengers, and other employees of the United States for dual services in post offices prior to July 1, 1929, contrary to said provisions of law and also the provisions of sections 412 and 3850 of the Revised Statutes, and section 226 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States," approved March 4, 1909; and an appropriation of such sum as may be necessary is authorized to be appropriated out of postal revenues to enable the Comptroller General of the United States, where there is no other appropriation available, to credit said accounts and/or to pay to postal employees, mail messengers, and other employees of the United States sums refunded by them, or deducted from balances due to them by the United States, for dual services in post offices to and including June 30, 1929, under the laws herein named, as shown by the records of the General Accounting Office.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of that measure.

Mr. PHIPPS. Mr. President, perhaps I may give the Senator the information that is desired. I think the report on the bill covers it pretty thoroughly. In certain cases where special work was required of employees of the Post Office Department that work was assigned to them, overlooking the fact that there was a governmental regulation prohibiting the payment of two salaries to any individual. This is to cover a time when that had not been provided for.

Mr. KING. Does it not apply to the future as well as to the past?

Mr. PHIPPS. True. On their own responsibility, no doubt in ignorance of the law, postmasters have utilized the services of regular salaried employees in a dual capacity where the combined rate of salary or pay exceeded $2,000 per annum. They have employed substitutes to perform temporary service as laborers, and laborers to perform temporary service as substitutes. This is to enable the department to straighten them out on the compensation which is justly due the people who performed the work.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

F. STANLEY MILLICHAMP

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I was necessarily absent from the Chamber when we started on the calendar. I did not know that we were going to start on it. I understand that Order of Business 1572, House bill 11064, went over at the request of the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING]. It is a bill for the relief of F. Stanley Millichamp.

I just want to say that that bill is for the relief of a man on the Yakima Indian Reservation whose orchard was very badly damaged by fire set by the Government agents there, who permitted it to get into his orchard; and it damaged quite a good many of the trees, as set out in the report. The bill has passed the House and has been favorably reported by the Senate committee. The amount allowed is not all that the man claimed, by any means; but the report sets out the number of trees damaged, the estimated value, and so forth. I hope the Senator will withdraw his objection.

Mr. KING. Why does he not sue the Government agents for tort? Why is the Government responsible for the misdeeds of some particular man?

Mr. JONES. They might not be termed "misdeeds." The Government agents were cleaning up some adjoining land and started a fire on that land for a legitimate purpose; but they allowed the fire to get beyond their control, and possibly they were not negligent, but probably it was something they could not help. At any rate, this man certainly is not responsible at all. There was very severe damage to his orchard; and, as I say, the compensation carried by the bill is nothing like the amount by which he really thinks he was damaged.

I hope the Senator will withdraw his objection.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I will withdraw my objection; but there is no question but that this is a bad precedent. We are providing now for making the Federal Government liable for every delinquency of its employees in every department, for their torts and misdeeds, no matter whether the damages are direct or consequential. The Federal Government is assuming the responsibility; and I give warning to the Senator that he is establishing a precedent and announcing a rule here that will be very dangerous to the Federal Government.

Mr. JONES. I hardly think that is the case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 11064) for the relief of F. Stanley Millichamp.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, after line 2, to strike out "That the sum of $4,042 is hereby authorized to be paid" and insert "That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $4,042," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $4,042 to F. Stanley Millichamp, of Wapato, Wash., in full settlement of all claims against the Government for the burning of his orchard, and the damages resulting therefrom, caused by a fire set by Government employees under the Bureau of Indian Affairs of the Department of the Interior.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

ROY M. LISSO, TRUSTEE

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to recur to Order of Business 1574, Senate bill 4819.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BRATTON in the chair). The Senator from Louisiana asks unanimous consent to return to Order of Business 1574. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 4819) for the relief of Roy M. Lisso, liquidating trustee of the Pelican Laundry (Ltd.), which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to adjust and settle the claim of Roy M. Lisso, liquidating trustee of the Pelican Laundry (Ltd.), on account of work performed in May, June, and July, 1918, by the Pelican Laundry (Ltd.), the French Unique, and the Frazee Hat Co. in laundering and dry cleaning equipment of the United States Army, and to allow said claim in an amount not exceeding $17,212.65 in full and final settlement of any and all claims arising out of work performed by either or all of said companies during the period mentioned. The sum of $17,212.65, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated for the payment of said claim.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AIR MAIL CONTRACTS

The bill (S. 5443) to enable the Postmaster General to make contracts for the transportation of mails by air from island possessions of the United States to foreign countries and to the United States and between such island possessions, and to authorize him to make contracts with private individuals and corporations for the conveyance of mails by air in foreign countries, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the word "possessions," to insert "and Territories"; and on page 2, line 24, after the word "plus," to strike out "$3" and insert "$1," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of March 8, 1928, entitled "An act to grant authority to the Postmaster General to enter into contracts for the transportation of mails by air to foreign countries and insular possessions and Territories of the United States for periods of not more then 10 years and to pay for such service at fixed rates per pound or per mile, and for other purposes," be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SECTION 1. When in his judgment the public interest will be promoted thereby the Postmaster General is authorized to enter into contracts for air mail service on routes between the United States and possessions of the United States, between possessions of the United States, between the United States or possessions of the United States and foreign countries, and in and between foreign countries, for the transportation of mails of the United States and its possessions both ways over the routes, and in addition thereto mails of other countries on the outbound or the inbound flights under arrangements he may make with such countries, for periods of not more than 10 years, and to pay for such service at fixed rates per pound and/or per mile; and the Postmaster General is hereby authorized to award such contracts to the bidders that he shall find to be the lowest responsible bidders that can satisfactorily perform the service required to the best advantage of the Government: Provided, That the rate to be paid for such service for the load of mails provided by the Postmaster General to be carried in a plane shall not in any case exceed $2 per mile each way, plus $1 per pound per thousand miles, or pro rata thereof for greater or less mileage, for any mails required to be carried in the same plane in excess of the specified load, and that, at the request of the Postmaster General, domestic mail shall be conveyed without additional charge on that part of the route in the United States to the border of the United States and to intermediate points: Provided further, That the Postmaster General may make arrangements with concessionaires operating air mail service in foreign countries for transportation by their service of mails of the United States and its possessions: And provided further, That in the award and interpretation of the contracts herein authorized the decision of the Postmaster General shall be final and not subject to review by any officer or tribunal of the United States except by the President and the Federal courts.

"SEC. 2. The Postmaster General shall make and issue such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

"SEC. 3. All contracts heretofore made by the Postmaster General under section 1 of the act of March 8, 1928, entitled 'An act to grant authority to the Postmaster General to enter into contracts for the transportation of mails by air to foreign countries and insular possessions of the United States for periods of not more than 10 years and to pay for such service at fixed rates per pound or per mile, and for other purposes,' as originally enacted, may be amended under agreement of the parties thereto so as to provide for the transportation of excess mails and for transportation not covered by the existing contract of mails of the United States and its possessions or of foreign countries, at not exceeding the contract rate per mile and not exceeding the rates per pound provided in section 1 hereof for excess mails."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF POSTAL RECLASSIFICATION ACT

The bill (S. 5040) to amend the act entitled "An act reclassifying the salaries of postmasters and employees of the Postal Service, readjusting their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis, increasing postal rates to provide for such readjustment, and for other purposes," approved February 28, 1925, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of that bill.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, the explanation will be found in full in the report accompanying the measure.

This bill is designed to correct the last inconsistency arising from the salary act of February 28, 1925. We discovered, in the application of that act, that a fourth-class postmaster, as soon as his cancellations and receipts reached the point where he would be entitled to more than the $1,000 salary which is provided under the old act, was immediately penalized upon going into the next class; so we merely established another grade.

The chances are that within a year the figures will show that the amount of money saved will take care of the $100 increase in salary. I will not guarantee that to the Senator from Utah, but it is my conviction that we shall presently find that to be the fact.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator whether this increase extends to all grades?

Mr. MOSES. Oh, no! This is merely as a postmaster passes from the fourth class into the third class—that is, from the class where the appointment is made by the Postmaster General into the class where the appointment is made by the President.

Mr. KING. My information is, generally speaking, that the estimates of the receipts of the Post Office Department for the current year will show a deficit of more than $9,000,000.

Mr. MOSES. Personally, Mr. President, I shall be very happy if it is not more than that.

Mr. KING. Up to date it is $9,000,000; and I prophesy that it will be perhaps forty or fifty millions before the end of the fiscal year.

Mr. MOSES. I should not go that far, but I think it is going to be considerably more than $9,000,000. However, this particular measure will not especially contribute to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with amendments, on page 2, line 14, after "$1,400," to strike out "$1,900 but less than $2,100, $1,400"; in line 18, after "$1,900," to strike out "$2,400" and insert "$4,200"; and on page 3, line 15, after "$1,900," to strike out "por" and insert "per," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That so much under the heading "Classification of postmasters" of section 1 of the act entitled "An act reclassifying the salaries of postmasters and employees of the Postal Service, readjusting their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis, increasing postal rates to provide for such readjustment, and for other purposes," approved February 28, 1925 (U. S. C. title 39, sec. 53), as reads, "The third class shall embrace all those whose annual salaries are less than $2,400 but not less than $1,100," is amended, to take effect July 1, 1929, so as to read: "The third class shall embrace all those whose annual salaries are less than $2,400 but not less than $1,200."

SEC. 2. The fourth paragraph, under the heading "Reclassification of postal salaries," of section 1 of such act (U. S. C. title 39, secs. 54 and 81) is amended, to take effect July 1, 1929, to read as follows:

"Third class—$1,500 but not less than $1,600, $1,200; $1,600 but less than $1,800, $1,300; $1,800 but less than $2,100, $1,400; $2,100 but less than $2,400, $1,500; $2,400 but less than $2,700, $1,600; $2,700 but less than $3,000, $1,700; $3,000 but less than $3,500, $1,800; $3,500 but less than $4,200, $1,900; $4,200 but less than $5,000, $2,000; $5,000 but less than $6,000, $2,100; $6,000 but less than $7,000, $2,200; $7,000 but less than $8,000, $2,300: Provided, That when the gross postal receipts of a post office of the third class for each of two consecutive calendar years are less than $1,500, or when in any calendar year the gross postal receipts are less than $1,400, it shall be relegated to the fourth class: Provided, That postmasters at offices of the third class shall be granted for clerk hire an allowance of $330 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $1,200 per annum; an allowance of $420 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $1,300 per annum; an allowance of $510 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $1,400 per annum; an allowance of $600 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $1,500 per annum; an allowance of $690 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $1,600 per annum; an allowance of $780 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $1,700 per annum; an allowance of $870 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $1,800 per annum; an allowance of $960 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $1,900 per annum; an allowance of $1,050 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $2,000 per annum; an allowance of $1,140 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $2,100 per annum; an allowance of $1,400 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $2,200 per annum; an allowance of $1,600 per annum where the salary of the postmaster is $2,300 per annum: Provided further, That the Postmaster General may modify these allowances for clerk hire to meet varying needs, but in no case shall they be reduced by such modification more than 25 per cent: Provided, however, That the aggregate of such allowances, as modified, shall not exceed in any fiscal year the aggregate of allowances herein prescribed for postmasters of the third class."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AUTHORITY OF COMMISSIONERS TO CLOSE STREETS IN THE DISTRICT

The bill (S. 5121) to amend the act entitled "An act to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to close certain streets, roads, or highways in the District of Columbia rendered useless or unnecessary by reason of the opening, extension, widening, or straightening, in accordance with the highway plan of other streets, roads, or highways in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved January 30, 1925, was announced as next in order.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator who reported that bill what effect it will have on the opening of Fourteenth Street through the Walter Reed Hospital reservation?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, that and several other questions that have arisen since the bill was reported have necessitated some additional amendments that are now in course of preparation, and I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

SUBSTITUTE SEA POST CLERKS

The bill (H. R. 58) to authorize the assignment of railway postal clerks and substitute railway postal clerks to temporary employment as substitute sea post clerks was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 15279) for the relief of the family of Wang Erh-Ko was announced as next in order.

Mr. BLEASE. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK BOUNDARY COMMISSION

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 206) to authorize the President of the United States to appoint a Yellowstone National Park Boundary Commission to inspect the areas involved in the proposed adjustment of the southeast, south, and southwest boundaries of the Yellowstone National Park, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to appoint a commission, consisting of five members, to be known as the Yellowstone National Park Boundary Commission, whose duty it shall be to inspect the areas involved in the proposed adjustment of the southeast, south, and southwest boundaries of the Yellowstone National Park, and report to the President its recommendations concerning such adjustment. The necessary expenses of such inspection shall be paid from any appropriation available for Yellowstone National Park.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask whether there is any limitation upon the life of this commission. We have appointed commissions from the beginning of the Government, and after they are appointed they never die. They find an excuse to perpetuate their existence.

Mr. KENDRICK. Mr. President, this joint resolution is to conclude the work of a boundary commission appointed by the President some time ago which made its report, and in the main the report was accepted and approved; but there are one or two other sections of the boundary which are still in controversy and which were not acceptable to the interested States, Wyoming and Idaho. It seemed, under the circumstances, that the best way out of the difficulty was to have a more complete and detailed survey made. This joint resolution is intended to take care of that situation, and to provide the Congress with the information it needs to determine exactly what ought to be done in connection with the proposed changes in the boundary.

Mr. KING. Would the Senator object to an amendment requiring the commission—because I feel sure that if the amendment is not offered it will prolong its existence—to make a final report by a certain date?

Mr. KENDRICK. I have no objection if the amendment is drawn so as to impose a reasonable limitation.

Mr. KING. I suggest the following amendment:

Provided, That said commission shall submit a final report to Congress on or before January 1, 1930.

Mr. KENDRICK. Mr. President, I believe it should be "on or before January 1, 1931," because this is an extensive piece of work.

Mr. KING. That will be entirely satisfactory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Utah, as modified, will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert, at the end of the joint resolution, the following:

Provided, That said commission shall submit a final report to Congress on or before January 1, 1931.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AID TO SETTLERS ON FEDERAL RECLAMATION PROJECTS

The bill (S. 2829) to provide for aided and directed settlement on Federal reclamation projects was announced as next in order.

Mr. FESS. Mr. President, what is this bill?

Mr. KING. I should like an explanation of the bill. Is this the bill to allow a loan of $3,000 to every person upon reclamation projects?

Mr. KENDRICK. The provisions of this bill are materially different from those of the bill referred to by the Senator from Utah. It differs primarily in the fact that it places a limitation of $500,000 that may be loaned to settlers on reclamation projects who are unable to finance themselves locally in proceeding with their work of development. Owing to its unusual importance, I hope the Senator will permit it to be considered and passed.

Mr. FESS. I do not think it ought to be passed in five minutes.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Let it go over.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think the bill had better go over. I object to its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over on the objection of the Senator from North Carolina.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Farrell, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to each of the following bills:

H. R. 12032. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to readjust the pay and allowances of the commissioned and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service," approved June 10, 1922, as amended; and

H. R. 13097. An act for the relief of Thomas W. Moore.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to each of the following bills:

H. R. 6496. An act granting the consent of Congress to compacts or agreements between the States of New Mexico and Oklahoma with respect to the division and apportionment of the waters of the Cimarron River and all other streams in which such States are jointly interested;

H. R. 6497. An act granting the consent of Congress to compacts or agreements between the States of New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas with respect to the division and apportionment of the waters of the Rio Grande, Pecos, and Canadian or Red Rivers, and all other streams in which such States are jointly interested;

H. R. 6499. An act granting the consent of Congress to compacts or agreements between the States of New Mexico and Arizona with respect to the division and apportionment of the waters of the Gila and San Francisco Rivers and all other streams in which such States are jointly interested;

H. R. 7024. An act granting the consent of Congress to compacts or agreements between the States of Colorado and New Mexico with respect to the division and apportionment of the waters of the Rio Grande, San Juan, and Las Animas Rivers and all other streams in which such States are jointly interested; and

H. R. 7025. An act granting the consent of Congress to compacts or agreements between the States of Colorado, Oklahoma, and Kansas with respect to the division and apportionment of the waters of the Arkansas River and all other streams in which such States are jointly interested.

PENSIONS AND INCREASE OF PENSIONS

The bill (S. 4559) to revise and equalize the rate of pension to certain soldiers, sailors, and marines of the Civil War, to certain widows, former widows of such soldiers, sailors, and marines, and granting pensions and increase of pensions in certain cases, was announced as next in order.

Mr. NORBECK. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

FEDERAL PRISON CAMPS

The bill (H. R. 11285) to establish Federal prison camps was announced as next in order.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, I would like to have some one state what this bill means. Does it mean that Federal prisoners are to be put out on the roads in camps? I would like to know whether that is the purpose of it. If no explanation is made, I ask that it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

FAMILY OF WANG ERH-KO

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I understand that the Senator from South Carolina objected to the consideration of House bill 15279, for the relief of the family of Wang Erh-Ko. He is now willing to withdraw his objection, and I ask unanimous consent that we may recur for a moment to that bill on the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the appropriation is hereby authorized, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, of the sum of $875 as indemnity to the family of Wang Erh-Ko, late of the city of Peking, in the Republic of China, deceased, who was killed on January 4, 1927, by being struck by an automobile negligently operated, not in the line of duty, by members of the United States Legation guard in said Peking; such indemnity to be used for the purchase, on terms satisfactory to the American minister at Peking, of an annuity for the family of Wang Erh-Ko.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDNANCE MATERIAL FOR THE NAVY

The bill (H. R. 5491) to amend an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes," approved July 12, 1921, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. KING. I would like to have an explanation of that bill.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, it has been the practice of the Navy Department to make transfers of used or obsolescent material of the Bureau of Ordnance to other bureaus of the Navy Department and to other departments of the Government; such transfers of used and obsolescent material have resulted in considerable economy to the Government by saving the cost of purchasing new material.

Such material acquired by the Bureau of Ordnance since July 12, 1921, can not now be transferred by reason of the provision contained in the naval appropriation act of July 12, 1921, that is—

That hereafter no money appropriated for ordnance or ordnance material or materials purchased therewith shall be used for any other purpose than that for which appropriation was made.

This provision restricts and makes illegal the transfer of such used and obsolescent material and will finally prohibit transfers altogether.

The purpose of this bill is to so amend the act of July 12, 1921, that for the purpose of economy and saving of cost to the Government such transfers may continue to be made.

This bill provides that certain material can be transferred to the other departments or to other bureaus of the Navy Department, though the appropriation was not made specifically for that purpose. It would save money to the Government.

Mr. KING. Will this bill permit the Navy Department or any branch of it, when it receives an appropriation for a specific purpose and does not use it, to divert it and use it for some other purpose?

Mr. HALE. Not at all, Mr. President.

Mr. KING. That practice, I am afraid, is becoming too general. Instead of the money being covered back into the Treasury, where it should go if it is not used, it is manipulated, and I do not use the term in any offensive sense, and used for some other purpose.

Mr. HALE. I agree with the Senator that that should not be done.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment, on page 2, line 1, to strike out the words "apply to" and insert in lieu thereof the words "prohibit the transfer to other bureaus or departments of," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the second proviso under the heading "Contingent, Bureau of Ordnance," contained in the naval appropriation act approved July 12, 1921 (42 Stat. L. 128), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Provided further, That hereafter no money appropriated for ordnance or ordnance material or material purchased therewith shall be used for any other purpose than that for which the appropriation was made, except that this provision shall not prohibit the transfer to other bureaus or departments of used or obsolescent material which is no longer needed for the purpose for which originally acquired.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

NAVAL DENTAL CORPS

The bill (S. 2068) for the relief of certain officers of the Dental Corps of the United States Navy was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I would like to have an explanation of the bill.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, this bill was introduced by the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SCHALL]. He is absent from the Chamber, but I think he is on his way here. I have a copy of a report from the Secretary of the Navy, which is very short, and, if it be read, I am sure it will satisfy all Senators. I might say that the bill is purely for precedence purposes. It will not cost the Government any additional money, as the Secretary of the Navy says, and I think his letter would better be read. It is very short.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, January 25, 1929.

The CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: In my letter to you dated February 25, 1928, certain comment was made upon the bill H. R. 480 "For the relief of certain officers of the Dental Corps of the United States Navy." In that letter you were informed that the bill H. R. 480 had been referred to the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, who had informed the Navy Department that the enactment of the proposed bill was in conflict with the financial program of the President.

I have the honor to invite your attention to paragraph 3 of my letter dated February 25, 1928, which reads as follows:

"The enactment of the proposed legislation would not directly result in any increased cost to the Government. It would, however, advance Lieut. Commander John R. Barber, Dental Corps, United States Navy, to a position where he would be eligible for selection for promotion to commander, and, if selected after the passage of the bill H. R. 480, he would be advanced in date of promotion from approximately January 1, 1929, to the date of the act, and the cost to the Government would be at the rate of $600 per annum for such period."

Since the above was written, Lieutenant Commander Barber, Dental Corps, United States Navy, has been selected for promotion to the rank of commander, and is now eligible for promotion to that rank upon the promotion of his running mate, which will occur on or before February 17, 1929. Should the bill be enacted after promotion to the rank of commander of Lieutenant Commander Barber, Dental Corps, United States Navy, no additional cost will result. It will merely permit his active service (about seven months) as an assistant dental surgeon to be counted for precedence purposes. This service is already counted for pay purposes.

The bill, if enacted, will result in his having a new running mate assigned and will permit him to become eligible for selection to the rank of captain at an earlier date. However, no change in pay period will be involved in that promotion. Consequently, no additional cost will be involved.

On January 8, 1929, the above additional information as to cost was referred to the Bureau of the Budget. Under date of January 17, 1929, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget advised the Navy Department that since no additional cost would be involved under the provisions of the bill H. R. 480, that the relationship of the matter to the financial program of the President is not involved.

In view of the above, the Navy Department recommends that the bill H. R. 480 be enacted.

Sincerely yours, CURTIS D. WILBUR,
Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. KING. I think the bill had better go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

POTASH PRODUCTION

The bill (H. R. 496) authorizing an appropriation for development of potash jointly by the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Commerce by improved methods of recovering potash from deposits in the United States was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OPEN EXECUTIVE SESSIONS

The resolution (S. Res. 309) to amend Rule XXXVIII so as to provide for consideration in open executive sessions of certain nominations was announced as next in order.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Let that go over.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, the resolution may just as well be indefinitely postponed, because there is another resolution that takes the place of it. Let it be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate Resolution 309 will be indefinitely postponed.

NAVAL POST 110, AMERICAN LEGION

The bill (H. R. 12607) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy, in his discretion, to deliver to the custody of Naval Post 110, of the American Legion, the bell of the battleship Connecticut was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WARRANT OFFICERS, UNITED STATES NAVY

The bill (H. R. 5713) to permit certain warrant officers to count all active service rendered under temporary appointments as warrant or commissioned officers in the regular Navy, or as warrant or commissioned officers in the United States Naval Reserve Force, for the purpose of promotion to chief warrant rank, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. KING. I would like to have an explanation of the bill.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, the purpose of this bill is to remedy an injustice now suffered by some 15 pay clerks and some 70 other warrant officers by permitting their war service to be counted toward promotion from warrant-officer grade to commissioned-warrant grade.

Under the provisions of existing law boatswains, gunners, carpenters, machinists, and pharmacists become eligible for promotion to commissioned warrant rank "after six years from the date of warrant." Such warrant officers, therefore, in computing the 6-year period required for promotion to chief warrant rank are permitted to count all service rendered by them from the date of warrant, including service as temporary commissioned officers in the regular Navy during war period. However, with respect to pay clerks the law is different; such officers, under act of March 3, 1915, become eligible for promotion to commissioned warrant rank of chief pay clerk only after six years' service as such pay clerk, not being permitted to count any prior or other service.

During the war many of these pay clerks were given temporary appointments as commissioned officers in the regular Navy, but upon reversion to their permanent warrant status as pay clerks such commissioned war service can not be counted for the purpose of promotion to chief pay clerk, because the law specifically requires such persons to render six years' service as a pay clerk before becoming eligible for promotion to the grade of chief clerk. All that this bill does is to put pay clerks on the same basis with the other warrant officers, which would be only fair to them.

Mr. KING. That is to say, clerks are to be promoted to be officers?

Mr. HALE. Pay clerks are entitled to warrant rank.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MACKENZIE MEMORIAL HOSPITAL, CHINA

The bill (H. R. 13428) for the relief of Mackenzie Memorial Hospital and German-American Hospital and Lau Ye Kun, all of Tientsin, China, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, why did not that bill go to the Committee on Foreign Relations? I have looked into the bill, and it seems to be entirely all right, but I think that bills of such a nature always go to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. HALE. I can not answer the Senator's question. The bill came to the Committee on Naval Affairs because it was considered in the House by the Naval Affairs Committee.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I have no objection to it, except that we just passed a bill, House bill 15279, which is similar to this one, and which went to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. HALE. Does the Senator want to have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Not at all. I was just asking why it was not referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REPORTS TO CONGRESS

The bill (S. 5621) to repeal paragraphs 127 and 128 of the act entitled "An act to discontinue certain reports now required by law to be made to Congress," approved May 29, 1928, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraphs 127 and 128 of the act entitled "An act to discontinue certain reports now required by law to be made to Congress," approved May 29, 1928, are hereby repealed.

SEC. 2. The reports of the acts of the Philippine Legislature referred to in paragraph 127 of such act of May 29, 1928, and the acts and resolutions of the Legislature of Porto Rico referred to in paragraph 128 of such act of May 29, 1928, shall be continued as if such act of May 29, 1928, had not been enacted.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FEDERAL CONSTRUCTION CO. (INC.)

The bill (S. 4817) for the relief of the Federal Construction Co. (Inc.) was announced as next in order.

Mr. BLEASE. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

RELIEF OF CERTAIN ARMY OFFICERS

The bill (H. R. 4266) for the relief of certain officers and former officers of the Army of the United States, and for the settlement of individual claims approved by the War Department, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I would like to have an explanation of that. Why should the Government be responsible? Let it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ERNEST J. HISCOCK

The bill (H. R. 4267) for the relief of Ernest J. Hiscock was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRANK F. MOORE

The bill (H. R. 3949) for the relief of Frank F. Moore was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. OVERMAN. I would like to have the bill read. The title does not always state what a bill is for.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General is authorized and directed to credit the account of Frank F. Moore, postmaster at Roscoe, Ill., in the sum of $102, such sum representing the deficit in the account of the said Frank F. Moore, caused by fire to the post office on November 10, 1926, and for which casualty the said Frank F. Moore was in no way responsible.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM J. CASEY

The bill (H. R. 10624) for the relief of William J. Casey was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Treasurer of the United States is hereby directed to pay to William J. Casey, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,440 in full payment of claims against the United States for disability caused by injuries received while employed in the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army at Fort Gibbon, Alaska.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LITTLE ROCK COLLEGE, LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

The bill (S. 1109) for the relief of Little Rock College, Little Rock, Ark., was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 6, to strike out "$670.09" and to insert in lieu thereof "$1,451.41," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to reopen and allow credit in the property accounts of the Little Rock College, Little Rock, Ark., in the sum of $1,451.41, representing certain articles of ordnance, quartermaster, and engineer property for which the said Little Rock College is held liable on reports or surveys, as follows: Nos. 7, 8, 11, 12, approved January 13, 1926, and No. 10, approved January 5, 1926.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES M. THOMAS

The bill (H. R. 1939) for the relief of James M. Thomas was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SALMON PROPAGATION IN THE COLUMBIA RIVER DISTRICT

The bill (S. 4841) establishing a fund for the propagation of salmon in the Columbia River district was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments. The first amendment was, on page 1, line 5, after the word "hereby," to insert the words "authorized to be."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator from Oregon to make a brief explanation of what the bill would accomplish. I make the inquiry because a few years ago evidence was brought to the attention of the Senate, or at least to some of the committee, that licenses were given to the so-called canning trust—and I do not use the term "trust" offensively—under which it was denuding the salmon streams, and the loss of salmon in many of the streams was directly due to the maladministration of the law and to the privileges which were granted to salmon fishery organizations, that have a sort of a combine, as it was claimed, and that as a result of the conduct of the Government we might expect that all the streams would soon be denuded of their salmon.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the situation described by the Senator from Utah does not exist at all in the northwestern section of the United States. I can not speak for the industry in the New England States.

Mr. KING. If the Senator will pardon me, the evidence to which I have referred related to the Northwest, and was brought to our attention particularly by the representative from Alaska. The Senator will recall that we had some legislation restricting the power of the Department of Commerce to license those canning industries.

Mr. McNARY. I do recall that. It related to the fisheries in Alaska waters, where they have what they called the king salmon, which is comparable to the chinook salmon of the Columbia River. But that affected only what they called the "escapement," the number of salmon permitted to escape the nets and go into the upper waters for the purposes of spawning. That is not this situation at all.

In the estuary of the Columbia River, the dividing line between the States of Oregon and Washington, is a submerged island known as Sand Island. Originally that was a part of the mainland, a part of the Territory of Oregon.

In 1862 the Government attempted to fasten its claim to the island for military purposes, and after an opinion of the Department of Justice it was found that the State had fee simple title to the island. During the administration of President Lincoln, when Mr. Stanton was Secretary of War, the Government asked the State Legislature of Oregon to cede that island to the Government for military purposes only. The State of Oregon, complying with that request, did transfer the title to the Government for military purposes, as this was an outpost on the Columbia River, a most excellent place, at least at that time thought to be, for military purposes.

Subsequently the Government acquired property from the State on the south bank of the river, which is in the State of Oregon, where we now have Fort Stevens, an Army post. It never used Sand Island for military purposes. But during all of these years it has collected from the fishermen there and the cannery men fees and licenses until there has been an accumulation, over these years, of practically half a million dollars.

The States of Oregon and Washington are claiming that that money was collected in violation of the reason which induced the State of Oregon to convey the title to the Government, and that it ought to go back to the industry from which it was collected, namely, the salmon industry along the Columbia River, and the basin.

This money is not to be turned over to the States of Oregon and Washington. It is to be given to the Bureau of Fisheries of the Department of Commerce, with instructions that the money must be used for the maintenance and propagation of the salmon industry, from which the money came.

As a matter of justice, as a matter of decency, as a matter of principle, and also for a good use, I am asking that this money may be turned over to the Government through the agency of the Bureau of Fisheries to promote the industry which made the contribution.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator whether the fund is still intact in the Treasury of the United States?

Mr. McNARY. I can not say as to that. Probably it has become mixed with other funds after these long years.

Mr. KING. So it will require an appropriation from the Treasury?

Mr. McNARY. This is merely an authorization. I think, so long as there has been a misapplication of the use of the property which the State surrendered, that the money collected by the Government ought to go back to the industry. We are not asking that it go back to the State, but to that great industry which needs propagation and which is a great resource to those Western States.

Mr. KING. I think the State is a little slow in asserting its rights, whether moral or legal.

Mr. McNARY. I may say in answer to the Senator that it was not until the month of November of last year that the court of appeals, sitting in San Francisco, determined that the title still remained in the Government. There has been a dispute between the States of Washington and Oregon over the title, which was determined only last November. Immediately after that determination and as expeditiously as I could I prepared the bill, with the encouragement of the industry and the fishermen, and the Department of Commerce, which has recommended it.

Mr. KING. May I make just one further observation? Does the Senator believe, if the authorization is granted and the appropriation is made and the fish industry is developed pursuant to the bill, that there will be fair protection for the poor fishermen? I have had one hundred or two hundred letters from those poor fishermen along the Alaskan coast from the mouth of the Columbia River up—not so much from those fishing in the Columbia River—protesting against the injustice of the Department of Commerce in granting, as they did a few years ago, exclusive rights to some of the big canning industries, as a result of which some of the poor fishermen were driven out of business.

Mr. McNARY. If that were true, it would be a very just criticism, but I can state to the distinguished Senator from Utah that the mere preservation of the industry must in itself inure to the benefit of the poor fishermen. It has put him in business, and I do not know of any practice such as that about which the Senator complains. I am quite sure the Columbia River and its tributaries are free entirely from discriminations against the poor fisherman.

Mr. KING. The Senator will recall that the big canning companies put in traps and denuded some of the streams, and the men who had fished there for years were denied licenses and the fishing industry passed into the hands of a few big canning factories or trusts.

Mr. McNARY. I can assure the Senator we are working under a new era of freedom.

Mr. KING. I hope it is applicable to those fishermen in the North Pacific waters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The next amendments of the Committee on Commerce were, on page 1, line 8, after the word "received," to insert the numerals "1905"; in line 9, after the word "island," to strike out the word "Oregon" and to insert in lieu thereof the words "near the mouth of the Columbia River"; in line 10, before the word "grant," to insert the word "attempted"; and on page 2, line 12, after the word "moneys," to insert the words "authorized to be," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby established in the Treasury a fund to be known as the Columbia River salmon-propagation fund. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid into such fund, a sum equal to the sums heretofore received since 1905 by the United States as rental for fishing rights on Sand Island, near the mouth of the Columbia River, since the attempted grant of such land to the United States by the State of Oregon. All sums hereafter received by the United States as rental for fishing rights on such island shall be covered into such fund.

SEC. 2. All moneys in such fund are hereby reserved, set aside, and appropriated to be available for expenditure by the Secretary of Commerce for the propagation of salmon in the Columbia River district, including the establishment and operation of fish-cultural stations and fish hatcheries, the conduct of practical and scientific investigations and experiments relative to the salmon fisheries, and the diffusion of useful information relative thereto.

SEC. 3. No part of the moneys authorized to be appropriated by this act shall be expended in the construction, purchase, or enlargement of any fish hatchery or fish-cultural station or laboratory until the State in which such hatchery, station, or laboratory is to be located, through appropriate legislative action, shall accord to the United States Commissioner of Fisheries and his duly authorized agents the right to conduct fish hatching and fish culture and all operations connected therewith in any manner and at any time that may by the commissioner be deemed necessary and proper, any laws of the State to the contrary notwithstanding. The operation of any hatchery, station, or laboratory shall be suspended whenever the State ceases to accord such right, or whenever, in the judgment of the Secretary of Commerce, State laws and regulations affecting fish propagated are allowed to remain so inadequate as to impair the efficiency of such hatchery, station, or laboratory.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, while I am very heartily in favor of the bill which has just been passed and am very glad to have it passed, nevertheless I desire to have it understood that I take this view of any issue relating to the title to Sand Island. There is quite a controversy between the States of Oregon and Washington with reference to the ownership of the island known as Sand Island. If there is any statement in the report on the bill or made in the remarks of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] with reference to the title as giving it to Oregon, I simply want to take issue with such statements so that they may not be used hereafter in any possible controversy that might come up between the two States. I trust, however, the legislation being passed as it is, that there will be no further controversy between the two States in regard to Sand Island.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator does not want to be estopped?

Mr. JONES. No.

MONTANA STATE COLLEGE

The bill (H. R. 11510) for the relief of Montana State College was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, in line 11 the year "1927" should be "1923." I move that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 11 strike out "1927" and insert "1923," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and in full settlement against the Government, the sum of $8,535.87 to reimburse the Montana State College at Bozeman, Mont., for services rendered in providing and supervising special field instruction of project trainees under the vocational rehabilitation act, during the period from March 24, 1923, to June 30, 1923.

Mr. BLEASE. Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator what the bill means?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The circumstances giving rise to the claim are set forth in some detail in a letter accompanying the report from the Director of the Veterans' Bureau. The Veterans' Bureau entered into a contract with the Montana State College——

Mr. BLEASE. That is sufficient. I have no objection.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

CONSTRUCTION AT MILITARY POSTS

The bill (H. R. 13825) to authorize appropriations for construction at military posts and for other purposes was considered as in Committee of the Whole. The bill had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $16,619,210, to be expended for the construction and installation at military posts of such buildings and utilities and appurtenances thereto as may be necessary, as follows:

Albrook Field, Canal Zone: Dispensary, $30,000.

Corundu, Canal Zone: Barracks, $357,500.

France Field, Canal Zone: Barracks, $360,000; noncommissioned officers' quarters, $324,000; officers' quarters, $427,200; dispensary, $30,000.

Schofield Barracks, Hawaiian Department: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $100,000; officers' quarters, $300,000.

Wheeler Field, Hawaiian Department: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $111,600; officers' quarters, $150,000; dispensary, $40,000.

Porto Rico: Barracks, $144,000; noncommissioned officers' quarters, $119,000; officers' quarters, $396,250; nurses' quarters, $36,000; headquarters building, $20,000; chapel, $20,000; recreation hall, $10,000; storehouse, $15,000; garage and repair shop, $40,000; stables, $40,000; hay and forage shed, $3,000; wagon shed, $6,000; incinerator, $5,000; flagstaff, $500; hospital, $10,000.

Henry Barracks, Porto Rico: Barracks, $352,000; noncommissioned officers' quarters, $39,600; officers' quarters, $192,500; hospital, $35,000; stables, $24,000; hay and forage shed, $3,000; wagon shed, $4,000; guardhouse, $10,000; post exchange, $10,000; chapel, $20,000; headquarters building, $15,000; recreation hall, $10,000; storehouse, $15,000; maintenance building, $7,500; fire house, $7,500; bakery, $12,000.

Philippine Department: Signal depot warehouse, $49,000.

Camp Devens, Mass.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $36,000; officers' quarters, $164,000.

Fort Jay, N. Y.: Hospital, $400,000.

Mitchel Field, N. Y.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $216,000; officers' quarters, $660,000; hospital, $150,000.

Fort Monmouth, N. J.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $100,000; officers' quarters, $250,000.

Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y.: Barracks, $45,000; addition to hospital, $55,000.

Raritan Arsenal, N. J.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $42,000; hospital, $50,000.

Fort Slocum, N. Y.: Barracks, $180,000.

Fort Wadsworth, N. Y.: Barracks, $50,000; noncommissioned officers' quarters, $30,000.

Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.: Hospital, $60,000.

Carlisle Barracks, Pa.: Mess hall and kitchen, $110,000.

Fort Humphreys, Va.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $274,000.

Langley Field, Va.: Barracks, $764,160; noncommissioned officers' quarters, $216,000; officers' quarters, $480,000; hospital, $175,000; construction of a sea wall and for necessary fill, $200,000.

Fort Leonard Wood, Md.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $50,000; nurses' quarters, $40,000; officers' quarters, $210,000.

Fort Monroe, Va.: Officers' quarters, $200,000.

Fort Benning, Ga.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $526,000; officers' quarters, $114,000; dispensary, $60,000.

Fort Bragg, N. C.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $144,000; nurses' quarters, $60,000; officers' quarters, $496,000; hospital, $100,000.

Maxwell Field, Ala.: Officers' quarters, $300,000; barracks, $178,000; noncommissioned officers' quarters, $188,150; quartermaster warehouse, $45,000; quartermaster maintenance building, $15,000; garage, $40,000; fire station, $15,000; guardhouse, $20,000; post exchange, $25,000; ordnance magazine, $15,000; hospital, $75,000; stables, $20,000; railroad spur, $5,000; telephone and telegraph system, $31,250.

Camp McClellan, Ala.: Hospital, $100,000.

Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $54,000; service club, $50,000.

Erie Ordnance Depot, Ohio: Hospital, $75,000.

Fort Leavenworth, Kans.: Hospital ward, $75,000.

Marshall Field, Kans.: Barracks, $125,000; noncommissioned officers' quarters, $144,000; officers' quarters, $300,000.

Fort Riley, Kans.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $114,000; nurses' quarters, $36,000; officers' quarters, $50,000.

Fort Snelling, Minn.: Officers' quarters, $54,500.

Camp Normoyle, Tex.: Barracks, $180,000.

Fort Sam Houston, Tex.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $150,000; officers' quarters, $250,000.

San Antonio Primary Training School, San Antonio, Tex.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $61,200; officers' quarters, $600,000; completion of hospital, $50,000.

Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo.: Officers' quarters, $112,000; barracks, $40,000.

Fort Douglas, Utah: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $54,000; officers' quarters, $75,000.

Letterman General Hospital, California: Hospital ward, $150,000.

Camp Lewis, Wash.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $93,000; officers' quarters, $215,000.

March Field, Calif.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $100,800; hospital, $150,000.

Rockwell Field, Calif.: Noncommissioned officers' quarters, $108,000; officers' quarters, $150,000.

Army medical center, District of Columbia: Completion of Army Medical School, $840,000; addition to power plant, $50,000.

Walter Reed General Hospital, District of Columbia: Nurses' quarters, $300,000; chapel, $12,000, to be erected as supplementary to or in connection with the nonsectarian chapel, the erection of which was authorized by the act approved February 2, 1928; observation, tuberculosis, and infectious-disease wards and a laboratory and morgue, and the reconstruction of the third floor of the main building into an operating room, and for the necessary corridors, roads, walks, grading, utilities, and appurtenances thereto, $90,000.

Bolling Field, D. C., or at a point on a military reservation in the vicinity of the District of Columbia to be selected by the Secretary of War: Radio and communication center, $30,000.

SEC. 2. That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and empowered to acquire by purchase or condemnation real estate adjacent to Bolling Field, Washington, D. C., for extension and development of said flying field; and there is authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum not to exceed $666,000 for that purpose.

SEC. 3. That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $5,139,842, to be expended for the construction and installation at military posts and at airports and landing fields of such technical buildings and utilities and appurtenances thereto as may be necessary, as follows:

Panama Canal Department, Albrook Field: Concrete runways, $51,000.

France Field: Gas and oil storage system, $10,000; paint, oil, and dope warehouse and appurtenances to hangar, $13,016; concrete runway from hangars, $52,000; 6-inch gasoline pipe line from Coco Solo, $20,000; bombing range, $3,555.

Hawaiian Department, new site: Improvement to landing field, $623,000.

Hawaiian Department, air bases, $22,000.

Wheeler Field: Hangars and field shop, $79,000.

Boston Airport, East Boston, Mass., moving and reerecting technical buildings, $15,000.

Mitchel Field, Long Island, N. Y.: Hangars, field shops, field warehouse, $141,000; armament and parachute buildings, $5,000; central heating plants, $75,000.

Bolling Field, D. C.: Hangars, $90,000; field shop, $60,000; central heating plants, $50,000; parachute and armament building, $15,000; photographic building, $36,000; radio building, $10,000; concrete runways and aprons, $53,700.

Langley Field, Va.: Hangars, $524,590; field warehouse, $100,000; headquarters and operations building, $80,000; photo, radio, parachute, and armament buildings, $76,000; central heating plants, $100,000; gas and oil storage system, $10,000; paint, oil, and dope warehouse, $5,000; improvement of landing field, $85,000; concrete runways, $122,098.

Air Corps Tactical School, Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala.: Hangars, $210,500; field shop, $19,000; field warehouse, $60,000; armament and parachute building, $5,000; concrete runways, $50,000; gas and oil storage system, $5,000; school building, $100,000.

Shreveport, La. (attack wing): Hangars, $200,000; field shop, $50,000; field warehouse, $45,000; headquarters and operations buildings, $85,000; radio, parachute, and armament buildings, $25,000; gas and oil storage system, $10,000; improvement to landing field, $135,000.

Bowman Field, Louisville, Ky.: Hangar, $50,000; radio, photographic, and shops, $20,000; operations and administration building, $20,000; gas and oil storage system, $5,000; concrete runways, $13,000.

Fairfield Air Depot, Fairfield, Ohio: Hangars, $120,000; headquarters building, $40,000; central heating plant, $20,000; paint, oil, and dope warehouses, $20,000.

Chicago Municipal Airport, Chicago, Ill.: Completion of Army Air Corps hangar, $20,986.

Fort Leavenworth, Kans.: Completion of hangar, field shop, headquarters building, $35,000; central heating plants, $20,000.

Marshall Field, Fort Riley, Kans.: Completion of hangars, shops, and technical buildings, $55,000; central heating plant, $30,000.

Fort Crockett, Tex.: Night flying lighting system, $3,775; runways, $10,775.

Dryden, Tex.: Gasoline and oil storage system, $2,821; operations building, $5,000.

Duncan Field, San Antonio, Tex.: Hangars and depot shop building, $220,000; oil reclamation house, $13,000.

Lordsburgh, N. Mex.: Operations building, $5,000; gas and oil storage system, $2,821.

Randolph Field, Tex.: Hangars, $220,000; field shops, $38,000; concrete runways, $232,500.

Tucson, Ariz.: Operations building, $5,000; concrete floor in hangar, $1,705.

March Field, Riverside, Calif.: Hangars, field shops, field warehouse, $75,000; gasoline and oil storage system, $10,000; concrete runways, $104,000.

Rockwell Field, Calif.: Hangars and field warehouse, $45,000; field shop, $100,000; construction of concrete runways, $50,000.

SEC. 5. That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to transfer to the Petersburg National Military Park such portion of the Camp Lee Military Reservation, Va., as in his discretion may be required in connection with the establishment of the Petersburg National Military Park, as authorized by the act of Congress approved July 3, 1926.

SEC. 6. That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to sell, upon such terms and conditions as he considers advisable, to the Fishers Island Corporation, or its nominee, a tract of land containing 1⅛ acres, more or less, said tract now forming the extreme northeasterly corner of the Fort H. G. Wright Military Reservation, situate on Fishers Island, in the State of New York, which said tract is no longer needed for military purposes, and to execute and deliver in the name of the United States and in its behalf, with and to the said the Fishers Island Corporation, or its nominee, any and all contracts, conveyances, or other instruments necessary to effectuate such sale, the proceeds of the sale of the property hereinbefore designated to be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of the fund known as the military post construction fund: Provided, That the Secretary of War shall have the said tract surveyed and appraised at the expense of the Fishers Island Corporation: And provided further, That the Secretary of War shall not sell said tract for a less consideration than the appraised value hereinbefore referred to.

SEC. 7. That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to acquire, by purchase or otherwise, two tracts of land on the Atlantic seaboard, with necessary rights of way as may, in his discretion, be necessary in the proper defense of the Atlantic coast, and the sum of $20,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated from any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, which sum shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 8. That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $125,000 for the construction of a cannon powder blending unit at Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, N. J., to replace the one destroyed by fire on July 31, 1928.

SEC. 9. That a joint committee of Congress, to consist of five Senators, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and five Members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, is authorized and directed to make a full investigation of the problem of the control of aircraft for seacoast defense, and to recommend to Congress as soon as practicable such legislation concerning aerial coast defense as it shall deem necessary or proper.

For the purpose of this resolution such committee is authorized to hold hearings, to sit and act at such times and places, to employ such experts and clerical, stenographic, and other assistance, to require by subpœna or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, and to take such testimony and make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The expenses of the committee, which shall not exceed $2,000, shall be paid one-half from the contingent fund of the Senate and one-half from the contingent fund of the House of Representatives.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Pennsylvania explain what is proposed by the bill?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. It is an authorization bill to carry out the housing program which has been already determined and approved by Congress, and also to carry out the purchase of the technical buildings for the Air Corps in accordance with their building program.

I may say that Senators will be interested to know that it provides for the acquisition of the land south of Bolling Field so as to get those barracks and officers' quarters out of the swamp in which they are now. It also contains a number of other provisions which have either been passed by the Senate or by the House, and which it seemed desirable to embody in the one bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the Senator, before he leaves the Bolling Field item, tell us whether or not it is the purpose to build a real airport at Bolling Field—to enlarge the present one and build a strictly first-class airport.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes; it is the intention to make it first class, and we feel that it is not first class now.

Section 4 of the committee amendment with regard to the sale of a part of the land at Jeffersonville Barracks has been questioned by some Senators who say they want time to look into it. As the committee added it here more as a matter of convenience than anything else, I know that the committee would authorize me, in deference to the wishes of those Senators, to request that the committee amendment be amended by striking therefrom section 4, which relates to Jeffersonville Barracks.

Mr. SACKETT. The same matter is contained in another bill which is before the Senate now?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes. I know Senators will acquiesce in it when they have had time to look into it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment submitted by the Senator from Pennsylvania to the amendment of the committee will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 14, strike out section 4 of the committee amendment, as follows:

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to sell, or cause to be sold, at either public or private sale, upon terms and conditions deemed advisable by him, the land situated in the city of Jeffersonville, Clark County, Ind., lying along the Louisville & Jeffersonville Bridge & Railroad Co.'s railroad right of way, comprising an area of approximately 7 acres and designated as parcel No. 1 on map of Jeffersonville Quartermaster Depot, on file in the office of the Quartermaster General, United States of America: Provided, That the expense of sale be paid from the proceeds thereof and the net proceeds deposited in the Treasury of the military post construction fund: And provided further, That the Secretary of War be required to have the parcel of land hereby authorized to be conveyed duly appraised by competent and disinterested persons and that the consideration received for the conveyance of said land be not less than the appraised value thereof.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I desire to offer a further perfecting amendment. On page 16, line 19, in the first line of the second paragraph of section 9, I move to strike out the word "resolution" and insert the word "section."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, as this bill came from the House there were certain authorizations regarding Selfridge Field. They were stricken from the bill by the committee. Since that time there has been an opportunity for investigation to demonstrate their propriety, and I understand the committee is now ready to restore them. I therefore offer the amendment which I send to the desk which will accomplish this purpose.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. A report from the war-plans division of the General Staff approved the continuation of the airport at Selfridge Field, Mich. In view of that decision I know the committee would not care to persist in its position under the circumstances.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 12, after line 24, insert:

Selfridge Field, Mich: Officers' quarters, $465,000; construction of a sea wall and for a necessary fill, $230,400.

Selfridge Field, Mich: Hangars and field shop, $122,000; central heating plants, $60,000; concrete runways, $51,000; improvement of landing field, $125,000.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment striking out the word "concrete" at certain places in the bill and to insert in lieu thereof the word "paved."

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. That occurs in a number of places. The request from the War Department was for authorization for concrete. The Senator from Delaware suggests, and I think wisely, that we ought not to limit them to concrete as the material for paving. They ought to be allowed to use what in their opinion is the best paving material. Therefore I approve of the change of the word "concrete" to "paved" wherever it appears in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 11, in lines 3, 7, and 22, strike out the word "concrete" and insert in lieu thereof the word "paved"; on page 12, in lines 4, 9, and 19, strike out the word "concrete" and insert in lieu thereof the word "paved"; and on page 13, in lines 17, 18, 19, 22, 24, and 25, strike out the word "concrete" and insert in lieu thereof the word "paved."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I offer the following amendment to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 13, after line 19, insert the following:

Yuma, Ariz., operations, building, $5,000.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, by the act of Congress approved May 29, 1926, there has been set aside near Yuma, Ariz., 160 acres of land for an aviation field, but there is no building upon it. The land was reserved with the understanding that the field was to be leveled and made available for use by the board of supervisors of Yuma County. The act provides that the airport is reserved for use by the War Department at any time. I visited that field last summer and it is now a bare, level piece of ground entirely suitable for aviation purposes. Yuma is halfway between Tucson and Los Angeles and military airplanes frequently stop there. Authorization should be made for the construction of a building at a limit of cost of $5,000.

I ask to include as a part of my remarks a copy of the act to which I have referred, and direct particular attention to the last paragraph thereof.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The act referred to is as follows:

[Public, No. 314, 69th Cong.]

An act (H. R. 7911) to authorize the exchange of certain public lands and the establishment of an aviation field near Yuma, Ariz.

Be it enacted, etc., That in order that the entire southeast quarter of section 9, township 9, south of range 23, west of the Gila and Salt River meridian, Arizona, may be reserved for a public aviation field, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to issue unrestricted patent for any public land in said section 9 in exchange for the east half of the southeast quarter and the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of said section 9.

SEC. 2. That upon the exchange being completed, the entire southeast quarter of said section 9 shall be reserved as a public field for the landing and taking off of aircraft of all descriptions: Provided, That the board of supervisors of Yuma County, Ariz., shall by resolution agree to assume the expense of clearing and maintaining the field, and that the following conditions are agreed to:

That operators of Government-owned aircraft shall always have free and unrestricted use of said field; that rules and regulations governing the operation of aircraft upon said field shall include and coincide with rules and regulations prescribed and promulgated by the War Department; that Government departments and agencies operating aircraft shall have the right to erect and install upon said land such structures and improvements as the heads of such departments and agencies may deem advisable, including facilities for maintaining supplies of fuel, oil, and other materials for operating aircraft; that in case of emergency, or in the event that it shall be deemed advisable by the Secretary of War, the War Department may assume absolute control of the management and operation of said field.

Approved May 29, 1926.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I am glad to accept the amendment on the condition that the attitude of the conferees may be affected by a report from the War Department which we will ask for at once. We have no report from the War Department.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Arizona.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I ask unanimous consent that the clerk be authorized to correct the section numbers in so far as that action may be necessary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ESTATE OF EDGAR C. BRYON

The bill (H. R. 3967) for the relief of the next of kin of Edgar C. Bryon was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and in full settlement against the Government, the sum of $5,000 to the legal representatives of Edgar C. Bryon for his next of kin in full compensation for any claims arising out of death of such Edgar C. Bryon, who was struck and killed by an automobile truck in the service of the United States Post Office Department on October 2, 1919, in Brooklyn, N. Y., as a result of gross negligence on the part of the driver thereof and through no fault of his own, such driver having since been indicted for manslaughter in the second degree for such negligence.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS, DAYTON, OHIO

The bill (H. R. 132) authorizing the erection of a sanitary fireproof hospital at the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, at Dayton, Ohio, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers be, and it is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be erected at the central branch of said home at Dayton, Ohio, on land now owned by the United States, a sanitary fireproof hospital of a capacity for 500 beds. Such hospital shall include all the necessary buildings with the appropriate mechanical equipment, including roads and trackage facilities leading thereto, for the accommodation of patients, and storage, laundry, and necessary furniture equipment, and accessories, as may be approved by the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

SEC. 2. That in addition to the persons now by law entitled to the privileges of treatment in this hospital when constructed there shall be admitted and treated honorably discharged nurses (female) who have served with the armed forces of the United States in any war and who are disabled by diseases or wounds and by reason of such disability are either temporarily or permanently incapacitated from earning a living.

SEC. 3. That in carrying the foregoing authorization into effect the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers is hereby authorized to enter into contracts for the construction of the plant, or to purchase materials in the open market or otherwise, and to employ laborers and mechanics for the construction of the plant complete at a limit of cost not to exceed $1,500,000.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROCKY FORD NATIONAL BANK, ROCKY FORD, COLO.

The bill (H. R. 12714) for the relief of the Rocky Ford National Bank, Rocky Ford, Colo., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to redeem in favor of the Rocky Ford National Bank, of Rocky Ford, Colo., United States registered note No. K–1111428 in the denomination of $100 of the Victory Liberty loan 4¾ per cent convertible gold notes of 1922–23, inscribed "James O. Bartholemew," with interest from December 15, 1922, to May 20, 1923, without presentation of said note, the said note having been lost or destroyed after having been assigned in blank by the registered payee and being the property of the Rocky Ford National Bank; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to also redeem in favor of the Rocky Ford National Bank, Rocky Ford, Colo., United States coupon notes Nos. F–6055335, G–7693827, and L–12363810, each of the $50 denomination, of the Victory Liberty loan 4¾ per cent convertible gold notes of 1922–23, with interest from June 15, 1922, to December 15, 1922, in the case of the first note above described, and with interest from June 15, 1922, to May 20, 1923, in the case of the last two notes above described, without presentation of said notes, said notes having been lost or destroyed, and being the property of the Rocky Ford National Bank: Provided, That the said notes shall not have been previously presented to the Treasury Department under such circumstances as would necessitate their redemption in favor of the person, firm, or corporation presenting them: And provided further, That the Rocky Ford National Bank shall first file in the Treasury Department of the United States a bond in the penal sum of double the amount of the principal of the said notes and the unpaid interest which had accrued thereon when the principal became due and payable, in such form and with such surety or sureties as may be acceptable to the Secretary of the Treasury, with condition to indemnify and save harmless the United States from any loss on account of the notes hereinbefore described.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TALBIRD & JENKINS

The bill (H. R. 10913) to compensate Talbird & Jenkins for balance due on contracts with Navy Department dated March 20 and October 9, 1919, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay Thomas Talbird and Heyward Jenkins, attorneys, doing business under the firm name of Talbird & Jenkins, Beaufort, S. C., out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,000 in full payment for the balance due on account of professional services rendered by the said Talbird & Jenkins under contracts with the Navy Department dated March 20, 1919, and October 9, 1919.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES H. SALLEY

The bill (H. R. 9716) for the relief of Charles H. Salley was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, to Charles H. Salley, of Salley, S. C., the sum of $67 in full compensation for costs and disbursements as administrator of the estate of Jim Woodward, deceased.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONSTANT-FREQUENCY MONITORING RADIO STATION

The bill (S. 5550) to authorize the purchase by the Secretary of Commerce of a site, and the construction and equipment of a building thereon, for use as a constant-frequency monitoring radio station, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Commerce be, and he is hereby, authorized to purchase a suitable site, provided a suitable site now owned by the Government is not available for the purpose, and to contract for the construction thereon of a building suitable for installation therein of apparatus for use as a constant-frequency monitoring radio station, and for the construction of a suitable roadway, power, and communication facilities, at a cost not to exceed $50,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of that bill.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Utah that a year or so ago in an appropriation bill we made an appropriation with which to buy equipment, apparatus, and so forth, necessary in connection with certain radio work. Now, the department informs us that—

This apparatus has been contracted for and is now in the course of production. It will be the most accurate apparatus of its kind in use.

I will read just a brief paragraph showing what use will be made of it:

To get the highest degree of efficiency and the results desired it is considered necessary that the apparatus be placed at some point near the center of the United States. It must be away from populous sections, free from electrical disturbances caused by the operation of other electrical equipment, and some distance from power lines. Several surveys have been made to ascertain if a suitable building could be leased in a location which would give us the advantages sought. Being unable to find a suitable building, it is proposed that authority be obtained to purchase the land and erect a suitable building on a site which would insure the efficiency required.

The limit upon the cost of the site and building is that they shall not cost to exceed $50,000. In view of the tremendous expansion of the radio industry, and in view of the fact that we have authorized the purchase of the apparatus that is being secured, it seemed to the committee that it was very necessary to make provision for the site and building as recommended by the department.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COAST GUARD ACADEMY

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 16129) to provide for the acquisition of a site and the construction thereon and equipment of buildings and appurtenances for the Coast Guard Academy, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to acquire in fee simple without cost to the United States a suitable site at New London, Conn., and to construct and equip thereon such buildings and appurtenances as he may deem necessary for the purpose of the United States Coast Guard Academy, all at a total cost not to exceed $1,750,000, which amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby authorized to be appropriated.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of that bill.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, at the request of the Senator from Utah, I will be very glad to make a brief explanation. The Government has three commissioned services—the Army, Navy, and Coast Guard. For each of those commissioned services is maintained an academy, one at West Point for the Army, one at Annapolis for the Navy, and one at New London, Conn., for the Coast Guard. At West Point and at Annapolis the Government has provided beautiful buildings, adequate grounds, and ample facilities, so that the young men who go there to secure their education to prepare them for their commissions are very proud of their surroundings. For the Coast Guard Service, also a commissioned service, under a similar status in every other way, we have not provided anything except the rather dilapidated buildings of an old fort, built about 1812, and in addition, two or three wooden buildings which were erected during the war as temporary structures for war purposes. They are entirely inadequate and are a disgrace to the Government. Frequently when young men from different parts of the United States who go there to be trained to receive commissions in the Coast Guard see the buildings which the Government offers for their training they give up the opportunity and return home, because it is actually a disgrace that the Government should continue to maintain the school under such conditions.

The citizens of New London, realizing what was happening, and being desirous of having the students of the Coast Guard School proud of the school, have, at their own expense, purchased a beautiful site on the banks of the Thames River, near the Connecticut College, the site containing about 45 acres, which they propose to give to the Government, so that the Government will not spend anything for the acquisition of the site. This bill merely authorizes the construction of buildings which are believed to be necessary and adequate for the purpose designed. I hope the Senator will not object.

Mr. KING. I shall not object, but I was wondering whether, in the Coast Guard Academy, the young men are educated who perform service in the work of enforcing the prohibition law. The Senator knows that a large number of the Coast Guard boats are used for prohibition-enforcement purposes.

Mr. BINGHAM. The boats of the Coast Guard, whether they are used for the protection of life, or for the rescue of wrecked ships, or for enforcing internal revenue laws, or the prohibition law, are commanded by commissioned officers of the United States, who are commissioned in the Coast Guard, and who are trained in the Coast Guard Academy.

Mr. KING. Is the personnel of the Coast Guard Service being increased?

Mr. BINGHAM. Only in so far as the appropriations made for that purpose allow of an increase. My recollection is that last year we increased the appropriation for the Coast Guard in order that there might be more vessels provided.

Mr. KING. Are not substantially all the activities of the Coast Guard confined to the prohibition service?

Mr. BINGHAM. The Senator from Washington can answer that question better than can I.

Mr. JONES. Not at all, Mr. President. The Coast Guard is about one of the oldest organizations in the Government.

Mr. KING. I know that, but I am speaking of its present activities.

Mr. JONES. No. It looks after wrecks, danger to vessels at sea, and all that sort of thing. It performs work of the greatest service outside of its activities in connection with prohibition enforcement.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, does this bill provide for an academy such as that at West Point and such as the Naval Academy at Annapolis, to which young men can be sent to be instructed for service in the Coast Guard?

Mr. BINGHAM. I will say to my distinguished friend from North Carolina that such an academy has been in existence for a number of years, but the Government has never provided the proper buildings for its use. It has only provided temporary structures.

Mr. OVERMAN. How are the cadets at the Coast Guard Academy selected?

Mr. BINGHAM. I shall ask the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] to answer that question.

Mr. JONES. They are selected by competitive examinations. Possibly in the future, as the service develops, the cadets to the Coast Guard Academy may be selected as are the cadets at the Military Academy and the midshipmen at Annapolis. There is a very limited number of Coast Guard cadets, I think to only about 120; so that the appointments can not be distributed as are appointments to West Point cadets; but the cadets are seleced by competitive examination.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ETTA PEARCE FULPER

The bill (S. 5453) authorizing the payment of Government life insurance to Etta Pearce Fulper was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Director of the United States Veterans' Bureau is authorized and directed to pay to Etta Pearce Fulper, widow of William H. Fulper, late second lieutenant, supply officer, Second Battalion, New Jersey State Militia, the amount of his Government life-insurance policy No. K–446185, as if such William H. Fulper had been in Federal service when such policy was issued.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HERBERT TOLL

The bill (S. 4938) granting war-risk insurance to the estate of Herbert Toll was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the World War veterans' act, 1924, as amended, the war-risk insurance policy of Herbert Toll (claim No. XC–260475) shall be held and considered to have been in force on June 25, 1919, the date on which such Herbert Toll was killed in action at Romanovka, Russia.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SETTLEMENT OF INDEBTEDNESS OF GREECE

The bill (H. R. 10760) to authorize the settlement of the indebtedness of the Hellenic Republic to the United States of America and of the differences arising out of the tripartite loan agreement of February 10, 1918, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BLAINE. I ask that that bill go over.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, I hope the objection to this bill will be withdrawn. We have criticized quite severely some of the stronger and larger nations of the earth in the discussions in the Senate in the last week or two. We now have an opportunity of doing something that is worth while for a small nation that is suffering very much for the lack of the appropriation provided in the bill. It is in pursuance certainly of a moral obligation if not a legal obligation of the highest quality.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, let me say to the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. BLAINE] that the basis of the settlement with Greece under this bill is 34½ per cent of the present cash value of the debt. With Italy the basis was 26½ per cent; with Yugoslavia it was 33 per cent. So this is a better settlement than that with either one of those countries.

Furthermore, I wish to say to the Senator that the bill proposes to carry out the agreement between France, Great Britain, and America with the Greek Government. Under that agreement we were to advance money to Greece, and a certain sum was advanced, but not our full proportion. England advanced her full proportion. Under this bill we will advance $12,167,000 to make the amount advanced by the United States equal to that advanced by Great Britain and to carry out our contract, just as England has carried out her contract.

The settlement will be on the identical basis as England has settled with Greece for the money advanced by her in order that Greece might provide an army to cooperate with England and America during the war.

I think that the settlement is all that we could possibly ask under the conditions, and the bill merely carries out on our part a solemn agreement signed and delivered. If the bill shall pass, it will simply mean that we are doing just what England has done in the case of Greece under the agreement. I hope the Senator will not object.

Mr. BLAINE. I should like to inquire of the Senator the number of foreign governments which have not as yet settled their indebtedness to the United States?

Mr. SMOOT. The only countries with which we have not made settlements are Greece and France. Russia owes us $178,000,000, with interest, and has been owing it to us ever since it was advanced a number of years ago; but we have not recognized Russia, and so we can not make any settlement with her. However, the other countries have all settled now, with the exception of France and Greece.

Mr. BLAINE. Including Austria?

Mr. SMOOT. Oh, yes; the bill providing for the settlement with Austria was passed the other day, and has been also passed by the House, and is now a law. This is the only debt outside of the debt of France still remaining unsettled. The Senator will remember that the representatives of France agreed to a settlement on the basis of about 52 per cent, but France refused to ratify that agreement, and I have never yet asked the Senate—and I made the statement once upon the floor of the Senate that I would not ask the Senate—to consider a settlement with France until France should agree to the settlement which we had already made.

Mr. BLAINE. Mr. President, I shall make no objection to the consideration of the bill at this time.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, is hereby authorized to conclude an agreement for the settlement of the indebtedness of the Hellenic Republic (hereinafter referred to as Greece) to the United States of America under the terms and conditions as set forth in Senate Document No. 51, Seventieth Congress, first session. The general terms of the agreement shall be as follows:

(1) The existing indebtedness amounting to $18,125,000 shall be funded over a period of 62 years. The computation of this indebtedness is set forth below:

Principal amount of obligations to be funded	$15,000,000.00
Interest accrued and unpaid thereon to Dec. 15, 1922, at the rate of 4¼ per cent per annum	744,333.79
Total principal and interest accrued and unpaid as of Dec. 15, 1922	15,744,333.79
Interest thereon at 3 per cent per annum from Dec. 15, 1922, to Jan. 1, 1928	2,383,588.88
	18,127,922.67
To be paid in cash by Greece upon execution of agreement	2,922.67
Total indebtedness to be funded	18,125,000.00

(2) The bonds aggregating in face amount $20,330,000 (the existing indebtedness, as computed above, together with the interest to be paid in respect thereof) shall be paid in semiannual installments beginning July, 1928, up to and including January 1, 1990, on a fixed schedule, subject to the right of Greece to make such payments in three-year periods, any postponed payments to bear interest at 4¼ per cent per annum, payable semiannually. The amount of the first annual installment shall be $40,000, the annual installment to increase to $350,000 in the eleventh year, which shall be the amount of each remaining annual installment.

(3) In addition to the payment of the bond maturing on January 1 or July 1 of any year, Greece shall have the right on such dates to make payments on account of any unmatured bonds of this series under such conditions as to notice or otherwise as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

(4) Any payment may be made at the option of Greece in any United States Government obligations issued after April 6, 1917, such obligations to be taken at par and accrued interest.

(5) To assist in the completion of the work of the Greek Refuge Settlement Commission, the Secretary of the Treasury is further authorized to advance to Greece out of the appropriation "Purchase of obligations of foreign governments," established under authority of the Liberty bond acts, the sum of $12,167,000, for which Greece shall deliver to the Secretary of the Treasury its 20-year gold bonds bearing interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, payable semiannually, with provisions for a sinking fund sufficient to retire such bonds within 20 years.

(6) Greece shall, in accordance with the exchange of notes, dated January 18, 1928, between the United States and Greece and as set forth in Senate Document No. 51, Seventieth Congress, first session, furnish as securities for the loan referred to in paragraph (5), the excess of revenues under the control of the International Financial Commission, and shall procure the assurance of the service of the loan by that commission.

(7) Greece shall forego all claims for further advances under the tripartite loan agreement, dated February 10, 1918, and such agreement, so far as the United States and Greece are concerned, shall terminate upon the date on which the agreement authorized by this act becomes effective.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AWARD TO BETHLEHEM STEEL CO. EMPLOYEES

The bill (H. R. 5780) to provide for the further carrying out of the award of the National War Labor Board of July 31, 1918, in favor of certain employees of the Bethlehem Steel Co., Bethlehem, Pa., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for carrying out the award of the National War Labor Board of July 31, 1918, in favor of certain employees of the Bethlehem Steel Co., Bethlehem, Pa.," approved March 4, 1925, and amended March 3 and April 6, 1926, are hereby extended to include the claims for additional compensation for work performed as employees of the Bethlehem Steel Co. on contracts made by or under the authority of the Secretary of the Navy. For the purpose of this award, the findings of the War Department Claims Board reporting the Navy's share as 24.99 per cent is approved, to be paid to such claimants as have filed claims in accordance with the act of March 4, 1925. All provisions contained in the said act of March 4, 1925, as amended, not in conflict with this act, are continued in full force and effect.

The unexpended balance of the appropriation carried by the act of March 4, 1925, as amended, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose, is hereby made available for the payment of the claims herein referred to and for the payment of the incidental and necessary administrative expenses.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES O. WILLIAMS

The bill (H. R. 8807) for the relief of James O. Williams was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to relieve James O. Williams, special disbursing agent for the State of Washington and the Territory of Alaska during the Fourteenth Decennial Census, from accountability or responsibility for losses for which he was accountable or responsible, by crediting his account with the sum of $3,924, erroneously paid out by him in good faith, for subsistence, on the strength of certain travel authorizations during the period from August 14, 1919, to November 30, 1920.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RELIEF OF MISSOURI, MISSISSIPPI, LOUISIANA, AND ARKANSAS

The bill (S. 5201) to authorize an appropriation for the relief of the States of Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas on account of roads and bridges damaged or destroyed by floods of 1927 was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, just a day or so ago that bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, was attached as an amendment to the Army appropriation bill. Therefore, the Senate bill now on the calendar should be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. BRATTON. Mr. President, in view of the fact that in conference the amendment may not remain in the appropriation bill, I suggest to the chairman of the committee that the bill be passed over for the present without prejudice.

Mr. McNARY. That is a very good suggestion, and I ask that that be done.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

KATHERINA KAUTZ AND FRED G. KAUTZ

The bill (H. R. 11289) for the relief of Katherina Kautz and Fred G. Kautz, heirs of the estate of Christian F. Kautz, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to redeem in favor of Katherina Kautz and Fred G. Kautz, heirs of the estate of Christian F. Kautz, deceased, three United States certificates of indebtedness, series G, 1921, issued February 15, 1921, and matured July 15, 1921, serial Nos. 12823, 12824, and 12825 of the denomination of $1,000 each, with interest at the rate of 5½ per cent per annum from February 15, 1921, to July 15, 1921, without presentation of the said certificates or the coupons representing interest thereon from February 15, 1921, to July 15, 1921, the certificates having been lost or stolen: Provided, That the said certificates shall not have been previously presented for payment and that no payment shall be made hereunder for any coupons which shall have been previously presented and paid: Provided further, That the said Katherina Kautz and Fred G. Kautz as heirs shall first file in the Treasury Department a bond in the penal sum of double the amount of the certificates and the interest payable thereon, in such form and with such surety or sureties as may be acceptable to the Secretary of the Treasury, to indemnify and save harmless the United States from any loss on account of the lost or stolen certificates of indebtedness herein described or the coupons belonging thereto.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MR. AND MRS. PETER J. EGAN

The bill (H. R. 12007) for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. Peter J. Egan was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARTIN E. RILEY

The bill (S. 432) for the relief of Martin E. Riley was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That sections 17 and 20 of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, as amended, are hereby waived in favor of Martin E. Riley, who contracted a disease while employed in a post office in Chicago, Ill., resulting in permanent physical disability, and his case is authorized to be considered and acted upon under the remaining provisions of such act, as amended: Provided, That a notice of such disease and claim for compensation are filed with the United States Employees' Compensation Commission by him not later than 60 days from the date of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAWYER MOTOR CO.

The bill (H. R. 9943) for the relief of Sawyer Motor Co. was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

G. J. BELL

The bill (H. R. 10191) for the relief of G. J. Bell was announced as next in order and was read.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator reporting this bill explain it, or else have it read again?

Mr. TRAMMELL. Mr. President, I can explain the bill. It authorizes placing this man upon the compensation roll; but the facts are as follows:

This bill passed the House. It seems that this employee was connected with the War Department, working at Florence, Ala. While he was engaged in his employment in a pit where the temperature was quite excessive, but where he was required to work, he suffered a sunstroke, which afterwards resulted in his being paralyzed. The question came up as to whether or not he was entitled to compensation. The Compensation Commission held that the injury was not the result of the service. The House committee investigated the matter thoroughly and made quite a full report. I made the House report a part of mine. The House committee and the House itself decided that the injury was the result of this man's employment. The Senate committee also took that view of the matter, and we recommended the passage of the bill.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, at what date did this injury happen? It was after 1916, was it not?

Mr. McKELLAR. In 1925, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. SMOOT. Why should we say here that his disability shall "be considered as total and permament"—a total disability?

Mr. McKELLAR. The man is absolutely totally and permanently disabled, as shown by the proof.

Mr. SMOOT. The commission found otherwise, did they not?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; they did not.

Mr. SMOOT. If they did not so find, then he is entitled to compensation through the commission.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; their idea was that the injury was not connected with the service.

Mr. KING. In other words, it is proposed to overrule the commission.

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to have the bill go over to-day, and I will make inquiry about it.

Mr. McKELLAR. I hope the Senator will examine it and withdraw his objection.

Mr. SMOOT. I will ask the commission about it, and I assure the Senator——

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, what is the objection of the Senator from Utah? This is my colleague's bill. As I understand, this man lives in Florence, Ala.

Mr. McKELLAR. He did originally. He is a resident of Tennessee now.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, do I understand from the Senator who had charge of the bill in the committee that this matter was investigated by both the Senate and the House committees?

Mr. McKELLAR. The bill was reported by the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL].

Mr. TRAMMELL. That is correct.

Mr. SMOOT. The Employees' Compensation Commission heard the case. They decided that it did not fall under the law, and therefore it did not give the claimant a status for compensation. This bill is to override the decision of the commission. There is not any report here to show just why the commission did it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, yes; there is.

Mr. SMOOT. All I ask is that the bill go over so that I may ask the commission why they did it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Would the Senator object to my reading a portion of the report to him? Perhaps he will not object after hearing the facts:

His duties in this connection were very strenuous and exacting, and while he was working on top of the dam, 118 feet high, where there was good ventilation, he was able to endure the intense heat of the sun as well as the heat from the steam pipe over his head. He was engaged in this work for about a year and nine months. He was then taken off the dam and put at the same kind of work in the bottom of the basin, about 30 feet under the bank of the river where he was exposed to the direct rays of the sun. The temperature at that point on June 1, 1925, was 110° F., and this heat, augmented by the intense heat from the uninsulated steam pipe over his head, caused him to be overcome by heat and he fell unconscious.

This man has been absolutely disabled ever since; and the proof in this record is that he is permanently disabled. Of course, if the Senator wants time to look into the matter, that is all right; but I hope he will withdraw his objection.

Mr. SMOOT. I assure the Senator that I shall write to-morrow morning to the Employees' Compensation Commission. I want to know why they refused this man compensation. I shall have no objection if the claim is straight.

Mr. McKELLAR. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The objection being maintained, the bill will be passed over.

DR. ANDREW J. BAKER

The bill (H. R. 11385) for the relief of Dr. Andrew J. Baker was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I feel constrained to object to the consideration of this bill. I have read the report and the findings of the chairman of the Compensation Commission, and there is no liability.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection being made, the bill will be passed over.

H. A. RUSSELL

The bill (H. R. 11749) for the relief of H. A. Russell was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN I. FITZGERALD

The bill (H. R. 7392) for the relief of John I. Fitzgerald was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICAN FOREIGN TRADE CORPORATION AND OTHERS

The bill (H. R. 8511) for the relief of the American Foreign Trade Corporation and Fils d'Aslan Fresco was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I should like an explanation of that bill, Mr. President.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator reporting the bill is not in the Chamber.

Mr. KING. Let it go over for the present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

COLLECT-ON-DELIVERY POSTAL SERVICE, ETC.

The bill (H. R. 12898) to extend the collect-on-delivery service and limits of indemnity to sealed domestic mail on which the first-class rate of postage is paid was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NEZ PERCE TRIBE OF INDIANS

The bill (H. R. 12520) for the relief of the Nez Perce Tribe of Indians was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INDIAN IRRIGATION PROJECTS

The bill (H. R. 13977) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to settle claims by agreement arising under operation of Indian irrigation projects was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEALTH REGULATIONS AND SCHOOL ATTENDANCE ON INDIAN RESERVATIONS, ETC.

The bill (H. R. 15523) authorizing representatives of the several States to make certain inspections and to investigate State sanitary and health regulations and school attendance on Indian reservations, Indian tribal lands, and Indian allotments, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I had hoped the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. PINE] would be here. The committee of which he is a member is now making some investigation of Indian conditions. I will ask the chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee whether this bill, in view of the work of his committee is regarded as necessary?

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, this is a House bill. It was considered by the Senate committee, and the Senate committee is of the opinion that it is a step in the right direction. It allows certain State officials to go in and inspect schools as to their sanitary conditions, health conditions, and so forth. It will be of assistance to the department.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DONATION OF CANNON TO PHOENIX, ARIZ.

The bill (S. 5270) to authorize the Secretary of War to donate a bronze cannon to the city of Phoenix, Ariz., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to donate, without expense to the United States, to the city of Phoenix, Ariz., a bronze cannon marked as follows: "L'Obstinee ultima ratio regum no 4. Pluribus nec impar a Strassburg par Berenger 1756," now located at Fort Jay, N. Y.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGE NEAR SOBOBA INDIAN RESERVATION, CALIF.

The bill (S. 5113) to authorize an appropriation to pay half the cost of a bridge near the Soboba Indian Reservation, Calif., was announced as next in order.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, the House has passed House bill 15092, which is identical with Senate bill 5113. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Indian Affairs be discharged from the consideration of that bill and that it be substituted for the Senate bill and passed.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I confess to having a deep interest in the Indians. I will ask the Senator whether the Indians living upon this reservation, if there is a reservation, need this bridge—whether they should be charged with it?

Mr. FRAZIER. Oh, yes. The old bridge was washed away by a flood some months ago. There is a hosiptal on this reservation, but it is practically out of business, because during high water the Indians can not get over there and the physicians can not get over there.

Mr. KING. Is this a bridge to be used largely by the white people or by the Indians?

Mr. FRAZIER. Practically entirely by the Indians, so the information which comes to me indicates. I think it is a very worthy bill.

Mr. KING. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FESS in the chair). The Senator from North Dakota asks unanimous consent that the Committee on Indian Affairs be discharged from the further consideration of House bill 15092, and that it be substituted for the Senate bill. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 15092) to authorize an appropriation to pay half the cost of a bridge near the Soboba Indian Reservation, Calif.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 5113 will be indefinitely postponed.

ALABAMA AND COUSHATTA INDIANS OF TEXAS

The bill (S. 5519) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to purchase land for the Alabama and Coushatta Indians of Texas, subject to certain mineral and timber interests, was announced as next in order.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, the House has passed House bill 16527, which is identical with Senate bill 5519. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Indian Affairs be discharged from the consideration of the House bill; that it be substituted for the Senate bill and passed; and that the Senate bill be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota asks unanimous consent that the Committee on Indian Affairs be discharged from the further consideration of House bill 16527 and that it be substituted for the Senate bill. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 16527) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to purchase land for the Alabama and Coushatta Indians of Texas, subject to certain mineral and timber interests.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AGENCY SALARIES OF INDIAN SERVICE

The bill (S. 5563) to repeal that portion of the act of August 24, 1912, imposing a limit on agency salaries of the Indian Service, was announced as next in order.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, the House has passed House bill 16568, which is identical with Senate bill 5563. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Indian Affairs be discharged from the consideration of the House bill; that it be substituted for the Senate bill; and that the Senate bill be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. KING. I have no objection to the substitution; but I desire to ask the Senator, in view of the fact that his committee is now engaged in making a comprehensive study of the Indian question, including a study of the Indians upon the reservations and the dealings of the Indian Bureau with them, whether this legislation is proper.

The Senator knows that statements have been made by the Indian Bureau, when criticisms have been made of their administration and failure to secure adequate results, that all they need is more money and higher salaries. It seems that the Indian Bureau regards as a sine qua non to a proper working out of the Indian problem more employees and higher salaries. This bill seems to be in harmony with that view, and I think we ought to postpone legislation of this kind while the committee is making a comprehensive study of the entire Indian question.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, this bill would repeal an act that was passed August 24, 1912, limiting the amount to be paid as salaries in Indian agencies. Since that time the conditions have changed on a few reservations materially, especially some of the Oklahoma reservations; and I think the Senator from Oklahoma will bear me out in that statement.

The argument of the Department of the Interior was that it was impossible to take care of the present situation on some of those Oklahoma reservations, especially under the present law, with the present salaries provided.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I want to say that I think the Indian Bureau—and I am not saying this by way of criticism—has not fully appreciated the grave situation of the Indians of the United States and the responsibilities which rest upon the department. As I have said, they are recommending more employees and larger salaries to meet the evils which are known to exist and to bring the Indians to a proper condition.

I do not think that is the way to meet the situation. We need more intelligent administration of the law, we need to repeal some laws, and to adopt more humane and a better policy in dealing with the Indians than is provided by the law to-day. I am not in favor of this bill until the Committee on Indian Affairs, of which the distinguished Senator from North Dakota is chairman, makes its report.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. At the present time it costs more than $20,000 a year to operate a number of the agencies. From year to year the Interior Department appropriation bill, in appropriating money, makes the extension, the extension amounting to a practical repeal of this provision of law for the time being.

Inasmuch as Congress violates this law by adding this provision to the appropriation bill from year to year, it is the intent of this measure to permanently repeal that law and fix the limit at fifteen or twenty thousand dollars a year. It has to do only with a practice that is now many years old; it deals with something we are constantly doing in violation of the law; and the law being not applicable and now being violated, the department wants to get rid of it. With that explanation, I think there should be no objection to this measure.

Mr. KING. There is some objection. The point I am making is this—and, of course, it involves no reflection upon my dear friend the Senator from Oklahoma—that the department makes its recommendations as a cure for this Indian problem, which has not been solved, and that increases the salaries and increases the number of employees.

We are not getting at the root of this very serious problem. We are not going to solve the Indian problem, we are not going to do justice to the Indians by hiring more white men and paying larger salaries. It may be necessary to employ more men and pay larger salaries, but in view of the fact that the Senate has directed the committee, after the bureau has fought for years to prevent it, to make an investigation of the entire problem to see what ought to be done with the Indians and for them and in their behalf for their civilization, for their protection—and that committee is now working—I feel that we can pretermit any legislation of this character until that committee reports. If, when the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER] makes his report as chairman of the committee, it appears that legislation of this kind is necessary, I shall, of course, very cheerfully vote for it. But we have all conceded that the situation needs some remedy, and until the committee reports I shall feel constrained to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On objection, the bill will go over.

UNION SHIPPING & TRADING CO. (LTD.)

The bill (S. 1979) for the relief of the Union Shipping & Trading Co. (Ltd.) was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the claim of the Union Shipping & Trading Co. (Ltd.) against the United States of America for damages alleged to have been caused by a collision on April 25, 1918, near Pauillac, in the Gironde River, France, between the Spanish steamship Consuelo (at the time of the collision the British steamship Reims) and the American steamship Berwind, then in the transport service of the United States War Department, may be sued for by the said Union Shipping & Trading Co. (Ltd.) in the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court, and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of the said Union Shipping & Trading Co. (Ltd.) or against the said Union Shipping & Trading Co. (Ltd.) in favor of the United States upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That at the trial of said suit the written report or reports concerning said collision made by the pilot, master, any officer or member of the crew of the steamship Berwind, who is not available to testify because he is dead or can not be found, may be admitted in evidence: Provided further, That such notice of the said suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That said suit shall be brought and commenced within four months of the date of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN L. JENIFER

The bill (H. R. 2492) to extend the benefits of the United States employees' compensation act of September 7, 1916, to John L. Jenifer, a former employee of the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE J. ILLICHEVSKY

The bill (H. R. 967) for the relief of George J. Illichevsky was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STORM DAMAGE IN SOUTH CAROLINA

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have a telegram I have received read and incorporated in the RECORD. It is very short.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Hon. E. D. SMITH,
United States Senator:

Re tel. Damage to State highways alone by floods of August and September, 1928, estimated at $650,000, and this amount already allotted by State highway commission for making repairs. Damage to other roads probably more than State highway, but no accurate estimates available.

CHAS. H. MOOREFIELD,
State Highway Engineer.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, I suppose the Senator is contemplating the offering of a measure for the reimbursement of his State for money spent in repairing the roads in his State, under the precedent set yesterday by the Senate in appropriating for other States which have suffered damage.

Mr. SMITH. I am just laying the foundation. At the proper time I shall introduce a measure, hoping that there may be extended to my State the same generosity that has been extended to others that have suffered.

Mr. GLASS. In other words, the Senator from South Carolina did not get his Christmas gift this time, and he wants to get it the next time.

Mr. SMITH. Santa Claus has already passed on, and I did not get an opportunity to get anything in the stocking at all. Therefore I am preparing so that justice may be done all parties suffering.

Mr. GLASS. The Senator means in order that equal injustice may be done.

Mr. SMITH. We will not differ about the terminology if I get the money.

FOREST SERVICE TRAIL-CREW RELIEF

The bill (H. R. 12711) for the relief of certain members of a trail crew employed by the Forest Service was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and in full settlement against the Government, to W. A. Coleman, $50; Robert T. Hardin, $59; Roy McGregor, $25; James Innis, $46; Frank Eaton, $56; William Ward, $43; William Kane, $59; and Lowell Palmerton, $45, these respective amounts on account of losses sustained by them when called from their regular duty as members of a trail crew by order of the Forest Service to fight forest fires during July, 1926, in the Coeur d'Alene National Forest.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JESSIE L. KINSEY

The bill (S. 5326) for the relief of Jessie L. Kinsey was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to credit the accounts of Jessie L. Kinsey, postmaster at Beach, N. Dak., in the sum of $479.90, due the United States on account of the loss of postal funds resulting from the failure of the First National Bank of Beach, Beach, N. Dak.: Provided, That the said Jessie L. Kinsey shall assign to the United States any and all claims she may have to dividends arising from the liquidation of said bank.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES J. HUNT

The bill (H. R. 10327) for the relief of Charles J. Hunt was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I would like to have the bill go over for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ARMY DISBURSING OFFICERS' ACCOUNTS

The bill (H. R. 7166) to allow credit in the accounts of disbursing officers of the Army of the United States on account of refunds made to purchasers of surplus war supplies was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 2, line 6, to strike out "Capt. H. B. Lovell, Finance Department, $7,912.66," and a semicolon.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will not the Senator from Pennsylvania explain the bill?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, this is a bill which came from the Committee on Claims, but I have examined the report on it, and it seems to be intended to square the accounts of the Comptroller General and those officers who had to do with the sale of surplus war supplies and who made admittedly proper refunds to various purchasers on account of shortages of goods or return of their bid money, but the Comptroller General held they had no authority to do it without a bill being passed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Comptroller General recommend it?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I am not certain of that. I think it appears in the report, however. The details of the various refunds are all given in the report, and the Committee on Claims felt that they were entirely justified. The report from the Comptroller General I see states:

In view of the facts relative to the payments in question, as above set forth, this office will interpose no objection to the legislation proposed by the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the committee was, on page 2, line 13, after "$180," to insert a colon and the following proviso: "Provided, That any amounts otherwise due to said disbursing officers by reason of refunds of income taxes and which amounts have been credited by the Comptroller General of the United States to disallowances in their accounts with the United States be refunded to them," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to allow credit in the accounts of the disbursing officers of the Army of the United States named herein in the several amounts indicated, representing payments made by direction of local boards of sales control as authorized refundments to purchasers of surplus war supplies for which credit has been disallowed by the General Accounting Office in the audit of their accounts, to wit: Capt. Francis J. Baker, Finance Department, $59,273.11; Lieut. Col. Ward Dabney, Quartermaster Corps, $2,708.04; Capt. E. O. Hopkins, Finance Department, $3,981.40; Capt. P. G. Hoyt, Finance Department, $2,054.13; Capt. M. T. Legg, Finance Department, $17,459.52; Lieut. Col. S. B. McIntyre, Finance Department, $3,039.10; Capt. E. C. Morton, Finance Department, $629.58; Capt. A. J. Maxwell, Finance Department, $601.91; Capt. L. L. Simms, Finance Department, $6,246; Maj. E. B. Spiller, Finance Department, $274.63; Capt. E. W. Wilson, Finance Department, $180: Provided, That any amounts otherwise due to said disbursing officers by reason of refunds of income taxes and which amounts have been credited by the Comptroller General of the United States to disallowances in their accounts with the United States be refunded to them.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

PENSIONS AND INCREASE OF PENSIONS

The bill (H. R. 16522) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, etc., and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 4, line 18, after the words "rate of," to strike out "$12" and insert "$20," so as to read:

The name of Ida Wilkinson, widow of William H. Wilkinson, late of Company E, First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, war with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, after line 4, to strike out:

The name of Marie P. Wilson, widow of Maj. William P. Wilson, late of the Ordnance Department, United States Army, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 18, after the words "rate of," to strike out "$20" and insert "$12," so as to read:

The name of Nancy R. Gibbs, widow of Joseph Z. Gibbs, late of the Ninety-ninth Company, United States Coast Artillery Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month and $2 per month additional on account of each minor child of the soldier until they reach the age of 16 years.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 15, after the words "rate of," to strike out "$12" and insert "$20," so as to read:

The name of Laurance L. Percy, late of Company L, Fifth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 20, after the words "rate of," to strike out "$20" and insert "$12," so as to read:

The name of Maggie Crecelius, widow of Elmer Crecelius, late of Company C, Twentieth Regiment United States Infantry, Regular Establishment, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 5, after the words "rate of," to strike out "$12" and insert "$20," so as to read:

The name of Arthur Searls, late of Company I, First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 8, after the words "rate of," to strike out "$12" and insert "$20," so as to read:

The name of John W. Kahl, late of the Thirtieth Company, United States Signal Corps, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, line 24, after the words "rate of," to strike out "$15" and insert "$12," so as to read:

The name of Charles Sabins, late of the Sixth Battery, Iowa Volunteer Light Artillery, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, line 7, after the words "rate of," to strike out "$20" and insert "$12," so as to read:

The name of William Darrah E. Shelmire, late of the United States Navy, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, after line 18, to strike out:

The name of Vernon L. Johnson, late of Company B, Second Regiment Missouri Volunteer Infantry, war with Spain, and pay him a pension at the rate of $90 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, line 21, after the word "month," to insert "in lieu of that he is now receiving," so as to read:

The name of John G. Heck, late of the Seventy-fifth Company, United States Coast Artillery Corps, Regular Establishment, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, line 6, after the words "rate of," to strike out "$20" and insert "$30," so as to read:

The name of Susie G. Gambin, widow of Orville L. Gambin, late of the United States Navy, war with Spain, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 9, to insert:

The name of Austin T. Rogers, late of Twenty-ninth Battery, United States Field Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $10 per month.

The name of John H. Isiley, late of Company C, of Instruction, General Recruiting Service, Columbus Barracks, Ohio, and pay him a pension at the rate of $10 per month.

The name of Emma Braunlich, widow of Charles Braunlich, late of Troop F, Sixth Regiment United States Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Frank Trout, late of One hundred and nineteenth United States Coast Artillery Corps, and Company B, Ninth United States Ammunition Train, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month.

The name of Margaret Shirkley, widow of John A. Shirkley, late of Battery C, Fifth United States Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of George P. Ives, late of Company A, Second Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Charles Bess, late of Company M, Eighteenth United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Arthur H. Egleston, late of Company M, First Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Marion M. Gray, widow of Hawthorne C. Gray, late of United States Hospital Corps, and captain of Thirty-fourth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month and $4 per month for each of three minor children until 16 years of age, to commence May 15, 1928, in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Rudolph Lange, late of Company A, Third Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Roy H. Fisher, late of the One hundred and sixteenth Company, United States Coast Artillery Corps, and pay him a pension the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of John Brennan, late of Battery D, Fourth United States Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Marcellus Red Tomahawk, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Hugh Swifthawk, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Thomas Stoneman, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Eugene Little Soldier, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of William Redbear, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Daniel Ojinca (Bobtail Bull), late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Leo Bear Weasel, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Gabriel Grayeagle, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Antoine Onefeather, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Joseph Whitebird, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Oliver Looking Elk, sr., late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Walcott Shootswalking (or Wakutemani), late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Jacob Crossbear, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Joseph Paints Brown, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Mary Brownman, widow of Elias Brownman, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mary Loneman, widow of John Loneman, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Martina Goodelk, widow of Edward Goodelk, late of Indian Police Service, Standing Rock Sioux Reservation, detailed to take Sitting Bull at Ghost Dance outbreak in 1890, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of John H. Sullivan, late chief train master of the Fourth Army Corps, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of George Bauman, late of Naval Recruiting Rendezvous, United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of John A. Bohman, late of Hospital Corps, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Marjorie G. Buchanan, widow of Richard B. Buchanan, late of United States Marine Corps, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month, and $4 per month additional for each minor child under 16 years of age, in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Patrick Mahr, late of Ordnance Department, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Mary E. Short, widow of Asa Calvin Short, late of Pendleton County Volunteers, Oregon Militia, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mary A. McClure, widow of Henry L. McClure, late of Company G, Second Regiment Idaho Militia, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Absalom F. Price, late of Company G, Second Regiment Idaho Volunteer Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Andrew J. Smith, late of Company G, Second Regiment Idaho Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Benjamin F. Jackson, late of the One hundred and twenty-sixth Company, United States Coast Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Henry E. Heppner, late of Capt. F. C. Sell's company, Grant County Home Guards, Oregon Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Henry Grant Guild, late of Capt. E. C. Sell's Grant County Home Guards, Oregon Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Dorothy Simpson, helpless child of Charles J. Simpson, late of Company K, First District of Columbia Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Helen F. Lasher, widow of Oren E. Lasher, late of United States Naval Academy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Blaine E. Davis, late of Company B, Twenty-seventh Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Allie Porter, widow of Charles J. Porter, late of Troop M, Eighth United States Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month, which rate should be withheld to recover $1,032 unlawfully drawn by her from May 4, 1920, to July 4, 1927, in cashing checks due to soldier.

The name of Charles Morse, late of Company A, First Separate Battalion, Colored National Guard Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $8 per month.

The name of Edna Angell, widow of Thomas G. Angell, late of Company F, Twenty-seventh Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $30 per month when she attains the age of 60 years.

The name of William H. Blake, late of Battery C, Thirteenth United States Field Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Mary Carswell, widow of Donald Carswell, late of Company A, Seventh Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Ruth K. Calland, helpless child of James B. Calland, late of Company B, First Rhode Island Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Margarete Weidlich, widow of Robert Weidlich, late of Troop I, Eighth United States Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $2 per month for each minor child under 16 years of age in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of William Hart, late of Troop I, Fourth United States Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of George F. Wiggins, late of the United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Carol B. Hough, late of the United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Laura Peterson, helpless child of Eskild C. Peterson, late of Capt. George Tucker's company, Utah Militia Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Caleb D. Brenton, late of Capt. Edward Guest's Utah Militia, and Capt. Orson P. Myers's company, Utah Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Nathan A. Barrett, late of Capt. Caleb Hawes's company, Utah Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Marie Myers, widow of George F. Myers, late of Band, Eighth United States Cavalry, and Company D, Eighth United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of George F. Kilburn, late of Troop H, Seventh United States Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of George A. Atkinson, late of United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Jacob T. Arrasmith, late of Captain Emmett Wilson's organization of Oregon Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Thadeus Cherry, late of Company H, Thirty-first Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Mary Coleman, widow of Patrick Coleman, late of Company K, Nineteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Allan H. Browning, late of Troop K, Fourteenth United States Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of Jackson St. John, late of Battery D, Fourth United States Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Chalmers A. King, late of Company M, Fiftieth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Ethel M. Opper, late of Army Nurse Corps Reserve, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Robert Martin, late of Second Battalion, Fifth United States Field Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Thomas M. McDonell, late of Company I, First Regiment West Virginia Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Lester L. Karns, late of Company M, Eighteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Carlotta Padilla De Martinez, widow of Jose M. De Martinez, late of Company D, First Regiment New Mexico Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Sarah Farmer, widow of James Farmer, late of Captain Allred's company, Sanpete County Militia, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Cedenia Willis, widow of Merrill E. Willis, late of Capt. John Steel's company, Utah Militia, and Capt. Albert Minnerly's company, Utah Militia Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Albert Schrank, late of Company B, Twenty-second Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Charles L. Shaeffer, late of Company F, Nineteenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of James J. Jordan, late of Company A, Seventh Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Robert J. Chapman, late of Battery A, First Regiment Indiana Field Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $10 per month.

The name of William B. Harrison, late of Medical Department, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Samuel Porter Conway, late of United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Julius Perkins, late of Troop F, Ninth United States Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James W. Melton, late of Third Company, United States Coast Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of William Caspar, late of United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Lizzie K. Owens, widow of Walter W. Owens, late of Company H, Ninth Regiment New York Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Ralph P. Bell, late of Battery C, Sixteenth United States Field Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Florence J. Frazier, former widow of George E. Crane, late of Battery E, Third United States Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Annah E. Core, widow of George E. Core, late of Company G, Twelfth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month and $30 per month when it is shown she has attained the age of 60 years.

The name of Bertram C. Hayner, late of Company C, Twenty-eighth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Wesley Adcock, late of Capt. J. L. Sperry's Company C, First Regiment, Third Brigade, Pendleton Volunteers of Oregon, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Edmond A. Hart, later of Capt. A. C. Smith's company, Oregon Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Oliver D. Ferguson, late of Capt. John Sperry's company, Umatilla Guards, Oregon Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Max Lilienthal, late of Company H, Second Regiment, United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Frank M. Bowman, late of Capt. James Ewart's company, Washington Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Samuel W. Sims, late of Capt. Peter Pence's company, Idaho Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Felix Shaser, late of Capt. Sam Packwood's company, Washington Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Jacob E. Rego, late of Capt. Sam Packwood's company, Washington Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Harry Breeze Johnson, late of Company M, Sixteenth Regiment, United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Robert B. Early, late of Battery —, Twenty-second United States Field Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Walter H. Caswell, late of Company D, First Regiment Washington Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Annie McKinnie, dependent mother of John Neal, late of Company A, Tenth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Andrew C. Weatherstone, late of Company H, Two hundred and third Regiment N. T. Infantry, and Company F, Ninth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Samuel H. Anderson, late of quartermaster's department, Seventh Regiment United States Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $25 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Vance K. Stewart, late of Company G, Twenty-second Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of John P. Classi, late of General Mounted Service, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $10 per month.

The name of William Nellis, late of Company E, Twenty-eighth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Otto S. Langum, late of Company I, Thirteenth Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Harlow Hewett, late of Company F, Second Regiment Nebraska Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Fred Erton, late of Company B, Twenty-ninth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Lenore La Hue, widow of Harve La Hue, late of Company H, Twenty-second Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Henry E. D. Patee, late of United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The name of Jessie L. Kilgore, widow of Edward G. Kilgore, late of Capt. O. C. Applegate's company, Oregon Volunteer Militia, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of George Myers, late of Battery K, Third Regiment United States Artillery, and pay him a pension at the rate of $17 per month.

The name of John A. Ritter, late of Company B, First Battalion Nevada Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of William M. Sherman, late of Troop A, Eighth Regiment United States Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Thomas L. Freeman, late of Troop A, First Regiment United States Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Georgia Young, widow of William A. Young, late of Company C, Second Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Lucy C. Senges, widow of William H. Senges, late second lieutenant, Air Corps Reserve, and pay her a pension at the rate of $24 per month and $4 per month additional for each minor child under 16 years of age.

The name of Bertha H. Barnes, widow of Charles Erskine Barnes, late of Company F, Twenty-seventh Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Louis P. Mosseau, late Indian scout, United States Army, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Clara J. Gillespie, dependent mother of Edward D. Gillespie, late of Battery D, Fifth Regiment United States Field Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary Anna Cooper, widow of Alva C. Cooper, late of Company D, Twenty-second Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of James A. McKinley, late of Company D, Fortieth Regiment United States Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Mary R. Gehlbach, widow of William C. Gehlbach, late of the Seventy-third Company, United States Coast Artillery Corps, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month and $2 additional per month for each minor child under 16 years of age.

The name of George Peirce, late of Capt. William Bierbauer's company, Mankato Riflemen, Minnesota State Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Lewis J. Kenney, late of Company B, Eighth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of George W. Smith, late of Capt. Sam Packwood's company, Washington Volunteers in 1877 and 1878, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Marietta K. Johnson, widow of William E. Johnson, late of Company A, Second Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of John R. Gilbert, late of Capt. Orlando Robbins's Company A, Idaho Volunteers, Capt. H. J. Maxon's company of Volunteers, Idaho Home Guards, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of James C. Virdin, late of Troop A, Second Regiment United States Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of Fredrik S. Ross, late of United States Navy, and pay him a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The name of John G. Brickel, late of Company A, Twenty-first United States Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I propose an amendment on page 33, line 17, in the committee amendment in the item for Samuel H. Anderson. After the words "rate of," I move to strike out "$25" and insert "$30."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

LOYAL SHAWNEE INDIAN TREATY

The bill (S. 5127) to carry into effect the twelfth article of the treaty between the United States and the Loyal Shawnee Indians, proclaimed October 14, 1868, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments, on page 2, line 11, to strike out "20" and insert "10"; and on the same page, line 19, to strike out all after the word "State" down to the period in line 22, as follows: "and which receipt, release, and relinquishment shall be approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior and which shall be binding when executed and approved on all parties thereto," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $109,746.25, and the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay said sum to the Indians of the Loyal Shawnee Tribe, their heirs, or legal representatives, in accordance with the official findings, arbitration award, and report of the Secretary of the Interior to Congress made in pursuance of the twelfth article of the treaty between the United States and the Loyal Shawnee Indians, proclaimed October 14, 1868 (15 Stat. L. 513); which claims are similar to but not included with those of the Shawnee Indians for whom an appropriation was made by act of December 22, 1927 (Public, No. 2, 70th Cong., 1st sess.): Provided, That out of said sum there shall be paid to the duly authorized attorney for said Indians, as evidenced by contracts executed by said Indian claimants or their then living heirs, during the years 1903, 1904, and 1905, 10 per cent of the above amount in full satisfaction of such contract or contracts: And provided further, That before payment of the amount hereby authorized to be appropriated the Indian beneficiaries or their legal representatives entitled to said awards shall execute in writing a receipt, release, and relinquishment of any and all claims arising under the twelfth article of said treaty which they may have against the United States.

A committee of five male adult members of the Loyal Shawnee Tribe, to be selected under the direction of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, with its headquarters at Vinita, Okla., shall execute a release on behalf of all beneficiaries having no legal representatives.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KANSAS OR KAW TRIBE OF INDIANS

The bill (H. R. 8901) to amend and further extend the benefits of the act approved March 3, 1925, entitled "An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and enter judgment in any and all claims, of whatever nature, which the Kansas or Kaw Tribe of Indians may have or claim to have against the United States, and for other purposes," was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHEROKEE, SEMINOLE, CREEK, CHOCTAW, AND CHICKASAW INDIAN SUITS

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 343) authorizing an extension of time within which suits may be instituted on behalf of the Cherokee Indians, the Seminole Indians, the Creek Indians, and the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians to June 30, 1930, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COOS AND OTHER INDIANS

The bill (H. R. 13692) authorizing the Coos (Kowes) Bay, Lower Umpqua (Kalawatset), and Siuslaw Tribes of Indians of the State of Oregon to present their claims to the Court of Claims was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS AND RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 4084) for the relief of the persons suffering loss on account of the Lawton, Okla., fire, 1917, was announced as next in order.

Mr. PHIPPS. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 5769) to authorize the consolidation and coordination of Government purchases, to enlarge the functions of the General Supply Committee, and for other purposes, was announced as in order.

Mr. KING. I would like to have an explanation of the bill. It is a very long measure. Let it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 12203) to authorize the designation and bonding of persons to act for disbursing officers and others charged with the disbursement of public money of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. SACKETT. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1688) for the relief of Gabriel Roth was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 16422) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia, and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of such District for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

The resolution (S. Res. 258) directing the Federal Trade Commission to reinstate the complaint against the Continental Baking Corporation was announced as next in order.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be passed over.

CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT

The bill (H. R. 13565) to amend the act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees in the classified civil service, and for other purposes," approved July 3, 1926, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BLEASE. Let that go over.

Mr. DALE. Mr. President, will not the Senator withhold his objection for a moment?

Mr. BLEASE. Certainly.

Mr. DALE. I would like to say, in explanation of this bill, that it carries no appropriation whatever, and places nobody on the rolls. Under the retirement act a person in the service should apply for retention in the service 30 days before he reaches retirement age. Most of the men affected by this bill were employed in the office of the Architect of the Capitol, and there was a question as to whether they came within the purview of the act, and therefore they did not make application for retirement. It was later decided that these employees came within the intended scope of the act, but their positions now on the roll are irregular because of the date of retirement having passed. This simply gives the Civil Service Commission authority to examine into the conditions as to those men, and if they find that they were passed over in error, to allow them to be retained in the service. They are in the service and are drawing their salaries. This would simply rectify a technical wrong under the law.

Mr. BLEASE. I have no objection.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROMOTION OF NAVAL OFFICERS

The bill (H. R. 14039) to regulate the distribution and promotion of commissioned officers of the line of the Navy, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. That may go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

MERGER OF DISTRICT STREET RAILWAYS

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 208) to authorize the merger of the street railway corporations operating in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Over.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I wish to say as to the merger joint resolution that I hope to get a preferred status for it at an early date so that we may have ample opportunity for its discussion. It is a very important matter to the people of the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On objection, the joint resolution will be passed over.

COLORADO-NEBRASKA-WYOMING COMPACTS

The bill (S. 5573) granting the consent of Congress to compacts or agreements between the States of Colorado, Nebraska, and Wyoming with respect to the division and apportionment of the waters of the North Platte River and other streams in which such States are jointly interested was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the States of Colorado, Nebraska, and Wyoming to negotiate and enter into compacts or agreements providing for an equitable division and apportionment between such States of the water supply of the North Platte River and of the streams tributary thereto and of other streams in which such States are jointly interested.

SEC. 2. Such consent is given upon condition that a representative of the United States, to be appointed by the President, shall participate in the negotiations and shall make report to Congress of the proceedings and of any compact or agreement entered into.

SEC. 3. No such compact or agreement shall be binding or obligatory upon either of such States unless and until it has been approved by the legislature of each of such States and by the Congress of the United States.

SEC. 4. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is herewith expressly reserved.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CUARTEL LOT, MONTEREY, CALIF.

The bill (H. R. 12347) granting all right, title, and interest of the United States to the piece or parcel of land known as the Cuartel lot to the city of Monterey, Calif., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all the right, title, and interest of the United States in the piece or parcel of land known as the Cuartel lot, situated in the city of Monterey, State of California, is hereby granted for municipal purposes to the said city of Monterey as the successor in interest of the Mexican Government.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HARRIMAN GEOGRAPHIC CODE

The bill (S. 5722) to provide for the purchase of the use of the Harriman Geographic Code System was announced as next in order.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PULASKI SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 304) providing for the observance and commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski, and establishing a commission to be known as the United States Pulaski sesquicentennial commission, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby established a commission to be known as the United States Pulaski sesquicentennial commission (hereinafter referred to as the commission) and to be composed of five commissioners, as follows: One person to be appointed by the President of the United States, two Senators by the President of the Senate, and two Members of the House of Representatives by the Speaker of the House of Representatives. Any vacancy in the office of a commissioner shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment. The commissioners shall serve without compensation therefor from the United States. The commission shall select a chairman from among its members.

SEC. 2. The commission is authorized to arrange in cooperation with any organization or society without cost to the United States an appropriate observance and commemoration to take place in the month of October, 1929, of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski, and to participate, on behalf of the United States, in such manner as it deems advisable, in any other observance or celebration of such anniversary which may be held in the United States during the year 1929.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STATUE OF MAJ. GEN. GEORGE W. GOETHALS

The bill (S. 4964) to authorize the erection of a suitable statue of Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals within the Canal Zone was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized, through such person or persons as he may designate, to select an appropriate site within the Canal Zone and to cause to be erected thereon a suitable statue of heroic size of Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals in commemoration of his signally distinguished services in connection with the construction and operation of the Panama Canal.

SEC. 2. The design and location of such statue and the plan for the development of the site shall be submitted to the Commission of Fine Arts for advisory assistance.

SEC. 3. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated a sum not to exceed $100,000 for every object connected with the purposes of this act, including site development and any essential approach work.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZABETH ROBINS PENNELL

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 58) to relieve Elizabeth Robins Pennell from necessity of providing a surety on her bond for the benefit of the United States as residuary legatee and remainderman under the will of Joseph Pennell, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Whereas Joseph Pennell, of Philadelphia, Pa., by his will dated January 7, 1919, and a codicil thereto dated September 29, 1924, gave the residue of his estate to his wife, Elizabeth Robins Pennell, for life, and upon her death to the United States of America, for the division of prints of the Library of Congress, to be administered by the proper officers thereof upon the terms and conditions in his said will provided; and

Whereas the said Joseph Pennell died April 23, 1926, and Elizabeth Robins Pennell, executrix, filed her account of decedent's estate in the office of the register of wills of Philadelphia County, Pa., and the same was adjudicated and confirmed absolutely by the orphans' court of the said county on the 6th day of May, 1927, and the balance shown by said account awarded to Elizabeth Robins Pennell, to be held as directed by decedent's will, upon the entry of security by her in the sum of $400,000, under section 23 of the fiduciaries act of Pennsylvania; and

Whereas the premium on a surety bond would have to be paid out of the income of decedent's estate and thereby greatly reduce the income which the said Elizabeth Robins Pennell would receive during her life; and

Whereas the said Elizabeth Robins Pennell has requested Congress to take such action as may relieve her from the necessity of providing a surety on her bond (so conditioned): Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the United States of America hereby waives any claim for security from the said Elizabeth Robins Pennell other than her own bond, for its benefit as residuary legatee and remainderman under the will of the said Joseph Pennell, and it is declared to be the opinion of Congress that such personal bond without surety would, if approved by the orphans' court of Philadelphia County adequately secure the interests of the United States under section 23 of the fiduciaries act of Pennsylvania.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

BILL INDEFINITELY POSTPONED

The bill (H. R. 11800) to establish a commission for the participation of the United States in the observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Battle of Rhode Island was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill should be indefinitely postponed on the ground that the date of the observance has already passed. Without objection, the bill will be indefinitely postponed.

VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION

The bill (H. R. 13251) to provide for the vocational rehabilitation of disabled residents of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read. The bill had been reported from the Committee on Education and Labor with an amendment.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. President, I should like to have the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor explain the bill. I have been told that the bill establishes a new precedent; that it would be used as an entering wedge for a system which would later be applied to the States. I am to-day informed that that is not correct, but that we are merely doing for the District of Columbia what we have already done for the States. Which is correct?

Mr. COUZENS. Mr. President, I desire to read from the hearings before the Committee on Education of the House of Representatives, page 2, from a statement of Hon. JOHN W. SUMMERS, a Representative in Congress from the State of Washington:

> Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, this bill is very similar to the Federal vocational rehabilitation act which was passed by Congress and became a law in June, 1920. Under that act we are cooperating with 41 States of the Union in the rehabilitation of those who are injured in industry or in public accidents or who are congenitally or from disease disabled.

Very extensive hearings were held in the House. The report is very exhaustive as to the merits of the bill. It does no more for the District than has already been done in 41 States. The report indicates that it is a very meritorious bill. I do not want to take the time of the Senate to go through the entire report, but I think Senators who will read the report will be satisfied that it is a very meritorious bill and should be passed.

Mr. BINGHAM. I know that the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT], who is absent from the Chamber at this time, is opposed to the bill, but I think he is laboring under the same impression that I was, that it would establish a new form of Federal aid. With the understanding that what the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor has now stated is correct, that there is nothing new about it and that it merely does for the District what we are doing for the States, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The committee amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 3, line 12, after the word "year," strike out "except that for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929, there is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $12,000, of which not more than $6,000 shall be expended for salaries," so as to make the section read:

> SEC. 6. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act there is authorized to be appropriated to the Federal Board for Vocational Education a sum not to exceed $15,000 for each fiscal year: Provided, That no such appropriations of Federal funds shall be available for expenditure except when matched by equal appropriations of District of Columbia funds which are hereby authorized.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COUZENS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 1, line 3, strike out "1928" and insert "1929," and on page 2, line 2, strike out the word "vocation" and insert the word "vocational," so as to make the bill read:

> Be it enacted, etc., That on and after July 1, 1929, the Federal Board for Vocational Education is authorized and directed to provide for the vocational rehabilitation and return to employment of any disabled resident of the District of Columbia.
>
> SEC. 2. For the purposes of this act (1) the term "disabled resident of the District of Columbia" means any bona fide resident in the District of Columbia who, by reason of a physical defect or infirmity, whether congenital or acquired by accident, injury, or disease, is or may be expected to become totally or partially incapacitated for remunerative occupation; and (2) the term "vocational rehabilitation" means the rendering of any such disabled resident fit to engage in a remunerative occupation.
>
> SEC. 3. (a) The United States Public Health Service is authorized and directed to cooperate with the Federal Board for Vocational Education in carrying out the provisions of this act, and the board may, in carrying out such provisions, obtain the cooperation of (1) any other establishment in the executive branch of the Government; (2) any department or agency of the government of the District of Columbia; (3) any State, Territory, or political subdivision thereof; or (4) any private agency or person.
>
> (b) The Federal Board for Vocational Education and the United States Employees' Compensation Commission are authorized and directed to formulate a plan of cooperation for the vocational rehabilitation of civil employees of the United States disabled while in the performance of duty and who reside in the District of Columbia, and such board may, in carrying out the provisions of this act, in so far as it applies to such civil employees, carry out such plan.
>
> SEC. 4. The board is authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this act.
>
> SEC. 5. The Federal Board for Vocational Education is authorized to make such expenditures (including expenditures for personal services at the seat of government and elsewhere, for printing and binding, for traveling and subsistence expenses, for the payment of tuition to schools, for the compensation of tutors, for the purchase of prosthetic appliances and instructional supplies and equipment, and for the payment of necessary expenses of persons undergoing vocational rehabilitation) as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.
>
> SEC. 6. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act there is authorized to be appropriated to the Federal Board for Vocational Education a sum not to exceed $15,000 for each fiscal year: Provided, That no such appropriations of Federal funds shall be available for expenditure except when matched by equal appropriations of District of Columbia funds which are hereby authorized.
>
> SEC. 7. The board shall submit to Congress on or before the first day of each regular session a report of all rehabilitation service provided and of all expenditures made under this act during the preceding fiscal year.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator from Michigan if the so-called vocational rehabilitation act is to remain a statute forever? In other words, is there no limitation on the law itself?

Mr. COUZENS. The Federal Vocational Board has been doing excellent work. There is no time limit in the law. It is not confined to any particular group of disabled persons but is a system for the rehabilitation of those who are crippled or sick, thus taking them off the charity rolls and making them useful citizens. It has cost the Government and the country much less under the system since the rehabilitation law was enacted than it did before when they were on charity.

Mr. KING. To what extent are the States cooperating with the Federal Government?

Mr. COUZENS. I have not the details here, but if the Senator cares to have me go through the House hearings I think I could demonstrate to him by the experiences there stated from Buffalo and other cities that it has been a great public advantage.

Mr. KING. I do not care to have the Senator take the time to do that now. I know that before this law was enacted many States were caring for those who needed vocational rehabilitation, and I was wondering whether the Federal Government was to continue in this cooperative activity.

Mr. COUZENS. It is largely an educational system, the same as with reference to agriculture or any other activity.

Mr. WATERMAN. Mr. President, may I ask how the expense with reference to this matter is charged, whether against the District or against the Government?

Mr. COUZENS. It is against the Government.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

BERTHA HANSON

The bill (S. 5361) for the relief of Bertha Hanson was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

> Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Bertha Hanson, widow of George M. Hanson, late American Consul at Colon, Panama, the sum of $4,500, being one year's salary of her deceased husband, who died while in the Foreign Service; and there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sufficient sum to carry out the purpose of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXPLORATION OF ARCTIC REGIONS BY AIRSHIP

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 153) for the contribution of the United States in the plans of the organization of the International Society for the Exploration of the Arctic Regions by Means of the Airship was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That, in compliance with the recommendation of the President contained in his message of January 4, 1928, printed as House Document No. 133, Seventieth Congress, first session, an annual appropriation for five years of $300 is hereby authorized as the contribution of the United States in the plans of the organization of the International Society for the Exploration of the Arctic Regions by Means of the Airship for the establishment of geophysical observations in the inner Arctic regions.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 4800) to amend section 8 of the act entitled "An act for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded or poisonous or deleterious foods, drugs, medicines, and liquors, and for regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes," approved June 30, 1906, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I presume that the bill has merit, but I desire to give it some study before it is passed by the Senate. I ask, therefore, that it may go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

LANDS IN FAULKNER COUNTY, ARK.

The bill (H. R. 12322) to quiet title and possession with respect to certain lands in Faulkner County, Ark., was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the lands situated in Faulkner County, Ark., described as follows: The northwest quarter of the northwest quarter, section 11, township 5 north of the base line, range 11 west, fifth principal meridian, containing 40 acres more or less, be, and the same are hereby, released and relinquished by the United States to the respective owner or owners of the equitable title and to their heirs and assigns.

SEC. 2. Nothing in this act shall in any manner abridge, divest, impair, injure, or prejudice any valid right, title, or interest of any person or persons in or to any portion or part of the lands mentioned in the said first section, the true intent of this act being to relinquish and abandon, grant, give, and concede any and all right, interest, and estate, in law or equity, which the United States is or is supposed to be entitled to in said lands, in favor of all persons, estates, firms, or corporations who would be the true and lawful owners of the same under the laws of the State of Arkansas, including the laws of prescription in the absence of the said interest and estate of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HERSCHEL PAUL COOK

The bill (H. R. 10015) authorizing the promotion on the retired list of the Navy of Herschel Paul Cook, lieutenant (junior grade), was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to promote as of June 3, 1922, to the rank of lieutenant (retired), Herschel Paul Cook, now lieutenant (junior grade) (retired), without any deduction for pay made such officer while on the active list subsequent to that date. That hereafter the pay of this officer while on the retired list shall be computed as if he had been retired in the rank of lieutenant (senior grade) June 3, 1922: Provided, That no back pay or allowances shall accrue prior to the passage of this act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of the bill. We have a general law for promotions. Why a special act?

Mr. WATERMAN. Mr. President, Mr. Cook was appointed a midshipman in the Navy on July 8, 1915, and was commissioned an ensign on June 7, 1918. He was promoted to the rank of lieutenant (junior grade) (temporary), from September 21, 1918, and permanently commissioned a lieutenant (junior grade) from July 1, 1920. On September 6, 1923, Mr. Cook was transferred to the retired list of the Navy by reason of chronic pulmonary tuberculosis incurred in the line of duty.

The reason for offering the bill is that when he came up for examination or was due for examination for promotion he was ill with tuberculosis in the hospital and could not attend, and therefore by reason of that fact he did not receive the promotion. The bill gives him the promotion to which he would have been entitled had he not been too ill to take the examination.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EDWARD ELLSBERG, HENRY HARTLEY, AND RICHARD E. HAWES

The bill (H. R. 13795) for recognition of meritorious service performed by Lieut. Commander Edward Ellsberg, Lieut. Henry Hartley, and Boatswain Richard E. Hawes was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 11, to strike out the word "ship" and insert in lieu thereof the words "ships S–4 and S–5," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint Edward Ellsberg, now a naval constructor with the rank of lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve, a naval constructor with the rank of commander in the Naval Reserve; and Chief Boatswain R. E. Hawes, United States Navy, an ensign in the Navy; and to advance Lieut. Henry Hartley, United States Navy, 35 numbers on the list of lieutenants of the Navy, in recognition of their services in the salvage of the U. S. S. S–4 and S–51.

SEC. 2. That these officers shall be additional numbers in the grades to which or in which they are hereby advanced, and in any to which they may hereafter be promoted.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I would like to have an explanation of the bill. The idea seems to be that because a cadet stood high in his class at Annapolis he should now be promoted by an act of Congress.

Mr. WATERMAN. I shall be glad to give the Senator an explanation.

The young man Ellsberg—I can not speak so definitely for the others as for him—entered the Annapolis Academy about 20 years ago as a Colorado boy. He led his class for four years in that institution, was promoted from time to time in the service, and served during the war. He has become, so it is said, and has been characterized as the Lindbergh of the submarine service of the country. The list of his accomplishments which appears in the House report, at page 3, is an extended one.

After a while, I think about 1920, he retired from the Navy voluntarily. He did all the work that related to the foundered S–51 and received for that service a medal. I do not know what medal it was, but he received a medal. At the time the S–4 went down he was in private life. He volunteered his services to his Government. He was called to New York and was sent to the scene of the sunken submarine. He took charge of the undersea work. He put on a diver's suit and went down and was the only man that ever brought forth a verbal picture of the situation of that submarine as she lay on the bottom of the sea. For that service he was written a letter by the Secretary of the Navy in the most commendatory terms.

There seems to be no objection to the bill anywhere except I think that there was an objection from the Navy Department to this designation, but the designation is merely promoting him in the reserve from lieutenant commander to commander. There was also an objection on the ground that he had had the distinguished-service medal on account of his work in connection with the S–51. Therefore the bill was amended by the committee to embrace his services in connection with the S–4.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. In view of the explanation of the Senator from Colorado and the statement in the later pages of the report, I agree with the committee that the bill is entirely meritorious, and that Commander Ellsberg ought to be promoted. But I suggest that the man who wrote the report ought to be demoted, because Senators have to read through about 16 pages before we find why the bill is recommended.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISBURSING ACCOUNTS OF ARMY OFFICERS, ETC.

The bill (H. R. 4258) to authorize credit in the disbursing accounts of certain officers of the Army of the United States and for the settlement of individual claims approved by the War Department was considered as in the Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have a brief explanation of the reason for the bill.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The bill came from the Committee on Claims and was reported by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK]. He can doubtless explain to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. I shall be glad if the Senator will do so.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, this is one of a series of four bills taking up various technical charges which have been placed against the accounts of Army officers. We have examined them at great length. I have examined them several times and taken them up with the committee. We agreed with the report of the Comptroller General except in two or three minor instances.

The amendments which have been made reduce the amount. I should be glad if there is any question about any particular item to go into the matter, but the items are so numerous that I do not think it would be wise to cover all of them.

Mr. KING. I find, for instance, on page 4 of the bill that Lieut. Roy Wiedersum is to receive $3,386.54. Will the Senator from Alabama explain the reason for that?

Mr. BLACK. I shall do so in just a moment.

Mr. KING. Then Edward F. Becken is to get $1,450 for damages sustained to his property. I also note in the conluding paragraph of the bill that $2,741.50 was expended by Lieutenant Wiedersum for medical treatment. I am wondering if, being in the service, he did not receive medical treatment and hospitalization at the hands of the Government?

Mr. BLACK. Here is what the report in reference to Wiedersum's case states:

Wiedersum, Roy, first lieutenant, Air Corps Reserve, United States Army: Lieutenant Wiedersum says that on April 5, 1925, he, as a reserve officer and pilot, was assigned a Curtiss airplane, J. N. 4–H, by the authorities of Mitchel Field, N. Y., for the purpose of making a practice flight in Government aircraft. That thereupon, with Pvt. Ralph Hyslop, United States Army, as passenger, he took off the ground with said plane from Mitchel Field, and after arriving at an altitude of from 250 to 350 feet he could no longer control said plane, and said plane fell out of control from above-mentioned altitude, striking the earth, causing serious injury to himself and passenger.

That as a result of the fall and accident above described he received severe injuries to the feet, legs, left arm, ribs, face, and body, which injuries are described in detail in the affidavits of the doctors. He was confined in bed at the Nassau Hospital for three months, namely, from April 5, 1925, to June 27, 1925, and to his home for six months, namely, from June 27, 1925, to January 1, 1926. That upon becoming a patient in said hospital his left arm and left leg were suspended by means of a Balkan frame, pulleys, and weights. His left leg was suspended as above mentioned for many weeks. His left arm was suspended for the entire period he was confined to hospital and both feet and legs incased in plaster casts for the greater part of the period he was detained in said hospital. That during the period at home, mentioned above, he was confined to bed and a wheel chair for many weeks. Thereafter he required crutches until January 1, 1926, at which later date he was able to walk with the aid of two canes. He has suffered permanent injuries to the feet and ankles, including a shortage of the right leg of about 1 inch, which causes him to walk lame and with a defective gait. He at present also suffers from headaches, backaches, and intense pain in the legs, ankles, and feet.

Under section 6 of the act approved June 3, 1924 (Public, 1826, 68th Cong.) Lieutenant Wiedersum is entitled to all pay and allowances from April 5, 1925, date of injury, to June 27, 1925, date of transportation to his home, amounting to $645.24, and to reimbursement for amounts expended by him for medical and hospital treatment during the same periods, amounting to $2,741.50, which have been approved in the sum of $3,386.74.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments of the Committee on Claims to the bill will be stated.

The first amendment was, on page 2, line 4, after the words "Quartermaster Corps," to strike out "$150" and to insert "$99.85"; in the same line, after "$150," to strike out the words "Capt. E. W. Wilson, Finance Department, $150"; in line 5, after the words "Finance Department," to strike out "$150" and to insert "$99.85"; in line 7, after the words "Finance Department," to strike out "$150" and to insert "$99.85"; and in line 8, after the words "Finance Department," to strike out "$150" and insert "$99.85," so as to make the clause read:

First Lieut. J. P. Tillman, Quartermaster Corps, $99.85; Maj. H. E. Pace, Finance Department, $99.85; Lieut. Col. S. B. McIntyre, Finance Department, $99.85; and Capt. R. G. Jenks, Finance Department, $99.85, on account of payments of reenlistment allowance made by them to one Tom F. Nicholson on fraudulent vouchers: Provided, That the officers certifying as to the correctness of the service of the soldier and the vouchers on which these payments were made shall be relieved of all responsibility in connection therewith.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, line 8, after the words "Finance Department," to strike out "$22.10" and to insert "$12.90," so as to make the clause read:

Capt. L. V. Houston, Finance Department, $12.90, representing overpayments to citizens' military training camp students on account of travel pay to and from camp.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

CARY DAWSON

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 5221) for the relief of Cary Dawson, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to allow credit in the settlement of the accounts of Cary Dawson, regional disbursing officer, special disbursing agent, United States Veterans' Bureau, Cincinnati, in the sum of $330 for restoration of the premises which were occupied by the United States Veterans' Bureau on the fourth floor of the Cleveland Life Building, Evansville, Ind.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DR. STANLEY R. TEACHOUT

The bill (H. R. 4776) for the relief of Dr. Stanley R. Teachout was announced as next in order.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I ask that that bill go over.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection until I can make a statement relative to the bill?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. The facts in this particular case are these: The War Risk Insurance Bureau rented from Doctor Teachout up to 1925, so long as that bureau was in existence, one of his buildings in Nashville. When the present Veterans' Bureau took its place in 1925 it desired to continue the contract, and at the same time to rent a very large house next to that building. In order to get the space it wanted it desired certain changes made, and the official who had the matter in charge in the bureau here went down to Nashville, made a contract with that Doctor Teachout under which he was to spend $26,000 in rearranging those two buildings in accordance with plans and specifications of the bureau and its architect.

The representative of the bureau agreed that the Government would rent the building for five years. At that time it was very difficult to get space in Nashville, and this official told Doctor Teachout that, while the bureau could not rent except for one year, it would rent the building year by year for five years, provided the improvements were made. Doctor Teachout put up the money, rebuilt the buildings, and nine months afterwards, without the slightest explanation, without any regard to its agreement, when there was a better office building, perhaps a new office building, erected in Nashville, the bureau threw up its contract and rented space in the new building.

A claim was made for reimbursement by Doctor Teachout. The chief of the Veterans' Bureau, General Hines, thought it was absolutely right that the claim should be paid. He tried to get authority from the Comptroller General to do so; he took it up with the Budget Bureau, and asked to be permitted to pay it out of certain funds that he had; but it was finally decided that it could not be done in that way. General Hines states in the record that it is a perfectly proper claim against the Government.

The bill was then introduced in the House of Representatives and passed there. There is an elaborate report here accompanying it. The bill has been reported out by the Committee on Claims. It seems that a number of claims exactly like this, or very nearly like it, have already been considered by the committee, reported out, and passed. I, therefore, hope that the Senator from Pennsylvania will not object, but will let the bill pass.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, how about the suggestion in the letter of the Veterans' Bureau that the matter be submitted to the Comptroller General in accordance with the House bill which is mentioned?

Mr. McKELLAR. That has been done. It will be found in the record that General Hines himself took the case to the Comptroller General and tried to arrange so that he might pay the claim out of certain funds that he had, but it could not be done in that way. So a bill for the purpose had to be passed by Congress.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. The only letter I find from General Hines in the report is the one suggesting that the matter should be submitted to the Comptroller General.

Mr. McKELLAR. In the affidavit it is shown that General Hines afterwards took the matter up with Comptroller General McCarl and asked for authority to pay it out of funds that he had, but Comptroller General McCarl would not pass it in that way, and said it would require an act of Congress.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. What is the good of our putting a 1-year limitation on the bureau's leases if we have to pay by a special bill additional amounts based on a 5-year expectation?

Mr. McKELLAR. In answer to the Senator, I should say that I think this is an illustration of the absolute necessity of putting some limitation on governmental officers who cause men to spend their money in preparing offices in this way and then disregard the contract of the Government.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I agree with that. A district manager of the Veterans' Bureau has no authority to make any lease at all, and yet we are being asked to pay out $22,000 under a contract which was made.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; this officer had authority to make the lease; he was sent down there from Washington for the purpose of making the lease. When he got down there he could find no suitable place except this, and before he would lease this property he required that $26,000 of improvements be made, in accordance with the plans and specifications provided by the architect of the bureau.

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. I can appreciate that if we shall not pass the bill it will be very hard on the owner of the property, while if we shall pass it it will be very hard on the Government. However, I will not object.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I want to make one observation. I think that the member of the Finance Committee who is the chairman of the subcommittee which considers these matters ought to challenge the attention of the Veterans' Bureau to the present situation. I know in my State and other places where I have been the Veterans' Bureau rents expensive buildings for its activities. There is no reason why they should go to the extent of establishing themselves in the most costly quarters that can be found. I think that the Veterans' Bureau has been too prodigal in the expenditure of money for overhead. I am in favor of giving all that is necessary to those who were injured, but I think perhaps the Veterans' Bureau is censurable for its tendency to lease expensive buildings. This case is an illustration. After they have gone to the expense or trouble of having a new building prepared, without any reason they end the contract and abandon it.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I desire to say in justice to the Veterans' Bureau that, so far as my information is concerned, in the city of Seattle they do not rent an expensive building by any means. As a matter of fact, the building which, I think, they have occupied ever since they have been there is a very ordinary building.

Mr. KING. I am glad to know that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. REED of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I am not going to object to the bill, but in response to what has been said by the Senator from Utah, I think one of the reforms that we have got to put through in the next Congress is the consolidation of the agencies that are dealing with veterans' relief. It is entirely unsystematic and senseless for us to be keeping up a Pension Bureau, a Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers which has no connection with the Pension Bureau, and a Veterans' Bureau which has no connection with either. We are having a duplication of facilities; we are having three offices maintained where one could do the work. I am very hopeful that one of Mr. Hoover's first acts will be to outline and recommend such a consolidation for the sake of economy and efficiency, and I am sorry that the Senator from "Florida" [Mr. SMOOT] is not here to tell us what is going to be done along that line.

Mr. McKELLAR. I hope the Senator may soon introduce such a bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Dr. Stanley R. Teachout, of Nashville, Tenn., $22,602.14 in full compensation for losses sustained and expenses incurred by him on account of certain repairs and alterations which he made in his buildings at Nashville, Tenn., at the instance of and with the approval of representatives of the United States Veterans' Bureau and for the purpose of renting the premises to the United States Veterans' Bureau; and for losses and damages sustained by him on account of the premises being vacated and the lease canceled by the bureau after an occupancy of nine months.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

OWNER OF STEAMSHIP "W. I. RADCLIFFE"

The bill (H. R. 11698) conferring jurisdiction upon certain courts of the United States to hear and determine the claim by the owner of the steamship W. I. Radcliffe against the United States, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 2, line 6, after the word "due," to strike out "from" and insert "against"; in line 7, after the name "United States," to strike out "to" and insert "in favor of"; in line 8, after the word "(Limited)," to insert "or against the said Wynstay Steamship Co. (Ltd.) in favor of the United States," so as to make the bill read:

That the claim of the Wynstay Steamship Co. (Ltd.), a British corporation, owner of the steamship Radcliffe, against the United States for damages alleged to have been caused by collision between said steamship Radcliffe and the U. S. S. Sylvan Arrow, on December 1, 1918, may be determined in a suit to be brought by said claimant against the United States in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court in admiralty cases, and that said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine said suit and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages, and costs, if any, as shall be found due against the United States in favor of the said Wynstay Steamship Co. (Ltd.) or against the said Wynstay Steamship Co. (Ltd.) in favor of the United States, by reason of said collision, upon the same principles and under the same measures of liability as in like cases between private parties, and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and upon such notice it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That such suit shall be begun within four months of the date of the approval of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

FRENCH AUXILIARY BARK "QUEVILLY"

The bill (H. R. 11699) conferring jurisdiction upon the United States Court for the Southern District of New York to hear and determine the claim of the owner of the French auxiliary bark Quevilly against the United States, and for other purposes, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments on page 2, line 6, after the word "any," to insert "as"; in the same line, after the word "found," insert "to be"; in the same line, after the word "due," to strike out "from" and insert "against"; in line 7, after the name "United States," to strike out "to" and insert "in favor of"; and in line 8, after the name "Quevilly," to insert "or against the said owners of the French auxiliary bark Quevilly in favor of the United States," so as to make the bill read:

That the claim of the owners of the French auxiliary bark Quevilly against the United States for damages alleged to have been caused by collision between said steamship Quevilly and the U. S. torpedo boat Sampson, in the Atlantic Ocean outside of the entrance to New York Harbor, on January 26, 1917, may be determined in a suit to be brought by said claimant against the United States in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, sitting as a court of admiralty and acting under the rules governing such court in admiralty cases, and that said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine said suit and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of the said owners of the French auxiliary bark Quevilly, or against the said owners of the French auxiliary bark Quevilly in favor of the United States by reason of said collision, upon the same principles and under the same measures of liability as in like cases between private parties, and with the same rights of appeal: Provided, That such notice of the suit shall be given to the Attorney General of the United States as may be provided by order of the said court, and upon such notice it shall be the duty of the Attorney General to cause the United States attorney in such district to appear and defend for the United States: Provided further, That such suit shall be begun within four months of the date of the approval of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

MARY MARTIN HARRISON

The bill (H. R. 7244) for the relief of Mary Martin Harrison was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 2, line 3, to strike out "Provided, That the said Mary Martin Harrison establishes that she was dependent upon her son, Henry Hartwell Harrison, at the time of the latter's death," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Mary Martin Harrison, mother of the late Henry Hartwell Harrison, ensign, United States Navy, Aviation Sevice, the sum of $1,125 on account of the death of her son, who was killed in line of duty, the said sum being the amount of six months' pay at the rate said Ensign Henry Hartwell Harrison was receiving at the date of his death, November 1, 1926, at Pensacola, Fla., when he crashed into the sea with a plane in which he was riding.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 9659) for the relief of F. R. Barthold was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CREW OF TRANSPORT "ANTILLES"

The bill (S. 4815) for the relief of members of the crew of the transport Antilles was considered as in Committee of the Whole and was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to examine and settle the claims of the crew of the transport Antilles, which was sunk in October, 1917, on the high seas by an enemy torpedo, for the value of private property lost by the sinking of said vessel, and to allow reimbursement of the value of said private property not exceeding the sum of $100 in any one case, and there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, sufficient sums, not exceeding in the aggregate $3,000, for the payment of such of these claims as may be allowed by the Comptroller General of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PENSIONS AND INCREASE OF PENSIONS

The bill (H. R. 16500) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Pensions was, on page 12, after line 4, to strike out:

The name of Margaret E. Beaston, widow of James Beaston, alias James Roberts, late of Company G, Two hundred and second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, after line 2, to strike out:

The name of Sarah Roof, widow of John Roof, late of Company A, One hundred and forty-eighth Regiment, and Company B, Fifty-third Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 23, to strike out:

The name of Mariah Powell, widow of Henry A. Powell, late of Company E, Fifth Regiment West Virginia Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 32, after line 15, to strike out:

The name of Lucinda M. Goodsell, widow of George A. Goodsell, late of Company F, Fourth Regiment Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 84, after line 9, to strike out:

The name of Effie M. Britton, widow of Thomas D. Britton, late of Company E, Second Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 89, after line 18, to strike out:

The name of Sallie A. Hollister, widow of David H. Hollister, late of Company E, Twelfth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 100, after line 12, to insert:

The name of Emma Armstrong, widow of George Armstrong, late of Company I, Sixty-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Martinia L. Johnson, widow of Edward B. Johnson, late of Company E, Fifth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sarah E. Marcam, widow of Daniel F. Marcam, late of Company E, Thirteenth Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sallie C. Driscoll, widow of Cornelius Driscoll, late of Company D, Eighth Regiment United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of John W. Hay, late of Capt. C. L. Holsapple's Company B, South Cumberland Battalion, Kentucky State Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Milan B. Siddles, late of Troop B, Seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Ellen Grever, widow of Jacob M. Grever, late of Company D, Eighty-eighth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Ella Winger, widow of John Winger, late of Company D, Eighty-third Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Katherine French, widow of Asa T. French, late of Company F, Eleventh Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Adaline E. Draper, widow of George W. Draper, late of Company I, Thirty-fifth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Maria Allen, widow of William A. Allen, late of Company E, Seventeenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Anna J. Van Nuys, widow of Isaac Van Nuys, late of Company D, Fifty-seventh Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Silas Overmier, late of Company H, Twenty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Launa Dickens, widow of Francis M. Dickens, late of Capt. William Turner's independent company, West Virginia State Guards, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Catherine Ramsey, widow of Rufus Ramsey, late of Company K, One hundred and twenty-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Henry Thomas, late of Company H, Sixty-seventh Regiment Enrolled Missouri Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of John Musgraves, late of Company D (Captain Kennamore's company), Provisional Enrolled Missouri Militia, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The name of Mariah E. Crom, widow of Jeremiah B. Crom, late of Company F, Eighty-sixth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Helen A. O'Haver, widow of Howard M. O'Haver, late of Company C, One hundred and forty-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Margaret Dunn, helpless child of Patrick Dunn, late of Company C, Fifty-second Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Lottie Lou Hart, helpless child of Alva T. Hart, late of Company F, Eighty-second Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Sallie H. Dethample, widow of Nicholas Dethample, late of Company M, One hundred and ninety-eighth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Nancy Jane Stewart, widow of James A. Stewart, late of Company E, One hundred and twenty-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Laura F. Gross, widow of Charles F. Gross, late of the United States Military Telegraph Corps, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Lydia E. Brown, widow of William H. H. Brown, late of Company B, Twelfth Regiment Rhode Island Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Carrie A. Kirtland, widow of John D. Kirtland, late of Company H, One hundred and sixty-first Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sarah B. Quigley, widow of William Y. Quigley, late of Troop E, Twelfth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary E. Jones, widow of Daniel K. Jones, late of Troop A, Second Regiment California Volunteer Cavalry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Harriet Brones, widow of Peter N. Brones, late of Company I, Forty-third Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Carrie E. Ramsey, widow of James A. Ramsey, late of the United States Navy, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Minnie D. Fogg, widow of Augustus W. Fogg, late of Company L, Thirty-first Regiment Maine Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Nancy J. Hooker, widow of George W. Hooker, late of Company E, Sixth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Caroline B. Bauduy, widow of Jerome K. Bauduy, late assistant surgeon, United States Volunteers, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sarah Shepard, widow of Charles A. Shepard, late of Company E, First Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary S. Warner, widow of William Warner, late of Company E, Twelfth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Maude G. Davis, helpless child of William Henry Davis, late of Company C, Eighty-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month.

The name of Josie Woolworth, widow of George A. Woolworth, late of Company B, Thirty-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Caroline A. Brandis, widow of Frederick Brandis, late of Company C, Thirteenth Regiment Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sarah E. James, widow of Henry James, late of First Independent Battery, Iowa Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Lou Lukens, widow of James Lukens, late of Company F, One hundred and forty-seventh Regiment Ohio National Guard Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Laura B. Mills, widow of Cleveland W. Mills, late of Company K, Tenth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary A. Gerald, widow of Frank E. Gerald, late of Company D, Third Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Sarah E. Ragan, widow of James K. P. Ragan, late of Company A, Fifty-third Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Mary E. Monroe, widow of Americus B. Monroe, late of the Eighth Battery Indiana Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Hannah F. Clarke, widow of William Clarke, late of Company F, One hundred and twentieth Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Mary Elizabeth Sherlock, widow of Charles Benjamin Sherlock, late of Company D, First Battalion, Twelfth Regiment, United States Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month.

The name of Eleanor E. Gerry, widow of Orlando F. Gerry, late of Company C, Seventeenth Regiment Vermont Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $50 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

The name of Ida Emmott, helpless child of Thomas Emmott, late of the Seventh Battery, Massachusetts Volunteer Light Artillery, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 per month in lieu of that she is now receiving.

